It was Jesus' understanding and still is his today. The tragedy of the matter is that the Contemporary Christian Church has not studied to know who they are. They are included in the House of Ephraim; they are Israel. The Commandments of God as seen in the Torah are for them, not just the Jew born in the land!

LET'S MAKE SURE WE UNDERSTAND CORRECTLY

A "Gentile" is a term signifying a non-Jew, who is NOT a "son of the covenant" and is only subject to the seven Noahide Laws. Once a Gentile came to the understanding of the one true God, he would turn from idols and worship the God of Israel. These were the "God Fearers", who accepted certain basic Jewish obligations along with the Noahide precepts. This is more than Noahidism! People often misunderstand because my E-mail address is "bennoah1" but I am not a Noahide; I have gone beyond that and adopted Isa. 56 and consider myself a Godfearer like Cornelius in Acts 10. The Noahide movement stops short of a fuller dedication to God and that is not for me. According to the Laws of Noah idolatry, shedding of blood, and grave sexual sins were forbidden to Gentile believers. These were originally the Noahide precepts accepted also by the Synagogue on which the Gentiles were obliged. Let me remind you that we see in Acts 15 (at least 25 years after the death of Jesus) the admonition for the Gentiles to adhere to Noahide Laws to be accepted in the believing community of Israel (it was James as leader of the Jerusalem church who referred back to the Noahide Laws in addressing the question of Gentile salvation). But this was considered the "MINIMUM.". It is logical that the Apostolic Church of Jerusalem should accept the view of the Synagogue on the conditions which Gentiles needed to fulfill in order to be "saved" and "accepted" in the "family of Israel". It can be easily shown that the fulfillment of other commandments of Judaism were not prohibited to Gentiles or Noahides. On the contrary, the Noahide precepts were only seen as the minimal condition for Gentiles to be recognized as "God-Fearers". These were so understood by the uncircumcised "God-Fearers" themselves, who were attracted to the Jewish way of life and accepted many Jewish commandments without becoming full proselytes (Sabbath, festivals, Tallith, etc). Understand that it would be these Godfearers who were also immersed before Sabbaths and Festivals like converts and Jews. This was also the attitude of Gentile Christian "God-Fearers", as may be seen from the Epistle to the Galatians; many of them wished to observe as many Jewish precepts as they could. It is evident that, while the leadership of the mother Church in Jerusalem decided to lay no burden upon the Gentile believers beyond the Noahide precepts, it did not object to their voluntarily observing more.

Acts 15:19-21 19 Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God: 20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood. 21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day. (KJV)

It would be here that the non-Jews once having come to God would continue to grow spiritually and take upon themselves other Commandments over and beyond the minimum of the Laws of Noah. Needless to say this included repeated immersions and being "Born Again" before Sabbaths and Biblical Festivals.

Among the figures of the early Church who instructed Gentile Christians to observe more precepts than these essential "Noahide" ones was Peter, as we know from Paul's criticism of him for demanding that Gentiles live like Jews (Gal. 2:14). Rather than interpreting the apostolic decree of Gentiles adhering to the Laws of Noah as a minimum, Paul saw in the Noahide precepts the maximum obligations of Gentile Christians. They need not do or observe more according to Paul. Rather than Peter being incorrect, a more comprehensive understanding of the Bible reveals Paul to be incorrect; thus the biased view of the Gentile New Testament which it totally incorrect historically and Scripturally (regarding the Hebrew Scriptures).

Answer for yourself: Are you beginning to wonder how much less of God we have in our lives today because we were never taught correctly the concept of being Born Again by the anti-Semitic Gentile Church and have failed to draw nearer to God through these Hukkim Commandments most of our lives?

GET IT CORRECT PAUL OR DON'T TEACH IT AT ALL!

Paul remarks in a letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor. 7) that the circumcised (Jews or converted Gentiles) should not remove the marks of circumcision, nor should the uncircumcised (Gentiles become Jews) circumcise themselves. Wait a minute. Paul contradicts himself (like a lot of preachers today). In Galatians 5 he says "if you Gentiles get circumcised" and then he says "don't do it."

Answer for yourself: Can't Paul make up his his mind? Under the Laws of Noah Gentiles were never to be circumcised, and it was this ruling that was given to Paul in Acts 15 and 16 in letters which he and Barnabas and others were to take to the Gentile Churches in their journeys strengthening them.

Answer for yourself: But how could a Gentile be told to not remove the marks of circumcision if it was never required of him at all? This is something that was understood by God to be voluntary as seen in Abraham's circumcision; himself a non-Jew.

In Acts 16 Paul circumcised his disciple Timothy.

Answer for yourself: Timothy was not a Jew was he?

Answer for yourself: If he was a Gentile why bother, right?

This contradiction of Paul is very puzzling.

Answer for yourself: Sadly many have incorrectly interpreted Paul as teaching that circumcision was abandoned with the coming of Yeshua the Messiah, but was it? Acts 16 is over 20 years after Yeshua and Paul is still circumcising!

Answer for yourself: We have failed to understand properly, so what is the clear truth of the matter?

Yeshua and his Apostles did not wish to destroy the Torah (Law) from Israel, God forbid; for it is written so in Matthew 5:17, Jesus having said, "Do not suppose that I have come to abolish the Torah. I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill. I tell you this: So long as heaven and earth endure (do they yet exist today?), not a letter, not a stroke, will disappear from the Torah (the Law) until it is achieved. If any man therefore sets aside even the least of the Torah's demands, and teaches others to do the same (the majority of Pastors who preach the contemporary Christian message), he will have the lowest place in the Kingdom of Heaven, whereas anyone who keeps the Torah, and teaches others so, will stand high in the Kingdom of Heaven."

Bet Emet Ministries teaches Gentile and Jewish commitment and observance to the Torah, not because we desire to be "high" in the Kingdom of God, but because we love God and His Word, and would never think of destroying it by misinterpreting it or failing to study to arrive at the correct meaning of these truths for the people of God today.

It is therefore exceedingly clear that Jesus never dreamed of destroying the Torah or changing the meaning of being "Born Again" as have the majority of churches today that carry his name and substitute "another Gospel" for the true Gospel of Christ.

WHAT TO DO WITH TIMOTHY?

Paul does not contradict himself because of his circumcision of Timothy, for the latter was the son of a Jewish mother, and a Gentile father (Acts 16), and Paul knew that the child of a Jewish mother is considered a "full Jew", even if the father should be a Gentile. Paul thus acted entirely in accordance with the Halakah (interpretation of Jewish Law) by circumcising Timothy. This would be in line with his position, following the Jerusalem Council of Acts 15 in 50 A.D., that no longer will Gentile believers be required to "become fully converted Jews" to be accepted into Israel; that the Gentile believers could now remain as "God-Fearers" and be accepted fully by the Jews (1 Cor 7, Acts 15) without circumcision. But yet they might not have to be circumcised to convert but in their worship of the God of Israel they will be expected to observe the Hukkim immersions before the Sabbath and Festivals [being Born Again repeatedly]. Gentiles no longer had to "convert" to Judaism and become "fully Jewish" for inclusion with equal standing with Jews within the Israel of God. The Gentiles as "God-Fearers" were to also be accepted as grafted into Israel (as demonstrated by Cornelius in Acts 10 who was a "God-Fearer" and who had not yet been circumcised).It is important to note that as a "God-Fearer", Cornelius yet observed the Noahide Laws, honored the Sabbath, and ate kosher (proper killing, dressing and preparation of animals intended for food as well as the removal of all blood). The baptism of Cornelius into the Holy Spirit as had been the Jews earlier in Acts 2 during the Festival of Pentecost was the evidence needed to convince the Jerusalem church that the middle-wall of partition was being removed between Jews and "unclean Gentiles". Understand this "baptism" of the Spirit was a miracle of hearing for Cornelius, as had the various disciples from seventy different nations in Acts 2 understood Hebrew when spoken by Peter yet never knowing the language. This was a miracle of hearing and not "tongues" as taught incorrectly by Charismatic Christianity. It literally was a reverse of the Babel curse when all nations spoke different languages but understood them. This is what we find with Cornelius and Acts 2 in spite of the erroneous teaching of Charismatics. Cornelius could all of a sudden understand Peter yet spoke no Aramaic or Hebrew. From this experience with Cornelius in Acts 10 we learn that obedience to the Noahide Laws, without circumcision (to remain only as a "God-Fearer" and not fully convert to Judaism), was no longer to be a barrier between the "unclean Gentiles" and the Jews. This event will have a supreme impact in the Acts 15 council which is coming shortly. For example, table fellowship at the Shabbat (Sabbath observance) and the Festivals could now be shared together with the Jews without circumcision of the Gentile. This is what the death of Jesus accomplished; a new repentant understanding of the place of the non-Jew and his acceptance within the Israel of God by Jews previously blinded by their hatred of the Gentile. This was understood from Peter's vision in Acts 10 concerning "unclean foods" which the Lord cleansed (symbolic of cleansing of men [Gentiles], and not the animals designated as unclean in Leviticus). So many Christian commentators get this wrong.

Shammai's "Eighteen Measures" (one of which commanded Jews not to eat or enter into the homes of Gentiles-remember Shammai hated Gentiles) was overturned by God with the revelation at Cornelius' home. God never told a Jew that he could not enter into a Gentile's home or eat with a non-Jew; Shammai did. God corrects Shammai and those that followed his teaching. Peter's vision of the unclean foods represented the "unclean Gentiles" which God had cleansed; the vision was not meant to tell Peter that God had cleansed the "unclean foods". The message to the Jew is that no longer were they to treat the non-Jews like "dogs" and enforce circumcision upon them thereby keeping them away from God or only accepting them if they submitted to circumcision. Circumcision was to be no longer required for non-Jews to be accepted by Israel for God never required it of them; Israel was to no longer require this of them either. But immersion, another part of the conversion process understood as being "Born Again," was to continue. This was not to change since it accomplished something Spiritual in the Heavens. Let us not confuse this issue.

HOW DOES GOD LOOK AT YOU…A GENTILE CHRISTIAN BELIEVER TODAY?

Timothy had to be circumcised since he was Jewish (because his mother was Jewish) and, therefore, was required to observe all the commandments of the Torah (613). Gentiles who observe the Noahide Laws are forbidden to observe "ALL" the Torah like a Jew is required, unless they desire to be circumcised and identify totally with the Jew and his Torah (full-conversion); if so then they are no longer "God-Fearers" but have become full-fledged Jews and undertake all the 613 Commandments. Following Immersion into Israel the Gentile "Born Again" and is no longer considered a "Gentile", he is now Jewish (either partly or completely depending upon circumcision). All non-Jews who become circumcised following immersion are bound by ALL the commandments (613). Understand up front seldom if ever a Gentile male in the USA is circumcised on the 8th day as part of his faith or the faith of his parents according to the Bible. Let us understand as well that the immersion process is crucial for the Christian and he needs to understand it correctly as it applies to him. Once you as a Christian are immersed and identify with Israel, you emerged from that "watery womb" and a "watery tomb" as a Born-Again "God-Fearer" who is grafted into Israel without circumcision as part of any conversion process to Judaism. But yet you are immersed into the "Israel" of God and "drew close to God in a Spiritual way in the Spirit realm" and you never knew it. You are at that time considered by God as a Spiritual Jew regardless if you were aware of it or not or whether you Christian denomination or non-denomination recognizes this or not. Their doctrines cannot change the truth no matter what they think or believe. As a Gentile male who is immersed you are not considered a "partial-Jew" unless you are uncircumcised. If you are circumcised and immersed then you are yet considered a "partial-Jew" because your circumcision had no bearing upon you converting to Judaism. Of course in America circumcision is done without any spiritual significance whatsoever to the non-Jew and thereby cannot apply in any manner to a voluntary conversion to Judaism even though one is later immersed. That is why a Gentile today when he converts to Judaism still has his male member "pricked" to draw blood by the Rabbi in a token "circumcision" along with an immersion.

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that?

The majority of our readers most likely set in their churches thinking they are "Christians" and God's Word says that you are "Spiritually Jewish" (children of Abraham) and are the Israel of God. You have not replaced Israel no matter what your corrupt Christian Scriptures might fraudulently say; you became a part of Israel. Such doctrines are the fruit of Roman anti-Semitism. There is no such thing as a God ordained replacement religion even though Gentile Christianity might think in such an incorrect manner. You as a Gentile "Christian" are obligated to observe the Torah (that part of the Law that refers to you as a Godfearer and represents your Gentile Covenant before God), and sadly because of the great lack of true scholarship in Gentile Christianity you have let your unlearned pastors and teachers tell you repeatedly that you are "under grace" and "not under Law." You are under both; just examine your Covenant and you will quickly see this for yourself! I just showed you that a proper understanding of immersion and the teachings of Yeshua & Paul are in complete opposition to what Gentile Christianity believes "Born Again" means. This concept has been totally stripped from its Jewish context and given a totally different meaning that God never intended it have. Now, let me ask you as a Christian an important question.

Answer for yourself: Who are you going to believe; your pastor or Jesus? It is time to do some serious study into the origin of Gentile Christianity and contrast it with what the Jesus of history believed about God and the Hebrew Scriptures before they were altered by Rome to suit their own religious beliefs.

Answer for yourself: With such an obligation to the "Christian" who now becomes aware that he is either "part-Jewish" & "Spiritual Israel" (Judaism is not a race but a religion; the religion of Jesus) what are you to do concerning the Hebrew Scriptures which by example teach that the Gentile is expected to observe the Shabbat (Sabbath), Pesach (Festival of the Passover), Hag HaMatzah (Festival of Unleavened Bread), HaBikkurim (First Fruits), Shavuot (Festival of Pentecost), Rosh HaShannah (Jewish New Year), Yom Teruah (Festival of Trumpets), Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), and Sukkot (Festival of Tabernacles)? More than likely in your Christian Church you don't observe any of these and immersion is a one time event tied not to drawing closer to God at each of these appointed times with God but accepting that particular brand of belief and set of doctrines surrounding Jesus as espoused by what particular denomination or non-denomination you are involved in at present.

Surely if you love God and desire to obey Him more than your Gentile traditions then you should want to begin to observe and keep these Holy Days of YHWH according to Scripture because informed study will reveal that not only the Jews but the non-Jews kept these Biblical Holy days all through the Hebrew Scriptures. Not only that they kept the Biblical Sabbath and not the Roman day of the Sun is our custom today. Along with this goes the concept of continually drawing closer to God at each of these "appointed times" by continually being "Born Again" throughout our lives according to the teaching of the Rabbis and the Hebrew Scriptures that Jesus used and believed in with all his heart.

PLEASE TELL ME THAT IT IS BEGINNING TO MAKE SENSE

Christian scholars have assumed from certain passages in the Gospels that Jesus wished to give a new Torah to take the place of the Torah of Moses. He could not do so unless he sinned.

Answer for yourself: How could Jesus have then said explicitly that he came only to fulfill the Torah (Law). In Hebrew this carried the connotation of rightly interpreting the Torah and not just obeying it but obeying it properly. Yeshua never came to abolish Judaism, but came to re-establish the religion of Judaism not only for the Jews calling for repentance and return to obedience to the Scriptures but also included the same message for the Gentiles because within Judaism exists the faith that God had given the the non-Jew from the beginning-Noahidism! At the waters of Marrah Moses reiterated the Laws of Noah before he built upon them the additive Laws known today as the Laws of Noah. Noahidism is the foundation on which the Laws of Moses rests. Nor was this religion new, but actually ancient; it being the observance of the Seven Commandments of Noah, which were forgotten purposefully by Shammai and his students because of his hatred of the non-Jew. Such hatred of the non-Jew was influencing the people of Israel in Jesus' day; thus Jesus came not for those who are well but those who need a physician and who are sick; sick with hatred for the Gentiles whom God loved and to whom God had called Israel to be a light unto to show them the their own Torah-their Instruction in the Noahide Laws. Along with this was a call for Jews to return to God in repentance and this was necessary before they could be an effective witness to the nations; Israel could not give to the nations what she did not have...righteousness. God had intended for the Gentiles to be redeemed all along. Jesus came for the "lost sheep of the house of Israel"; who had lost their way and forgotten their responsibility as God's Royal Priesthood to the Gentile nations. Israel had been entrusted with Divine truth for the world and she was not sharing it. She was in danger of severe judgment if she failed to repent. These truths were not only for them, but the Gentiles as well. It is important to understand that as there were "people who were lost" in Israel, there were others like the Essene Menahem and the Hillel Pharisees who had not "lost their way" and needed little if any correction by Yeshua! That is why Yeshua said the "kingdom" had been taken from the Sadducees and given to the Pharisees [Hillel School] when he said the Pharisees set in Moses' seat:

Matt 23:2 2 Saying, The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat: (KJV)

The Greek word for "sit":

2523 kathizo- 1) to make to sit down to set, to appoint, to confer a kingdom upon one

Here we find that the rulership delegated by God to the Sadducees was stripped from them by God's representative as a spokesman for God and given to Hillel Pharisees which was the ONLY branch of Judaism that even attempted a Gentile outreach taking the Laws of Noah and the Covenant of Eternal Life to the Gentile world. Sadly the anti-Semitic Gentile New Testament blasphemes all Pharisees whereby one read and thinks that the only good Pharisee is a "dead" Pharisee. Such is the hatred spread by the New Testament; a Roman replacement religious document.

WHAT REALLY HAPPENED IN THE GREAT COMMISSION?

Jesus' Apostles, in fulfillment of the Great Commission of their master, established these Seven Commandments anew (Acts 15, Acts 16, Acts 21). However, those born as Jews (with Jewish mothers), or those Gentiles where were immersed [Born Again] and circumcised as "full-converts" to Judaism (Ex. 12:49; one law shall be to him that is home-born, and unto the stranger) are obligated to observe all 613 of the commandments of the Torah without exception. Notice if you will that the non-Jews partake of some of what the Jews were given but not all. But much was held in common by both and both Jew and Gentile keep the Sabbath, Festivals, and were "Born Again" repeatedly in their walk with God throughout their lives as this article has demonstrated beyond any doubt.

Answer for yourself: Are you a Gentile Christian [circumcised or non-circumcised] who has been immersed into the Israel of God through the ministry of Yeshua and his followers and "Born-Again" into Israel? Then that means you!

For the Gentile God reserved the Seven Noahide Commandments which they have always been obligated to fulfill. It is for that reason that they were forbidden pollution of idols, fornication, blood, and things strangled (Acts 15). Yeshua's Apostles, agreeing with the School of Hillel, would no longer enforce circumcision on the non-Jew for inclusion into the Israel of God (to do so would mean full conversion) and they would no longer enforce Sabbath observance (exactly like the Jews observed it) but teach it to the Gentile in a somewhat modified fashion. The mandatory observance of the Sabbath by "God-Fearers" was similar, but not exactly alike the Jewish observance.

This may sound so different from what your traditional Christian message has been, but your Christian message is incorrect if it does not agree or line up with the Apostle's Doctrine. I just taught it to you as it existed in the days of Jesus. All of what I have shared with you is in accord with the law and custom of the Torah, as expounded by the Jewish sages, the true transmitters from Moses at Sinai, and understood by Jesus of Nazareth in the first century (they Jews today are the legacy of the Pharisees that survived 70 C.E.; they sit in Moses' seat...listen to what they say).

Our Gentile Christianity and religious dogmas and understanding today is incorrect if it violates the truths as Jesus and the School of Hillel understood them. We do not know more about salvation than Jesus and the Jewish people and sages that agreed with him no matter what we think or have been taught by our Gentile authorities

It was to the Hillel Pharisees Jesus referred to in Matt. 23 who set in Moses' seat and to whom we are to listen for correct doctrine. No greater example need be given than the doctrine of being "Born Again." We are not to follow the examples of any leaders if they do not line up with the Apostle's Doctrine of Acts 2:42.

Answer for yourself: Has Rome and their New Testament correctly portrayed Apostolic doctrine and how do you know for sure if have never studied Biblical Judaism and made your own comparisons of religious dogmas between them?

This teaching on immersion, being "Born Again," and conversion of the Gentile along with the role of the Godfearer is Apostolic Doctrine as Yeshua understood it and as taught by his disciples, and any other interpretation other than this is NOT correct. We are not to follow any spiritual examples unless they live what they preach and unless that line up with Biblical truth that can be demonstrated from historical and linguistic study (that means the Pharisee Preachers of Christianity today who fail to teach and live the truth of Apostolic Doctrine! No greater "Pharisees" have ever lived than the anti-Semitic Gentile Church of the last 1800 years. Jesus tells us not to follow them unless they agree with him! Good advice. This same admonition is given in Deut. 17:8 ff., where the authority to teach and lead the people were given to the religious leaders God put over the people of "Israel". These occupy Moses' seat and it is time for the Christian Church to set at the feet of the Rabbis and learn truth for a change.

One of the reasons why Gentile Christianity refuses to learn from the Jewish sages and Rabbis and would rather repeat Gentile Religious dogmas which are incorrect without even knowing it because of that one passage in Romans 11 which teaches that Israel was blinded.

Rom 11:7 7 What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded (KJV)

This is all well and good UNTIL you find out that this passage was completely lacking from the original Romans until well after 180 A.D. when it miraculously appeared under the influence of Irenaeus which gave the world the 2nd New Testament in response to Marcion's 1st New Testament which Rome did not like. But even more the whole of Romans chapter 9, 10, and 11 cannot be shown to have existed before 180 A.D. again under Irenaeus' influence. So much for the Gentile Church's refusal to accept anything Jewish...like the correct understanding of being "Born Again."

IT IS WAY PAST TIME TO GET REAL

Answer for yourself: Do the Baptists, Methodist, Catholics, Assemblies of God, or any other denomination or non-denomination occupy Moses' seat? No. The Catholic and Protestant denominations are far from being Jewish and often very far from having truth. Salvation is of the Jews according to Yeshua an that will never change. Sadly such anti-Semitic doctrines created by Irenaeus has blinded the Gentile from truth; it is the Gentiles who are blinded to truth and not the Jews.

Answer for yourself: If by change the Jews were wrong then what does that do to Jesus and what he said concerning who is to take the reign of the Spiritual direction of Israel and the resultant responsibility for enlightening the Gentiles? Do you dare tell Jesus that he made a mistake and he should have said the Crystal Cathedral or TBN sit in Moses' seat?

It was these Sages and Pharisees who said that it is forbidden to circumcise a Gentile who does not accept upon himself the yoke of "ALL" the Commandments. In America male babies are circumcised apart from the truths of God's Word (we are commanded to circumcise on the 8th day and not within the first 2-3 days of a newborn's life or a year later as some do) and because of our failure to circumcise according to the Biblical example along with our failure to teach Biblical truth [take Born Again for an example] instead of anti-Semitic doctrines the Gentiles remain "aliens to the commonwealth of Israel." When a Gentile male is finally circumcised it has no connection to the Biblical injunction and therefore the doing so later coupled with a later immersion does not render him a "convert" to Judaism. The Gentile becomes a "God-Fearer" and not a convert. Identification with Israel is by faith and free will. You must choose to stand at your personal Sinai and say to God "I will do all that you say".

Answer for yourself: Do you want to obey God?

Answer for yourself: Do you want to honor His Name with your life?

Going to churches that teach error does not accomplish anything and your fellowship with darkness surely does not honor God when our worship of Him is in error and our religious beliefs as Gentile Christians are contradicted by Biblical faith.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever been to your personal Sinai and told God you will do all that He says?

Answer for yourself: Will you ever go?

Answer for yourself: Will you choose to return or remain in your Egypt of ignorance and false traditions and false religion that amount to idolatry instead of choosing the freedom of Spiritual truth when it is presented to you?

The Sages likewise said that the Gentile is commanded NOT to "fully" observe the Sabbath as does the Jew (yet he is to remember and keep it). Acts 20:6 recounts for us the Gentile believers and how they were taught by Paul to remember and keep the Sabbath. It is here we find the Gentile Church keeping Jewish ordinances well over thirty years after Yeshua's death. At one time the Gentile Church had such truths of which I speak; sadly today under Constantine's influence these truths are buried.

As far as the Gentiles ("God-Fearers") were concerned, they were NOT commanded to observe all the Torah (the 613 mitzvot). The Gentile "God-Fearers" did not have to accept all the 613 mitzvot and are not enjoined to observe all of the 613 commandments. However, it is completely different as far as Jews are concerned, for they became obligated to fulfill the Torah because God delivered them from the bondage of Egypt to be the people of His possession. Therefore they and their children became subject to it forever and so are those Gentiles who make full-conversions to Judaism.

LET'S SUM IT ALL UP

It should be easy to see that Jesus and his Apostles never meant to abolish the Torah of Moses from one who is born a Jew. Likewise, did Paul write in his letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor 7) that each should adhere to the faith in which each was called. This being the case after Jesus' death a moment began with Jesus' followers whereby they repented of their hatred of the non-Jew and began to earnestly take the Gentile nations Gods offer of Eternal Life as found in the Laws and Covenant of Noah. Unlike before the disciples of Yeshua/ Jesus forbid mandatory circumcision of the Gentiles before having anything to do with them. Yet they taught them correctly about being "Born Again."

The rabbis and teachers like Hillel and the Jerusalem Church [Acts 15/16] thus took the Gentiles the revelation of God and instructed them not to be circumcised unless they wished to be fully converted to Judaism (this had no bearing upon immersion since it was required for "partial" as well as "full" conversion). It would suffice that the Gentiles observe the Seven Noahide Commandments, as commanded upon them through the Halakhah from Moses at Sinai. This was the minimum requirements for inclusion into Israel.

Rabbi Emden was correct; Jesus brought a double kindness into the world.

- One the one hand, he strengthened the Torah of Moses majestically (Acts 24:20 states that many thousands of Jews were believers in Yeshua as Messiah and zealous for the Torah (Law); this was over 30 years after Yeshua's death and resurrection). The ministry of Jesus helped return the "children of Israel back to their Fathers; the Patriarchs and their faith" and thus fulfill Malachi's prophecy.

- On the other hand, Yeshua did much good for the Gentiles (provided they do not turn about his intent as they please, as some foolish ones have done because they did not fully understand the intent of the authors of the Gospels and epistles. Yeshua obligated his Apostles to fulfill the Great Commission by taking the Gentiles (as a minimum) the Seven Commandments of Noah so that they should not be as the beasts of the field and continue to live their lives as pagans and a little above animals. He also bestowed upon them ethical ways, and in this respect he was much more stringent with them than the Torah of Moses. In is not necessary to impose upon Jews such extreme ethical practices, since they have been obligated to the yoke of Torah since Sinai. Israel took the oath at Sinai and are already trained in proper practice and nature of the Second Tablet of the Law (ethical monotheism and the horizontal relationships man-to-man). It would be for Paul to constantly correct, reprove, teach Apostolic Doctrine, and instruct the Gentiles in his travels since it was to his audience he would write "you are strangers from the Covenant promises, aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, without hope and without God in the world".

If Christians would study they would understand what I have detailed in this teaching. No longer would the Church erroneously teach the cessation, abolition, or replacement of the Torah of Moses and Yeshua. Such sin and foolishness would and should cease.

Because of these errant Christian scholars, hatred has increased toward the Jews who are blameless of any guilt concerning Yeshua's death and proceed innocently to observe their Torah with all their heart (intellect), soul (dedication and commitment to action) and might (resources and property). The leaders of the Churches of Jesus Christ should study to learn correctly for themselves before they lead their people into sin and astray from the will of God for their lives and teach gross error in Jesus' name. This does anything but honor him. The Jew is the brother of the Christian. Ephraim (the grafted-in Gentile) and Judah make up Israel. As members of the Christian faith, how good and pleasant it might be if you would observe what was commanded to you by your first teachers, sent directly to you by Yeshua, with his message, and not the message that anti-Semitism has created these last 2000 years. The Christian Church is in desperate need of being "Born Again" into TRUTH that its historic Fathers rejected along with forging religious documents that have almost guaranteed to this day that such truth remain hidden from the Gentile. No greater example could be given than the corruption of what Jesus knew and taught concerning being "Born Again."

Let us continue our studies by looking at the example of Cornelius in Acts 10 and the implications that man can make himself "acceptable to God".

Let us continue our studies by seriously evaluating whether, in light of what we have learned in these last few articles, if we can truly say that we are followers of Jesus.

ISAIAH 56...GOING BEYOND THE LAWS OF NOAH & CHOOSING THOSE THINGS THAT PLEASE GOD…BUT ARE WE?

Often I am asked why as a Christian I keep the Biblical Festivals and the weekly Sabbath. The reason is so simple once you read and correctly understand the whole Bible.

First as Christians we must become aware of the Laws of Noah and the Covenant of Noah as referred to in Acts 15.

This Covenant of Noah is referred to in Acts 15 by James as "necessary" for Gentiles who are becoming grafted into Israel/Church WITHOUT formal conversion to Judaism which had, up to that time, been required for ANY fellowship between Gentiles and Jews religiously, etc. Due to bigotry and hatred by Jews toward Gentiles in the first century, the Jews had enforced and put upon Gentiles what God never did.....the requirement to keep the laws of God which had never been given to them as a people….such as circumcision. Such approach to the non-Jews by bigoted Jewry of the first century was intended to keep the Gentiles separate from the Jews. Circumcision often, for an adult male, meant death due to infection and disease in the first century and this was an effective way to keep these "dogs" as arms length. It worked. God wanted to change this and did so through the effective ministry of the followers of Jesus as seen in the Acts 15 account and the epistle of Galatians. Sadly Christians today when reading Paul (Galatians for example) fail to understand when he says "you are not under the Law" he only is referring to the major issue of circumcision. Such is the ignorance that goes with the lack of sufficient study of the our faith as followers of Jesus.

THE GODFEARERS….NON-JEWISH BELIEVERS IN GOD

There is a term often overlooked in the New Testament which is of major importance for correct interpretation of the requirements of Gentile believers before God….namely the term "Godfearers." These were Gentiles without circumcision who according to Acts 10:35 are accepted with God...but unfortunately were not accepted among Jews. So you have the background for what comes next.

As James tells us in Acts 15 these 4 of the 7 listed Laws of Noah (containing 66 subsets) were necessary for Gentiles...to be part of Jesus' church (notice that he said this after the cross)!

Acts 15:28-29 28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things [referring to the Covenant and Laws of Noah]; 29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Since Acts 15 followed the death of Jesus then I have to ask you: "What has changed since the cross" when James made his decision as being "necessary" and "which seemed good to the Holy Spirit? NOTHING!

Answer for yourself: If adherence to the Laws of Noah were necessary and seemed good to the Holy Spirit for Gentile believes coming to God through Christ and his ministry through his followers then…..what about now?

Let me remind you that nothing has changed since the crucifixion and this event in Acts occurred over 20 years after the death and resurrection of Yeshua. Then James says in this recorded event (remember over 20 years after the cross)… "as Moses is taught in the Synagogue every Sabbath" thus implying that Gentiles who are turning from idols to serve the living God begin their repentance since coming to God with adherence to the Laws of Noah as the "minimum required" and then were instructed in fulfilling Isaiah 56 where is it recorded for us that Gentiles are to learn to "choose those things that please God from His Torah which go beyond the minimum [as Moses is taught in the Synagogue every Sabbath."

Understand that not all the Law (613 commandments) are applicable for Gentiles and they never were commanded by God to fulfill or obey all 613. Basically they were given 66 within the Covenant of Noah. The joy comes when you understand that you don't have to do [observe] more, but you get to. Such is the demonstration of your love for God who saves you].

ISA. 56..AND GOING BEYOND THE MINIMUM

Isa 56:1-6

- 1 Thus saith the LORD, Keep ye judgment, and do justice: for my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed.
- 2 Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that layeth hold on it; that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil.
- 3 Neither let the son of the stranger, that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither let the eunuch say, Behold, I am a dry tree (understand here that we are NOT to be separated from the Israel of God as non-Jewish believers).
- 4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs [Eunuch are non-Jews] that keep my sabbaths, and choose the things that please me, and take hold of my covenant (notice that non-Jews kept God's Sabbaths [plural...including festivals and weekly sabbaths and took hold of God covenant with Israel and acquired more mitzvoth and commandments);
- 5 Even unto them [speaking of the non-Jew] will I give in mine house and within my walls a place and a name better than of sons and of daughters: I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off.
- 6 Also the sons of the stranger (again referring to non-Jews) , that join themselves to the LORD, to serve him, and to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant;

This passage is extremely important for the Christian today for although the Sabbath and Festival commandments were not required for Gentiles in the Laws of Noah (yet it can be shown for example that Abraham knew and observed the Passover for instance), it is implied in Isa 56 and Acts 15 that Gentiles would meet on the Sabbath for instruction in God's Commandments where they could learn and then apply other Sabbaths (festivals) and Commandments to their lives, thus pleasing God, for how can we say we the Father unless we obey Him?

If one undertakes a serious study of their faith (Christianity) it can be shown, that although not commanded of non-Jews, Abraham and others can be found keeping them. This love for God is demonstrated in their willingness to do what pleases God. It is our hope the same spirit be upon you. But if you are a typical denominational or non-denominational Christian today your experience is anything but the above. You have for your authority a book called the New Testament which in places calls such obedience to these Laws and Commandments a curse and if that was not enough you Church calendar is filled with pagan solar and astral days which have been made to look as if Jesus has something to do with such idolatry.

Hosea 4:6 6 My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Is God serious in the above passage and could this ever happen to you once you die and then find out that your "experience" was wrong and that just a little study on your part would have shown the folly of many things in your "Christian experience?

WHY HAS NOT YOUR PASTOR TAUGHT YOU THESE THINGS?

Lets look at just one example of "choosing those things that please God" which the New Testament can be shown to teach; but the key is recognizing them and this is almost impossible without a background in Judaism and Jewish Roots of Christianity.

Also in Acts 20:8 is recorded that "there were many lights in the upper chamber." Most of us have read this passage over and over our whole lives and just pass right over it moving on to the next passage. For your information this passage is recording for us the Havdalah worship service which is a religious service that ends the Sabbath on Saturday evenings at sunset; thereby .separating the Sabbath Holy Day from secular days. The Fourth Commandment is:

Exod 20:8-11 8 Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. 9 Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work: 10 But the seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: 11 For in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it. (KJV)

PLEASE PAY CLOSE ATTENTION

Notice that in Troas, a Greek city, the Apostle Paul is teaching Gentiles to observe Havdalah on the Sabbath evening. In other words followers of Jesus, in fulfillment of the Great Commission were observing the Sabbath on Friday evening to Saturday evening long after Jesus' death and resurrection. Gentile believers were keeping the Sabbath and not Sunday. Rome will change this with Constantine and since then followers of Jesus have disobeyed the Sabbath and kept days set aside for sun-worship instead. Neglect of the sabbath and sanctification of pagan holy days is considered Idolatry and this is where the vast majority of good Christian people find themselves today; most never find out until they die. Needless to say the experience of the non-Jewish believers in Troas is NOT the experience of most Christians. Why not?

Repeatedly in Paul's trips he entered the synagogue as was his custom, and it was in these Greek cities that Gentiles were attending "church" on the Sabbath. With just a little study you would find out that the early church knew what we do not: namely that Yeshua was crucified on Wednesday afternoon and raised at the end of Friday evening (at the beginning of the Sabbath which is a picture of the world to come where believers in God realize Eternal Life where there is not more death...figures does it not): So much for Catholic tradition and Good Friday when it was Good Wednesday (ha ha)!

It would be many years after Yeshua's death before Gentiles would later take control of Christianity and change the day of worship from the Sabbath to Sunday.

Let us look at another example.

In 1st Cor 11:2 Paul thanks the Gentiles in Corinth for "remembering him in all ways and KEEPING the ordinances." The root word for "ordinances" when traced to the Greek and Hebrew will refer to "divine appointed times"...festivals and Sabbaths.

Answer for yourself: Have you forgotten that Isa. 56 spoke of this very thing regarding non-Jews who come to God were allowed to keep such Festivals and Sabbaths so that would not be separated from God people (the Jews)? I hope not because what follows next is another example of the New Testament rightly "divided" where we see such things again taught to non-Jews in the fulfillment of the Great Commission.

Again in Corinthians Paul admonishes Gentiles to "keep the feast" [Passover} because Yeshua was killed on that day.

It is not my intention at this point to embark on who and why the meaning of Jesus' death was changed later by some who deviated from normative Judaism but let me say that Jesus'/Yeshua's death was the catalyst that generated from a Gentile hating Judaism a movement into all the world whereby God's Covenant and Commandments were taken in the Great Commission in the form of the Laws of Noah whereby non-Jews would learn and turn from idolatry to the living God. Had Jesus not died then this momentous event mostly likely would never have happened and the world as we know it would have been vastly different and the Judeo-Christian ethic would be absent from this planet today. Contrary to what most Gentile Christian believers understand today regarding this "Passover" passage of Paul in contemporary Christianity, one should understand that it was through Jesus' death that the salvation of the non-Jew was accomplished because it would be from this ministry that would begin after his death that would come a movement which would go into all the world and take to the non-Jews the Covenants of God and the path for non-Jews to come to the saving knowledge of God. This is the historical understanding of the passages that relate to how the death of Jesus saved the non-Jew. His "blood" was simply a metaphor for his death and his death accomplished what Israel was failing to do at the time, namely, not being a priest to the nations and not bringing their non-Jewish brothers to God. Jesus' death did this through the missionizing of the world by his followers. So, again, metaphorically, you can understand how non-Jews were saved by Jesus' blood (or should I say death). Many will dispute this and claim literally that the "blood" saves but this only betrays they lack of adequate understanding on how the sacrificial system worked. If only one looks to Lev. 17 where is says:

11 For the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul.

Look at the subject of the sentence. I defy anyone to tell me that the subject accomplishing the action (atonement) is not the word "life" and not "blood." The word "blood" is the object of the preposition in the sentence. This realization many years ago awoke me to serious study into the dynamics of the sacrificial system where I surprisingly learned that I had been taught it 100% incorrectly by the Christian Church as well as my pseudo-professional teachers. It is time we learn the truth about Jewish things from Jews who KNOW and literally know Jesus better than Christians (such irony).

1st Corinthians chapter 16:2 states:

1 Cor 16:2

2 (Speaking to non-Jews in Corinth..a Gentile city)...Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come.

One should note that "day" in most Bibles is in italics and this means it was "added" to the text by the Bible society which printed the Bible. In reality it is saying, by interpretation, "on the first of the week" or "as the week was dawning." This refers to the time period when the first of the week was beginning to dawn (in Hebrew time the day begins at evening and end in the morning the first day).

So again reference is again made to a Havdalah service on Saturday evening for non-Jewish believers in Corinth...thus concluding the Sabbath just before the beginning of our Sunday which, according to Jewish time, begins at 6:01 P.M. in the evening.

Also another example:

In I Corinthians 10:16 it is recorded: is this not the "cup of blessing" which refers to the ONLY cup of the Passover Seder...other than Elijah's cup at the end of the Seder, which again shows us a picture of Gentiles keeping Passover and the Sabbath.

I could go on and on but by now you get the point I hope...we don't have to keep Sabbath.....but if it is recorded that Gentiles doing so pleases God in Isa 56..."who keep my Sabbaths...[referring to Feasts and Weekly Sabbaths"] ..then what kind of follower of Jesus are we when we choose not to do things knowingly when they please God?

To top this off understand that non-Jewish believers were taught these things by Israel until early in the 4th century when Constantine and Rome would create an official state religion which would destroy the existing "faith once given to the saints...both Jew and non-Jew; and out jumped the golden calf of Gentile Roman Christianity which would lead the way to the official recognition and production of the New Testament some 70 plus years later."

We at Bet Emet Ministries are dedicated to instructing Gentile believers [Christians] in returning to the hidden truths of the Bible. Today in English we miss so much since few have the skills to rightly interpret this Bible correctly (historically, linguistically, culturally, politically, etc). By God's calling and grace we have been shown these truths which have caused us to repent from the errors in our religious belief system...such errors caused us to have a life-style that was less than pleasing to God in many areas...and this was do the fact that we lacked only knowledge (the Bible says 'my people perish because of a lack of knowledge).

Please understand that these few examples which I have shared is just the tip of the iceberg for Christians. Our texts are full of errors in key places where the crafters of our New Testament took great pains to make sure the Gentile readers would not see nor understand the Jewish Roots of their faith; such was Rome's ploy in creating this New Testament in the first place. I have only touched on just a few examples in this article but please understand that such errors of omission involve other important areas of our faith as well: atonement, Christology, Messianism, Covenants, etc. If you are a serious student or desire to be then our websites can be of great value to you in your desire to learn the truth and ultimately be able to discern the shaft from the wheat in Gentile Christianity.

I hope this has opened your heart and eyes...and given you a desire to learn how you can live a life more pleasing to God. If we can be of further assistance to you in sharing our many teachings and newsletters...please let me know and I will include you on our mailings. Watch for our Web Sites. May God bless you and may He cause you to walk in His statutes...shalom!

BY PRACTICING RIGHTEOUSNESS CAN A GENTILE MAKE HIMSELF ACCEPTABLE TO GOD? TAKE CORNELIUS FOR EXAMPLE...THE SALVATION OF THE GENTILE

We pick up our thought process by relating "obedience to the Law/Commandments particular to our Covenant as "non-Jews". By that I mean the Covenant of Noah and it's relationship to becoming righteous and acceptable before God."

I know that this concept of making oneself "acceptable to God" is foreign to Gentile Christianity yet it finds itself smack dab in the middle of the New Testament buried in the Greek, the original language of the text, which is never noticed unless one studies or reads the New Testament in Greek and not English. What we must be conscious of in our study is that the following religious concepts, like making oneself acceptable to God, are not only found in the New Testament but agree totally with the Laws of Noah and Biblical Judaism as well.

Paul continues to reveal the hidden mysteries of God to the Gentiles in the Book of Ephesians 2:3-5, KJV:

- 3 Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and were by nature the CHILDREN OF WRATH, even as others.
- 4 But God, Who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us,
- 5 Even when we were dead in SINS, hath quickened us together with MESSIAH (by UNDESERVED PARDON ye are saved;),

Before the CONVERSION of these GENTILE EPHESIANS, they lived in SIN.

Answer for yourself: What did we discover in the last teaching as to what "sin" was in the New Testament?

Matt 7:23 23 And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity. (KJV)

The Strong's Concordance: Strong's number #458 anomia (an-om-ee'-ah); from 459; illegality, i.e. violation of law or (genitive case) wickedness: KJV-- iniquity, X transgress (-ion of) the law, unrighteousness.

Now let us look at the root word:

459 anomos (an'-om-os); from 1 (as a negative particle) and 3551; lawless, i.e. (negatively) not subject to (the Jewish) law; (by implication, a Gentile), or (positively) wicked: KJV-- without law, lawless, transgressor, unlawful, wicked.

Now we have already learned that the "non-Jew", in his Covenant with Noah, was given 66 Laws and Commandments which are again repeated as the foundation in the Laws of Moses. So we see that those who are told to depart from Christ are those who are ignorance toward, in violation of, and in transgression of the Laws of Moses, especially for Gentiles who share 66 of these same Laws in the Laws of Noah!!!

As Gentiles, who were born as aliens to the commonwealth of Israel, strangers from covenant promises, without hope and without God, the Death Penalty for transgression of the Law...which is exactly "what" one earns for committing SIN, as Romans 6:23 says (THE WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH)-hung over Gentiles, just as it does for anyone who PRACTICES SIN (remember transgression of the LAW is defined as "sin" in the New Testament). Only those who turn FROM sin, and turn in OBEDIENCE to God's Every Word" will be given the Gift only God can give...Eternal Life! We will be given access to the Tree of Life!

As we have read in Isaiah 59: 1-2, it is OUR INIQUITIES and SINS (as seen in the breaking God's Laws) that cuts us off from God. These same Scriptures tell us that the reason God will not listen to someone, is because they are a sinner...they practice sin (they practice breaking the Laws in their Covenant with God)!

Before the Word of God was given to the Gentile people as a whole, they were cut off from God. Before this, only the tribes of the Children of Israel (Jews) were given God's Laws, which guided one to God's salvation. Israel has ceased, in large part, being a "light" to the nations and there was little hope for the Gentile peoples unless they could come to the saving knowledge of God, His Laws, and His Covenant.

SALVATION GOES TO THE NON-JEWS.....

In Acts 11:18; Acts 10:34-35, KJV:

- Acts 11:18 18 When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life. (KJV)
- Acts 10:34 34 Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: (KJV)
- 35 But <235> in <1722> every <3956> nation <1484> he that feareth <5399> (5740) Him <846>, and <2532> worketh <2038> (5740) righteousness <1343>, is <2076> (5748) accepted <1184> with Him (God)<846>.

Let us set the stage. Peter had, against his will, been sent to the home of an "unclean" Gentile. However this particular Gentile was a "Godfearer" who had accepted the God of Israel and was already living by the Laws of Noah which were part of the faith of the Godfearer. However, since he remained "uncircumcised" he was not accepted by "certain" Jews since lacking this he was not eligible for conversion. So he remained "apart" from the Israel of God in the "certain Jew's" eyes but not in God's eyes as we are about to see. Paramount for our understanding is that such a one who turned from idols to serve the living God was "saved". Notice also that he was "saved" in the text many years after the death of the New Testament Jesus and he had not even yet heard the typical Christian message about this Jesus; in fact he knew nothing about this Jesus or adhering to any established doctrine concerning "Yeshua" for salvation. He was just a Godfearer as pictured all the way through the Jewish Scriptures as an example of non-Jews who had faith in the Only True God and who was "saved" accordingly. Understand as we go on that this condition of "salvation" for the "non-Jew" was no longer accepted by bigoted Jews who considered Gentiles "dogs" and wished no social or religious contact with them. Only if the "non-Jew" was circumcised was he considered "born" again and acceptable to the Jews, at least in the eyes of "certain Jews" like the School of Shammai. This is the whole issue of Paul and Galatians which is overlooked by most who fail to realize that Paul was talking only about "one" law..the law of circumcision which the "non-Jew" was not under!

While Peter was in Cornelius' home, before he even talked with him about Yeshua, the Holy Spirit fell upon Cornelius has He had the Jews years before. This will be very problematic for Christian theology because not knowing to be "saved" by belief in Yeshua or his death or his blood as Christians teach, here is Cornelius "accepted" by God and "filled with the Spirit of God" and he does not yet know or accept any of the Christian theology you and I are told are necessary for salvation.

Answer for yourself: According to Peter, are those who practice and work righteousness accepted with God? Yes.

Before we can go on verse 35 bears our investigation. Let us see who the "nation" refers to in that verse.

Lexicon Greek 1484 1484 ethnos {eth'-nos} probably from 1486; TDNT - 2:364,201; n n AV - Gentiles 93, nation 64, heathen 5, people 2; 164

- 1) a multitude (whether of men or of beasts) associated or living together
- 1a) a company, troop, swarm
- 2) a multitude of individuals of the same nature or genus
 - 2a) the human race
- 3) a race, nation, people group
- 4) in the OT, foreign nations not worshipping the true God, pagans, Gentiles
- 5) Paul uses the term for Gentile Christians

Answer for yourself: Does not Peter say that in referring to "ethnos" that those of a race, or nation who worketh righteousness (who like Cornelius had not yet learned of Yeshua or the theology connected with his death which would be developed later) find eternal life through obedience to righteous acts? It sure does. Again this negates totally Christianity's salvation message through the death and blood of Yeshua if the account of Cornelius is to be believed. I personally believe it is to be believed because it lines up with Biblical history and Biblical Judaism correctly.

Answer for yourself: Besides, have you ever studied true Biblical Atonement for yourself and seen how it operates and just what is done in it to accomplish forgiveness of sins and Eternal Life? Well, you must and the time is now. After this study it will be impossible to look at the New Testament's depiction of the death of Jesus as an atonement for your sin any longer!

Answer for yourself: Have you ever studied out for yourself the Hebrew Isaiah chapters 52 and 53? Again if you do then you will see that it is impossible to connect any of this to a New Testament Jesus. The truth awaits you and these two studies alone will show you why the Jewish people, who know their faith, and their Rabbis cannot and will not accept the New Testament Jesus.

HOW THE NON-JEW BECOMES ACCEPTABLE TO GOD

Now let us reaffirm what these multitude of Gentiles and heathens who were without the knowledge of the True God and who were not worshipping the true God were to DO (accomplish righteous works) to become acceptable to God.

We are told they must WORK RIGHTEOUSNESS to be accepted with God. Notice that ACCEPTANCE WITH GOD is not belief alone but involves the WORKING OUT OF TANGIBLE DEEDS THAT AFFIRM ONE'S FAITH!

Answer for yourself: Can we be assured of acceptance with God if we have faith and no righteous works? No because faith without "works" is dead.

Answer for yourself: Is it possible that this "working out" of practical deeds and manifestation of practical righteousness is nothing more than the accurate and correct response of one's faith in obedience to Laws and Commandments? It sure is.

Lexicon Greek 2038

2038 ergazomai {er-gad'-zom-ahee} middle voice from 2041; TDNT - 2:635,251; v AV - work 22, wrought 7, do 3, minister about 1, forbear working + 3361 1, labour for 1, labour 1, commit 1, trade by 1, trade 1; 39

- 1) to work, labor, do work
- 2) to trade, to make gains by trading, "do business"
- 3) to do, work out (as in "working out one's salvation by fear and trembling)
- 3a) exercise, perform, commit
- 3b) to cause to exist, produce
- 4) to work for, earn by working, to acquire

Answer for yourself: Do you not recognize that Peter is saying that those Gentiles who perform acts of righteousness, thereby causing righteous works to exist, are accepted with God? I hope so.

Answer for yourself: Does this verse not say that being accepted with God is based upon earning, and working, and acquiring acceptance with God through righteous acts? It sure does.

Lexicon Greek 2041 2041 ergon {er'-gon} from a primary (but obsolete) ergo (to work); TDNT - 2:635,251; n n AV - work 152, deed 22, doing 1, labour 1; 176

- 1) business, employment, that which any one is occupied
- 1a) that which one undertakes to do, enterprise, undertaking
- 2) any product whatever, any thing accomplished by hand, art, industry, or mind
- 3) an act, deed, thing done: the idea of working is emphasized in opp. to that which is less than work

Answer for yourself: Is a "work" a deed? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Is not the emphasis upon the "doing" of a deed instead of "believing" only? It sure is.

Answer for yourself: Did not Jesus say that by their fruits (not their faith) you shall know them? Yes he sure did.

Answer for yourself: And what is it that we as Gentiles are to work toward? Biblical Righteousness.

WORKING RIGHTEOUSNESS.....BEING ACCEPTED BY HIM (GOD)...ACTS 10:35

The Greek word for "righteousness" is as follows:

Lexicon Greek 1343 1343 dikaiosune {dik-ah-yos-oo'-nay} from 1342; TDNT - 2:192,168; n f AV - righteousness 92; 92

- 1) in a broad sense: state of him who is as he ought to be, righteousness, the condition acceptable to God
- 1a) the doctrine concerning the way in which man may attain a state approved of God
- 1b) integrity, virtue, purity of life, rightness, correctness of thinking feeling, and acting
- 2) in a narrower sense, justice or the virtue which gives each his due

Answer for yourself: Does "righteousness" describe a condition that brings a state of acceptance with God? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Does not true Biblical righteousness relate to "doing" more than just "believing?" I hope you said "yes."

Answer for yourself: Since "working righteousness" relates to the way one can attain an approved state with God, then does it not stand to reason we must respond in obedience to commandments (like keeping the Commandments of the Seven Biblical Festivals, the Sabbath, and the correct use of the Tithe...all of which most of Christianity violates)? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Since Acts 10:34-35 is written long after the time of Jesus and teaches us that a condition of "acceptance" with God may be attained by working righteousness and practicing righteous deeds, then are we to trust solely in our faith in Jesus for "acceptance with God" if this verse connects such "condition of acceptance" with righteous works, acts, and deeds? No, and if you have the courage to check out our other web site, even the two links above, we will demonstrate beyond any doubt how such false ideas got connected to the death of the New Testament Jesus!

Answer for yourself: Is not "working and doing righteous acts" the correct way to feel and act according to the Greek word used by the Holy Spirit in this Scripture? It sure is.

INVESTIGATING THE "ROOT" WORD FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS

Now let us focus in more detail on what God says we are to "work" toward. We are to work toward righteousness. Let us now investigate the "root" word for righteousness.

Lexicon Greek 1342 1342 dikaios {dik'-ah-yos} from 1349; TDNT - 2:182,168; adj AV - righteous 41, just 33, right 5, meet 2; 81

1) righteous, observing divine laws

- 1a) in a wide sense, upright, righteous, virtuous, keeping the commands of God
 - 1a1) of those who seem to themselves to be righteous, who pride themselves to be righteous, who pride themselves in their virtues, whether real or imagined
 - 1a2) innocent, faultless, guiltless
 - 1a3) used of him whose way of thinking, feeling, and acting is wholly conformed to the will of God, and who therefore needs no rectification in the heart or life
 - 1a3a) only Christ truly
 - 1a4) approved of or acceptable of God
- 1b) in a narrower sense, rendering to each his due and that in a judicial sense, passing just judgment on others, whether expressed in words or shown by the manner of dealing with them

Answer for yourself: Did we see the word for "righteous" in the Bible means observing Divine Laws like the Laws of Moses for the Jews and the Laws of Noah for the "non-Jews"? We sure did.

Answer for yourself: Did we not see that "righteous" in the Bible means keeping the Commandments and the Laws of God, these same Laws that make up the many stipulations in our Covenants with God, either Jewish or Gentile? We sure did.

Answer for yourself: Does "worketh righteousness" that leads to being accepted by God mean (according to the Greek word "diakaios") observing divine Laws and Commandments? It sure does.

Answer for yourself: Does "worketh righteousness" that leads to being accepted by God mean (according to the Greek word "diakaios") keeping the commandments of God? It sure does!

Answer for yourself: Can we be considered "righteous by God" if we have a DIFFERENT way of thinking, feeling, and acting that is not totally or wholly conformed to the will of God? No we cannot be considered "righteous" by God.

Answer for yourself: Can we be "righteous" by faith alone and be confident of our acceptance with God since this verse directly says that those who practice righteous acts and deeds (and not just have faith or believe) are accepted with God? You better not bet on it.

Answer for yourself: If we act contrary to the Laws and Commandments of God which are the expressed manifestations of "righteousness" then can we be certain that we are approved and acceptable of God? No. We can be certain that we have displeased Him and are not approved and accepted by Him.

THE EXAMPLE OF CORNELIUS.....IT COMPLETELY REFUTES WHAT CHRISTIANITY TEACHES ABOUT SALVATION

God is NO "Respecter of persons". ONLY those who REVERE Him (by OBEYING His word, and who WORK RIGHTEOUSNESS) by practicing God's Commandments, Laws, Statutes, and Judgments in their daily lives, are accepted BY YAHWEH.

Before God opened the "Way of Salvation" to the Gentiles, it was considered UNLAWFUL, even to the Believers (who were then all Hebrews, by the way), to rub elbows with the Gentiles. However, this was not an Ordinance from God or part of the Written Law, but from the oral teachings of Shammai who hated Gentiles and was the leading Torah scholar of his day. This ordinance was stated by Peter in Acts 10:28, KJV:...it is an unlawful thing for a man who is a Jew to keep company, or come unto, one of another nation...

According to "these" ordinances by a Rabbi named Shammai, it made no difference that any Gentile might be practicing RIGHTEOUSNESS...as Cornelius the GENTILE centurion was doing in Acts 10:1-4, KJV. Cornelius, a DEVOUT man and one that FEARED God with all his heart was accepted by God because his prayers and alms (works) had come up to God as acceptable sacrifices. Let us understand that his prayers and alms were manifestations of Commandments and Laws, they were his works, his faith in action, thus they were "works of righteousness." Notice also that his prayers and alms had come to God and God had declared him accepted BEFORE PETER ARRIVED AND PREACHED JESUS TO HIM! Thus he was accepted by God and Peter will come to that understanding shortly when the same miracle that happened to the Jews at Pentecost in Acts 2, some 17 years ago, will happen to Cornelius. Like the Jews in Acts 2 who gathered from all nations around the globe at the Festival of Pentecost and had their "ears and understanding opened" to understand all languages of mankind once again as man had done before Babel, Cornelius, who did speak Hebrew, had his "ears and understanding opened" to Peter speaking Hebrew. This SAME miracle spoke volumes to Peter and he realized that in spite of "erroneous theology" like that of R. Shammai God has put no difference between the Jews and the Gentiles! And this was before Jesus was preached to him!!!

Answer for yourself: Can a Gentile be "accepted by God" by doing and working before he hears about Jesus? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Can a person be "accepted with God" by living a life of "active faith and practical righteousness" and be damned to Hell because he has not heard about Jesus yet? NO, not according to what you just saw in Acts 10 concerning Cornelius! Acts 10 shows us that although one has NOT learned or heard of Jesus, his righteous acts (not his theology about Jesus) brings ACCEPTANCE WITH GOD!

Answer for yourself: Should we not follow the teachings of the Bible concerning what true salvation is regardless of what we have heard others say since childhood about what the church has taught about salvation? Yes.

The word translated 'devout' in Acts 10:2 is as follows:

[A] devout <2152> [man], and <2532> one that feared <5399> (5740) God <2316> with <4862> all <3956> his <848> house <3624>, which <5037> gave <4160> (5723) much <4183> alms <1654> to the people <2992>, and <2532> prayed <1189> (5740) to God <2316> always <1275>.

Lexicon Greek 2152 2152 eusebes {yoo-seb-ace'} from 2095 and 4576; TDNT - 7:175,1010; adj AV - devout 3, godly 1; 4

- 1) pious, dutiful

Root Word...Lexicon Greek 4576 4576 sebomai {seb'-om-ahee}middle voice of an apparently primary verb; TDNT - 7:169,1010; v AV - worship 6, devout 3, religious 1; 10

- 1) to revere, to worship

Just a note about "middle voice" of the adverb "devout". Whenever "middle voice" is used it means....SOMETHING ONE DOES HIMSELF.....the action is done to him by himself...

In other words, Cornelius was making himself HOLY by KEEPING the Laws of God (Laws of Noah) and practicing as a life-style righteous works!

Answer for yourself: Did Cornelius' faith come before God as a memorial or his works? His works.

Answer for yourself: Would Cornelius' works have been considered "righteous" by God if they had been works and deeds that violated the Commandments and Laws, yet still being "religious works?" No. Obedience is better than any sacrifice WE can give God. We must give God what He asks and not try to improve on it or go beyond what He asks.

Only "living by" God's Holy Laws and Commandments that frame our respective Covenants, both Jewish and Gentile, can one be "holy" because it separates the obedient person from the majority of mankind who do not obey the LORD but lean on their on understanding and fail to study to learn the truth about God and His revelation given to mankind that was corrected terribly by Rome in the 3rd century when they changed and "reinterpreted" almost everything; even "the Christ" and the "Jesus Messiah" as well as true Biblical Atonement. If one lives any other "way," then he lives in sin and God then, correctly, considers that person to be a sinner. God, assuredly, is no "Respecter of persons", so even IF a GENTILE OBEYS HIM, then that Gentile is "ACCEPTED BY HIM" regardless if that person is a Jew, Christian, Muslim, Hindo, etc. God has proven this through the instructions He gave through Moses, saying previously in Exodus 12:48-49, KJV: And when a "stranger" shall sojourn with thee...ONE LAW shall be to him that is homeborn, and unto the STRANGER (Gentile) that sojourneth among you.

The word translated 'stranger' in this verse is word # 1616 in Strong's Hebrew Dictionary: the word "ger", and means: foreigner, alien. This is the Gentile like you and me!

Answer for yourself: Did the Text say that there is "Only One Law" for both Jews and Gentiles? Sure did!

Answer for yourself: Are the Gentiles to yield to the Law given to the Jews because salvation if of the Jews or Jews to decide which of the 2,000 different Christian denominations and their "various and conflicting laws" to obey? I think the answer is obvious! The Gentile is to yield to the law given to the Jews which is the Torah!

Answer for yourself: Is salvation of the Gentiles or the Jews? Jews. Have you heard them? Have you studied Judaism and contrasted it theologically and doctrinally with Christianity and noted how Christianity changed everything in the 3rd century because they hated the Jews and did not want to live according to the Laws of God?

Answer for yourself: How can the Jew possibly submit to the Law given the Gentile (understand that he is not supposed to) if the Gentile Christian is taught that the Law has passed away? He can't!

Now the Apostle Paul was speaking to the Ephesians, who were strangers before God's Word was delivered to them. When they received God, they were no longer "strangers" to the covenant promises made to Israel (in thy Seed Abraham all NATIONS (Gentiles) will be blessed)! Through the teaching of Paul, who shared the God of Israel and His requirements of them, they had accepted God's Holy Laws, which they had broken in times past, and these "non-Jews" were given the opportunity to be justified through repentance to Yeshua's message (which results in works of righteousness). In Ephesians 2:19, KJV: Now therefore you are no more strangers and foreigners, but FELLOW CITIZENS with the saints, and of the household of GOD. The Gentile who comes to faith in God through the ministry of Yeshua and his legacy becomes a fellow-citizen WITH THE JEWS IN THE ISRAEL OF GOD!

Answer for yourself: As a Christian, are you standing alone in your identification with God trusting in a false salvation message of Rome and opposed to the Jew/Israel, or are you, as Ephesians tells us, part of Israel and considered as "fellow citizen" with the people of God in Israel because you have been grafted into Israel and recognize, cherish, and obey the Laws of your Covenant with God (the Laws of Noah for the "non-Jew")? You are "the Israel of God" which is a more true identification and designation that calling yourself a Christian which was a derogatory term used by the enemies of Way and the sect of the Nazarene. I hope you are beginning to see that you are engrafted into Israel and do not stand apart from the root and fatness of the Olive Tree which supports you; nor the Law of God that provide the very foundation of your Covenant with the Creator.

Answer for yourself: Are fellow citizens of the "same nation" (both Jew and Gentile) under the same Laws. Sure are!

Answer for yourself: For example, in America do the laws of murder apply to everyone or just a certain class of people? To everyone. Get the picture?

Let us end with a big question.

Answer for yourself: Are you really a follower of "the Christ"? Well read this and then the answer to that become more clear than ever before for there are two different "gospel" messages out there; there is a short study were we contrast the different salvation messages of Jesus against the completely different salvation message of the Romanized Paul and then a 3 article series on contrasting the gospel messages of Paul vs Jesus and show the reader how they are in conflict in "key" places. They plans of salvation and gospel messages are not the same and to the degree that you understand this, recognize this, and follow the correct one then and only then can you call yourself a true "follower of the Christ" or a "follower of Jesus".

by practicing righteousness can we make ourselves acceptable to god?

Shalom.

BET EMET MINISTRIES

Hebrew For "The House of Truth"

SO YOU THOUGHT YOU WERE A FOLLOWER OF JESUS.....YOU MIGHT NEED TO RECONSIDER

Disclaimer: It is important for the reader to understand that in this website, in comparing first century Judaism and their Messiah with later Christianity and their presentation of the Jewish Messiah along with the unveiling of the historical truths concerning the non-Jewish "believer" in the first century, I will use a "literal-historical" approach to the "Jesus Story". If you have studied our other websites then you know that "the Christ" can be interpreted from 3 different perspectives down through recorded history: "mystical", "mythological", and "literal-historical". Only after one has spent a considerable time in dedicated and scholarly studies in such areas as Biblical Judaism, the Jewish Messiah and true Messianic prophecy as taken from the Hebrew Scriptures and not the later forged texts of Rome, manuscript evidences, the history and origin of the Roman New Testament, the Gnostic Paul vs the Roman Paul, the Essenes and their "literal godman", Gnosticism, Egyptian religion and the ancient "Jesus Story", Comparative religion, and Astrotheology can he understand and be certain which two of the above three methods of interpretation of "the Christ" are accurate and factual. Again for purposes of comparing Judaism vs Christianity and the implications that this holds for the non-Jew and "Godfearer" we adopt in this website and for all studies in this website a supposed "literal-historical" interpretation of "the Christ" as well as the Jesus of the New Testament. Only in so doing can we adequately contrast the truths of Judaism vs Christianity theology and by so doing follow the train of these Divine Truths back down the corridors of history to the earlier Divine revelations given to mankind by the Creator which were intended for both "Gentiles" and "Jews" as well. I will let you be the judge of the results of such studies and leave to the reader to draw the necessary conclusions as we attempt to compare Jewish and Christian theological perspectives all the while dealing with the New Testament Jesus in a "literal-historical" manner in order for such an accurate comparison to be done effectively. I will leave the conclusion you draw concerning the Jesus of the New Testament up to you and your personal study of the materials available to us today. Craig Lyons M.Div.

Let me begin with a quote from the New Testament…from an epistle written to non-Jews like most of our readers.

Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your ownselves……

I think that this is a very good idea to prove to ourselves that what we believe is true; in fact I have practiced self-examination of such religious beliefs in light of the facts regarding the "real historical Jesus" for over a decade. Because of such self-examination in light of my discoveries as I combed through 2000 years of Biblical history, culture, as well as in-depth analysis of Biblical language, I have been forced to change much of my religious belief system along the way. It is my desire that this article challenge you to scrutinize your religious beliefs as I have been challenged over the years. May God witness truth to your soul.

Answer for yourself: Was Jesus a Christian and would he ascribe today to the vast majority of doctrines taught in his name in churches which go by his name as well?

Well let us investigate. But first we need to set the stage for what is coming next. Try and be as honest with yourself as possible in answering these next questions.

TO WHICH RELIGION WOULD A PERSON BE A MEMBER IF HE DID THE FOLLOWING?

- Was circumcised on the eighth day.
- Kept Sabbath from Friday sundown to Saturday sundown.
- Attended a synagogue regularly.
- Kept the Biblical Festivals such as Passover, Hag Ha Matzah (Unleavened Bread), Shavuot (Pentecost), Rosh HaShannah, Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), Sukkoth (Tabernacles) and Hanukkah.
- Was a citizen and friend of Israel and believed Israel is the example for all non-Jewish people in the world
- His Bible contained the Torah, the Prophets and the Writings ONLY!
- Quoted passages as authoritative from the Mishnah (the Oral Law).
- Taught that Deuteronomy 6:4 was the most important commandment.
- Wore a tallith and phylacteries in religious services
- Did not eat unclean foods
- Taught the eternalness of God's Covenants and His Laws
- Taught that faith without works is no faith at all
- Taught that salvation is more concerned with events in the here and now than what occurs beyond the grave

I suppose that most of you came up with the same answer…..you don't have to be a scholar to recognize that one that practiced such a faith does not practice Christianity.....he holds to the teachings of Judaism.

NOW, LET'S TAKE A LOOK AT ANOTHER PERSON. SEE IF YOU CAN IDENTIFY THE RELIGION OF THIS PERSON

- Keeps the Sabbath on Sunday which is the legacy of Sun worship today.
- Attends a church which most likely rejects most things Jewish.
- Keeps Easter and Christmas which were pagan festivals made to look religious to those who don't know the difference.
- Carries a Bible containing an Old Testament and a New Testament which ironically contradicts the Old.
- Stresses a person's beliefs over his actions.
- Teaches that people had to be "saved" by acknowledging a creed or an established set of beliefs in order to go to heaven.
- Teaches that they are not under the law and that the Law has passed away and they are under grace.
- Teaches that the church had replaced Israel as God's people and sees itself as the fulfillment of prophecies given to Israel.
- Teaches that you can eat anything...even Biblically unclean foods
- Attaches no special significance to circumcision

I bet you got the right answer again – a Christian.

GOING DEEPER THAN YOU POSSIBLY HAVE EVEN GONE BEFORE

Now let's take this discussion one more step by answering this question.

Answer for yourself: If a Jew wanted to become a member of a Christian religion could he continue practicing Judaism in the church?

The answer is so simple. You would only have to ask your Pastor that one question to get the answer. Probably in the 99.9% of the cases the answer would be - NO!

TURN ABOUT IS FAIR PLAY

Answer for yourself: If a Christian wanted to become a convert to Judaism could he continue practicing Christianity and the items listed above? Again the answer is rather obvious.

Now, the percentage moves upwards, probably in 100% of the cases the answer would be - NO!

It is very apparent that not only are Judaism and Christianity different religions, they are exclusive in many ways. This reveals an amazing fact which can be seen by asking one very simple question –

WHICH RELIGION DID JESUS BELONG TO...CHRISTIANITY OR JUDAISM?

- Was circumcised on the eighth day.
- Kept Sabbath from Friday sundown to Saturday sundown.
- Attended a synagogue regularly.
- Kept the Biblical Festivals such as Passover, Hag Ha Matzah (Unleavened Bread), Shavuot (Pentecost), Rosh HaShannah, Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), Sukkoth (Tabernacles) and Hanukkah.

- Was a citizen and friend of Israel and believed Israel is the example for all non-Jewish people in the world
- His Bible contained the Torah, the Prophets and the Writings ONLY!
- Quoted passages as authoritative from the Mishnah (the Oral Law).
- Taught that Deuteronomy 6:4 was the most important commandment.
- Wore a tallith and phylacteries in religious services
- Did not eat unclean foods
- Taught the eternalness of God's Covenants and His Laws
- Taught that faith without works is no faith at all
- Taught that salvation is more concerned with events in the here and now than what occurs beyond the grave

Now for the easy part. The answer to the above question is a matter of historical record which is easily attested to by the New Testament itself-- Jesus was a Jew, not a Christian and he was certainly not both. It is clear that Jesus was a practicing Jew who lived a very observant Jewish life-style.

In fact we cannot find any instance whatsoever where Jesus ever: Kept the Sabbath on Sunday, attended or affiliated with any group which rejected things Jewish, kept the pagan festival of Ishtar/Easter or the sun god's birthday (Saturnalia…December 25th….Christmas) which were pagan festivals made to look religious to us today, ever taught anything that contradicted the Old Testament as does much in the New Testament, ever stressed a person's beliefs over his actions, ever taught that people had to be "saved" by acknowledging a creed or an established set of beliefs in order to go to heaven, ever taught that people are not under the law or that the Law had passed away and they were under grace alone, ever taught that the church had replaced Israel as God's people, and ever taught that you can eat anything…even Biblically unclean foods.

JESUS NEVER RENOUNCED JUDAISM OR QUIT BEING A JEW

An amazing discovery for any Christian is the fact that there is simply no evidence that Jesus ever renounced Judaism and quit being a Jew. Also, his teachings do not indicate that he ever wanted any Jew to renounce their Judaism and join a new religion. If this revelation every breaks into your conscious mind then you will have to confront Gentile Christianity for what it has actually become despite Jesus's wishes or example set for us.

Answer for yourself: How then, did Jesus get credited with the distinct label that he was the person responsible for creating a new religion?

Answer for yourself: How did Jesus get credit for creating another religion which opposed the religion and way of life he continued to live…even up to his death?

Let us try to answer questions raised by such an assumption:

LOOKING THROUGH THE EYES OF A JEWISH RABBI NAMED JESUS

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi prohibit circumcision or downplay its significance?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi change the Sabbath to another day…let alone to the day set aside for sun worship by the pagans?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi create a replacement for the synagogue?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi substitute a pagan feast which was clearly idolatrous, Ishtar (Easter), for Passover?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi want his followers to celebrate the birth of a Roman god (Saturnalia -- December 25)?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi teach his students to not keep the biblical commandments or that they no longer applied when God already said they were forever?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi teach Gentiles to hate Jews?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi add books to the Torah in spite of the warning in Deuteronomy forbidding the changing or adding to the Word of God?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi replace Deuteronomy 6:4 as the most important commandment?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi teach Gentiles that it is permissible to eat unclean food when Noah, himself a non-Jew separated animals based on the principle of clean/unclean long before there were any Jews?

The answer to all the above questions is that a rabbi wouldn't, and that includes a rabbi named Jesus!

TOUGH - THOUGHT PROVOKING QUESTIONS YOU NEED TO ANSWER FOR YOURSELF

Answer for yourself: If Jesus didn't create a new anti-Jewish religion, who did?

Answer for yourself: Who is responsible and what were their motives in replacing the "faith of the Jewish Christ" with a "faith about the Christian interpretation of the Jewish Christ"?

Answer for yourself: Was it the men who acquired leadership after Jesus' departure and the death of the Apostles who did such a thing ?

Answer for yourself: Were those responsible for changing the faith of Jesus actually Jews or Non-Jews and were their motives in changing Jewish doctrines consistent with anti-Semitism?

Answer for yourself: Did they continue teaching Jesus' message and his gospel or did they change Jesus' message in places, and are you, at the present not yet aware of it at your present level of knowledge?

THE BOOK OF ACTS PAINTS US A PICTURE WE WOULD DO WELL TO EXAMINE CLOSELY

The book of Acts provides us with some very valuable information too long overlooked by most Christians. Acts 21:17-25 records Paul's return to Jerusalem and his meeting with the leaders of the "church." Keep in mind that these were the men who had been personally taught by and lived with Jesus. Their words provide us with some very enlightening information. The translation given below is based on a cultural and historical methodology. Your translation most probably reflects the doctrines of the Roman church and therefore may differ.

"You see, brother (referring to the Apostle Paul), how many thousands of Jews have become faithful (observant). All of them are zealous for the Torah (Law). They have been informed that you have taught the Jews of the Diaspora to not keep the Torah, that they should not circumcise their children or live according to the Jewish religion.... Take these men and do the following... so that everybody will know that there is no truth in these reports about your teachings, but that you yourself are living an observant life-style and keeping the Torah."

REMEMBERING THAT THIS IS A PICTURE OF JESUS' CHURCH

A quick summary provides us with some very significant information. Understanding that this passage reflects events which occurred long after Jesus' death then I ask you to be truthful to the text as well as yourself in asking yourself this: Is your church producing the same results?

- Jews who believe in Jesus are becoming more faithful (observant to the Law) because of the message taught by Jesus' followers.
- The message of Jesus' church caused adherents to become zealous for the Torah (Law).
- The members of Jesus' church kept the Laws of Moses (the Torah).
- The members of Jesus' church circumcised their children.
- The members of Jesus' church lived according to the traditions of the elders of Judaism (the Jewish religion).

Notice that Paul did as he was requested - Paul example, at least while he was in Jerusalem under the watchful eyes of the Apostles, wasn't teaching the Jews to abandon their religion. On the contrary, Paul's behavior and example was one as "under the law" and as one who lived an observant Jewish life-style.

Answer for yourself: How then could he have been the author of a doctrine that advocated rejecting the law as is ascribed to him by most Christians today?

Answer for yourself: Not meaning to over-stress this point, but are you really getting the importance of this message as taught by Jesus' church in Palestine?

IS YOUR CHURCH PREACHING THE SAME GOSPEL AND MESSAGE AS YESHUA'S CHURCH?

Again looking at Acts 21 for our information……let us examine what we are taught by this New Testament picture:

- The message of the apostles caused Jews to repent and become observant Jews who practiced Judaism faithfully.
- The apostles were causing Jews to become eager for the Torah and to pursue it with fervor. It is clear that they were not teaching them that "they were under grace and no longer under the law" or that "the law has passed away after Jesus' death" as we have been told today. This one point is in complete opposition to most fundamental teaching of every modern Christian doctrine.
- The Jewish members of the early church continued to circumcise their children. In other words, they continued to see themselves as participant's in the Abrahamic Covenant, just as every practicing Jew does today. Their children were Jews, not members of some new mystical religion that replaced Judaism.
- The Jewish members of the early church continued to practice Judaism. They did not switch to a new religion.

HOW ARE WE TO INTERPRET PAUL'S ACTIONS?

When we look at Paul's actions, after being ordered by James to take several men with him to the Temple, thereby paying for their animal sacrifices in order to prove that he was an observant Jew by bringing blood sacrifices and sin offerings necessary in finishing his Nazarite vow, we are faced with two possibilities: (A) Paul intentionally deceived the apostles and the Jews in Jerusalem; or, (B) Paul's image and/or the teachings attributed Paul may have been altered by the Roman Church a hundred or more years later.

Answer for yourself: Did Paul intentionally deceive the apostles by faking his true beliefs when bringing sacrifices in the Temple after Jesus' death?

Answer for yourself: If Paul did deceive them, could you put much confidence in his teachings at other places in the New Testament? Remember he already has said that he can become anything to anyone to prove his argument and accomplish his goals.

Answer for yourself: On the other hand, if Paul's words were changed by the Roman Church could we base our foundational beliefs on forged documents?

Christianity, almost universally, requires a Jew to convert to Christianity before he can become a member of the church or be saved. This conversion process forces the Jew to renounce his or her Judaism and terminate or redefine many Biblical and Jewish practices.

Having read this article so far, please think deeply while answering these next questions:

Answer for yourself: Would your church require a Jew to renounce or stop practicing Judaism if he or she wanted to become a member?

Answer for yourself: How many circumcisions have you attended for the children of Jewish members of your church?

Answer for yourself: How many of your church's members are Jewish and are zealous for the Torah and are pursuing it with fervor?

Answer for yourself: Does your church conduct at least one Torah study per week?

Answer for yourself: How many of your church's Jewish members are observant Jews?

Answer for yourself: When was the last time you attended a Passover Seder, or a Rosh HaShannah or Yom Kippur service at your church?

Answer for yourself: Do you have a rabbi or a minister well educated in the Hebraic Roots of Christianity leading your church?

Your answers to the above questions are probably -- Yes, None, None, No, None, Never and Minister.

I want you take some time to think about the next question before you answer it.

Answer for yourself: What would your church require a rabbi to do if he applied for membership?

Answer for yourself: Would they allow him to continue to be a rabbi, practice Judaism, teach the Torah, wear his prayer shawl, observe all the Jewish festivals and teach the members that they were under the Law?

Answer for yourself: What if that rabbi was Jesus?

Are you beginning to see the truth?

Without a great deal of effort it becomes glaringly apparent that neither Rabbi Jesus, the apostles nor the Paul of Acts 21, would be allowed to join a Christian Church the likes of which we see today. On the other hand, it is also clear that Rabbi Jesus would not participate in any religion that not only opposes, but is actively dedicated to destroying his Father's religion!

Gentile Christianity has for centuries felt it was given a mandate from God to "save the world." This is the goal and stated mission of Christianity.

THE SILENT SLAUGHTER OF TRUTH

Answer for yourself: How is this mission to "save the world" to be accomplished?

Just ask the Southern Baptist Convention who just last year vowed to win every Jew to Jesus by the year 2000. To put it very simply, the goal is to convert every Jew (non-Christian) to Christianity. The Jewish convert must renounce his Judaism (or any non-Christian religion he may hold), agree to accept the doctrines of Gentile Christianity and oppose any religion that opposes Gentile Christianity.

Instead of a physical holy war (Jihad), Gentile Christianity has engaged in a doctrinal holy war. As I stated above, Christianity is an exclusive religion. Christians are not allowed to simultaneously practice Islam, Buddhism, Judaism or any other religion. Therefore, if Christianity was to attain its goal of "getting every person on the face of the earth to believe in Jesus," including all the Jews, Judaism would be totally destroyed and cease to exist. If this were ever to happen, and I pray it does not, then Christianity would have the dubious honor which Hitler in vain tried to achieve; namely the eradication of not only the Jewish people from the face of this planet, but the total destruction of the true faith of Jesus…Biblical Judaism.

This would accomplish something that the crusaders, the inquisition, Hitler and a number of others have failed to accomplish.

Answer for yourself: How do you think a Jewish Jesus would react to the idea that such a mission was being carried out in his name?

This really gets weird when you think about it! Christians base their proof for their ultimate salvation on a Jewish rabbi named Jesus (Jesus), who was an observant Jew who faithfully practiced Judaism. On the one hand, his religion would most probably not allow him to practice modern Christianity. On the other hand, modern Christianity would not allow him to practice its religion without first renouncing his religion -- Judaism!

This should present a very important challenge to every Christian:

If a Jewish Jesus could not, and would not, practice a religion dedicated to destroying his religion, how can anyone who bases their salvation on Rabbi Jesus participate in and perpetuate it?

Answer for yourself: Would Rabbi Jesus agree with the church's salvation message which is based on such a system? Are you getting the drift of this discussion?

Answer for yourself: How did the religion that Rabbi Jesus and his followers practice evolve into what it is today? To begin to unravel this problem lets ask how a religion whose foundational position focused on teaching its members "to keep the Law" became a religion whose main message was that "members are no longer under the Law."

Early Christian writers taught that the Law had been fulfilled with the coming of Jesus. Fulfilled, as they defined it, meant that it had been canceled and therefore was of no importance to Christians. However, to Rabbi Jesus, "fulfilled" meant (1) to keep the Law; and (2) to correctly interpret the teachings of the Bible. There is absolutely nothing said by Rabbi Jesus that would support modern Christianity's doctrine of grace.

Next, the Roman Christian leaders focused on the story of God's unconditional and unending support. However, they claimed that this was something new and was created when God made a new covenant of grace. Again, this was unknown to Rabbi Jesus and his apostles. Early Gentile Christian leaders and theologians continued to develop their new doctrines from the mid-second century on through the seventh century. As they refined their arguments they became much more antagonistic toward Judaism.

This Gentile anti-Judaic movement spanned almost all of Christianity -- from the Roman African communities represented by Tertullian (160-220 C.E.), to the Iranian monk Aphrahat (300-350 C.E.) of the eastern Syriac Christian tradition, and to Bishop John Chrysostom (349-400 C.E.) in Antioch.

Studies have clearly shown the extent to which leaders of the early church attacked Judaism for its position on the law, calling Jews "slavish adherents to the letter of the law." They claimed that Judaism was allowed to continue to exist primarily as an example of degradation.

Answer for yourself: What do you think that rabbi Jesus would have thought about that position?

Origin, the third-century leader of the Christian community in Caesarea, summed up the difference between Judaism's and Roman Christianity's approaches to Scripture:

"It seems necessary also to explain how certain people by failing to read or understand Scripture correctly have given themselves up to a great many errors, since the way one ought to approach the understanding of divine letters is unknown to a great many people. And so, the Jews, through the hardness of their heart and because they wish to seem wise in themselves, have not believed in our Lord and Savior....

Now the reason that those we have just mentioned [Jews and heretical Christians] have a false understanding of these matters is quite simply that they understand Scripture not according to the spiritual meaning but according to the sound of the letter....

[But] a person ought to describe threefold in his soul the meaning of divine letters, that is, so that the simple may be edified by, so to speak, the body of the Scriptures; for that is what we call the ordinary and narrative meaning. But if any have begun to make some progress and can contemplate something more fully, they should be edified by the soul of Scripture. And those who are perfect... should be edified by that spiritual Law (Rom. 7:14) which has a shadow of the good things to come (Heb. 10:1), edified by the spirit of Scripture. Thus, just as a human being is said to be made up of body, soul, and spirit, so also is sacred Scripture, which has been granted by God's gracious dispensation for man's salvation."

This new scheme for reading Scripture, and the charge that Jews miss all but the literal meaning, made for powerful arguments. Origin's dichotomy between "letter" and "spirit," or in other words, between reading biblical materials either at their face value for norms of behavior and as a more generalized stance toward the world, set the stage throughout history for Christians to increase the fervor of the charge of legalism. Legalism became synonymous with Jewish, and therefore was viewed in a negative light. However, the word "legalism" simply means someone that "lives in accordance with or adheres to a legal system."

Answer for yourself: What would you call someone who "did not adhere to or live in accordance with a legal system"-- a Christian? The products of this anti-Jewish tradition still shapes the thoughts of over 1.6 billion Christians regarding Judaic law.

I am challenging every Christian to make a decision to return to the religion, teachings and life-style expounded by Rabbi Jesus. Don't misunderstand what I am saying; I am not advocating adopting and accepting the current "theology or faith" about Jesus; rather, return to the real faith of Jesus and the place within it for the Gentile Godfearer. As I stated above, according to the book of Acts, your conversion experience to the faith of the Apostolic church of Jesus as seen in Acts 21 should have made you zealous for the Torah and brought you back to an observant Biblical life-style as defined by the commandments of God.

Answer for yourself: Has it?

Becoming a member of Rabbi Jesus's movement should have caused you to become a serious student of the Torah. You should be teaching the Torah to others, especially the flood of Gentiles who are coming to you to be taught.

Answer for yourself: Has it?

Answer for yourself: Is there any other way for you to be a "light to the Gentiles?"

If you are a Gentile, you will also need to take a very close look at Acts 15. Gentiles who were coming to the movement originated by Rabbi Jesus were given very special instructions. First they were to place themselves under specific laws. For all practical purposes those laws were the Ten Commandments. Of special importance was their keeping the Jewish Sabbath and studying the Torah at the synagogue with the Jews.

Keeping the Jewish Sabbath is something that you can do immediately, however; many of you may find it difficult to locate a synagogue where you will be allowed to study the Torah. For very good reasons, after thousands of years of persecutions, the Jewish community is very cautious. I believe that as Christian Jews return to the synagogue, because of the teachings of Rabbi Jesus, the doors will be opened wider to Gentiles desiring to know the God of Rabbi Jesus.

Two things must be kept in mind as both Jews and Gentile Christians choose to return to the teachings of rabbi Jesus. First, almost two thousand years of conflict between Judaism and Christianity has left many scars. Both religions have developed reactionary doctrines and theologies. A reactionary doctrine created as a reaction to the another religion's actions or doctrines.

An example would be the Jewish position concerning kneeling for prayer. Because Christians knelt for prayer, the Jews took the position that they should no longer kneel but stand for prayers. Judaism altered its form of worship because of this practice of Christianity. There have been many reactionary doctrines created both between and within both religions. This is an area of research that deserves much attention. I would challenge my readers to consider such a research project.

It must be kept in mind that the Judaism of Jesus is not exactly the same as the Judaism of today. Also, the movement attributed to Jesus is not the same as modern Christianity. Obviously, many things have taken place since the time of Jesus which resulted in the separation and numerous differences between the two religions.

It is of the utmost importance for both Christians and Jews to understand these changes. You must know when the changes were made, identify the people who were responsible for making the changes, and discover why they made them. You must come to an understanding which changes were motivated by inspiration, which were produced by the hunger for power and wealth and which were the results of human frailties such as anger, rejection, fear and hatred.

As you embark on this journey you will quickly come to realize that you have stumbled upon the greatest cover-ups in history.

As you become more acquainted with the truth upon your study you will realize two very important things:

- Leaders, especially scholars, have always been aware of this information and have deliberately chosen to ignore it.
- This information has been virtually within the grasp of every American. In many cases it is as close as an encyclopedia or attainable today through the Internet.

Today, there are over 2.5 billion Christians on the face of the earth – the vast majority who believe in their heart they are true followers of Jesus, but as I have shown you, are practicing a different religion from which Jesus practiced. If they all returned to the teachings and life-style taught in Acts, we would see a moral and ethical revolution that would literally rock the foundations of the world and no longer would America, touted to be the most Christian nation in the world, be recognized as the world's most violent and law-breaking nation of the world. That should make you wonder what it would be like if Christians really followed the faith of Jesus and if your church would really allow you to be like Jesus.

Hebrew For "The House of Truth"

WHO ARE YOU GOING TO BELIEVE FOR YOUR ETERNAL LIFE: JESUS OR PAUL? #1

Disclaimer: It is important for the reader to understand that in this website, in comparing first century Judaism and the "pattern of worship" given to the "non-Jew" by God as well as unveiling of the historical truths concerning the non-Jewish "believer" in the first century against the later alterations and changes made to this "pattern of worship" by the emerging Roman Gentile Church of Rome in the 3rd century I will use a "literal-historical" approach to the "Jesus Story". If you have studied and ran across some of our other websites then you know that "the Christ" can be interpreted from 3 different perspectives down through recorded history: "mystical", "mythological", and "literal-historical". Only after one has spent a considerable time in dedicated and scholarly studies in such areas as Biblical Judaism, the Jewish Messiah and true Messianic prophecy as taken from the Hebrew Scriptures and not the later forged texts of Rome, comparative manuscript evidences, the history and origin of the Roman New Testament, the true origin and creation of the New Testament , the Gnostic Paul vs the falsified Roman Paul, the Essenes and their "literal godman", Ancient Wisdom literature, Jewish and Gentile Gnosticism, Egyptian religion and the ancient "Jesus Story" that beings with Ancient Egypt, Comparative religions, Astronomy and Astrotheology can he understand and be certain which two of the above three methods of interpretation of "the Christ" are accurate and factual. Again for purposes of comparing Judaism's truths vs Christianity's alterations of it over the early centuries and the implications that this holds for the "non-Jew" and "Godfearer" today then we adopt in this website and for all studies in this website a supposed "literal-historical" interpretation of "the Christ" as well as the Jesus of the New Testament. Only in so doing can we adequately contrast the truths of Judaism vs Christian theology and by so doing follow the lineage of these "Divine Truths" back down the corridors of history to the earliest Divine revelations given to mankind by the Creator which were intended for both "Gentiles" and "Jews" as well. You will, in time, come to see that there is a "Pattern" to the worship of God given all mankind in the beginning of recorded history of the race and this "pattern" can be traced throughout recorded history and will culminate with Biblical Judaism and will subsequently be destroyed in the 3rd century by the emerging antisemitic Roman Church. I will let you be the judge of the results of such studies and leave to the reader to draw the necessary conclusions as we attempt to compare Jewish and Christian theological perspectives all the while dealing with the "New Testament Jesus" in a "literal-historical" manner in order for such an accurate comparison to be done effectively. Craig Lyons M.Div.

EXAMINING YESHUA AND HIS TEACHINGS CONCERNING ETERNAL LIFE

For many of our readers the information in this article will be startling. After reading this article you will see for yourself that if you follow contemporary Christianity and its teachings then you are following Paul and not Jesus/Yeshua, because Yeshua' message of redemption is entirely opposite to what Paul teaches. I can hear many of you say...."that's not so" or "he is wrong." Let me sincerely tell you that in the beginning, even after my seminary training I did not see it as clearly as I do today. But I beg of you to read this article and THINK...THINK....of what I will show you. For in the end, you are directly responsible before God, and HaShem is sending you and many of His children today appeals to repent and return to the true faith once given to the saints. Time is of the essence, and it will be horrible to die and find out that you followed the wrong faith...a faith that does not save.

One last thing; you might wonder what the end-result should be of such a series of studies. It is our hope at Bet Emet ministries that when you complete these articles the reader will be able to understand that Christianity is best understood and practiced from a Jewish viewpoint which restores the Sabbaths and the Seven Biblical Festivals. Such emphasis is almost totally lacking in the Christian church today. Also, a renewed emphasis in proper tithing and righteous giving hopefully will replace the current perversion of giving as seen in most churches and on televisions today. What you will come to see is that all these above things, and more, embody the true salvation experience. Let us begin…shall we?

YESHUA WAS A JEW...AND TAUGHT BIBLICAL JUDAISM

I think few will take issue with my statement that in the New Testament Yeshua is pictured as a Jew who believed in Judaism and taught others to be faithful to his religion's precepts and laws forever!

In this article I will quote many verses from the New Testament, and it is important to understand from the outset that although much in the New Testament is unreliable, when we find places in it which agrees with Moses and the Prophets we have found a witness to the Word of God as recorded in the Tanakh (the Jewish Bible). Let us not stagger at the comment that "much in the New Testament is unreliable," because in this article I will show you that many of these New Testament verses oppose Moses and the Prophet, let alone Yeshua's teachings, and are irreconcilably contradictory to the Gospel Yeshua preached which can be found along side them in the New Testament. Both passages confirming that Yeshua believed and both taught Moses and the Prophets regarding salvation, as well as verses contradicting what Yeshua taught, have remained included in the New Testament through the ages. These verses remain for a purpose today. They remain to show the careful reader and student the truth amidst fiction as written in the New Testament.

Likewise, the purpose could well be to reassure Jews who are in doubt about their Judaism, and are thinking of leaving Judaism for Christianity, that Judaism and Torah has always been and will always be the road to God for the people of God; both Jew and Non-Jew. Those unsure Jews and deceived Christians perhaps can have their belief in God, Torah, and Israel (Judaism) kindled and can be kept on God's pathway by the very same Christian Book through which they have unknowingly deserted their true people and God! Indeed, Jews who already have left their faith as well as Christians who are returning to the Jewish faith once given the saints are daily having their eyes opened to the truths I will reveal in this article. Prayerfully, many will return as baal teshuvah and through repentance turn to the God of Israel, who surely is waiting with fatherly understanding and forgiveness. Believe Yeshua in this matter - Eternal life is obtained through Judaism. Paul teaches otherwise and contradicts Yeshua on this matter.

For devout Jews who were once Christians and Christians who have studied to see the errors of their prior faith and have returned to a more correct and Biblical Sinai faith, the revelations in this article will be very comfortable corroboration of their firm faith in the holiness of the religion of Yeshua; namely Biblical Judaism. Others who read these verses will bring to them their own heritage and will make of them what they will. In other words they will continue to selectively hear what they choose regardless of the facts presented here.

These pages of reverse proof-texts are intended to strengthen the course God set up for Jews as well as Non-Jews and to fortify their faith and devotion to His plan of salvation for all mankind. In effect, here you will discover confirmation of Biblical Judaism's everlasting truth and validity through the words of Yeshua and others in the New Testament. Often this confirmation will conflict with what Paul taught, but more on that later. Now, let's get into it.

WHO WILL YOU BELIEVE.....YESHUA OR PAUL? LISTEN. …..YESHUA SPEAKS!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Matt 5:17-19 17 Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. 18 For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. 19 Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. (KJV)

Try and read the above passage over three or four times. Get the intent of Yeshua into your mind and soul. You can read this over and over and never end your astonishment; especially in light of what you have heard preached in your churches. Remember, these are Yeshua' words saying he is here to follow the law of Moses, not end the law. Until the world ends, the law as written will be in effect. Jews and Non-Jews who obey the law and teach it are greatly loved by God, while those who transgress the law and teach its transgression are not. Notice that although the word "fulfill" could mean "to complete or end," in this case and context it clearly means "to obey and do." We know this because the following sentence continues the idea that the law will not change until the world ends, which still has not occurred two thousand years later. Just look outside your window.

Luke 16:16-17, "The law and the prophets were until John (the Baptist): since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it. And it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one little of the law to fail."

Preaching the kingdom (God's rule and reign over mankind through submission to the King's decrees….laws and commandments) is emphasized since John the Baptist, Yeshua said. But the laws of the Torah are still effective and good, to be fulfilled until the world ends. Notice for yourself that in no way does "until John" signify the end of the law, because the very next sentence substantiates the law's validity forever (easier for heaven and earth to pass….notice again that this has not occurred yet).

Luke 16:19-20,22-24,27-31, "There was a certain rich man, . . . And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, . . . the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried; And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, . . . And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, . . . I pray thee . . . send him (Lazarus) to my father's house: . . . that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment. Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them. And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent (Yeshua and not Paul). And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead."

Answer for yourself: Is this a New Testament teaching?

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that Yeshua in the New Testament is teaching that making it to Abraham's bosom (Heaven) was connected to listening to Moses and the Prophets?

Answer for yourself: What is this parable from Luke really teaching?

Notice first that it is Yeshua and not Paul who is doing the teaching in this story. Yeshua clearly relates in this story that the laws of Moses and the words of the prophets which teach repentance lead the faithful to Abraham's bosom, instead of hell. Moses and the prophets are the pathway to eternal life in heaven according to Yeshua. Yeshua taught this and not Paul. If you will be honest with yourself most of you are typical Christians who read our articles, and the vast majority have been told by their Pastors and Churches that they are not under the Law (Moses and the Prophets), but rather, they are under grace (Paul). They have been told that the Law (Moses and the Prophets) has passed away for Christians and they are no longer under the Law but under grace (Paul's gospel). In other words you have listened to Paul more than you have to Yeshua.

Answer for yourself: But how can the teaching of Paul in this regard be opposite to what Yeshua said, and since opposite, who are you to trust for your eternal life?

Matthew 19:16-19 (Mark 10:17,19) (Luke 18:18,20), ". . . Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? And he said unto him . . . if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments . . . Which? Yeshua said, Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Honor thy father and thy mother: and, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself "

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that "having eternal life" is connected by Yeshua with "keeping the commandments" (all of these except one are categories of the law and commandments called The Ten Commandments and under each of these categories are grouped 613 other laws)?

Answer for yourself: Is Yeshua just referring to the Ten Commandments or is there something we as Non-Jews unacquainted with Yeshua's religion are missing in this teaching?

It may amaze you but upon my study of Biblical Judaism I have discovered that each Tablet of the Law was separated by commandments between man and God and between man and man. In other words, the First Tablet of the Law is dealing with how man relates to God according to God's commandments, and the Second Tablet of the Law is dealing with how man relates with mankind. But more than that, each of the Ten Commandments is best understood as categories consisting of many commandments within the 613 Commandments grouped under each of the ten headings. So in effect, when Yeshua tells this man "thou salt not steal" he is telling the man to obey all the different facets of the broad commandment, because under such a heading the Bible enumerates the various ways such a commandments can be kept and broken.

Answer for yourself: Is Yeshua teaching that eternal life and salvation in Heaven is connected to keeping and observing the Laws of God? The answer to that question is yes.

There you have it. The way to eternal life for both the Jew and the Non-Jew and salvation in heaven, according to Yeshua, is living like a good Jew and submitting to the laws of the commandments of God. These detailed instructions by Yeshua are plainly presented.

Notice that in the following verses the man asks what more he needed do. And Yeshua replies, to be perfect he should sell everything he owns and give it to the poor and receive treasure in heaven: "and come and follow me." The man, on hearing this, leaves disturbed because he has great wealth and doesn't want to lose it. There is no indication that the "follow me" means anything else but to accompany Yeshua penniless.The message remains intact that observing Torah law gives eternal life. Perfection is another story.

Mark 12: 28-31 (Matthew 22:36-40), ". . . Which is the first (great commandment in the law) commandment of all? And Yeshua answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these. (On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets)."

So, Yeshua selected Deuteronomy 6:4-5 and Leviticus 19:18 as the greatest two laws. This was very Jewish of him, as most rabbis would completely agree, especially Rabbi Hillel. He chose the Shema prayer, the Jew's affirmation of God's oneness and dedication to love of Him together with Judaism's great moral teaching of loving people with the love you have for yourself. What could be more indicative of the essence of Judaism?

Luke 10:25-28, ". . . Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou? And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind: and thy neighbor as thyself. And he said unto him. Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live."

Answer for yourself: Did you make the connection between "inherit eternal life" and "thou shalt live" as also referring to eternal life? I hope you did because this is typical of Hebrew parallelism.

Answer for yourself: Have you noticed that in Luke 10:25-28, Matthew 19:16-19, Mark 10:17-19, and Luke 18:18-20 something very important is repeated?

Answer for yourself: What is it?

Namely, that possessing and inheriting eternal life is always connected with doing something……not with believing something!

Answer for yourself: How does Luke 10:25-28 teach us more than we learn from Mark 12:28-31?

The writer of the Gospel of Luke goes one step further than the just given, Mark 12:28-31. Here we have the New Testament teaching us of the indisputable link between the "doing" of the commandments of God and eternal life, which is the reward for obeying them.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Yeshua is teaching in the New Testament that eternal life is to be taught from the Law……the same Law that tells us "what to do" and what you most likely have been told has passed away or which you are no longer under?

It is evident that Yeshua said, in the New Testament no less, that the law of Moses, as epitomized in Deuteronomy 6:5 and Leviticus 19:18, is the pathway to personal salvation and eternal life. Yes, Yeshua said this as found in the New Testament. Let us continue.

Mark 12:32-34 32 And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and there is none other but he: 33 And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbour as himself, is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices. 34 And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God.... (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that acknowledging the oneness of God, and not the Trinity or triuneness of God, is connected with the reward of God's kingdom and eternal life?

Answer for yourself: Did you likewise notice that loving God and one's neighbor who is created in the likeness of God is connected with inheriting God's eternal life?

I John 5:3, "For this is the love of [for] God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous

Answer for yourself: Since we are told that loving God is connected to eternal life, did you notice the New Testament teaches "how" the love for God is to be manifested?

Answer for yourself: Does the New Testament teach us that loving God is manifested through the keeping of the 613 commandments? It sure does!

This is a straight follow-through of Mark 12:28-31, which connects the acknowledgment of the oneness of God, loving Him, and loving ones neighbor as written in the law, with the reward of God's kingdom. Burnt offerings and sacrifices are secondary to the commandments in Judaism and always have been. With no Temple, there is no doubt about this low degree of importance. This passage demonstrates Yeshua' Judaism through and through. Notice likewise that the term "Master" means good teacher, not anything more.

Matthew 7:12 (Luke 6:31), "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets."

If you thought that "do unto others" is not Judaic or that it is different from "love your neighbor as yourself" you see here that it is totally of Jewish origin. Yeshua declared that it is the law and the prophets. It is Judaic.

Luke 11:28, ". . . blessed are they that hear the word of God and keep it."

Notice also with me that when the writer of Luke penned this verse, that there was not a New Testament in existence and that the only possible identity we can give to "the word of God" is the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings….the Jewish Bible.

Matthew 7:21, "Not every one . . . shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

Again we find the expressed will of the Father in the Law, Prophets, and Writings…the Jewish Bible.

Matthew 3:15, ". . . it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness . . ."

These powerful statements are tucked in between verses which emphasize other ideas. But they can stand alone. And, standing alone they are Judaism's own. Yeshua believed that the will of God is revealed in the word of God, the Hebrew Bible. In the Hebrew Scriptures we learn the law of Moses (Torah) and the Prophets. Thereby, we can perform righteousness as God desires by adhering to what they teach. This Yeshua believed.

Luke 19:8-9, ". . . half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold. And Yeshua said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house forsomuch as he also is a son of Abraham."

What comes next is very important to keep your ears open. It appears that Yeshua believed that even a partial fulfillment of the commandments of the Torah is sufficient to be accepted by God. In the above verse it is recorded for us that Zaccheus repented by observing 2 commandments. In fact, as taught by Yeshua, even by rectifying transgression of the Torah's laws and doing good deeds a person is deserving of salvation. As Jews trust, it is the trying to please God, it is the effort, not the success in total compliance with God's ordinances which is required of us to be righteous and gains us salvation.

Answer for yourself: How confident should we feel about our salvation if we have followed teachings that state that obedience of the law or the striving to observe the laws and commandments of God don't matter any longer because we are saved by "grace" or that this same law that Yeshua connects with eternal life has been taught to us as if it has passed away and of little importance in our lives any longer?

Answer for yourself: Are we absolved by God to not try to choose those things to please Him by keeping His commandments? Is this conduct really connected to eternal life as Yeshua taught, or is he wrong and Paul right?

All the more reason to study to learn how to acquire mitzvoth and commandments, thereby taking upon yourself the yoke of the Kingdom of God. Such obedience to commandments is both pleasing to God as well as our demonstration of our love for Him and our fellow man. To do otherwise is not to love God, but rather, show our ambivalence toward Him and our neighbor.

Luke 13:28, "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out."

Keep your ears open for this as well. Here Yeshua said that the fathers of Judaism and the goodly Hebrew prophets are all accepted into the kingdom of God. Evidently, good Jews need nothing more than the Hebrew religion for life eternal in Yeshua' own belief.

Now for the hard part.

Notice that Yeshua also said that many of his followers (the "ye" in the above verse) will not get into God's kingdom and inherit eternal life and salvation because of their sinfulness.

Answer for yourself: Does this same New Testament teach that "transgression of the law is sin"? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice what is missing from the above words of Yeshua?

There is no Pauline religious belief system mentioned as a means of salvation for the followers of Yeshua!

There is no Christological "belief" presented here as an antidote for spiritual wickedness for mankind.

There is no "easy believeism" taught by Yeshua or his Apostles as a way to eternal life; on the contrary, every time he and the other Apostles emphasize the same thing; namely an earnest attempt to live by the commandments and laws of God for eternal life!

If you have paid attention so far in this article I have shown you repeatedly that Yeshua repeatedly connects eternal life with keeping and observing the Law and Commandments of God.

Nowhere does Yeshua teach that a belief "in him" brings for its adherents eternal life! In fact he teaches just the opposite!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

John 4:22, "(to Samaritan) Ye worship ye know not what: we (the Jewish people) know what we worship: for salvation is of the Jews."

Yeshua "worships" what Jews worship, namely God.

Answer for yourself: Salvation is of whom…the Jews (Jewish theology) or the Christians (Christian theology)?

This passage from John 4:22 is even more startling when one realizes that the Samaritan woman who is part Non-Jew mixed with Jewish heritage and ancestry. In other words, she is a mixture; not only of blood line but religious teaching as well. She is a perfect example of the Christian today who follows Paul instead of Yeshua. He has part right and part wrong.

Lets look at Paul where he get some things correct.

I Corinthians 6:9-10, (Paul) "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God."

Answer for yourself: Who are these people? These are people who break the Laws and Commandments of God. Take a look at the Second Tablet of the Law and read the article on the true Gospel Message of Jesus as he reiterates that Salvation is based on the Second Tablet of the Law more than the First Tablet of the Law. Then contemplate what I show you on that article seriously.

Answer for yourself: In this passage are you aware that Paul is in full agreement with Yeshua and his teachings on eternal life?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that there are commandments in the Torah forbidding each of the above conducts?

Although Paul adds some of his own ideas, the listing of "thou shalt nots" is derived from the commandments. He stresses what he considers unrighteousness and Paul says that transgression of the Law prevents people from earning reward of heaven. Paul, here, reveals his faith in the teachings of the Torah and its stance on eternal life. Paul is in agreement with Yeshua and the other Apostles and their teachings on inheriting eternal life. So far so good.

But I wish I could end here but I cannot. In the next article we will look intently to where Paul deviates from and teaches against Yeshua's teachings concerning eternal life. This exercise will be difficult for many, but as I have tried to show you, such an exercise to recover truth is very necessary because your eternal life is dependent upon whom you believe and follow….Yeshua or Paul. More to follow in the conclusion to this article. Let us now look at Paul's Salvation Message and see if it agrees with what you just read.

Let us continue our study in conflicting message concerning Eternal Life between Jesus and Paul.

EXAMINING WHERE PAUL DEPARTS FROM YESHUA AND HIS TEACHINGS CONCERNING ETERNAL LIFE

First of all know for certain that Paul was a "Gnostic" but you are not supposed to know that. In fact Rome went to great lengths re-writing much of Paul's theology to cover up this fact. But for our purposes here in contrasting the New Testament Paul and his Romanized message we will assume that this contradictory theology of Paul came from him personally. Understanding and separating out the "real" Paul from the "false Romanized Paul" is a study in itself.

Having said that then understand that this "Romanized" Paul shaped the Gentile Church after 70 C.E. in a manner which stripped away all links to Judaism and cursed it at the same time. The New Testament in places says Judaism is bad and abandoned by God, while Christianity is good and beloved. In other places the New Testament teaches just the opposite as you were shown in article one of this series. In places the New Testament says the law of Moses is not valid and the Covenant is dead for the Jews. Instead of Moses being taught to all mankind, Paul teaches that the Church's laws and the existing Covenant is dead for the Jews as well as Non-Jews. Instead, the Church's laws and the New Covenant take their place. While Paul advanced separation from Judaism, Yeshua announced Judaism's greatness. The same New Testament in which you just saw Yeshua promote Judaism, in other places debases Judaism through Paul. I just showed you that Yeshua was a practicing, believing Jew who taught faithfulness to his religion's Torah and the Jewish way of salvation. Yeshua affirmed Torah, Moses, and the Prophets as the way to God and eternal life. He and his family all observed the Jewish customs, holidays, and Saturday Sabbath in the synagogue. Yeshua said personal salvation is obtained through Judaism and not another way. In fact Yeshua would command that such teachings be taken into all the world whereby all Non-Jews be taught to "observe those things" Yeshua had commanded of his followers. Paul and his brand of Christianity, in contradiction to all that had been both believed and taught before by Moses, the Prophets, as well as Yeshua, has announced a new way to salvation, through belief in Yeshua' vicarious atonement for sins and resurrection, not through faith in God and obedience to Him through His commandments, but through belief in Yeshua's death for sins and resurrection from death.

Answer for yourself: Can you find just one time where Yeshua teaches the same salvation doctrine as espoused by Paul?

What I ask you to do is keep the teachings of Yeshua in focus as you read Paul. The New Testament, in places, contradicts itself. That is a fact. You must be sharp enough to see it for yourself when you read. No matter what Paul says he cannot invalidate Yeshua's own words in the same book. It is a matter of who you will believe. If you listen to Yeshua, as I have laid out for you, you see that he proclaimed continually Judaism's eternal truths. Paul will not. Now let us look at Paul.

PAUL CONTRADICTS HIMSELF….DID YOU EVER SEE IT

BEFORE?

What is the most perplexing for me when studying Paul is that he is not consistent in what he says. Most of you have never probably seen this but I will in the remaining pages attempt to reveal to you the contradictions that come from the mouth and pen of Paul regarding salvation. When we look at Yeshua his message is consistent with what has always been taught by Moses and the Prophets. But with Paul we have another matter because he won't always agree with what he has said before. But if you are not sharp in your Bible study you can easily overlook such things. Let us begin out critical examination of the message of Paul on salvation.

Remembering what Yeshua just said about eternal life and observance of the commandments let us contrast Paul's view on the matter.

Answer for yourself: Does Paul in Romans 2:13 agree or disagree with what Yeshua has said about eternal life and the observance of the commandments of God? Well, lets read it and see.

Romans 2:13 For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified.

So far so good. Paul in this verse agrees with the message of Yeshua regarding acceptance and eternal life with God..

But just wait. Now on the back of the same page in my Bible where the above verse was quoted from Paul, we see Paul writes something totally different and contradictory to the teachings of Yeshua in Romans 3:28:

Romans 3:28 Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.

Answer for yourself: In light of what I just showed you can you justify Paul's quick turn-around on this doctrinal stance so quickly, let alone a change in the same epistle?

Notice that within the space of 44 verses Paul reverses completely his stance on justification and righteousness through obedience to the law and commandments of God. Just 44 verses!

Answer for yourself: Did Paul teach "doing the Law" for justification AFTER THE CROSS in Romans 2:13? DEFINITELY YES!

Answer for yourself: Does Paul contradict himself in Romans 3:28? DEFINITELY YES!

Answer for yourself: So what are we to believe in the face of such contradictions of Paul when contrasted with the teachings of Yeshua and the other Apostles which teach otherwise than Paul?

Answer for yourself: Seeing this material for yourself, who are you going to believe for your salvation….Yeshua, Moses, and the Prophets and their message of salvation or Paul and his message whatever it is in its final form?

I Corinthians 6:11

And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Yeshua, and by the Spirit of our God.

Please take note that the above verse says that those who "were" transgressors had been helped by the Christologic message of Paul and belief in his gospel which taught justification of the unGodly through belief in the death and resurrection of Yeshua for eternal life.

Answer for yourself: How did that happen?

Let us understand what is really being said by Paul in this verse. Let us remember that Paul has just previously taught in 1 Corinthians 6:9-10 that the heathen who are guilty of the transgression of the Laws of God is led to death and separation from God, let alone the loss of eternal life. Having understood this, then we can understand his message intended for Non-Jews whereby he uses "Yeshua" literally as bait to get the Non-Jew to believe in "Paul's Yeshua" as a way for their eternal life. Let us understand that Paul used cunning (become all things to all men in order to win some) in not telling the heathen he has to accept the Torah right off the bat, but rather shrewdly uses this "Pauline Yeshua" and relaxation of the Torah in his effort to win converts from the heathen gradually. Because Paul's adherents among the Non-Jews, in patterning themselves after such a Jewish Rabbi and his ethical teachings, would gradually develop lives of ethical and moral conduct which would assure that they become more Godly than before. Such is repentance which is the first step in coming to God. Of course, if you give up evil you are closer to God, Christianity's way, Judaism's way, or any other way.

But there is one important difference from those who Paul was attempting to teach and you…the reader of this article. You are not like the heathen, but rather, most likely have been raised in church most of your life. With your religious background and your love for God most of your life what excuse do we have not to obey God fully and choose those things which please him which I have demonstrated is His Law?

Luke 1:46-47,50-55, "And Mary said, My soul Both magnify the Lord, And my spirit hath rejoiced in God, my Savior. And his mercy is on them that fear him from generation to generation. He hath showed strength with his arm; he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away. He hath helped his servant Israel in remembrance of his mercy; As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever."

Answer for yourself: Did Mary, Yeshua' mother, call the God of Judaism, the same God who gave her People the Torah for salvation her Savior or did she, based on her new revelation, call her son Yeshua the "new" Savior?

Mary knew what most Christians don't. That's because today's Christians have read and believe Paul more than the Gospels. God alone is the Savior not Yeshua or His Messiah. Hence, Jews have salvation by God the Father and need no second or alternate source of salvation. She spoke of God's greatness and His help of His servant, Israel. She spoke of God's message to Abraham's children, that the Covenant is eternal. This was the understanding of Mary after she was allegedly informed that she would have, according to the New Testament, a miraculous virgin birth and that the child would be the Messiah. As you surely can see, she spoke as a traditional, believing Jewish person, not the holy figure of Christianity.

Luke 1:6, (Luke) "And they (Zacharias and Elizabeth) were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless."

Answer for yourself: According to the New Testament does "walking in the commandments and ordinances of the Lord" allow a person to be "blameless" before God? It sure does.

Jews as well as Non-Jews can be free of sin, blameless, following the law of Moses, as exemplified by these two people. Therefore, we know according to the New Testament witness that the law does give justification for eternal life.

Again let us see what Paul has to say on the matter.

Romans 4:3, (Paul) "For what saith the scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness."

Answer for yourself: You most likely have heard this passage your whole life. But do you know what believing truly consists of as spoken of in this verse?

Believe without response, or as James said it "faith without works is dead" is the meaning of the passage. Abraham believed God according to the revelation of God and RESPONDED because of that belief. He took his son to Mount Moriah to be offered to God. Abraham had faith and he had a concrete response to that faith. Consequently, righteousness in God's eyes is believing God's instructions and doing as God commands. In Abraham's situation, it was offering his son Isaac as a sacrifice. In our situation, it is obeying and following God's commandments in His Torah and His laws, not just believing they exist.

Answer for yourself: Do you find that following God's commandments somewhat difficult or foolish to keep and observe since the vast majority of Christianity today teaches because of Paul that the Christian is no longer under the law but under a grace which allows him to break and not keep these laws at will?

Lets see what Paul has to say about being righteous and walking in the commandments and ordinances of God.

Answer for yourself: Is this Paul's doctrine as well and does he agree with Yeshua and the Apostles on this major issue? No, again we see where Paul contradicted the teachings of Yeshua.

Rom 3:20-22 Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin. 21 But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; 22 Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Yeshua Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference:

Remembering what you previously read in the first article concerning the teachings of Yeshua, let us examine closely the above passage from Paul for contradictions to what both Yeshua, Moses, and the Prophets taught.

1. Moses (the Law) and Prophets NEVER taught that obedience of God's laws did not justify, in fact it was just the opposite they taught; namely, that obedience to the laws of God does justify.
2. Moses (the Law) and the Prophets NEVER taught that righteousness existed apart from obedience to the laws of God, in fact they taught just the opposite.
3. Paul discounts what Moses, the Prophets, and Yeshua all taught and held in common, and substitutes his own theology that replaces 4000 years of Biblical Truth with a "BUT NOW" theology of justification before God through belief in Yeshua' death and resurrection.

Answer for yourself: Who are we to believe? What do the other Apostles have to say?

I John 5:2-3, (John) ". . . we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments. For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous."

Earlier I stated that we love God by keeping his commandments. Now we see the second phase of the Greatest Commandment: loving His children and our neighbors. Notice also that ironically only by loving our neighbor are we actually loving God! Such loving of God and our neighbor requires fidelity to His laws, which are not hard to bear or perform. So, we read here in the New Testament that the commandments of the Torah are to be kept and can be kept. These laws should be observed to demonstrate our love of God and our fellow man.

Answer for yourself: Can I obey literally all of God's laws?

It may be beyond human ability to perform all our duties to God, always and perfectly. But, God gave the commandments which are not hard to uphold, when you use all your good intentions with all your heart. God's laws require your effort, not perfection; thus the gift of God in giving man repentance whereby mankind can make himself "acceptable to God".

Again let us look at Paul.

Romans 3:24 Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: 25 Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; 26 To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Yeshua

Again you should notice Paul is teaching a completely different message from what Yeshua, Moses, Prophets, and the Apostles taught. Again Paul stands alone in his belief. No where is any of Paul's theology can we find references to what Yeshua, Moses, the Prophets or other Apostles taught.

Rom 10:9-16

9 That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Yeshua, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. 10 For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

Again we see that Paul has a different way of salvation from what was taught by Yeshua, Moses, the Prophets, and the Apostles as demonstrated in the first article in this series. Paul stresses "faith only" or a "creed" and not "deeds" for righteousness and this message of salvation and way of inheriting Eternal Life is NOT what Yeshua, Moses, the Prophets, and the other Apostles taught; namely walking in the commandments of God for righteousness.

Answer for yourself: Who are you going to trust for correct teaching for eternal life…Paul or Yeshua, Moses, the Prophets, and the Apostles?

If you are honest with yourself up to now I have repeatedly shown you that Yeshua's message revolved around keeping the Commandments and ordinances of God. Yeshua both taught and knew for certain that love for God and those created in His image could only be accomplished by adhering to a standard of righteousness (God's laws) set by God and not by man. Thus the need and availability of God's laws and commandments, which when earnestly attempted to keep produces acceptance and salvation. Remember God requires our effort and not our perfection.

Again look at Paul and his views on the law.

Romans 7:12,14,16,22, (Paul) "Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good. For we know that the law is spiritual: . . . I consent unto the law that it is good. For I delight in the law of God after the inward man:"

I Timothy 1:8, (Paul) "But we know that the law is good, if a man use it lawfully;"

Answer for yourself: Does it stand to reason that God would need to replace something that is holy, just, spiritual, and good?

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that Paul even said that he delights in the law of God after the inward spirit?

2 Timothy 3:16-17, (Paul) "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that when Paul wrote this in his letter to Timothy that there was only the Jewish Scriptures (Law, Prophets, Writings) in existence and that the New Testament would not be canonized till 397 A.D. (almost 300 years later)?

Answer for yourself: Are you also aware that Paul is saying that the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings are, at the time of writing of this epistle which is around 30 years after Yeshua's death, profitable for DOCTRINE, REPROOF, CORRECTION, AND INSTRUCTION?

Answer for yourself: Don't you find it rather strange that something that is profitable for doctrine, reproof, correction, and instruction for the first church is considered passed away by today's church?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Paul's writings and his theology were not, even by him, considered Scripture?

You should not find these facts surprising since the creation of a New Testament or the creation of an alternate view of salvation and how to attain it was the furthermost thing from anyone's mind at this time….except Paul's.

I Peter 1:25, (Peter) "But the word of the Lord (the Law, Prophets, and Writings) endureth for ever...."

Understanding when Peter wrote this Paul's teachings were very limited in scope and accepted by only a few. In fact scholars today teach us that in no time during Paul's life did he have over 50 adherents to his message. In fact Paul would later say "all in Asia have forsaken me." All in Asia? This again shows you his message had a very limited scope since men from James continually followed him around to "undo" his teachings. Thus you can better understand why Paul was required to appear before James twice in his life. Literally this was to answer charges as seen in Acts 21:21: "And they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs."

What I have demonstrated to you in this article is that Yeshua continually walked after the customs of Moses and the Prophets. Paul did not. Tragically we have grown up in Churches which did not follow Yeshua, the Prophets, or the customs as well. We grew up most likely in Churches that followed Paul and literally oppose the teachings of Yeshua, the Prophets, and the Apostles.

Answer for yourself: How are we to reconcile that the Law endures forever but your church teaches that Christ is the end of the Law and that the Law has ceased and that we are no longer under the Law but grace?

Amazingly, the verses presented above from the pen of the Apostle Paul and Peter affirm the validity of the laws and the commandments of the Torah. They are described as sacred and beneficial, effective and everlasting. So you must face the fact that after the cross Paul at one time believed the laws of God to be holy, just, spiritual and good. So did Peter for that matter.

Stop here and ask yourself this:

Answer for yourself: If the Torah is all these things of God, shouldn't the laws be performed and Biblical Judaism, which is the embodiment of such laws, be observed by all Jews and Non-Jews?

Romans 10:5, (Paul) "For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them."

Answer for yourself: Did you again notice that the Apostle Paul states in agreement with Moses that "righteousness is of the law" and "that those do those things in the law" shall "live" by them (eternal life)?

But again another conflict of Paul is seen below.

Romans 3: 21 But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets;

Answer for yourself: How are we to understand Paul's comments about a righteousness "without the law" in light of Yeshua's teachings that connect all righteousness with observance of the commandments?

Answer for yourself: How do you reconcile that Paul speaks of "righteousness without the law" in Romans 3:21 and "righteousness which is of the law" in Romans 10:5?

Answer for yourself: Are you willing to trust contradictions like this from Paul for your eternal life?

Answer for yourself: Although we are warned by Paul not to believe another "gospel," is it not evident to you that in comparison to Yeshua and his message about eternal life that ironically it is Paul who teaches "another gospel"?

Answer for yourself: Which of the two teachings are we to trust for our eternal life as taught by Paul…."the man which doeth those things (law) shall live (eternal life) by them" [Romans 10:5] or [Rom 10:9] "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Yeshua, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved"?

The Hebrew Bible teaches that the Torah's laws lead to virtue, which is rewarded by everlasting life. Paul, in this passage from Romans 10:5 admits that this is the message of Moses in the Holy Scriptures, who communicated God's will to the Hebrew people. Then he contradicts again this only 4 verses later!

James 5:16, (James) ". . . The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

I John 3:22, (John) "And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight."

Answer for yourself: Could some of our prayers not being answered and our lack of receiving what we ask of God be because we believe we are under grace and not under the law and commandments of God and don't attempt to know let alone keep as many of them as possible?

These two verses, from two different Apostles, show that keeping commandments and being righteous are connected. Both lead to God's hearing us, being pleased, and helping us. The verse quoted is very Judaic in nature, and that's a fact.

James 2:8, (James) "If ye fulfill the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, ye do well:"

Answer for yourself: Is James telling us we "do well" if we fulfill and keep the law? Sure is.

A person is good if he obeys the golden rule as given in the law of Moses.

James 1:27, (James) "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

Here is the golden rule made specific and said to be the basis of religious requirements. Also, to be pure from worldly evils in general makes for a religious person. These are Jewish ideas, totally.

Let us look again at Paul.

Galatians 3:21, (Paul) "Is the law then against the promise of God ? God forbid: forif there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law."

Here is where you have to read close as well as remember what you have already learned from reading Yeshua and the other Apostles regarding the law and its connection with eternal life. Strange as it may be to read, Paul is, in the first part of the verse anyway, seemingly lending support to the validity of the law of Moses. Now for a problem which most fail to grasp its significance. Paul is double-minded. Remember I told you that he contradicts not only himself but Yeshua and the other Apostles? Here again is another place where Paul deviates from the message of the other Apostles as well as the early church. For Paul says "if" the law could be effective Moses' law would suffice for salvation. Paul is in reality stating that it is his personal feeling that no such law exists which is connected to salvation. For Paul the condition "if such a law existed" indicates that such a law and condition does not exist...at least for Paul!

Answer for yourself: What? Is this a complete reversal by Paul of what he has said previously in some of his other epistles let alone a complete contradiction of the teaching of Yeshua and the other Apostles? It sure is.

Answer for yourself: Well, have you with your own eyes earlier in this article already seen that Yeshua said that keeping the commandments is the path to salvation and the law is effective to this end? If you read the article you have. This produces quite a dilemma for the Christian.

Answer for yourself: Does Paul agree or disagree with the teachings of Yeshua regarding salvation and eternal life? He does not!

Therefore, Paul, if he "believes" Yeshua, must conclude that righteousness is obtained by one's effort to follow and pattern one's life after the Scriptural laws. But this is not the message of Paul therefore we must question if Paul really "believed in Yeshua."

Notice that Paul actually contradicts Yeshua on this essential matter and, in effect, created Christianity's separation from its Hebraic roots in Judaism.

Paul claims that sin is not overcome, but is created, by the law. Ironically, it is Paul's teaching, not Yeshua', which invalidated the law for the budding Church. Such destroys the teachings of Yeshua and the other Apostles!

WERE WE WARNED ABOUT PEOPLE LIKE PAUL BY YESHUA? AND HAVE WE HEEDED THE WARNING?

Let's read what Yeshua said about this kind of opposition. In Matthew 10:24 (Luke 6:40) (John 13:16) Yeshua said, "The disciple (Paul) is not above his master (Yeshua), nor the servant (Paul) above his lord (Yeshua)."

Answer for yourself: So we ask, whose statements take precedence…Yeshua's or Paul's?

Answer for yourself: Who is to be believed…Yeshua or Paul?

You have to decide that for yourself. We only desire to lay the materials out for you in such a way that you can make an intelligent decision.

Answer for yourself: What will you trust for your salvation…the message of Yeshua or Paul?

Answer for yourself: Which is truly linked to eternal life and God's salvation…..Christologics (believing in Yeshua) or Judaics (following the faith of Yeshua)?

Answer for yourself: What is the real message of salvation of God since the New Testament teaches two ways which are mutually exclusive of each other…..faith in Yeshua or adopting the faith of Yeshua?

Let me warn and encourage all of our readers that if you should "believe" on Yeshua to be saved, believe his teachings about the eternal and effective holy law of God revealed by Moses and begin to do them. Begin a life before God where you tell Him that His laws and commandments are important to you and that you choose to try to do them to the best of your ability because you know they please Him. Begin to live by as many as possible for in them you demonstrate your love of God and those created in His image. And you will be saved as a Jew or a Non-Jew when you leave this physical existence we call "life"

Paul also writes as follows:

Romans 14:14, (Paul) "I know. . . that there is nothing unclean of itself: but to him that esteemeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean."

Certainly, this is true. Jews consider things unclean because God announced it in the Torah, not because they are unclean of themselves. The law of kashruth (kosher) is God's law, as detailed by those who seek Him. God's ordinances create uncleanliness, not the thing itself. And Jews and Non-Jews who want to please God and get close to Him keep the kosher laws. This is what God desires of us.

Romans 3:1-2, (Paul) "What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God."

Romans 9:4, Romans 10:2, (Paul) "Who are Israelites: to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises: For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God . . ."

Romans 11:29, (Paul) "For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance."

Acts 2:5 (Author) "And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men . . ."

Jews have a fervor for God and are devout, said Paul. In other words, Biblical Judaism promoted enthusiasm for God. Jews were given the Covenant, the law, the prophets, and the promises. Jews minister to God by being His Chosen People. There is benefit, much benefit, in being Jewish. Paul even bolsters the firm foundation of the Torah, God's gift, lasting for eternity, without God changing His mind, without repenting of His Torah. That is what Paul actually said.

Notice that Paul, however, in a complete reversal of what he said elsewhere, is recorded to having believed that all these positive features of being Jewish are canceled, and of no avail, due to the Jew's lack of belief in Yeshua the Christ. We will leave Paul's reasoning and reversal to others. Instead, we ask you to keep in mind his positive appreciation of Judaism. And also remember that Yeshua said, in effect, that Judaism is of God. Yeshua, himself, taught that "Jews for Judaism" is the way even for the Non-Jew. We have shown abundant evidence of this in our present article.

Answer for yourself: Who is the authority you choose, Yeshua or Paul?

Ephesians 6:2-3, (Paul) "Honor thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise; That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth."

Matthew 15:4 (Mark 7:10), "For God commanded (Moses said), saying, Honor thy father and mother: and, He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death."

These verses are Paul's and Yeshua' utterances, condemning anyone who doesn't bestow honor upon his parents, as taken from the Ten Commandments. This means dutifully regarding them and respecting them, and implicitly honoring your heritage as well. This commandment is considered important enough to be put forward separately. Therefore, shaming your parents and their teaching by turning from them and the God of their heritage is prohibited and deserving of worldly death as well as loss of life in the hereafter. This is also what we read elsewhere in the New Testament.

Luke 5:37-39, "And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish. But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved. No man also having drunk old wine straightway desireth new: for he saith, The old is better."

Yeshua's saying appears to fit Judaism and its offspring, Christianity. To carry this analogy through, the new wine, Christianity, should not be placed into the old, Judaism. This, of course, is just what happened. In order for it to be good, the new should be nurtured separately. Both are then properly maintained, the old as it should be and the new as it should be. This did not occur. Sadly, the new has caused great harm to the old by claiming to succeed it, while mixing with it. And the new, by so doing, has harmed itself. Isn't that the proper conclusion to be drawn? Taken one step further, Yeshua also said that those who know the old, Judaism, prefer it.

Answer for yourself: Shouldn't you, as a Non-Jew and most likely a follower of Yeshua, prefer it too?

Answer for yourself: Whose teachings will you trust to lead you to eternal life…Paul's [which are filled with contradictions of Yeshua, Moses, the Prophets, the Torah, as well as the other followers and Apostles of Yeshua who knew him personally and walked with him 40 days after his resurrection], or Yeshua's [which agree totally with Moses and the Prophets and which contains not one contradiction among them]?

I would think having read this article it is rather obvious.

NOW FOR THE BIG QUESTION

Since now you have seen for yourself that Yeshua's and Paul's way of salvation differ, that their Gospels differ and their methods of inheriting Eternal Life differ, then you should be asking yourself "Why"?

Answer for yourself: How did we get a supposed religious Divine book, our Bibles from Rome, with contradicting messages regarding both keeping and observing the Laws and Commandments of God as well as rejecting and discarding these Laws? How can these Laws be "necessary" for our salvation and then have "passed away" and "ended" at the same time? How can a supposed book from God be so backwards in approach; one minute reading a life devoted to "deeds" for eternal life and then the next reading "not by deeds will one be justified before God"? Something seems wrong here and it is and the core of it is Rome's hatred for the Jews and their faith that produces righteousness. We can lump this attitude under the key phrase "Antisemitism and anti-Judaism" for this is what we find in the various forgeries of these reported Divine texts given us by Rome which so contradict the salvation and gospel message of "the Christ" and "Jesus the Jew".

What you will come to see if you continue your diligent search for truth is that the New Testament documents which you have relied upon since your childhood as "received from God" are no such thing at all. Upon close scrutiny you will come to find that they are a collection of both truth and error; the problem is discerning one from the other. As you have already seen we cannot have two conflicting paths to salvation. There are many other discrepancies contained within these documents; many of which go unnoticed by those who do not devote a considerable amount of time for study into these areas. We at Bet Emet Ministries have and continue to do so in order to present you, our readers, the absolute best of scholarship in these areas in hopes you will be led to the truth before you die. Your rewards and standing in the World to Come hinges upon it. We realize that the reason for so much confusion today in the Christian community stems for the multiple contradictions within the New Testament which blurs "the faith once given to the saints". It is our hope by revealing to you the hundreds of misquotations of the Jewish Scriptures, the numerous Jewish Scriptures taken out of context by the New Testament writes to serve their own anti-Semitic agendas, and the gross mistranslations contained within it as well that you might come to see the truth for yourself.....Yeshua was not a Christian and does not want you to follow such Gentile Christian doctrines that destroy the Sabbath, the Biblical Festivals, Monotheism, true righteous giving of the Tithe, true spiritual warfare, etc. Today we have a collection of writings that billions of people have accepted as "authoritative" for their faith and practice which are anything but that. If you have the courage to continue your study...you will be shocked, saddened, broken, and ashamed before you finish. You will see for yourself the greatest deception foisted upon mankind by the Roman Religious Establishment....a substitute faith that opposes what the real Yeshua believed at almost every turn of his life. You might be saying to yourself now: "those are big charges...can he prove it"? I would only ask that you prayerfully study and use the intellect that God has given you to see if what I say does not add up. You will never be sorry you did, and eternally grateful you continued in this rather difficult study. Shalom and may the LORD'S blessings overtake you.

Let us continue our studies into Jesus' further teachings on the Gentile's Salvation.

JESUS AND HIS TEACHINGS ON THE GENTILE'S SALVATION

Disclaimer: It is important for the reader to understand that in this website, in comparing first century Judaism and the "pattern of worship" given to the "non-Jew" by God as well as unveiling of the historical truths concerning the non-Jewish "believer" in the first century against the later alterations and changes made to this "pattern of worship" by the emerging Roman Gentile Church of Rome in the 3rd century I will use a "literal-historical" approach to the "Jesus Story". If you have studied and ran across some of our other websites then you know that "the Christ" can be interpreted from 3 different perspectives down through recorded history: "mystical", "mythological", and "literal-historical". Only after one has spent a considerable time in dedicated and scholarly studies in such areas as Biblical Judaism, the Jewish Messiah and true Messianic prophecy as taken from the Hebrew Scriptures and not the later forged texts of Rome, comparative manuscript evidences, the history and origin of the Roman New Testament, the true origin and creation of the New Testament , the Gnostic Paul vs the falsified Roman Paul, the Essenes and their "literal godman", Ancient Wisdom literature, Jewish and Gentile Gnosticism, Egyptian religion and the ancient "Jesus Story" that beings with Ancient Egypt, Comparative religions, Astronomy and Astrotheology can he understand and be certain which two of the above three methods of interpretation of "the Christ" are accurate and factual. Again for purposes of comparing Judaism's truths vs Christianity's alterations of it over the early centuries and the implications that this holds for the "non-Jew" and "Godfearer" today then we adopt in this website and for all studies in this website a supposed "literal-historical" interpretation of "the Christ" as well as the Jesus of the New Testament. Only in so doing can we adequately contrast the truths of Judaism vs Christian theology and by so doing follow the lineage of these "Divine Truths" back down the corridors of history to the earliest Divine revelations given to mankind by the Creator which were intended for both "Gentiles" and "Jews" as well. You will, in time, come to see that there is a "Pattern" to the worship of God given all mankind in the beginning of recorded history of the race and this "pattern" can be traced throughout recorded history and will culminate with Biblical Judaism and will subsequently be destroyed in the 3rd century by the emerging antisemitic Roman Church. I will let you be the judge of the results of such studies and leave to the reader to draw the necessary conclusions as we attempt to compare Jewish and Christian theological perspectives all the while dealing with the "New Testament Jesus" in a "literal-historical" manner in order for such an accurate comparison to be done effectively. The Noahide Commandments are the Commandments given by the Torah to the Gentiles (first given to Adam and later given to Noah), which according to rabbinic tradition and the First Church Council in Acts 15:17-19 and Acts 15:28-29 (which was headed up by James, the Lord's brother and head of the Jerusalem church) were given by God to Gentiles like Adam and Noah, that if obeyed, will be rewarded with eternal life! According to rabbinic teaching & Acts 15 (which Yeshua believed and would have agreed with himself), those Gentiles who observe these precepts are assured their share in the World to Come, regardless of what fanciful interpretations were later to be invented by both the Catholic & Protestant churches and most probably heard in your modern churches. Jesus was and is a Jew. He never ascribed to Baptist, Methodist, Catholic, Assembly of God, Church of Christ, or Mormon church doctrine. He believed and taught the truth as received from his Father in Heaven.

The Christian must come to an understanding that the religion of Jesus (Judaism) has always recognized two different religious codes:

1. the 613 Laws and precepts given to the Jews following their liberation from Egypt, and
2. the earlier Noahide system of legislation for all mankind.

DID JESUS INTEND TO REPLACE OR ABOLISH JUDAISM AND START A NEW RELIGION?

The eighteenth century Talmudist Rabbi Jacob Emden wrote a letter that has been discovered which states:

"Jesus never intended to abolish Judaism, but only to establish a new religion for the Gentiles based upon the ancient Noahide Commandments transmitted by Moses on Mount Sinai."

Let me say that Emden more correctly should have said "RE-ESTABLISH" for the Gentiles the religious foundations that had previously been given by God to the Gentiles since the Garden of Eden and Sinai. Emden stressed in his letter that Jesus brought about a "double blessing" to the world, by strengthening the Torah of Moses and at the same time removing idolatry from the midst of the Gentiles. Unfortunately, Emden's thesis in the letter never gained a substantial following by fellow Jews. The most obvious reason would seem to be the frequent harsh statements made by Jesus against the rabbis and Jews of his time (Matt. 23). This chapter in Matt. 23 has seldom been correctly interpreted by the Christian Church because the church, for the most part, lacks the facts & information concerning the historical, religious, and political background surrounding Yeshua's statements which are necessary to correctly understand such a chastisement of a particular "sect" within the Pharisees, and not the Pharisees as a whole! Jesus was not condemning the Pharisee movement, for he was proud to be one, especially a Pharisee belonging to the School of Hillel. Jesus was not replacing Judaism with Christianity!

Emden helps us understand the original intentions of Jesus and Paul as he analyzes the beginnings of Christianity. According to the Jewish rabbi, Jesus and his Apostles, which were later sent by Jesus to the Gentiles acted entirely within the Halakhah (correct and accepted Jewish law) in re-creating and re-establishing the religion God had previously given to the Gentiles which was based on the Noahide Commandments (the basic seven Noahide Laws consist of prohibitions against idolatry, blasphemy, killing, stealing, sexual sins, eating the limb of a living animal (cruelty to animals), and the imperative to establish courts of justice). According to the Jewish Talmud and Tosefta, those Gentiles who observe these statutes are considered to be of the Hasidim (pious ones) of the Nations and merit a share in the World to Come. Even within the Alenu prayer which is prayed by Jews and "God-Fearers" every Sabbath, it states "May all inhabitants of the earth recognize and know....". This means the Gentiles. This prayer for Gentiles is another proof that the will of God is for Gentiles not to perish but have everlasting life. In the Mishnah (the Oral Law), in Pirke Avot 4.1 it states: "Every assembly that is for the sake of Heaven will in the end be established." Christian assemblies are for the sake of Heaven, yet I must sadly inform you that they have accepted "IN PART" the Noahide Commandments, but not totally! God had given them all to the Gentiles!

THE "FIRST" GREAT COMMISSION...NO...IT IS NOT WHAT YOU THINK

Jesus and Paul were acquainted with the Essene authors and their Scrolls. Many passages in the New Testament bear striking similarity to the Scrolls (see my previous newsletter about Jesus and the Secret of the Dead Sea Scrolls). A comprehensive overview of the writings and materials available to us today reveal the Essenes to have been extremely pious Jews who scrupulously followed the Torah (the instruction and teaching of God, more commonly called the "Law"), whereas Jesus and Paul are by many portrayed incorrectly as having forsaken their Jewish origins and replaced the Torah with a new religion-Christianity. This never happened; at least not by Jesus! At lease this is the general picture one is presented with; and one will not be able to see through it without diligent study. But this premise goes against Emden's letter. A Christian should know that the Talmud records for us that Moses commanded the Jews to spread the knowledge of the Noahide commandments to all mankind!! Did you hear that? God commanded Moses to spread the knowledge of the Covenant with Noah and its requirements to all Gentiles in the world. Judaism acknowledges this "Gentile Covenant for Salvation" as from God since the time of Mount at Sinai. The questions we have to ask ourselves is this:

- Does history record for us such an ambitious attempt to bring the Noahide Laws to Gentiles, and if so, who was behind it and when did it occur?"
- Were the pious Essenes the ones who attempted such a mission to the Gentiles in the generation preceding Yeshua's birth?
- Did Jesus and Paul, through their ministries, follow in the Essene's footsteps and try to bring to fruition what the Essenes began in the generation before their birth?
- Where do the Gentiles correctly fit into the teachings of Jesus and Paul?

As Christians, we must constantly search for the correct interpretations of such an event if we are to correctly understand the Bible and it's message to the Gentile and his salvation.

WE NEED TO STUDY THE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH

A passage in the Jerusalem Talmud records for us:

"Menahem the Essene and 160 Essene disciples left the Jewish community" (remember not all Essenes lived in & around the Dead Sea) "about 20 B.C. on a mission to the Gentiles to take the "world" the Noahide Covenant, thus assuring obedient and observant Gentiles a place in the World to Come."

This Menahem served as a vice-president of the Sanhedrin under the sage Hillel who was the Nassi (President of the Sanhedrin) some thirty years before Yeshua's birth. The Mishnah makes quite clear that Menahem subjected himself totally to Hillel's authority (who loved the Gentiles), thus establishing a link between the Essenes and Hillel (who was a conservative Pharisee). Also of importance is the link between the two camps (Essenes & Pharisees) in that they were both known as "Hasidim." Menahem the Essene left Hillel's Sanhedrin for his mission to the world and was then replaced by the sage Shammai (who did not like the Gentiles). Shammai succeeded him as vice-president, probably about 20 B.C., and the influences of Hillel began to be replaced with those of Shammai.

STILL MORE QUESTIONS THAT NEED ANSWERS

- Was Menahem forced out by Shammai and his followers?
- Did Hillel's disciples join Menahem in his mission to the Gentiles?
- Did later rabbis approve of Menahem's mission to the Gentiles?
- Did Shammai lend his support to the Gentile mission or did he discourage the Jews from being a light to Gentiles?

- In the time of Jesus did the teachings of Hillel or Shammai have influence over the people of Israel and direct the course of the nation?
- Which of these two Pharisee schools supported Jesus and which did Jesus rebuke in Matt. 23?
- Was Jesus against all the Pharisees?

THE STORMY RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN HILLEL AND SHAMMAI

The first disputes regarding the Oral law (that was passed down for some 1700 years from Moses at Sinai) took place at this time between the sages and students of Hillel and Shammai (beginning about 20 years prior to Yeshua's birth). Their respective schools (Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai) were to clash over 350 times on issues of the Oral Law during the next hundred years. Nor were these always minor disputes for even once the Zealots connected with Shammai massacred and killed many of the Pharisees. The issues between Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai went to the very core of what Judaism stood for (and what Jesus stood for). One of the major areas of contention was Judaism's attitude toward salvation of the Gentiles.

Answer for yourself: What side would Jesus agree with?

The Schools of Shammai and Hillel both accepted all of the commandments contained in the five "written" books of the Torah (Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy). But the written law of Moses is too brief to be applied to practical issues of everyday life, and it was accepted that God also gave an oral and more detailed tradition was originally given to Adam, then to Noah, and finally handed down to Moses at Sinai. The debates of Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai centered on this oral tradition.

This oral tradition was passed down by Moses and it was forbidden to be set to writing. It was this Oral Law that later caused controversy among the rabbis; especially Bet Shammai and Bet Hillel. Finally, out of fear it would be forgotten due to all the persecution of Judaism and the deaths of its leaders at the hands of Gentiles, the sages permitted it to be committed to writing. The first major works were the Mishnah (200 A.D.) and the Tosefta (4th century), followed by two Talmuds; the Babylonian Talmud and the Jerusalem Talmud (5th century). The Babylonian version is more popular than the Jerusalem Talmud. Also at this time, books of homilies known as Midrash began to appear. The two major commentaries to the Babylonian Talmud are those of Rashi and the Tosefta. Why did I mention these works? The Mishnah, Talmud and Tosefta are the works of primary interest and authority when researching the Jewish law and tradition that surrounded Jesus and his teachings in the first century.

GOD CHOSE HILLEL'S INTERPRETATION FOR ALL TIME....A VOICE FROM HEAVEN

The School of Shammai came upon the Jewish scene 20 years before Yeshua's birth, and flourished for around 100 years. After the destruction of the Temple in 70 A.D., the seat of the Sanhedrin was relocated to Yavneh, where the Halachah (accepted interpretation of Jewish Law) of the School of Bet Hillel became once again the established Halachah (accepted interpretation for all issues of Jewish law). Also at this time it is recorded by the Rabbis that God, in a "bat kohl" spoke from Heaven and a Heavenly Voice was heard declaring the Law was to be from that time forward decided in favor of the interpretations of the School of Bet Hillel. Since that time all Jewry has accepted the teachings of Bet Hillel.

HOW COULD JESUS REPLACE WHAT GOD APPROVED?

Now listen closely. Jesus' debates with the Pharisees recorded in the New Testament were actually disputes with the Pharisees representing the School of Shammai and NOT the School of Hillel. Jesus adopts the views of Hillel on "all" matters of halachah (interpretation) except on the matter of divorce, where he sides with the School of Shammai (strict interpretation). At the time of Jesus the interpretations and teachings Bet Shammai were influencing Jewish life and institutions more than Hillel's, and it was this way for almost 100 years. Through Shammai's teachings Israel was "loosing her way." Hillel had died when Jesus was 13-14 years old, and Hillel's influence in Israel was rapidly being replaced with the contemporary teachings of Shammai. Jesus (who accepted and agreed with Hillel) and Shammai (and Shammai's many students) were to clash continually! The Shammai Pharisees (and not the Hillel Pharisees) were responsible for handing over Jesus to the Chief Priest, and Sadducees and Romans for crucifixion, and this was a violation of Jewish Law. Couple this with the relationship the Shammaites had with the Sadducean Zealots in the priesthood, little wonder that the Chief Priests (Sadducees) capture Jesus and hand him over to the Romans to be crucified. Notice that the Hillel Pharisees (whom the majority of the people supported and followed) had nothing to do with Yeshua's crucifixion (it was they who warned Jesus to flee for his life in Luke 13:31). When you read Matt. 23 you cannot help but see Jesus chastising the Pharisees; but what we fail to notice is that there were many sects within Phariseeism and Jesus says "Pharisees who"....indicating that many were not to be included in his rebuke of the insincere Pharisees. Jesus took odds with the Shammaite Pharisees, not the Hillel Pharisees!

The Christian Church's failure to understand this has led them to erroneously believe that Jesus was rejecting his own religion rather than calling for repentance within it!

WE MUST UNDERSTANDING THE TIMES OF THE BIBLE IF WE ARE EVER TO GLEAN TRUTH

The Jewish people knew from ancient prophecy that their Temple in Jerusalem would be destroyed by the Gentiles (Dan. 9). Bet Hillel believed that reaching out to the Gentiles (since historically Israel had failed to be "a light unto the Gentiles" and had thereby violated the Second Tablet of the Law which carries the more severe punishment for its violation) was the correct approach to possibly avoiding the coming destruction. Hillel and his students maintained that righteous Gentiles merit salvation just as Jews do (Hillel, like Jesus, accepted the teachings connected with the Laws of Noah), and it was their hope that a mission to the Gentiles could avert the destruction of their land and win God's approval, thus influencing God to repent of the destruction prophesied. Bet Shammai however looked down upon the Gentile world, holding that NOT even the most righteous Gentile could merit a share in the World to Come. Shammai believed the Gentiles deserved "hell" and no attempts should be made to alter their destiny. The Jewish people and their teachers have since declared Bet Shammai's views to be null and void, as did the Heavenly Voice toward the close of the first century (just the way God spoke at Yeshua's immersion). Shammai and the Bet Shammai were indeed the Pharisees and priests that Jesus of Nazareth and Paul of Tarsus had to contend with within the pages of our Bibles, and not the Hillel Pharisees. Paul the Apostle's insistence that Gentiles be admitted into the early Messianic Jewish Church was based on Bet Hillel's position that righteous Gentiles merit salvation. Let us not forget that it is recorded that Paul had studied under Rabban Gamaliel the Elder, a grandson of Hillel where he received such instruction! Now you can better understand that the anti-Jewish passages contained in the New Testament were directed against the Shammaites, and not the Judaism which followed Bet Hillel, or even today which follows the instruction and interpretations of Hillel.

UNDERSTANDING JESUS AND PAUL

Jesus and his disciples, especially Paul, warned all men everywhere not to "destroy" the Torah of Israel. A Jew is not permitted to leave his Torah, for Paul wrote in his letter to the Galatians Chapter 5 (remember Galatians was written to Gentiles) "I, Paul, say to you that if you (writing to Gentiles) receive circumcision (along with immersion that makes you a Jew), the Messiah will do you no good at all" [the opportunity to become part of the Israel of God without circumcision will be be available to you since it will be through Yeshua's ministry that the Laws of Noah, which did not require circumcision, were to be taken to the non-Jewish world. I will deal with the meaning of that last phrase in more detail in a future newsletter. But for now, Paul goes on to say "You can take it from me that every man (Gentile) who receives circumcision [conversion] (whether a Jew by birth or a converted Gentile) is under obligation to keep the "entire" Torah" (613) [this is simply because when a non-Jew underwent circumcision he was making "full conversion" whereby he would be obligated for the whole 613 Commandments anyway]. Paul is teaching us that a Gentile (like you and me) who is immersed in repentance and who is circumcised [makes conversion] is obligated to keep the entire Torah!

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that?

Answer for yourself: What about Paul and his teaching that the Law is passed away? It must now be obvious that Paul never intended for that to be your understanding; he never said that! Our problem is that we misinterpret the teachings of Paul not having a proper background necessary to understand correctly what he is saying. Let us begin with what happens when we are "Born-Again".

WHAT DID "BEING BORN AGAIN" MEAN TO JESUS? THEN SHOULD I NOT AGREE WITH HIM? JOHN 3 AS YOU HAVE NEVER SEEN OR UNDERSTOOD IT BEFORE

Before going on we must address a very important question: What happens when I am Born-Again? In answering this we must deal with a very important issue that is often overlooked. When a Gentile turns from idols, repents, and accepts the faith of the One God of the Universe, he identifies with God. As Gentiles we identify with God through the one he sent to reveal Himself ; namely Jesus and his ministry which brought the non-Jews of the world the knowledge of God, Torah, and Israel. Sadly, however, by the time Jesus came knocking on your door he had been completely altered whereby he no longer was a Torah observant Jew, but rather came dressed like Zeus and Constantine. As Christians you were taught that you were buried into the likeness of Yeshua's death, and raised in newness of life through identification with God through the mikvah bath (water immersion). Christians call it baptism. A more correct understanding is that the non-Jewish believer in God (in the act of repentance and faith) literally stands at his own Sinai, is immersed and repents of sin and begins a new life with God as did his Gentile forefathers (the Egyptians are a type and shadow of Ephraim, the other house of Israel) and says, like the Jews of old did, "All that the Lord has spoken we will do" (Ex. 19:8). Notice that the Bible say "all" the people said it at Sinai (this included the mixed-multitude of Gentiles and Jews together)! Included in that group were a mixed multitude of Gentiles along with Jews/Semites that teaches us a very important lesson for our lives. At Sinai both Gentiles and Jews/Semites confessed adherence to the Covenant offered by God. God had previously instructed that they "wash their clothes", which is an idiom for immersion in water of their bodies (this was their Born-Again experience with the God of Israel). This might be startling to you but the concept in the Gospel of John, chapter three, concerning being "Born-Again" is not the invention of Jesus. Being "Born-Again" is a Jewish concept that has existed since the Garden of Eden with Adam. Now hear this, this immersion and repentance from sin is to be repeated throughout one's life. Examples in Scripture that the Children of Israel were "Born-Again" repeatedly (immersed and attained a new-heightened status before they met with God) are before each Sabbath, each Feast and Festival, following repentance of sin, and for a lady, after her menses on a monthly basis before she could return to her husband's bed. Jesus was immersed repeatedly in his life, yet the only one recorded for us is the one immersion the day before he observed the Yom Kippur Festival (Day of Atonement). Being "Born-Again" is not a concept originated by the Gentile church. It is a Jewish concept!

Amazing! As the repentant person entered into the immersion bath (this "watery womb" and "watery tomb") he would then emerge as if "Born-Again" from a watery grave and a watery womb (with a re-newed status before God). He is then considered a new creation (2 Cor. 5:17)! If you were Jewish you would have been instructed correctly concerning the mechanics of Biblical Immersion (being Born-Again) since you were a child, and would not have to be like many Christian Gentiles who have not had the truth concerning such an important doctrine, not to mention is resultant responsibilities of obedience to Torah. It is startling that such a Jewish concept is considered the backbone of the Christian faith and the Christian fails to have the correct understanding regarding immersion and being Born-Again as Jesus understood it. As believers we should have understood it correctly from the beginning, which we have not. A Gentile entered into the watery tomb and watery womb and emerged, no longer considered a Gentile, the old things have passed away (his condition of being a Gentile), behold God made all things new (he now is a part of Israel)! He was now considered a citizen of the Israel of God! Upon emerging from the watery tomb in which he was "Born-Again" he had the status of a Jew. He became Israel! He was considered as if he had always been Israel, for he had no past and it was forbidden to bring up his past for it was as if he had always been Israel.

ARE YOU TRULY GRAFTED INTO ISRAEL OR NOT?

The Gentile, after turning from idols and repentance (as a sign of his faith in the One God of Israel), and after following immersion in the Mikvah (baptism), was grafted into Israel as Paul would later tell us. The repentant Gentile believer chose God and His Torah. He chose to become "chosen". Since he is Israel, then these commandments given to "Israel" now apply to the Gentile Christian who considers himself a follower of Jesus, his teachings, and His God. Is that your understanding? It was Yeshua's understanding and still is his today. The tragedy of the matter is that the Contemporary Christian Church has not studied to know who they are. They are included in the House of Ephraim; they are Israel. The Commandments of God as seen in the Torah are for them, not just the Jew born in the land!

LET US BE SURE WE UNDERSTAND EACH OTHER

A "Gentile" is a term signifying a non-Jew, who is NOT a "son of the covenant" and is only subject to the seven Noachide Laws. Once a Gentile came to the understanding of the one true God, he would turn from idols and worship the God of Israel. These were the "God fearers", who accepted certain basic Jewish obligations along with the Noachide precepts. According to this, idolatry, shedding of blood, and grave sexual sins were forbidden to Gentile believers. These were originally the Noachide precepts accepted also by the Synagogue on which the Gentiles were obliged. Let me remind you that we see in Acts 15 (at least 25 years after the death of Jesus) the admonition for the Gentiles to adhere to Noachide Laws to be accepted in the believing community of Israel (it was James as leader of the Jerusalem church who referred back to the Noahide Laws in addressing the question of Gentile salvation). It is logical that the Apostolic Church of Jerusalem should accept the view of the Synagogue on the conditions which Gentiles needed to fulfill in order to be "saved "and accepted in the "family of Israel".It can be easily shown that the fulfillment of other commandments of Judaism were not prohibited to Gentiles. On the contrary, the Noachide precepts were only seen as the minimal condition for Gentiles to be recognized as "God-fearers". These were so understood by the uncircumcised "God-fearers" themselves, who were attracted to the Jewish way of life and accepted many Jewish commandments without becoming full proselytes (Sabbath, festivals, Tallith, etc). This was also the attitude of Gentile Christian "God-fearers", as may be seen from the Epistle to the Galatians; many of them wished to observe as many Jewish precepts as they could. It is evident that, while the leadership of the mother Church in Jerusalem decided to lay no burden upon the Gentile believers beyond the Noachide precepts, it did not object to their voluntarily observing more (Col. 2:16-17). Among the figures of the early Church who instructed Gentile Christians to observe more precepts than these essential "Noahide" ones was Peter, as we know from Paul's criticism of him for demanding that Gentiles live like Jews (Gal. 2:14). Rather than interpreting the apostolic decree of Gentiles adhering to the Laws of Noah as a minimum, Paul saw in the Noachide precepts the maximum obligations of Gentile Christians. Rather than Peter being incorrect, a more comprehensive understanding of the Bible reveals Paul to be incorrect.

GET IT CORRECT PAUL OR DON'T TEACH IT AT ALL

The more you study the more you see that all this "Pauline" literature in the New Testament was not written by him but since we grow up with the "tradition" that Paul wrote these epistles and established the doctrines contained within them then for simplicity sake in this website I will "assume" that Paul is the writer. Only later on another website will I show the reader the truth about the Gnostic Paul. So now we look at the Romanized Paul and the antisemitic doctrines attributed to him which were "penned" in his name long after his death by an antisemitic Rome.

Paul remarks in a letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor. 7) that the circumcised (Jews or converted Gentiles) should not remove the marks of circumcision, nor should the uncircumcised (Gentiles become Jews) circumcise themselves. Wait a minute. Paul contradicts himself (like a lot of preachers today). In Galatians 5 he says "if you Gentiles get circumcised" and then he says "don't do it", can't he make up his mind?

Answer for yourself: In Acts 16 Paul circumcised his disciple Timothy. Timothy was not a Jew was he?

Answer for yourself: If he was a Gentile why bother, right?

This contradiction of Paul is very puzzling.

Answer for yourself: Sadly many have incorrectly interpreted Paul as teaching that circumcision was abandoned with the coming of Jesus, but was it? Acts 16 is over 20 years after the time of this Jesus and Paul is still "circumcising".

Answer for yourself: We have failed to understand properly, so what is the clear truth of the matter?

Jesus and his Apostles did not wish to destroy the Torah (Law) from Israel, God forbid; for it is written so in Matthew 5:17, Jesus having said, "Do not suppose that I have come to abolish the Torah. I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill. I tell you this: So long as heaven and earth endure (do they yet exist today?), not a letter, not a stroke, will disappear from the Torah (the Law) until it is achieved. If any man therefore sets aside even the least of the Torah's demands, and teaches others to do the same (the majority of Pastors who preach the contemporary Christian message), he will have the lowest place in the Kingdom of Heaven, whereas anyone who keeps the Torah, and teaches others so, will stand high in the Kingdom of Heaven."

Bet Emet Ministries teaches Gentile and Jewish commitment and observance to the Torah, not because we desire to be "high" in the Kingdom of God, but because we love God and His Word, and would never think of destroying it by misinterpreting it or failing to study to arrive at the correct meaning of these truths for the people of God today.

It is therefore exceedingly clear that Jesus never dreamed of destroying the Torah as have the majority of churches today that carry his name but substitute "another Gospel" for the true Gospel of Christ.

WHAT TO DO WITH TIMOTHY?

Paul does not contradict himself because of his circumcision of Timothy, for the latter was the son of a Jewish mother, and a Gentile father (Acts 16), and Paul knew that the child of a Jewish mother is considered a "full Jew", even if the father should be a Gentile. Paul thus acted entirely in accordance with the Halakhah (interpretation of Jewish Law) by circumcising Timothy. This would be in line with his position, following the Jerusalem Council of Acts 15 in 50 A.D., that no longer will Gentile believers be required to "become fully converted Jews" to be accepted into Israel; that the Gentile believers could now remain as "God-Fearers" and be accepted fully by the Jews (1 Cor 7, Acts 15). Gentiles no longer had to "convert" to Judaism and become "fully Jewish" for inclusion with equal standing within the Israel of God. The Gentiles as "God-Fearers" were to also be accepted as grafted into Israel (as demonstrated by Cornelius in Acts 10 who was a "God-Fearer" and who had not yet been circumcised). It is important to note that as a "God-Fearer", Cornelius yet observed the Noahide Laws, honored the Sabbath, and ate kosher (proper killing, dressing and preparation of animals intended for food as well as the removal of all blood). The baptism of Cornelius into the Holy Spirit as had been the Jews earlier in Acts 2 during the Festival of Pentecost was the evidence needed to convince the Jerusalem church that the middle-wall of partition was being removed between Jews and "unclean Gentiles". From this we learn that obedience to the Noahide Laws, without circumcision (to remain only as a "God-Fearer" and not fully convert to Judaism), was no longer to be a barrier between the "unclean Gentiles" and the Jews.

For example, table fellowship at the Shabbat (Sabbath observance) and the Festivals could now be shared together! This was understood from Peter's vision in Acts 10 concerning "unclean foods" which the Lord cleansed (symbolic of cleansing of men, and not the animals designated as unclean in Leviticus). Shammai's "Eighteen Measures" (one of which commanded Jews not to eat or enter into the homes of Gentiles-remember Shammai hated Gentiles) was overturned by God with the revelation at Cornelius' home. God corrects Shammai and those that followed his teaching. Peter's vision of the unclean foods represented the "unclean Gentiles" which God had cleansed; the vision was not meant to tell Peter that God had cleansed the "unclean foods". Let us not confuse this issue.

HOW DOES GOD VIEW YOU TODAY KNOWING THIS?

Timothy had to be circumcised since he was Jewish (because his mother was Jewish) and, therefore, was required to observe all the commandments of the Torah (613). Gentiles who observe the Noahide Laws are forbidden to observe "ALL" the Torah like a Jew is required, unless they desire to be circumcised and identify totally with the Jew and his Torah (full-conversion); if so then they are no longer "God-Fearers" but have become full-fledged Jews and undertake all the 613 Commandments. Following Immersion into Israel the Gentile is no longer considered a "Gentile", he is now Jewish (either partly or completely depending upon circumcision). All who become circumcised (converted) following immersion are bound by all the commandments (613). Understanding the immersion process is crucial for the Christian; once you are immersed in faith and repentance, and you identify with Israel, you emerged from that watery womb and tomb as a Born-Again "God-Fearer" who is grafted into Israel. You became "Israel" and are a Spiritual Jew (regardless if you were aware of it or not). You are not considered a "partial-Jew" unless you are uncircumcised. If you are circumcised you are then considered a "Full-Jew"!

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that?

The majority of you set in your churches thinking you are "Christians" and God's Word says you are "Jewish" (children of Abraham) and are the Israel of God. You have not replaced Israel, you became a part of Israel. You are obligated to observe the Torah (that part of the Law that refers to you according to your Covenant stipulations) and, because of your lack of study, you have let your unlearned pastors and teachers tell you repeatedly that you are "under grace" and "not under Law." You are under both! I just showed you that a proper understanding of immersion and the teachings of Jesus & Paul tell you otherwise. Now, let me ask you as a Christian an important question.

Answer for yourself: Who are you going to believe; your pastor or Jesus and Paul?

Answer for yourself: With such an obligation to the "Christian" who now becomes aware that he is either "part-Jewish" or "fully-Jewish" (Judaism is not a race but a religion; the religion of Jesus) what are you to do concerning the Commandments which are addressed to you requiring your obedience to the Shabbat (Sabbath), Pesach (Festival of the Passover), Hag HaMatzah (Festival of Unleavened Bread), HaBikkurim (First Fruits), Shavuot (Festival of Pentecost), Rosh HaShannah (Jewish New Year), Yom Teruah (Festival of Trumpets), Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), and Sukkot (Festival of Tabernacles)?

Surely you should want to begin to observe and keep them according to Scripture. Failure to do so is sin!

IS IT BEGINNING TO MAKE SENSE?

Christian scholars have assumed from certain passages in the Gospels that Jesus wished to give a new Torah to take the place of the Torah of Moses. He could not do such a thing unless he sinned.

Answer for yourself: How could Jesus have then said explicitly that he came only to fulfill it?

The truth of the matter is that Jesus never came to abolish Judaism, but only to re-establish the religion for the Jews and the Lost Sheep of Israel (assimilated Gentiles from the captivity of Northern Israel). In the unique situation we find in the first century this referred from that time onward the faith that God had given them from the beginning-Noahidism! Nor was this religion new, but actually ancient; it being the observance of the Seven Commandments of Noah, which were forgotten purposefully by Shammai and his students in their bigotry toward the non-Jews. Such men and ideas were influencing the people of Israel in Yeshua's day; thus Jesus came not for those who are well but those who need a physician and who are sick; sick with hatred for the Gentiles whom God loved and to whom He had called Israel to be a light unto to show them the Torah (the Noahide Laws). God had intended for the Gentiles to be redeemed all along. Jesus came for the "lost sheep of the house of Israel"; who had lost their way and purpose for the truths that they had been entrusted with. These truths were not only for them, but the Gentiles as well. It is important to understand that as there were "people who were lost" in Israel, there were others like the Essene Menahem and the Hillel Pharisees who had not "lost their way" and needed little if any correction by Jesus!

WHAT REALLY HAPPENED WITH THE GREAT COMMISSION?

Yeshua's Apostles, in fulfillment of the Great Commission of their master, established these Seven Commandments anew (Acts 15, Acts 21). However, those born as Jews (with Jewish mothers), or those Gentiles where were immersed and circumcised as "full-converts" to Judaism (Ex. 12:49; one law shall be to him that is home-born, and unto the stranger) are obligated to observe all 613 of the commandments of the Torah without exception.

Answer for yourself: Are you a circumcised Gentile Christian who has been immersed in Yeshua's name and "Born-Again" into Israel? Then that means you!

For the uncircumcised Gentile God reserved the Seven Commandments which they have always been obligated to be adhered to and fulfilled by non-Jewish believers. It is for that reason that they were forbidden pollution of idols, fornication, blood, and things strangled (Acts 15). Yeshua's Apostles also forbade them circumcision (to do so would mean full conversion) and the Sabbath observance (exactly like the Jews observed it). The mandatory observance by "God-Fearers" was similar, but not exactly alike the Jewish observance.

This may sound so different from what your traditional Christian message has been, but your Christian message is incorrect if it does not agree or line up with the Apostle's Doctrine. All of what I have shared with you is in accord with the law and custom of the Torah, as expounded by the Jewish sages, the true transmitters from Moses at Sinai, and understood by Jesus of Nazareth in the first century (they sit in Moses' seat...listen to what they say). Our understanding today is incorrect if it violates the truths as Jesus understood them. We do not know more about salvation than Jesus. It was to the Hillel Pharisees Jesus referred to in Matt. 23 who set in Moses' seat and to whom we are to listen for correct doctrine. We are not to follow the examples of any leaders if they do not line up with the Apostle's Doctrine of Acts 2:42. This teaching on immersion and conversion is Apostolic Doctrine as Jesus taught his disciples, and any other interpretation other than his is NOT correct. We are not to follow any Pharisee's examples unless they live what they preach (that means the Pharisee Preachers of today who fail to teach and live the truth of Apostolic Doctrine)! Jesus tells us not to follow them unless they agree with him! Good advice. This same admonition is given in Deut. 17:8 ff., where the authority to teach and lead the people were given to the religious leaders God put over the people of "Israel". These occupy Moses' seat.

IT IS TIME TO GET SERIOUS ABOUT WHAT WE LEARNED

Answer for yourself: Do the Baptists, Methodist, Catholics, Assemblies of God, or any other denomination or non-denomination occupy Moses' seat? No. The Catholic and Protestant denominations are far from being Jewish. Salvation is of the Jews according to Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Do you dare tell him he made a mistake?

It was these Sages and Pharisees who said that it is forbidden to circumcise a Gentile who does not accept upon himself the yoke of "ALL" the Commandments. In America male babies are circumcised apart from the truths of God's Word (we are commanded to circumcise on the 8th day and no within the first 2-3 days of a newborn's life) and thus their circumcision would not apply. That means circumcision that does violate Scripture does not automatically make you a "full-fledged" Jew. You are still a "God-Fearer". Identification with Israel is by faith and free will. You must choose to stand at your personal Sinai and say to God "I will do all that you say".

Answer for yourself: Do you want to obey God? Do you want to honor His Name with your life?

Going to churches that teach error does not accomplish anything. It is bondage just like Egypt!

Answer for yourself: Have you ever been to Sinai? Will you ever go? Have you chosen to return to your Egypt of ignorance and false traditions and false religion that amount to idolatry?

The Sages likewise said that the Gentile is commanded NOT to "fully" observe the Sabbath as does the Jew (yet he is to remember and keep it). Acts 20:6 recounts for us the Gentile believers and how they were taught by Paul to remember and keep the Sabbath. It is here we find the Gentile Church keeping Jewish ordinances well over thirty years after Yeshua's death.

Answer for yourself: What would later change this pattern?

As far as the Gentiles ("God-Fearers") were concerned, they were not commanded to observe all the Torah (the 613 mitzvot). The Gentile "God-Fearers" did not have to accept all the 613 mitzvot and are not enjoined to observe all of the 613 commandments. However, it is completely different as far as Jews are concerned, for they became obligated to fulfill the Torah because God delivered them from the bondage of Egypt to be the people of His possession. Therefore they and their children became subject to it forever and so are those Gentiles who make full-conversions to Judaism.

LET US PUT IT ALL TOGETHER NOW

It should be easy to see that Jesus and his Apostles never meant to abolish the Torah of Moses from one who is born a Jew. Likewise, did Paul write in his letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor 7) that each should adhere to the faith in which each was called. They therefore acted in accordance with the Torah by forbidding circumcision to Gentiles, according to Halakhah, as it is forbidden to one who does not accept the yoke of the commandments (all 613). They knew that is would be too difficult for the Gentiles to observe the Torah of Moses. Let us not forget that the Gentiles never had the Revelation of the Torah at Sinai, the Ark of the Covenant, the Tabernacle, the Two Tablets, the prophets, or the Temple & Tabernacle services as were given to Israel. The Gentile's only experience was that they were strangers from the Covenant promises of Israel, aliens for the commonwealth of God's people, without hope and without God in the world.

The rabbis thus took the Gentiles the revelation of God and instructed them not to be circumcised unless they wished to be fully converted to Judaism (this had no bearing upon immersion since it was required for "partial" as well as "full" conversion). It would suffice that the Gentiles observe the Seven Noahide Commandments, as commanded upon them through the Halakhah from Moses at Sinai. This was the minimum requirements for inclusion into Israel.

Rabbi Emden was correct; Jesus brought a double kindness into the world. One the one hand, he strengthened the Torah of Moses majestically. Acts 24:20 states that many thousands of Jews were believers in Jesus as Messiah in the first century and zealous for the Torah (Law); this was over 30 years after Yeshua's death and resurrection. The ministry of Jesus helped return the "children of Israel back to their Fathers; the Patriarchs and their faith" and thus fulfill Malachi's prophecy.

On the other hand, Jesus did much good for the Gentiles (provided they do not turn about his intent as they please, as some foolish ones have done because they did not fully understand the intent of the authors of the Gospels and epistles). Jesus obligated his Apostles to fulfill the Great Commission by taking the Gentiles (as a minimum) the Seven Commandments of Noah so that they should not be as the beasts of the field and continue to live their lives as pagans and animals. He also bestowed upon them ethical ways, and in this respect he was much more stringent with them than the Torah of Moses. In is not necessary to impose upon Jews such extreme ethical practices, since they have been obligated to the yoke of Torah since Sinai. Israel took the oath at Sinai and are already trained in proper practice and nature of the Second Tablet of the Law (ethical monotheism and the horizontal relationships man-to-man). It would be for Paul to constantly correct, reprove, teach Apostolic Doctrine, and instruct the Gentiles in his travels since it was to his audience he would write "you are strangers from the Covenant promises, aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, without hope and without God in the world".

If Christians would study they would understand what I have detailed in this teaching. No longer would the Church erroneously teach to abolish the Torah of Moses and Jesus. Such sin and foolishness would and should cease.

Because of these errant scholars, hatred has increased toward the Jews who are blameless of any guilt concerning Yeshua's death and proceed innocently to observe their Torah with all their heart (intellect), soul (dedication and commitment to action) and might (resources and property). The leaders of the Churches of Jesus should study to learn correctly for themselves before they lead their people into sin and astray from the will of God for their lives. The Jew is the brother of the Christian. Ephraim (the grafted-in Gentile) and Judah make up Israel. As members of the Christian faith, how good and pleasant it might be if you would observe what was commanded to you by your first teachers, sent directly to you by Jesus, with his message, and not the message that Roman anti-Semitism has created these last 2000 years.

Now...you have heard the truth....maybe for the first time in your life. Let us act according to the truth as Jesus understood it.

Now let us further our studies in looking at Rabbi Hillel and what he had to say concerning the Gentile's salvation.

RABBI HILLEL AND THE GENTILE'S SALVATION

Disclaimer: It is important for the reader to understand that in this website, in comparing first century Judaism and the "pattern of worship" given to the "non-Jew" by God as well as unveiling of the historical truths concerning the non-Jewish "believer" in the first century against the later alterations and changes made to this "pattern of worship" by the emerging Roman Gentile Church of Rome in the 3rd century I will use a "literal-historical" approach to the "Jesus Story". If you have studied and ran across some of our other websites then you know that "the Christ" can be interpreted from 3 different perspectives down through recorded history: "mystical", "mythological", and "literal-historical". Only after one has spent a considerable time in dedicated and scholarly studies in such areas as Biblical Judaism, the Jewish Messiah and true Messianic prophecy as taken from the Hebrew Scriptures and not the later forged texts of Rome, comparative manuscript evidences, the history and origin of the Roman New Testament, the true origin and creation of the New Testament , the Gnostic Paul vs the falsified Roman Paul, the Essenes and their "literal godman", Ancient Wisdom literature, Jewish and Gentile Gnosticism, Egyptian religion and the ancient "Jesus Story" that beings with Ancient Egypt, Comparative religions, Astronomy and Astrotheology can he understand and be certain which two of the above three methods of interpretation of "the Christ" are accurate and factual. Again for purposes of comparing Judaism's truths vs Christianity's alterations of it over the early centuries and the implications that this holds for the "non-Jew" and "Godfearer" today then we adopt in this website and for all studies in this website a supposed "literal-historical" interpretation of "the Christ" as well as the Jesus of the New Testament. Only in so doing can we adequately contrast the truths of Judaism vs Christian theology and by so doing follow the lineage of these "Divine Truths" back down the corridors of history to the earliest Divine revelations given to mankind by the Creator which were intended for both "Gentiles" and "Jews" as well. You will, in time, come to see that there is a "Pattern" to the worship of God given all mankind in the beginning of recorded history of the race and this "pattern" can be traced throughout recorded history and will culminate with Biblical Judaism and will subsequently be destroyed in the 3rd century by the emerging antisemitic Roman Church. I will let you be the judge of the results of such studies and leave to the reader to draw the necessary conclusions as we attempt to compare Jewish and Christian theological perspectives all the while dealing with the "New Testament Jesus" in a "literal-historical" manner in order for such an accurate comparison to be done effectively. Craig Lyons M.Div.

Tradition records for us three heathen who appeared before the two leading rabbis of their time, Hillel and Shammai (both contemporaries of Jesus in the first century) for the purpose of coming to the God of Israel through "conversion". The first potential convert was interested in accepting only the written law's authority, but not the oral tradition; the second, and most famous, asked to be taught the entire Torah (the main essence of the religion of Jesus) while standing upon one foot, while the third aspired to become a convert so that he might attain the office of high priest. Shammai rebuffed them and drove them off with a "builder's measuring rod" harshly, while Hillel's gentleness and patient instruction won them over to the faith of Jesus. Hillel and Shammai flourished during the era of the Second Temple, or end of first century B.C.E. and the beginning of first century C.E., and were contemporaries of Jesus.

LET US TAKE A CLOSER LOOK...TO UNDERSTAND WHAT WE JUST READ....

Shammai's actions are rather baffling. He scolded the first heathen and had him removed from the premises whereas the latter two were repulsed with a "builder's measuring rod". Many have believed that Shammai was either in the building business or a carpenter by trade. This is all the more puzzling since one of Shammai's favorite teachings was (Avot 1:15) "to receive all men with a cheerful countenance." Was it generally his practice to use his building rod on those he disagreed with?

And Hillel's instruction to the famed second heathen defies comprehension. To his request to be taught the entire Torah while standing on one foot, Hillel replied, "What is hateful unto thee, do not do unto thy neighbor-this is the entire Torah; the rest is commentary." This negative metaphoric contraction of the 613 commandments of the Torah finds no counterpart in Talmudic literature. Two interpretations exist today: 1). God is referred to in scripture as "neighbor" or "friend," or 2) that the prohibitions of theft, adultery and "most commandments" of the Torah can be classified in this vein. Later commentators adopted the more literal view that Hillel was referring to the Golden Rule, love thy neighbor as thyself (Lev. 19:18), but his reference to it in a negative form was in order to incorporate certain halakhic principles into the teaching.

TWO TYPES OF "GRAFTING OF GENTILE BELIEVERS INTO ISRAEL" EXISTED IN ANCIENT TIMES...THE GER TZEDEK & GER TOSHAV....& THE LAWS OF NOAH

Gentiles were grafted into Israel as either a "Ger Tzedek" or a "Ger Toshav."

- The Ger Tzedek accepted all 613 commandments of the Torah, and after circumcision and or ritual immersion, was recognized as a full Jew.
- The Ger Toshav obligated himself only to the Seven Noahide Commandments, after which he was permitted to settle in the Land of Israel, and the Jewish community became liable to see to his economic well-being.

Judaism considers the Seven Noahide Commandments to be the cornerstones of all religion and civilization, having been incumbent upon the human race since the time of Adam. Judaism accepts the opinion today of Rabbi Hillel (a contemporary of Jesus) that a non-Jew who accepts these Commandments as divinely ordained and practices them is considered one of the Hasidim (righteous ones) of the Nations, and merits a share in the World to Come. Judaism has always viewed other religions from the perspective of whether or not they conform to the Noahide Commandments.

According to Exodus 23:33, idolaters were not permitted to live in ancient Israel, lest they cause the people to sin. If a Gentile wished to settle there, he would appear before three learned men, accept the Noahide Laws, and would then be permitted to settle with the status of the Ger Toshav. Convert #2 sought this Ger Toshav status from Hillel. When he inquired to be taught the entire Torah while standing on one foot, he was not jesting; he was referring to the Seven Noahide Commandments, which can easily be imparted in a brief span of time (as one stands on one foot). Hillel's reply to "thy neighbor," was referring to the second party involved which was understood to represent God, one's fellow man, and the animal world as well. Hillel was actually offering a brief synopsis of the Noahide Commandments.

A CLOSER LOOK AT RABBI SHAMMAI AND HIS VIEWS ON GENTILE SALVATION

Rabbi Eliezer ben Hyrcranus, a leading sage of the first century A.D., was a member of the School of Shammai. He held the opinion, as did Shammai his teacher, that a Gentile who observes the Noahide Commandments does NOT merit a share in the World to Come. This was also the stance of the School of Shammai and was prevalent in Israel before the time of the death and resurrection of Jesus. It would a direct result of Yeshua's ministry that this situation would change.

Unlike Shammai, Hillel and his students maintained that righteous Gentiles merit salvation just as Jews do (Hillel, like Jesus, accepted the teachings connected with the Laws of Noah), and it was their hope that a mission to the Gentiles could avert the destruction of their land and win God's approval, thus influencing God to repent of the destruction prophesied in Daniel chapter nine (now you understand another reason for Hillel's and Yeshua's support for a Great Commission to take the Gentiles the Torah). Bet Shammai (the school of Shammai) however looked down upon the Gentile world, holding that NOT even the most righteous Gentiles could merit a share in the World to Come. Shammai believed the Gentiles deserved "eternal separation from God" and no attempts should be made to alter their destiny. The Jewish people and their teachers have since declared Bet Shammai's views to be null and void, as did the Heavenly Voice toward the close of the first century (just the way God spoke at Yeshua's immersion). Shammai and his students from the School of Bet Shammai were indeed the Pharisees and priests that Jesus of Nazareth and Paul of Tarsus had to contend with within the pages of our Bibles, and not the Hillel Pharisees. Paul the Apostle's insistence that Gentiles be admitted into the early Messianic Jewish Church was based on Bet Hillel's (School of Hillel) position that righteous Gentiles merit salvation. Let us not forget that Paul had studied under Rabban Gamaliel the Elder, a grandson of Hillel where he received such instruction! Now you can better understand that the anti-Jewish passages contained in the New Testament were directed against the Shammaites, and not the Judaism which followed Bet Hillel, or even today which follows the instruction and interpretations of Hillel. Jesus was closer to Bet Hillel positions than Bet Shammai's positions as recorded in the New Testament.

When each of these three heathen in our story requested Shammai to instruct them concerning the Noahide Commandments, Shammai would have advised each that a Ger Toshav, Ger Hashar or even an observant Noahide, received no reward in the afterlife. It was this figurative "measuring rod" (his erroneous interpretations of Torah which in this instance taught obedience without immortality) that repulsed the Gentile. The allusion to the tool is not to be taken literally. Shammai would use the same "measuring rod" on the third heathen, by advising him that a Ger Tzedek (a full-convert) had no rights to the high priesthood. Hillel gently pointed our that any Jew not born as a Kohen (descendent of Aaron) was similarly not entitled to the office.

In the case of the first convert, who expressed an interest in the written law only and not the Oral Law or tradition (a Sadduccean position-like the Christian church of today) was a blatant act of heresy. Therefore one can understand another reason that Shammai threw him out. Hillel's (who believed in the Oral Law as well) gentleness won him over.

The gratitude of the two Ger Tzedeks and the "one-footed" Ger Toshav to Hillel are expressed in the Talmud's concluding comment:

"Some time later the three met in one place; they said, Shammai's impatience sought to drive us from the world, but Hillel's gentleness brought us under the wings of the Shekhinah (Divine Presence)."

Thus we can conclude that the term "conversion" was to be understood as the transformation of a pagan into an observant Noahide who observed the Seven Laws of Noah as seen by James' insistence in Acts 15

A FIRST GREAT COMMISSION AND MISSION TO THE GENTILES BY THE HASIDIM

Moses obligated the Jews to spread the knowledge of the Noahide commandments to all mankind. A well known statement of Hillel states (Avot 1:12), "Be thou of the disciples of Aaron, one who loves peace, pursues peace, loves mankind, and draws them nigh to the Torah." Hillel was alluding in this quote to a movement to spread knowledge of the Noahide Commandments to all mankind (Gentile Torah). What better way could one show love for all mankind than to try to bring personal salvation to the Gentiles through faith and observance of the Noahide Laws? With that understanding it is not surprising that Hillel acts as he does with the three heathen men as he explains to each what the Torah expected of them as observant Noahides.

Jesus exceeds Hillel in that he desires that his followers, as Hasidim of the Nations (righteous Gentiles), do even more than the required minimum (Laws of Noah). Such is seen in Yeshua's positive statement: "do unto others as you would have them do unto you," which when observed, goes far beyond the minimum observance of the Seven Laws of Noah. Hillel thus lays the halakhic groundwork for the salvation of all mankind, and Jesus concurs. Historically such an outreach to the non-Jewish nations was undertaken by Hillel and various Essenes in 20 B.C.E. in hopes of adverting the destruction of the Temple as prophesied by Daniel.

THE "SECOND MISSION" TO THE GENTILES...THE GREAT COMMISSION OF MATTHEW 28

Jesus would later command his Apostles to go into all the world and make disciples of all nations (the Gentiles). Inherent in this is the commandment for the Gentiles of all nations to adhere to the Laws of Noah as the basic minimum that God required for the gift of eternal life. It is in this message that a Gentile becomes a "God-Fearer", is immersed in Yeshua's name and identifies with his God, and is "Born-Again". He now is no longer a Gentile but is a "new-creation" and has become a citizen of the Israel of God. He has the option to later convert fully (circumcision) to the religion of Jesus if he so desires.

Once a Gentile came to the understanding of the one true God, he would turn from idols and worship the God of Israel. Such Gentiles were the "God fearers", who accepted certain basic Biblical and Jewish obligations along with the Noachide precepts. According to this, idolatry, shedding of blood, and grave sexual sins were forbidden to Gentile believers. These were originally the Noachide precepts accepted also by the Synagogue on which the Gentiles were obliged. Let me remind you that we see in Acts 15 (at least 25 years after the death of Jesus) the admonition for the Gentiles to adhere to Noachide Laws to be accepted in the believing community of Israel. James, the pastor of the Jerusalem Church, calls these Noachide Laws and Commandments "necessary" and mentions as well that they seemed good to the Messianic believers as well as the Holy Spirit in Acts 15. For me this puts Divine approval of the decision of the Church Council to impose these "necessary" things upon the non-Jews for acceptance into the Israel of God. It is logical that the Apostolic Church of Jerusalem should accept the view of the Synagogue on the conditions which Gentiles needed to fulfill in order to be saved. It can be easily shown that the fulfillment of other commandments of Judaism were not prohibited to Gentiles. On the contrary, the Noachide precepts were only seen as the minimum condition for Gentiles to be recognized as God-fearers. These were so understood by the God-fearers themselves, who were attracted to the Jewish way of life and accepted many Biblical and Jewish commandments without becoming full proselytes (Sabbath, festivals, etc). This was also the attitude of Christian "God-fearers", as may be seen from the Epistle to the Galatians; many of these Gentile believers wished to observe as many Jewish precepts as they could. It is evident that, while the leadership of the Mother Church decided to lay no burden upon the Gentile believers beyond the Noachide precepts, it did not object to their voluntarily observing more (Col. 2:16-17). Among the figures of the early Church who instructed Gentile Christians to observe more precepts than these essential ones was Peter, as we know from Paul's criticism of him for demanding that Gentiles live like Jews (Gal. 2:14). Rather than interpreting the apostolic decree as a minimum, Paul saw in the Noachide precepts the maximum obligations for Gentile Christians. Rather than Peter being incorrect, a more comprehensive understanding of the Bible reveals Paul to be incorrect (see Isa. 56 where God is pleased that the non-Jewish believer goes beyond the minimum).

SEPARATION IS INEVITABLE

The liberation of Gentile Christianity from the responsibility to the Biblical and Jewish commandments was a necessary step in order for Christianity to become a Gentile religion, separate from Judaism. It is impossible to know whether Paul was aware that by his "Gospel" he helped to achieve this aim in that he does not speak explicitly about the necessity of separating Christianity from its Jewish roots and he never says that this was his intention, but it is clear that in fact such was his historical role. Paul would later teach that the Jewish way of life in many aspects would had no validity for Christians, but the mother Church in Acts felt differently. For Christian "God-fearers" it was not easy to accept Paul's demand; the complete or partial rejection of Jewish precepts was for many Gentile Christian "God-Fearers" a painful operation. But if Christianity was to become a world religion it had to become "free from the Law". Only a Christian free from the law could separate himself from Judaism and embark upon a path that rejected the very tenants and foundations of Biblical Judaism; the religion of Jesus.

FULL CONVERSION AND THE GER TZEDEK

With the rise of Christianity the teachers of Israel sought to distinguish between the heathens of the past and those Gentiles who were subject to religious values and morality. The very term "Ger Tzedek" (righteous gentile) stands for the gentile who turned from idols and made a sincere conversion to the faith of Jesus in the first century. Such a person was respected and welcomed by the Jewish community. The "Ger Tzedek" submitted to circumcision, immersion, and brought a sacrifice to the temple. Upon completion of such, he was considered as "one born in the land." He had full status as a Jew.

PARTIAL CONVERSION AND THE GER HASHAR/GER TOSHAV

There are two other terms for righteous Gentiles: Ger Hashar, and Ger Toshav. In the Bible the Ger Hashar is seen as "the stranger in the gate", and the Ger Toshav was known as "the stranger in the land." These also accepted the faith of Israel (ethical monotheism) and were immersed, but withheld themselves from circumcision. Such "Righteous Gentiles" had a place in the world to come, and it was believed that in the age of the Messiah all Gentiles would come to recognize the one true God according to Zech 14:9.

LETS MAKE IT EASIER STILL SHALL WE?

Once the Ger Tzedek was accepted as a Jew, he was entitled to all the privileges that Jews born into the faith enjoyed. Such converts to Judaism were numerous before the rise of Christianity. Within Palestine and outside, wherever Jews came into contact with pagans, Judaism held a strong attraction. It was expected of the Gentile that given enough time, he would develop from the Ger Hashar to the Ger Tzedek (make a full conversion to Judaism). The later development of Christianity offered the attraction of monotheism and at the same time imposed fewer restrictions on its new adherents than did Judaism. Commencing with the fourth century, when Christianity became the official religion of the Roman Empire, Jews were restricted in their own worship and were no longer permitted to continue their missionary activity and we find the conversion of the Ger Hashar, Toshav and Tzedek dwindling. In spite of the peril to Jews and proselytes alike, we read throughout history of various instances where Christians joined the ranks of the oppressed Jews once they had been shown and taught the truth.

TRINITARIANSIM AND NOAHIDISM...WHAT IS THE TRUTH FOR THE CHRISTIAN?

Judaism ruled that Trinitarianism is not to be considered an idolatrous practice if adhered to by a Gentile, whereas it would be so if practiced by a Jew. The above opinion was rendered by R. Jacob Tam; an outstanding twelfth century Tosafist and grandson of Rashi. R. Tam expressed such a concept as within the idea of "Shittuf" (belief in God the Father, along with an additional deity). Such a belief is permitted to Gentiles (Christians) without them being considered idolaters by Jews and Judaism.

Traditional Christians believe in the divinity of Jesus, and many have even sought to convert Jews to this belief. This is not allowed for a Jew as it constitutes gross idolatry before HaShem. Gentile Christianity needs not make Jews idolators by spreading their own corrupt theologies. In this regard we can find only two occasions where Jesus is asking Jews to believe in him as the Son of God (notice I did not say as God the Father or God the Son):

- When healing a blind man in John 9:35.
- Before raising Lazarus from the dead in John 11:26.

A blind man was considered by the Talmud to be the equivalent of a dead person, and this had halakhic implications (a blind person was exempt from all the Commandments of the Torah). Thus he is exempt from the commandment requiring him to believe in only "one" God. It is believed that Jesus is introducing an halakhic concept here, namely, that Shittuf (Trinitarianism) is permitted in order to save a Jewish life (both the blind man and Lazarus were considered dead, exempt from idolatry as understood by normal Judaism, and could now believe in Jesus as God's Son for healing and life after death). For although the Talmud rules that a Jew must give his life rather than practice idolatry (murder and sexual immorality as well), Jesus would have interpreted this to apply to actual idolatry (worship of sun, rocks, fertility cults, etc.), or at least a lesser form of it. Such a belief in a second deity is permitted to Gentiles in Judaism, despite the Noahide Laws and their ban on idolatry. The ban on idolatry in Noahidism accepts Shittuf (it allows the belief in Jesus as God). Let me also note that the Messiah of God has a beginning and no end where as God has no beginning and no end. God created from Himself the Spirit of the Messiah before the foundation of the world to act as the redemptive aspect of God to man! This anointing has come upon many but on Jesus I believe unlike any other.

At the same time we must remember that even some Christians do not interpret Yeshua's references to himself as the Son of God, as an allusion to his divinity or equality with the Father.

WHO WERE THE LOST SHEEP OF ISRAEL?

In Matthew 10:5 Jesus informs us that he came to preach "only to the lost sheep of Israel." We can now understand that he wished his fellow Jews to accept Bet Hillel's view that Gentiles too merit salvation. Much Jewish suffering could have been avoided, including the Temple's destruction in the first century, had the Shammaites abandoned their hatred of the outside world and accepted Yeshua's message of love for God and your neighbor (the Gentile).

We can even see in Yeshua's statement to his disciples in Matt. 28:19 (the Great Commission), that following his death, they are to "make disciples of all the Nations (Gentiles).

In this we see Yeshua's love for the Gentile. Again Jesus is negating the views of Bet Shammai (which had poisoned the people of Israel with hatred for the non-Jews (Gentiles) after Hillel's death), while actually confirming Bet Hillel's position that the Gentiles too merit that the message of salvation be given to them.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF EARLY CHRISTIANITY...IT WAS JEWISH

Such a restoration of the Early Church's Belief System as taught and handed down by Jesus reveals to us what

"true Christianity" is to be all about. Gentile converts to Yeshua's movement within Judaism were first taught the "Noahide Laws" which consisted of laws on idolatry, blasphemy, unchastity, bloodletting, robbery, eating the flesh of still-living animals, and courts of justice.

Every Gentile entering the Jesus Movement was obligated to obey the Noahide Laws. In addition they adhered to the Ten Commandments. Besides remembering and keeping the Sabbath observance, they refraining from riotous living, they supported the Temple with the Temple 1/2 shekel tax (notice this is a "usage tax" and is not the tithe), and they observed and kept the Festivals of the Lord. They were not required to be circumcised, but they were required to observe the laws of Kosher and refrained from eating unclean foods in order to not become an obstacle that would prevent worshipping with the Jews and sharing Sabbath meals where they both partook of the Lord's Supper together, as well as share the Feasts and Festivals.

Answer for yourself: Has your church or Pastor taught you "THE" Faith Once Given To The Saints as I have shown you in this article?

Answer for yourself: If not, maybe you should look somewhere else where in truth the real message of Jesus is being taught? Shalom.

Now let us continue our studies into how Jesus teaches the "non-Jew" to get to Heaven.

HOW TO GET TO HEAVEN ACCORDING TO THE JEWISH CHRIST...DOES JESUS CORRECT CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE?

Disclaimer: It is important for the reader to understand that in this website, in comparing first century Judaism and the "pattern of worship" given to the "non-Jew" by God as well as unveiling of the historical truths concerning the non-Jewish "believer" in the first century against the later alterations and changes made to this "pattern of worship" by the emerging Roman Gentile Church of Rome in the 3rd century I will use a "literal-historical" approach to the "Jesus Story". If you have studied and ran across some of our other websites then you know that "the Christ" can be interpreted from 3 different perspectives down through recorded history: "mystical", "mythological", and "literal-historical". Only after one has spent a considerable time in dedicated and scholarly studies in such areas as Biblical Judaism, the Jewish Messiah and true Messianic prophecy as taken from the Hebrew Scriptures and not the later forged texts of Rome, comparative manuscript evidences, the history and origin of the Roman New Testament, the true origin and creation of the New Testament , the Gnostic Paul vs the falsified Roman Paul, the Essenes and their "literal godman", Ancient Wisdom literature, Jewish and Gentile Gnosticism, Egyptian religion and the ancient "Jesus Story" that beings with Ancient Egypt, Comparative religions, Astronomy and Astrotheology can he understand and be certain which two of the above three methods of interpretation of "the Christ" are accurate and factual. Again for purposes of comparing Judaism's truths vs Christianity's alterations of it over the early centuries and the implications that this holds for the "non-Jew" and "Godfearer" today then we adopt in this website and for all studies in this website a supposed "literal-historical" interpretation of "the Christ" as well as the Jesus of the New Testament. Only in so doing can we adequately contrast the truths of Judaism vs Christian theology and by so doing follow the lineage of these "Divine Truths" back down the corridors of history to the earliest Divine revelations given to mankind by the Creator which were intended for both "Gentiles" and "Jews" as well. You will, in time, come to see that there is a "Pattern" to the worship of God given all mankind in the beginning of recorded history of the race and this "pattern" can be traced throughout recorded history and will culminate with Biblical Judaism and will subsequently be destroyed in the 3rd century by the emerging antisemitic Roman Church. I will let you be the judge of the results of such studies and leave to the reader to draw the necessary conclusions as we attempt to compare Jewish and Christian theological perspectives all the while dealing with the "New Testament Jesus" in a "literal-historical" manner in order for such an accurate comparison to be done effectively. Craig Lyons M.Div.

Many people in the Gospel asked that very same question directly to Jesus and let's see what the reply was;

"And behold, one came up to him, saying, "Teacher, what good deed must I do, to have eternal life?"

"And he said to him, "Why do you ask me about what is good? One there is who is good. If you would enter life, keep the commandments." Matthew 19:16-17

Here according to Jesus, to enter Heaven, we follow the commandments.

Answer For Yourself: A question to the Christians is: why would Jesus mislead this man if the only way to heaven was through the blood of Jesus? Surely Jesus would know that later "some" of his followers would teach that we no longer are under Law (Commandments) but grace as Paul would teach in Rom 6:14:14 For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace?

Answer For Yourself: Was Jesus misleading this man by teaching that Works will open the Gates of Heaven?

CAN WE BELIEVE WHAT WE READ WITHOUT STUDY?

"Blessed are those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 5:10

Answer For Yourself: Is Jesus in this verse saying that those who are persecuted for living life devoted to righteousness and who are possibly martyred will go to Heaven and those who die and suffer for a good cause will go to Heaven? NO

According to Thayer's Greek Lexicon...the word for RIGHTEOUSNESS:

- 1) to make to run or flee, to put to flight, to drive away
- 2) to run swiftly in order to catch a person or thing, to run after
- a) to press on: figuratively, used of one who in a race runs swiftly to reach the goal
- b) to pursue (in a hostile manner)
- 3) in any way whatever to harass, to trouble, to molest one
- a) to persecute
- b) to be mistreated, to suffer persecution on account of something
- 4) without the idea of hostility, to run after, to follow after someone or something
- 5) metaphorically, to pursue, to seek after eagerly, earnestly endeavor to acquire

Often words have more than one meaning as in this case so one must look at the context of the passages before and after the questionable one to clarity meaning. In the Sermon on the Mount Jesus' theme is holy and righteous living that elevates man toward God. Martyrdom has nothing to do with it but since asceticism is the backbone of Roman Catholicism and they controlled the Greek manuscripts that would later make up the New Testament they made sure their doctrines replaced the meanings Jesus intended when it suited their purpose. No greater example can be found than this for as you can see the meaning intended by Jesus is:

- to run swiftly in order to catch a person or thing, to run after
- to press on: figuratively, used of one who in a race runs swiftly to reach the goal
- without the idea of hostility, to run after, to follow after someone or something
- metaphorically, to pursue, to seek after eagerly, earnestly endeavor to acquire

As you can see Jesus is teaching that those who pursue, seek swiftly after, sets as a goal a righteous live, and who earnestly endeavor to acquire righteousness are those BLESSED OF GOD!

WHAT IS THIS "RIGHEOUSNESS" THAT WE ARE TO RUN SWIFTLY AFTER TO OBTAIN?

We need only to again look at Thayer's Greek Lexicon for the answer as we examine the Greek word used which means:

1343 dikaiosune-

- 1) in a broad sense: state of him who is as he ought to be, righteousness, the condition acceptable to God
- a) the doctrine concerning the way in which man may attain a state approved of God
- b) integrity, virtue, purity of life, rightness, correctness of thinking feeling, and acting
- 2) in a narrower sense, justice or the virtue which gives each his due

Answer For Yourself: Is Jesus teaching that there is a "way" in which man can attain a state of approval with God and, according to Jesus, that way is the way or "righteousness"? WOW! Why doesn't Jesus make mention of the Cardinal religious doctrines which will later be formed around him and his life that his later Gentile followers will teach as necessary for Eternal Life and the Kingdom of God like "belief" in his death, his resurrection, or this death as a sacrifice for one's sin? Is it not puzzling that directly from the mouth of Jesus we find no such "teachings" recorded in all his sayings in the New Testament? Could it be that the message of salvation taught by Jesus is not the one the Gentile Church would later teach in his name?

The answers for the above questions are both easy and difficult. Unless one has done some considerable study in comparative religions of the non-Jewish nations and their influence upon certain "sects" within Judaism then one is incapable of seeing that the "salvation message" as taught by the non-Jews in Jesus' name is nothing more than the replaying of the Osirian legend; the only things new is that the doctrines surrounding Osiris are applied to Jesus. You might not want to know this, admit this, or accept this. That is "ok" by us at Bet Emet, by your denial of this does not change the fact THAT THIS PLAGIARISM BY THE GENTILE BELIEVERS IN JESUS EXISTS AND IT IS IN DIRECT OPPOSITION TO WHAT JESUS TAUGHT HIMSELF AS THE WAY OF SALVATION FOR THE WORLD.

Answer For Yourself: According to the certain selected passage, as recorded in the New Testament, are we led to believe otherwise than a way of live lived in obedience to the Commandments of God culminating in a life of righteousness as the way of Eternal Life? We sure are!

Answer For Yourself: And is Jesus again being misleading since all Christians claim that the one and only way to Heaven is through the blood of Jesus as the church teaches since Jesus was persecuted and killed?

A LAWYER ASKS A VERY IMPORTANT QUESTION.....HOW TO ENTER HEAVEN

And behold, a lawyer stood up to put him to the test, saying, "Teacher, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?"

Jesus said "What is written in the law? How do you read?"

And he answered, "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your strength, and with all your mind; and your neighbor as yourself."

And he said to him, "You have answered right; do this, and you will live." Luke 10:25-28

The lawyer asked the teacher Jesus how to have eternal life and Jesus replied "Read"... "The Law"..... "Obey the Law" believe in God and love your neighbor.

Answer For Yourself: Why in front of all these people would Jesus not tell them the so-called "only way that the Christians of today are saying" as the way to Heaven..." no way to heaven except through the blood of Jesus", why would Jesus contradict today's Christians and Pastors? Could we innocently be incorrect in what we believe because we have been taught in error because the document we look to for "salvation" has been corrupted from the Eternal Truths such a document should have contained?

Answer For Yourself: Are Christians freed from the Law as the modern Christians teach?

"Whoever then relaxes one of the least of these commandments and teaches men so, shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven; but he who does them and teaches them shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 5:19

Answer For Yourself: Why would Jesus teach this if he came so that his blood can relax the Law, why is it when he was on earth, he taught not to relax the Law? And notice Jesus says that those who follow the Laws will be the Highest in Heaven.

"Not every one who says to me, 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of my Father who is I heaven." Matthew 7:21

Answer For Yourself: Salvation according to some Christians comes from taking Jesus as your god and accepting the claimed blood sacrifice, while on the other hand, Jesus seems to be saying the opposite. Why is that?

Answer For Yourself: Aren't Christians supposed to follow the Teachings of Jesus?

Answer For Yourself: As far as Salvation is concerned, many over the world, in other religions no less, are following the Teachings of Jesus better than most Christians, why haven't the Christians started yet?

"For whoever does the will of my Father in heaven is my brother, and sister, and mother." (Mark 3:35) If Jesus is god, why would he claim that who ever follows the Commandments would be the brother or mother of god ?

Answer For Yourself: What does being a brother or mother of God mean? Try examples of those who are in RELATIONSHIP (in this instance relationship with God)!

"Jesus said to him, "If you would be perfect, go, sell what you possess and give to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven; and come, follow me." Matthew 19:21

Jesus said that having treasure in Heaven is accomplished by "giving to directly to the Poor." Jesus is Teaching Piety to Enter Heaven.

"Again I tell you, it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God." Matthew 19:24

This Verse was very revealing to me, Jesus is repeatedly saying, a rich man will not enter Heaven.

Some Christians of today claim that Jesus died for all sins, yet Jesus repeatedly taught that greed will prevent you from entering Heaven.

Answer For Yourself: What about those Christians who are rich? Aren't they saved according to the 10% that they give their church? Remembering Jesus mandate to obey the Commandments of God for Eternal Life, it is not very comforting to learn that the vast majority of Christian Churches which collect the Tithe violate the Commandments regarding Tithing in the way they collect it and how they allocate the funds. In reality they are robbing God by not using the funds collected in the prescribed manners as commanded in the Law. That makes the givers accessories to robbing God as they give to institutions which do not themselves obey the Commandments of God in this regard. Make no mistake about it this is a violation of the Commandments which Jesus already said are necessary to inherit Eternal Life since the Church never used the funds collected in the percentages required by the Commandments which say where the moneys collected are to be used and allocated. Such is robbery of God and few know it! It will be a terrible thing to wake up "dead" one day and find out that all the money you gave to your church financing the "Kingdom of God" did just the opposite and your introduction to God will be as a robber and one who thwarted the Kingdom of Heaven with each check you wrote to your church!

THE TRADITIONAL CHRISTIAN MESSAGE OF SALVATION

Now according to the vast majority of Christian Churches and Christians of modern day, who ever believes in the blood of Jesus, believes in his resurrection and lordship, and accepts Jesus as god, then that is the only way that person is saved, not through works.

Rom 10:9 9 That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. (KJV)

I must say this is a very "convenient" passage in the New Testament that makes "salvation" so easy; all you have to do to be saved and inherit Eternal Life according to Paul is simply "believe in Jesus," or in a certain doctrine about him; in this case just believe and say that you believe that Jesus was raised from the dead and that makes him Lord then you have received the most precious gift God can give...Eternal Life.

There is but one MAJOR problem with the above verse.

This "convenient verse" cannot be found in the earliest New Testament manuscripts; in fact it is absent in the first New Testament collected by Marcion in and around 150 A.D. In fact, this "convenient verse" does not show up until we reach the second century and then "poof" we have it. I guess Paul was on "life supports" in order to write this verse some 150 years following his death. The attempted humor is to offset the tragic implications that one who is equipped with the facts must realize. The New Testament, in places, is a concoction of religious jargon that has gone a long way to destroy the truth of the faith of Jesus and what he actually taught and believed himself concerning the way of God. Oh my friends, the tragedy of this is our love for God is often compromised by lies taught as truth. Discernment is the key and this comes with a price; much study and knowledge must be amassed before one can find his way through this maze of conflicting religious doctrines in this supposed "Divine" revelation called the New Testament. Oh, by the way, one does not find Romans chapter 9, 10, or 11 till the second century as well, and remember is is there we find "Israel" blinded by God to truth. Again, so convenient to blaspheme the whole of Jesus' people as untrustworthy and incapable of teaching the non-Jews about God in light that they are Eternally called to do so as the "light of the world."

Now let's see if Jesus again contradicts the church;

"Truly, truly, I say to you, he who hears my word and believes Him who sent me, has eternal life; he does not come into judgment, but has passed from death to life." John 5:24

It is clear that according to Jesus the way to Heaven is to believe in God (who Sent Jesus) and to hear (follow) the words of Jesus (which happen to be G-d's words) and not the words of the later Gentile Church which is filled with anti-Semitism, so much so that they will change the whole of the salvation message and pretend it was given by God in their altered and forged documents which today find their way into the collection called the New Testament.

Answer For Yourself: Does Jesus want us to believe in his blood or to believe that he and his message is from God?

"Jesus said to them, "I am the bread of life; he who comes to me shall not hunger, and he who believes in me shall never thirst. John 6:35

Therefore Jesus is telling them that if they believe in him (While he was Alive) that they will receive paradise.

"Truly, truly, I say to you, he who believes in me will also do the works that I do; and greater works than these will he do, because I go to the Father." John 14:12

Truly, Honestly, I give you my Word Jesus Says: the Human who does Works as I do (Jesus followed the Laws of Moses) then that human will follow me to the Father (God).

"Again Jesus spoke to them, saying, "I am the light of the world; he who follows me will not walk in darkness, but will have the light of life." John 8:12

Answer For Yourself: What does a light do? it guides, directs, it shows you the Right Path, A light does not symbolize one to be sacrificed, but instead, one to Guide.

Therefore I am Puzzled as to why Jesus would name off all these specific teachings and keys to enter Heaven except the one that the Christians teach (his blood). Are you?

According to Jesus, all men are blessed and will be in Heaven because they believe God sent Jesus and they follow works (which is nothing more than the Commandments of God actualized and lived out practically and concretely), I pray that Christians will at least follow the words of Jesus and may "his teachings" lead them to Truth.

ARE YOU SAVED BY WORKS? NO....FAITH AND WORKS

This is not to say that we can work our way into Heaven which is a common misunderstanding of Christians. But faith in God. a living faith that obeys, coupled with the knowledge of the Commandments of God, as aspects of Covenant responsibility, as well as obedience to them, are required to inherit Eternal Life according to Jesus. Paul taught otherwise.

You have to decide who you are going to believe; Jesus or Paul. The problem is the corruption of the documents which report to be Divine Revelation and within this New Testament document we have differences and conflicting doctrines on Eternal Life as taught by Paul and by Jesus. Often I hear some say "you are wrong, they don't conflict." Let me say that only betrays the shallowness of one's study; again one might deny, or refuse to admit, or even study such things out, but my justification is that one can never disprove it for in-depth and objective study will reveal it to the honest seeker. The facts are that these documents comprising the New Testament have been altered from the original "mind of Christ" and are not a true picture of the events recorded to the teachings held by the original followers of Jesus. But you have to study this out to see. So hopefully you will do that.

This is to clarify that we can not be saved by Faith alone, even in religious doctrines about the life of Jesus as interpreted by the Gentile Church to inherit Eternal Life; nor can salvation be obtained by adhering or accepting this or that doctrine about Jesus which is nothing but the fruit of Catholic debates over the centuries as they hammered out their own version of Osirian Christology and applied that to Jesus. Again, according to Jesus, our way to Heaven is to obey those Laws of Moses respective of our Covenant to inherit Eternal Life. For the non-Jew he must realize that within these 613 Laws of Moses one finds the residue of a prior Covenant containing 66 Commandments for non-Jews. It is called the Covenant of Noah. That is where the non-Jew must start and hopefully graduating with the knowledge of Isa 56 that he can choose to take upon himself other Commandments and Sabbaths of the the LORD to demonstrate his love for God. Such is love my friend. A love that obeys and reaches out for the righteousness which only comes as fruit from Commandment obeyed and not "passed away" by some new religious interpretation by the anti-Semitic church of yesteryear.

It is said well by Jesus's younger brother and disciple (James) who said; "Faith without works is Dead" {Jas 2:26}

Answer For Yourself: Have you fallen into the deception of death faith?

It is time for serious study to recover the truths about the Historical Jesus, as well as the corruption of the New Testament as a fraudulent representation of the true faith of Jesus before it is too late. What we at Bet Emet will hope you will do is begin a serious study of the early Faith Once Given To The Saints and if you do, then you will discover, as have thousands who have read our Ministry, as well as others, how the New Testament was corrupted by Gentile sun-worshippers who today are called Early Church Fathers and how the oral traditions and manuscripts were altered and passed down to the unsuspecting like you and me today. We have inherited "lies" passed off as religious truths because we accept without question a document which is blend of pagan sun worship in many doctrines, many of which have been passed off as divine truth. Basically, the New Testament is nothing but a re-hash of Osiris and the original G-dman Savior replayed through the life of a Jewish Rabbi. Every Gentile nation has one almost and the many of the doctrines of the New Testament can be traced directly back through successive Gentile nations whereby you can see this for yourself. Surely Jesus is more than a replay of Egyptian Sun Worship.

Answer for yourself: If Jesus is sent by God, and he came to die and his blood was to redeem as parts of the New Testament says as the way to inherit Eternal Life, then why come at all as many pagan myths existed where this was done before prior to Jesus by a whole host of crucified g-dmen? Why come at all if he has nothing new to offer?

Surely Jesus' ministry was a correction to the status-quo and a hope for the non-Jewish world caught up in such false worship!

I got news for you. Little has changed in the non-Jewish world. Sun-myths reign in 2.5 billion of the world's population today. They are called Christians. Now it is up to you to see if what I have said is true. Sadly, if you look you will find such deceptions in the texts you believe to be Divine and Infallible in the New Testament once you undertake such a serious study. Have faith and above all have courage for the truth can be recovered. You just read it in the mouth of Jesus. But not all who are portrayed with a message from God in the New Testament have one! But understand the faith and beliefs of the historical Jesus stand apart from vicarious atonement and many of the doctrines of Paul and the Church. Many will try to read vicarious atonement" into texts and even alter them to suit their purpose. You can begin with Isa. 53 which the scholars say the Essenes worked over more than any texts they had! That is why the Isaiah in the Christian Bible, for the Septuagint, reads COMPLETELY different from the Isaiah in the Jewish Tanakh! The Essenes to which many look to day for hidden truth developed into little more than sun-worshippers in the days of Jesus in rejection of Judaism toto. Their alteration of the Tanakh proves a different theological agenda from the Jews in Jerusalem. Basically in closing, you have to make a big decision and decide if you want to be a follower of Jesus or a follower of the other doctrines of the New Testament which contradict Jesus' message on how to obtain Eternal Life. The choice is yours. Shalom.

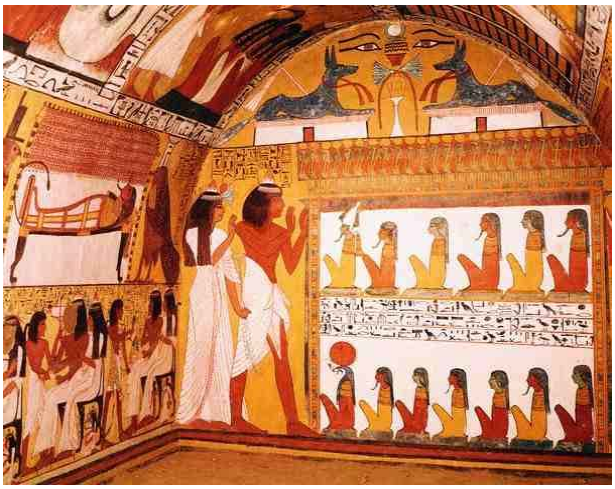
THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #3



We need to say a few more things about this "Pattern in the Mount" that is captured by the planisphere and Uranograph as understood by the Ancients. We have looked at a few examples in the previous articles to give the reader an idea of the phenomena. We are just getting our "feet wet". Our subject in this series of articles is the Divine Concept of Uranography.

Answer for yourself: What again is Uranography?

Uranography, meaning “to draw the heavens”, is the art and science of mapping and charting the Universe. It is the astronomical analog of cartography, the art and science of mapping and charting the Earth. The term uranography comes from Uranus, who - in classical mythology - was the heavens personified. But yet it is more; especially when this "map of the Heavens" is transplanted to Earth in man-made alterations to the physical land and geography in order to make the "land" conform to the "image of the Sky". It is much more when structures are built upon the Earth that are "exact replicas" of the "image of Heaven above". It is much, much more when the very Divine Truths imaged above in the Sky and Heaven descend to Earth into the hearts and minds of mankind where there they birth the "theologies" that catalyze the Spiritual development of mankind's Soul.

Let us not forget that Ancient Egypt and Israel, to a lesser extent, adapted the Uranograph, the map of the Heavens, to not only their national geography, but their religious architecture and their respective nation's theology. As we are seeing, one article at a time the Ancient nation of Egypt endeavored to depict the structure of the Logos, the pattern or creative evolution, the essential constitution of the Universe and the course of the current of life in the Cosmos, and by analogy in man, the microcosmic replica of the macrocosm, not only in their religious beliefs but in their architecture as it applied to both Temples and Pyramids. It is a fact today beyond all doubt that Ancient Egypt built their Temples and Pyramids in strict relation to Stars; thus indicating a wealth of astronomical knowledge. In many of these Temples we have found Zodiacs. At the beginning of this century not a sign on any of these Ancient Egyptian monuments was understood and now the wonderful genius of a small number of researchers has enabled Egyptologists to read the inscriptions with almost as much ease and certainty that we read our morning papers. We even have found Zodiacs in the floors of ancient synagogues in Israel as well. At the heart of all religions is the Heavenly concept of the Uranograph whether we know it or not. And when you think about it for some time it sure seems to make sense. If you are in a "religion" that teaches that when you die that you "go to Heaven" then it makes sense that we should know about Heaven while we are alive here in our Earthly existence. Ancient Egypt understood this and studied the Heavens intently for thousands of years and came to possess unbelievable wisdom and knowledge of Heaven; so much in fact that Egypt came to be known as the "Image of Heaven" and "Heaven's Mirror".

The Uranograph, or chart of the skies, was incontestably the first of all Bibles, pictorially edited and Egypt gave the world the first one; it is called today the The Chapters of Coming Forth by Day or as it is more commonly known the Egyptian Book of the Dead. It is not easy for the unlearned or non-initiated into such knowledge to read and grasp the ideas of which these books speak or what these articles entail. It is only when one begins a personal study into this area that one's "eyes, mind, and heart" is opened to the glorious revelations that come from such knowledge. He sees, once obtaining and possessing the "keys" to the symbolic lexicon of ancient writing, that all Bibles are but amplifications and elaborations of the original volume of ideography that was first written on the open slate of the Starry Sky, then charted in the Zodiac and the Zodiacs and Planispheres which were carved and painted on the walls and ceilings of ancient Egyptian Temples and later transferred to earth and inscribed in scrolls, tablets and parchments. Man, commanded by his own ancient Scriptures, was to fashion his new body of spiritual glory "after the Pattern of the Heavens," the frame of the Heavenly or Zodiacal man, the primal Adam; the image of which is written in the Stars and Constellation's of God's Heaven. Ultimately, the student must eventually begin sincerely researching Astro-Theology, the subject of subjects. Astro-Theology, the "Religion of the Stars," is also called siderealism, sabeanism and Uranography. It is from this great subject that common astrology and astronomy derive. Any study of these cannot, in any way, be complete without comprehension of their parent: Astro-Theology.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Matthew chapter 1 through Matthew chapter 28 in the New Testament can be shown to be but the personification of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac and the 12 Constellations (Houses) and that the whole life of Jesus, as in our "Jesus Story", is but this personification of the Cosmic Energy of the Cosmos, as the "Fire of God", the Soul, in its path and evolution through this physical existence? This is Astro-Theology at its best. But without the "keys" to correctly understand such "personification" and the use of "anthropomorphism" when reading the "Jesus Story" we are blinded by our conditioning to accept all we read as if "historical-literal" when in fact it is not which is easily provable today with a little study in areas like Gnosticism, Philosophy, Egyptian Religion, Comparative Religions, Judaism, and the corruption of the New Testament when compared to its original "Gnostic Roots". Understand that anthropomorphism goes hand in hand with personification and personification of the Sun lies at the very foundation for almost all world religions one way or the other. But again know and understand that this "Jesus Story", or really this "Horus Story" was never to be understood originally as if were about some "historical person"; it was Divine Allegory, God's love story to you and me since it concerns itself only with the Descent of the Soul (personified as Horus, Jesus) into matter (you and me) and the path for our Soul's intended Spiritual development and maturation while in these bodies of "death" and flesh. We will deal with this idea of the Souls "Descent" into "death" later as our studies advance. No wonder Paul admonishes those to whom he preached to: "...Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, ...) Eph 5:14 14.

In the previous articles on "Uranography" we have only scratched the surface of what lies behind our Bibles. The total scope of this in our Bibles knows no limits. The distinctive features of this cosmograph and Uranograph as the foundation for our Christian Bible and others nation's Spiritual epics are in evidence in the Ancient Wisdom when traced down through history from nation to nation. There are common characteristics that are repeated in most of these Uranographs as found in nation after nation. This should be expected since we are dealing with a "Pattern" in the first place which is to be "repeated" by mankind the world over. Thus the repetition of "the Pattern" from nation to nation is found in religious epic after religious epic in the stories we read on page to page of these "Spiritual" treatises and Bibles we cherish. Let me give the reader a short summary of the outline of Uranography:

- Unknown to most Christians is the fact that in every religious epic there is first and foremost always a central Holy City, a Spiritual City, a "Jerusalem" of sorts; a residence of the king and the eventual home of all the King's subjects and elect. This "Holy City" has a "Heavenly counterpart" and an "Earthly counterpart"; So Above, So below.
- Along with this there exists an Upper and Lower Land understood at first geographically. As Heaven is divided in half by the Milky Way so is the nation as a copy of "Heaven" also divided in "half". We see this perfectly in "Upper Egypt" and "Lower Egypt". We see this in Israel with the "Northern Tribes" and the "Southern Tribes". This "Pattern" is extended and make applicable to mankind, the microcosm of the macrocosm. Therefore we find that mankind also is divided in half: a natural animal nature and a spiritual nature, a "Lower Nature" and a "Upper Nature". But yet it was much more since such a division was but a typifying of the dual segmentation of Heaven and earth, Invisible and Visible, Spirit and Soul/body, or the two natures in mankind (Spiritual and flesh). We see this perfectly in Upper and Lower Egypt as well as the division of the 12 Tribes in Israel into Norther Israel (Ephriam) and Southern Israel (Benjamin and Judah).

- It is the purpose of these two natures to be blended in a harmony and unified into one whereby the Upper Egypt (Spirit) conquers the Lower Egypt (flesh). This happens in the mythos as well as in history. We see the Egypt was unified in about 3,400 B.C.E. when the two kingdoms were subjugated when Menes unified Egypt. But this was said of almost all subsequent Pharaohs who were called "the unifiers" of Egypt. Such a statement betrays the Mythos taken for supposed "literal history". This repetition of the "unification" of Egypt, Upper and Lower Egypt, over and over again under successive Pharaohs speak of the validity of the mythos over "literal-historical" persons who supposedly actually did the same things. The same can be said for the unification of Israel under King David. Through alliances and treaties, David unifies the Hebrew tribes into a kingdom. The mythos is fulfilled.
- The two sections or lands seem to be always connected by a river, rising in the higher mountainous sources in the Upper Kingdom and flowing down to the Lower Kingdom, carrying its blessings of fertility, down into the Lower Kingdom, which is thus nourished by the living waters from above. The "Pattern in the Mount" is to descend down to the Lower kingdoms of manifestations. Behind this "Pattern" is the Spiritual idea the Spirit-Soul descends from Heaven "Above" into "Lower" manifestations of matter and being and expresses its Divine Life on these lower levels in various manifestations of "incarnations" and Emanations. This river of Deific Life has many names but the Nile is the most familiar as connected with Egypt. Israel's river that splits and divides the nation just like the Nile in Egypt is the of course called the Jordan. Both of these rivers are found in thy Sky and Heavens and were connected with Eridanus.
- Then there seems to always be a bordering sea, symbolical in every case of the stormy short-living scene of the mortal life. This storm over the waters had to be quelled if the Spirit was to ever master the animal nature within the Temple in which he lives (our animal natures and body). Likewise there seems to also be a smaller body of water, a lake, a Sea of Galilee, a Dead Sea, a Black Sea, a Red Sea, a Jordan River, a Styx River, etc., which were to be crossed by the voyaging Soul to reach the more blessed isles on the other shore. Of course these "names" were given "terrestrially" after the names were recognized "celestially".
- There was a further division of the land into smaller sections. We see seven tribal provinces, a heptarchy or heptanomis, as in Egypt, Judea, England and elsewhere. This division was representative of the seven kingdoms of nature, the seven stages of unfoldment through which life must pass in the completion of every cycle. At other times the division was a decad (ten), after the pattern of the Sephirothal Tree of the Kabbalah, but eventually redistributed in twelve sections, as in the case of the Hebrews, Athens, Afghanistan and some others, reflecting the twelvefold segmentation of the Zodiac, which in turn typified the twelve levels of man's evolutionary attainment, or "twelve manner of fruits" on the branches of the Tree of Life, the twelve divine elements of man's perfected being.
- Likewise there was always a definite locality designated as the birthplace of the god, which was in many but not all instances also was the place of death and burial and following resurrection.
- Other centers marked the scene of the Solar Christ's initiations, temptations, baptisms, trials, crucifixion and transfiguration, etc. Every stage of the Krst's/Karest's/Christ's evolutionary experience was to have an Earthy counterpart. Everything was "celestial" before it became "terrestrial".
- Likewise we find that there were cities dedicated to the special cult of the Sun, the moon, and even such Stars as Orion, the stellar symbol of the Christos; or of Sirius, the great Dog-Star, symbol of the advent. Sirius was the birth star of the baby Christ Jesus that represent the 3 Stars in Orion's belt, or as we were told the 3 wise men who supposedly followed to the manger where the Christ child was to be born. Horus was born of Isis, returning to avenge his father's death at the hands of Set. Horus appears to be associated with the Messianic Star, appearing by Sirius.

- The four cardinal points were featured, as emblematic of the four pillars of man's constitution, his physical, emotional, mental and spiritual bodies and natures. Also the 4 cardinal points referred to the Four Sons of Horus who were traditionally the guardians of the internal organs of the deceased. Each was associated with a particular organ, and also with a different cardinal point on the compass. Solar and stellar symbolism have profoundly affected the Christian religion. For instance, in the Apocalypse, we read of the Four Beasts and the Four Horsemen. Taken literally the narrative does not make sense, but when we learn that the beasts are zodiacal constellations and the horsemen, planets, we get a much clearer perception of the matter. In Revelation 4:7, we read that: And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle. These animals were the constellations that were situated at the four cardinal points of the Zodiac five thousand years ago. They were:
 - Taurus the Bull (Vernal Equinox),
 - Leo the Lion (Summer Solstice),
 - Scorpio the Scorpion (Autumnal Equinox), and
 - Aquarius the Waterman (Winter Solstice).
- The reader will hopefully notice that in the Bible the Eagle has been substituted for the Scorpion. According to Sir Godfrey Higgins: The signs of the Zodiac, with the exception of the Scorpion, which was exchanged by Dan for the Eagle, were carried by the different tribes of the Israelites on their standards (12 tribes, 12 standards, 12 Houses in the Zodiac); and Taurus, Leo, Aquarius, and Scorpio of the Eagle, the four signs of Reuben, Judah, Ephraim, and Dan, were placed at the four corners—the four cardinal points—of their encampment, evidently in allusion to the cardinal points of the sphere, the equinoxes and solstices, …(Higgins, Anacalypsis, vol. 2, p. 105). The book Anacalypsis by the way is a fantastic book that helps the reader find the truth behind the religious myths we are sold today in Christianity as supposed "literal-historical" narratives which are required to be "believed" in order to "go to Heaven".
- A warfare between the Upper and Lower Lands and their kings was generally a part of the "history," ending in the conquest of the Lower by the Higher (the Lower nature is conquered by the Higher/Spiritual Nature) and the union of the two under the crown of dual sovereignty. This drama was enacted so often in the "history" of so many kings of Egypt that even a scholar of the eminence of the late William H. Breasted, in his History of Egypt, expresses his puzzlement over the fact that nearly every Pharaoh of the dynasties had to conquer Lower Egypt afresh and unite the two halves of the country under a common hegemony!

When one take all of the above into consideration the word "coincidence" fails to come to the mind of the "thinking believer". Common to all of these is the Cosmic symbolism that was first recognized in the Heavens and the Sky and then later translated to earth in architecture and in various theologies as well as the nation's geographical names of cities and the like. Even the Days of the week are named for the Gods of the various planets, moon and Sun. The "Pattern in the Mount" has come to Heaven and exists all around us today; it exits in Nature, in architecture, in religions, etc. It is truly sad that we are oblivious to most of it. Such is the fruit of a "Literalistic Christianity" which rejected its Egyptian and Jewish Roots over 2,000 years ago.

Moses understood this "Pattern in the Mount". The Bible gives indication that Moses was caught up in the Shekinah of God in verses such as Exodus 24:15-18. While in the presence of God (in Heaven?) Moses was shown heavenly items to which he was to use as the pattern for their earthly counterparts:

Exodus 25:8-9 - "And let them make Me a sanctuary that I may dwell among them. According to the pattern of the pattern of the tabernacle and the pattern of all its furnishings, just so you shall make it."

The book of Hebrews attests to the same thing:

Hebrews 8:5 - "... who serve the copy and shadow of the heavenly things, as Moses was divinely instructed when he was about to make the Tabernacle. For He said 'See that you make all things according to the pattern shown you on the mountain'."

Extra-Biblical Jewish writings state that the Tabernacle and its furnishings/implements are indeed an image of what is in heaven:

- Soncino Zohar, Shemoth, Section 2, Page 149a - "... the structure of the Tabernacle corresponds to the structure of heaven and earth."
- Soncino Zohar, Shemoth, Section 2, Page 231a - "Now, the Tabernacle below was likewise made after the pattern of the supernal Tabernacle in all its details. For the Tabernacle in all its works embraced all the works and achievements of the upper world and the lower, whereby the Shekinah was made to abide in the world, both in the higher spheres and the lower. Similarly, the Lower Paradise is made after the pattern of the Upper Paradise, and the latter contains all the varieties of forms and images to be found in the former. Hence the work of the Tabernacle, and that of heaven and earth, come under one and the same mystery."
- Soncino Zohar, Shemoth, Section 2, Page 235b - "Now, the lower and earthly Tabernacle was the counterpart of the upper Tabernacle, whilst the latter in its turn is the counterpart of a higher Tabernacle, the most high of all. All of them, however, are implied within each other and form one complete whole, as it says: "that the tabernacle may be one whole" (Ex. XXVI, 6). The Tabernacle was erected by Moses, he alone being allowed to raise it up, as only a husband may raise up his wife. With the erection of the lower Tabernacle there was erected another Tabernacle on high. This is indicated in the words "the tabernacle was reared up (hukam)" (Ex. XL, 17), reared up, that is, by the hand of no man, but as out of the supernal undisclosed mystery in response to the mystical force indwelling in Moses that it might be perfected with him."
- Menacoth 29a - "It was taught: R. Jose b. Judah says, An ark of fire and a table of fire and a candlestick of fire came down from heaven; and these Moses saw and reproduced, as it is written, And see that thou make them after their pattern, which is being shown thee in the mount. Will you then say the same [of the tabernacle], for it is written, And thou shalt rear up the tabernacle according to the fashion thereof which hath been shown thee in the mount! — Here it is written 'according to the fashion thereof', whilst there 'after their pattern'."

The same concept is found when speaking of the first Temple. Here David receives the heavenly design idea and passes it along to his son Solomon, whom God had chosen to do the building:

- Soncino Zohar, Shemoth, Section 2, Page 164a - Then he began to expound to them this verse: A song of degrees for Solomon (li-shelomoh). Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it; except the Lord guard the city, the watchman waketh but in vain (Ps. CXXVII, 1-2). Said he: 'Was it Solomon who composed this Psalm when he built the Temple? (for li-shelomoh could be understood to mean "of Solomon"). Not so. It was King David who composed it, about his son Solomon, when Nathan came to him (David) and told him that Solomon would build the Temple. Then King David showed unto his son Solomon, as a model, the celestial prototype of the Temple, and David himself, when he saw it and all the activities connected with it, as set forth in the celestial idea of it, sang this psalm concerning his son Solomon.

Jewish literature has a lot to say about the heavenly Temple, including numerous references to a mysterious figure known as "Metatron," who is given such an exalted position, that at times he is even "confused" with God Himself. This Metatron figure bears a great likeness to "the Krst/Karest/Christ". Moses was commanded to execute a plan which had a prior Heavenly existence. This comes through in other sources in the Bible where the plan is communicated from a writing from the hand of God - in Chronicles, for example. The notion you need to see is that there exists a "Preexistence Idea", a "Preexistent Thought", or plan for mankind and his Soul which is to be "recognized Above" and "constructed Below"; both "physically" and "Spiritually".

There is nothing in this universe apart from God. God is present at every point of the universe and can be approached and experienced at every such point and, though the Deity is no doubt infinitely greater than the universe which is His creation, every part and particle of that Universe, from the tiniest atom to the mightiest planet, is essentially, entirely and thoroughly Divine. In all likelihood the physiography and organic structure of the Heavenly man was to some extent copied in the distribution and construction of Pyramids, Tombs, Temples and other sanctuaries, and the Pyramids themselves were quite obviously Astronomical Graphs with ceremonial design and conformations.

The celestial typology was as we have seen above in this and earlier articles was engrafted on the topography of the country itself. One quick example are the 3 Pyramids on the Giza Plateau which correspond to the 3 Stars in the belt of Orion, the Soul ascended to Heaven. As we mentioned before the relative sizes, and detailed positioning of the Giza pyramids are a faithful mimicry of the Stars forming the 'belt' in the constellation of Orion. In addition, the supposed "air shafts" in the Pyramids actually pointed directly towards Orion, apparently with the aim of projecting the Soul of the deceased king out towards the constellation Orion where many scientists believe today might exist a "hole in Heaven", a portal or "stargate" that might be the "Duat" of which Egypt spoke, the "Highway in Heaven for the Soul".

"Do you not know, Asclepius, that Egypt is an image of heaven or, to be more precise, that everything governed and moved in heaven came down to Egypt and was transferred there? If truth were told, our land is the temple of the whole world" (Asclepius III 24-26).

Written by Robert Bauval and Adrian Gilbert, The Orion Mystery: Unlocking the Secrets of the Pyramids, postulates that many, if not all, of the pyramids of Giza were conceived as part of a unified design that sought to map the "Duat," or heavens, and specifically the constellations of Orion and the Hyades, onto the plains of Giza. The Orion hypothesis has its roots in Bauval's initial observation regarding the curious misalignment of Menkaura's pyramid in relation to those of Khufu and Khafra and from his re-examination of a series of wall paintings, known collectively as "The Pyramid Texts," that were discovered over a century ago inside one of the pyramids at Saqqara. According to Bauval's reinterpretation of these texts, the Egyptian religion was, at its outset, a religion based in the Stars. the pyramids were an ambitious attempt to map the heavens onto the Giza plateau, and this was because the Egyptians had a stellar religion that identified Osiris, Isis, and Seth with Orion, Sirius, and the Hyades respectively. The three pyramids of Giza are a near perfect reproduction of the 3 Stars of Orion's belt: Like the pyramids, the three Stars of Orion are not perfectly aligned, the smallest of them is slightly offset to the East. All three are slanted in a Southwesterly direction. Their orientation to the Nile recreates Orion's orientation to the Milky Way. The layout of the pyramids, and their relative sizes were a deliberate design plan, and not the result of three king's enormous egos as been preached as dogma by the so-called "old school" Egyptologists. Robert Bauval has spent the last ten years investigating the pyramids themselves and the Pyramid Texts, the oldest writings known to mankind. He and Adrian Gilbert have uncovered for the first time the key to the plan that governed the construction of the pyramids. They reveal in The Orion Mystery that the Pyramids were much more than just tombs: they were nothing less than a replica of Heaven on Earth (The constellation of Orion, or known to the Egyptians as Osiris). Again we find Uranography at the very core of the Pyramids.

Not only did the Egyptian architecture incorporate stellar knowledge of the Uranograph but as we might expect the next step was for these ancient spiritual master to weave the dramatic features of Uranography into their national history. Egypt and the Hebrew tribes are perhaps the most outstanding examples of the operation of this methodology on an extensive scale, how extensive the general student of the present age is unprepared to believe. Israel was not immume to the same influence as we see in their Temple. While the term "the Temple of Jerusalem" is in singular, there have been two temples in Jerusalem. The first was erected in 10th century B.C.E. by King Solomon, on the place where his father, King David shall have made repentance after trying to count the people of Israel, an act God punished with a plague. David's choice of place was connected to the belief that the rock here is the centre of the world. This "Jerusalem" temple was built entirely according to patterns from Egyptian temples, and was divided into four zones, all lying on the same axis, all zones had more or less the same width and only the length varied. Outside the building, and under open Sky, was the altar for fire sacrifices. The Temple in Jerusalem is an "Equinox Temple".

As the reader is beginning to see the names associated for ages with cosmic and spiritual typism were spread out over the maps of the different lands of different nations; and the national kings, heroes, warriors, sages became so-called characters in the immemorial heavenly drama. In the light of this knowledge and this custom we as "truth-seekers" are in a position to reach a conclusion that is of the greatest importance for us as we apply it to our ideas of as a supposed "literal history" which again is assumed to lie behind the stories in our Bibles. As we are beginning to see more often than not such Scripture in our Christian Bibles was never to be taken "literally" or "historically". Most of the passages in our "New Testaments" are not to be taken at face value as if a "literal history" of some 2,000 year of "Messiah" as we might suppose but are an allegory of a Divine and Spiritual reality taken from the movement of the orbs in God's Heaven. For we are confronted with the unassailable fact that the names and events in religious scripts were for the greater part not the products of objective history in the first place as we might think; but rather on the contrary the names and events in assumed history were a deposit from the religious books of antiquity that find their origin in the religious mythos of the Ancients as personified forms of the movement of the Sun and Stars above. The names of kings, heroes, cities, lakes, rivers and mountains were on the Uranograph long before they appeared on national maps! Again into play comes the ancient Egyptian axiom: "So Above, So Below". These names of kings, heroes, cities, rivers and mountains were transferred from the Uranograph, the Sky Chart, to the maps of nations much later; sometimes hundreds or thousands of years later! The facts of the matter are indisputable; facts taken from such scholarly study reveal conclusively that the occurrences of Bible "history" had been enacted annually or nightly among the Stars of the Sky long before they became incorporated in the epics of religions from nation to nation. And these names of kings, heroes, cities, rivers, and mountains, for example, had been in the religious epics long before they became assigned to actual localities and personages in nation after nation. Heavenly regions and Spiritual realities were finally brought to earth and given a local habitation on land and in history long after they were discerned in God's Sky and Heaven "Above". In short, the naming of geographical features was done by the sacerdotal and priestly castes in each country where the spiritually minded priests simply sought to pattern their country and its history after the scheme of the Uranograph! Their map and their history were crafted as far as could be done in the mold of the cosmic chart. Each nation designed to make its configuration and history reflect and fulfill the heavenly model! Today as archeologists are studying Egypt we can begin to grasp the scope of Uranography which is passed off today as assumed "literal history".

Understand that what I have elaborated to teach the student and "truth-seeker" in this article is not some far-flung "theory"; it is attested by many scholarly opinions:

- We need look only to our own Bible for the clue to this endeavor of capturing divine truth in Heaven and translating it to the earth when looking at the injunction given to Moses in the Bible: *"See that thou make all things after the pattern shown thee in the Mount . . . the pattern of the heavens."
- "It has already been suggested that the mapping out of localities was celestial before the chart was geographically applied and that all common naming on earth came from one common naming of the heavens, commencing with the Great Bear and the Dog. The mapping out of Egyptian localities according to the celestial Nomes and scenery is described in the inscription of Khnum-hept, who is said to have 'established the landmark of the south, and sculptured the northern--like the heaven. He stretched the Great Bear on its back. He made the district in its two parts, setting up their landmarks, like the heaven'" (Records of the Past, XII, 68.)

- "Jerusalem, the Mount of Peace, the Nabhi-Yoni of the Earth, was one of these sacred cities that were mapped out according to the Kamite model in the heavens" (Gerald Massey, The Natural Genesis, I, p. 168).
- "The pattern of things in the Mount," "the pattern of the heavens," has not hitherto been seen to be the Biblical analogue and symbol of Plato's ideal forms. The Mount, the heavens, are of course the heights of divine ideation, whereon God projected his new world in thought forms before he impressed them upon matter. The heavens are the uplands of consciousness, or spheres of being, not physical localities. God formed his mental models on the Mount of Vision and Imagination before he cast them into concretion.

Practically conclusive evidence that Bible names are not objective or historical (in the first place) is to be found in the fact that there are in the Bible some scores of allusions to such local names as Egypt, Jerusalem, Nineveh, Babylon, Tyre, Sidon, Gilead, Assyria, Galilee, Ethiopia and others which, if taken in the earthly geographical sense, yield no intelligible meaning whatever. Further evidence is to be found in the notable fact that the divisions and localities on mundane maps do in the main largely match the celestial features. Charts of the "Holy Land of Canaan" have been found existing in early Egypt as much as three hundred years before the alleged Israelite Exodus.

Answer for yourself: What should this teach us? What we assume to be "historical" concerning Israel and the "Promised Land" often is but "allegorical" before it was interpreted as if "historical". This is the same identical thing we need to face when looking at the New Testament from beginning to end when considering the "Jesus Story".

Gerald Massey, renown Egyptologist, states that "an entablature on the wall of an Egyptian temple bore a list of some hundred and twenty place names afterwards localized in Palestine, at a date at least one hundred and fifty years before there could possibly have been an exodus of Israelites from Egypt. It requires little "proof" to ascertain that "Egypt" as used throughout the Bible has the meaning of the lower self or animal-human personality, indeed the physical body of man itself. Jerusalem means the "holy city" or the heavenly realms, which are in mankind's consciousness, not on the map" (Alvin Kuhn, The Lost Light: An Interpretation Of Ancient Scripture, chapter 5, Kessinger Publications).

Answer for yourself: Did you read and understand what lies behind both "key" words, words that expressed Divine Concepts in the Stars and Heaven before they were ever brought down to Earth and used on maps? There is maybe not two words having greater importance for interpretation of our Bibles than Egypt and Jerusalem. You might need to read this 50 times to get it in your heart and head as preparation for your next reading of the Bible.

The picture of this paradise in the Hebrew writings, the Psalms, the Books of Isaiah, Ezekiel, Zechariah and Revelation, were pre-existing long ages earlier in Egypt before it found expression in later Hebrew thought. What the so-called "prophets" of the Jews did was to make sublunary the vision of the good time in another life. There were always two Jerusalems; from the time when Judea and Palestine were possessions of Egypt. We also see that two Jerusalems were recognized by Paul, one terrestrial, one celestial" (Ibid).

Answer for yourself: Is the city known today as "Jerusalem" known in Ancient Egypt, long before the nation of Israel ever existed as another word? Yes

The name of Jerusalem which we read and think was originally a Jewish city existed long before the time of King David, himself accurately known as the Pharaoh Tuthmose III, as the Egyptian word "Aarru-salem" or "fields of peace in the heaven of the never-setting Stars" (the circumpolar stars that never set or "die").

Answer for yourself: What are these "never-setting stars"? We made mention of them before as the "circumpolar Stars" that circle the North Star and in so doing never descend below the horizon or "die".

Therefore "Aarru-salem" is understood as being the place of "Eternal Life" and "life beyond death". The name of Jerusalem which we read as the "Aarru-salem" or fields of peace is equivalent to "Aarru-hetep" or "Sekhet-hetep", the fields of peace known in Ancient Egyptian." This is but a reference to Eternal Life achieved after death.

Exodus (3:12) reports the Eternal as saying to Moses: "When thou hast brought the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain." It was there called Mt. Horeb, and the first syllable, Hor-, can be equated with the Hor-, of Hor-us, the Sun. The injunction to Moses precedes: "Thou shalt bring them in and plant them in the mountain of their inheritance, the place, O Lord, which thou hast made for them to dwell in, the sanctuary, O Lord, which thy hands have established." Here "the Lord shall reign for ever and ever."

This was the Mount of Jerusalem, the "Aarru-Salem", or "Aarru-Hetep", the mount of eternal peace which exist in Heaven with God. In escaping from Egypt, which we saw was a symbol for matter of human bodies, or as it is sometimes called "Amenta", the goal of refuge is the Mount of Peace, as every religion on earth has attested.

Answer for yourself: So what are we saying about this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom? It is the hope of mankind that at the death of the body, the home of the Soul, than we, as Conscious Souls, "escape our bodies of death", flee "Amenta" and return to the Stars and Heaven which we believe to be the place where the "Lord reigns forever" in this "Mount in Heaven". Mind you, this is all according to the "Pattern in the Mount". As spirits, not human marching columns of masses of people, the children of Israel, after crossing the swampy Reed Sea of this life, our watery bodies, are led to the celestial land flowing with water. This heavenly home was located and dramatized as the Circumpolar Paradise, the Homeland of exiles and captives. "I am master there," says the beatified spirit who has attained this mansion in the Skies and built his homestead there. "I am in glory there; I eat there; I plant and I reap there; I plough there; I take my fill of love." "I net ducks and I eat dainties." "I am united there to the god Hetep"--the seven powers completely exalted, unified and at peace.

Answer for yourself: As good as this is, as wonderful as it is to recover the "keys" to unlock this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom, what are we missing here?

There is a hidden secret in this teaching and the "key" is Amenta. Normally traditional Egyptian exegesis by Egyptologists today delegate Amenta to the "realm of the dead". So far so good. If we are "dead" while we "live" as Souls in our bodies of death" then the location where we are risen from the dead changes from Heaven to Earth.

The burden of Jewish prophecy, which turned out so terribly misleading for those who were ignorant of the secret wisdom and who possessed not the "keys" to this Ancient Wisdom, is that the vision of this glorious future should be attained while one lives on earth; whereas it never had that meaning to most. . . . Thus Jerusalem on earth was to take the place of Jerusalem above and the Aarru-hetep became Jerusalem simply as a mundane locality" (Gerald Massey, The Light of The World, p. 539). The Mount of Jerusalem, the Aarru-Salem, or Aarru-Hetep, the mount of eternal peace is meant to be achieved while we inhabit our earthly bodies as we escape from the fleshly existence and hell-hades on earth along with the punishment and chastisement for our disobedience because we let our Lower natures rule over our Higher natures. This is not acceptable to our Creator who send out Souls into fleshly matter and thwarts the goal of their incarnation.

Answer for yourself: Then what is Amenta? Amenta is the realm of the dead; it is the life of our fleshly existence NOW in which we live which too often is devoid of spiritual life due to the compromises we make that rob of this peace that comes only when we live in the "born again condition" God intended. In escaping from Egypt, in escaping in our personal Exodus from our carnal natures (the Exodus is an allegory), in breaking out of Amenta, the goal of refuge for us as we exist but yet "dead" in this body "of death" and prison is the Mount of Peace with God and our neighbor, as every religion on earth has attested and which so few understand and practice today. We have so much just backwards today it is staggering, overwhelming, and saddening.

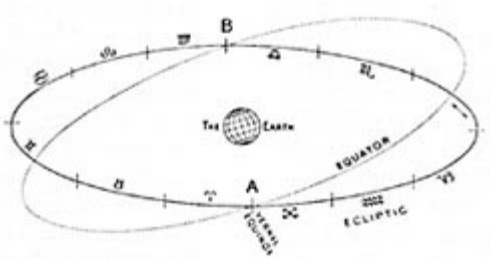
According to Paul we are to "awaken from the dead" while we yet live in these bodies and this is done by the "awaking of the Krst/Karest/Christ Spirit-Soul" in us. This means that there is a "resurrection" that we are to experience while we walk in these "bodies of death" as Paul calls them.

What a wretched man I am! Who will deliver me out of the body of this death? Romans 7:21



The "keys" are being restored for us whereby we can understand this ancient "Soul Science". Numberless texts in the Bible itself point to the correctness of the Uranographic interpretation of God's intended theology which is to impact our Souls; the proper interpretation of which is dependent upon the restoration of the "keys" of Ancient Biblical interpretation as recorded in the Skies and Heaven. It goes without saying that these "keys" for proper Scriptural Interpretation are absent from the vast majority of our churches.

Let us look at one more example before we end this article to show the darkness of Christian standard "exegesis" and Scriptural interpretation into which we have fallen. One more name we must look at, which by itself is enough to substantiate the claim made in this connection which I have shared above in this article. In Revelation, Chapter 2:8, speaking of the two witnesses whom it is said the dragon will rise up and slay, the apocalyptic writers says: "And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified!!!"

Answer for yourself: What did we see earlier as the meaning behind the word "Egypt" as used in Sacred Scriptures? We saw it meant the body of matter; this carnal fleshly body which is the home for our Soul.

Answer for yourself: Was Jesus crucified in Sodom? Was Jesus crucified in Egypt? What is going on here? The New Testament says he was. But is this "literal" or to be understood as if a "historical truth" to which we are told to "believe in" to be "saved"? What is this "crucifixion"? Is it a cruel agonizing death on an "old rugged cross"; a tree? Or could it have metaphysical connotations that escape us since we don't possess the "keys" to interpret correctly this thousand year old "Sacred Wisdom"? Is this possibly true and have we completely misunderstood the gnosis that makes us believe that Jesus was crucified literally in Jerusalem which we already saw was a reference to the Stars and Heaven? Was "Jesus", the name given for one of the many manifestations of "the Christ", the "neteru", crucified in the Sky when "the Christ" descended into fleshy matter and was incarnated in every child of God and we not know it? Is this "crucifixion" but a "symbol" for the "Ladder of Heaven" where the manifested Energies of God "ascend and descend"? Could this "crucifixion of Christ", a Divine Allegory expressing a Metaphysical Reality of the Descent of the Deific Mind of the Creator of the Cosmos down the Latter of Heaven into darker and grosser forms of "matter" and "flesh", be mistakenly believed to be a "historical-reality" acted out on some old "rugged cross" when it fact it is not? Have we lost the "keys" to the "Dying and Rising God" theology of the Ancients and have accepted the Roman "Reinterpretation" of this Ancient Sacred Wisdom and not known it? Is this the meaning of the "crucifixion" and not what Rome made it out to be when they "literalized" and "carnalized" the "Jesus Story" as taken from Ancient Egypt? Could this be just one of the many reasons why Judaism rejects the Christian "Jesus Story" as it has for the last 2,000 years? Well, I let the cat out the bag too early for some I guess but you need to know the truth. All of this "crucifixion of God stuff" comes from the Symbolism of the Zodiac as you might be expecting by now having read enough articles to make you "think". And behind all of this is the Metaphysical Reality and the duality of Spirit/Energy (invisible living existence) and Matter/Mankind (visible living existence). And to think that this "Cross in the Sky" was known by these Spiritual Masters of old and became the very foundation for their "personified godmen and Christs" as their salvatio. We will deal with this "Cross in the Heavens" in detail in a following article in this series. Now back to our present article.

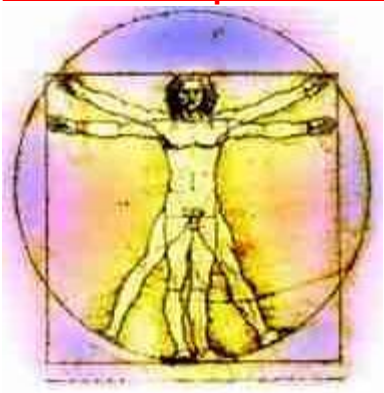
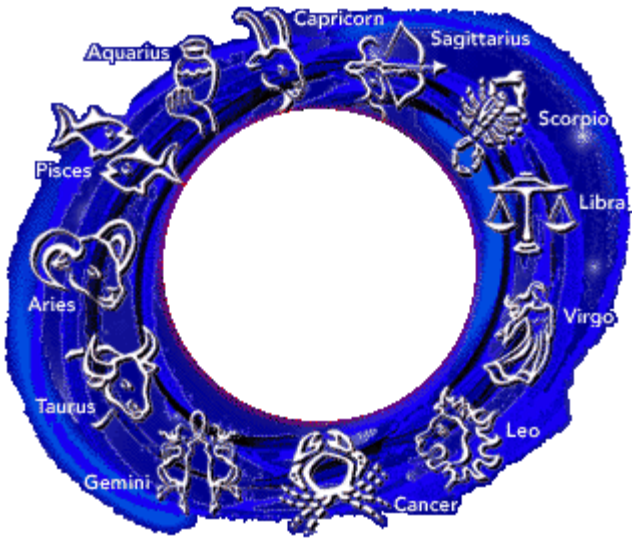
There is enough in this verse from Rev. 2:8 that refers to the Lord being crucified in Sodom and Egypt to refute the entire body of Christian theology as historically based. It implies a clear refutation of the whole Passion Week and Good Friday ritual, as commemorative of assumed literal "history." Rome should have done a better job sewing this "patchwork" New Testament together because the "holes" in it shout out to those who have "eyes to see" and "ears to hear". Something is wrong with it; it does not add up, it is not unified, it has scattered and conflicting passages some times on the same page. To blame this mess on the God of the Cosmos is beyond comprehension for such a Perfect Creator. Jesus, so this Roman New Testament says, was not crucified in an earthly Jerusalem, but only in a spiritual one, the name of which is indifferently Sodom or Egypt, the latter not even the name of an earthly city, but of a country! Jesus (the symbol for "the Krst/Karest/Christ" descended into the physical realm....mankind) is crucified in the country Egypt and the city of Sodom which are OUR BODIES (the intersection-cross-crossing of Divine Thought or Divine Energy into matter (for our purposes humankind).



Answer for yourself: In light of this what are we to do with the whole of the Gospels as supposed "literal" history? Are these but allegories of the Descent of the Soul into Egypt; Egypt being the flesh of mankind where God intersected and "crossed" over from the invisible Spirit realm to the visible realm of matter? Is this "crucifixion" the whole summary statement of the Kabbalah and we not know it? Could it be that this intersection of the Deific Mind and Intelligent Cosmic Energy into matter was symbolized by the Ancients as a "cross", "crossing over into", or "interjunction" between two realms of existence; one Spiritual and one natural-anima, one invisible and one visible? Did this Invisible Divine Intelligent Energy impregnate matter and in so doing was this incarnation of the Cosmic Mind (in the form of the Descending Christ) into darkened matter characterized by the Ancients as a "crucifixion" or a "death" because it required God to divest Himself of His Heavenly status and humble Himself, empty Himself, and take upon Himself the likeness of human flesh and in doing confine Himself to lowly matter and the propensity to sin that restricts and denigrates the Divine to the degree that it does? You bet on all counts. The loss of the "keys" to this one religious dogma alone has caused untold misery for the whole of humanity and cost the loss of human life and tons of blood over the centuries. Truly, "My people perish for lack of knowledge".

I often feel sorry for sharing such knowledge with Christians as I can only remember my anguish when the light of God's truth broke through and enlightened my mind to the depth of my spiritual deception at the hands of a corrupt Roman Priesthood long dead which so tragically strayed from the Divine mythos and God's Divine truth when they gave the world a falsified "historical Jesus". Christianity as a supposed "literal" history must be relegated in the light of such knowledge and facts from our study of such things like a Uranograph to nothing more than a sacred myth where it always belonged. The crucifixion was, on the authority of the Bible itself, a spiritual and not a historical transaction that deals with the "fall" of the Soul or the Descent of the Soul into matter (the indwelling Krst/Karest/Christ in the flesh of mankind).



The spiritual masters of old surely never dreamed that an age would come that would have so far misplaced and lost the mythical intent of their writings as to suppose that they conveyed no longer a Divine Spiritual Allegory but were to be assumed to be a "literal" representation of a supposed historical event. Surely these anointed sages of Egyptian antiquity and ancient sagicity could not know that the wisest scholars of a distant epochlike Roman Christianity the last 1,900 years could be or would be so blinded by the forces that oppose enlightenment and the spread of knowledge as not to realize that the old religious Sacred Books from Ancient Egypt on down through history spoke only in the terms of those earthly images, patterns, and archetypes that prefigured only higher Spiritual Realities. What we fail to know and seem never to learn is that the ancient masters of religious science were not in the habit of speaking "precisely" and "literally"; they spoke under the forms of figure and symbolism always. They could not suspect that their indirect poetical method would so outrageously bewilder and confuse Christian theologians for over 1,900 years as it has even yet today. Had it not been for the grace of God and my pleading to Him for "truth" over the years I would surely be walking in darkness like the rest of the 2.5 billion Christians in the world today.

Unquestionably then the cosmic operation and cosmic significance lie behind the twelve Constellations of the Zodiac and the thirty-six or more other stellar configurations that provide the foundations for the personified stories that we read in our Bibles today. The planisphere, Uranograph, or Chart of the Heavens was without doubt the first of all Bibles, pictorially edited. Once you do these studies you see beyond any doubt that all Bibles are amplifications and elaborations of the original volume of ideography first written on the open face of the Sky, charted in the zodiac and heavenly maps, and later transferred to earth and written in scrolls and parchments. Man was instructed to fashion his new body of spiritual glory "after the pattern of things in thee Heavens," the Heavenly or Zodiacal man. And a map of the structure and history of this celestial Personage was sketched by the enlightened sages in the configurated star clusters of antiquity. The word "Zodiac" comes from the Greek word "zodion" which means a "small living image". Thus the Zodiac signifies that it is a graph of the microcosmic life of man, which is cast in the form of the macrocosmic life of the Universe, or of God. Man's own small body is a replica of this body of God, made in its image and likeness. The vast frame of Cosmic Man was outlined in the scroll of the Heavens, the solar systems and galaxies being nothing less than living cell clusters in His immense organism whom we recognize as the whole Cosmos.

We will deal with this momentous "symbolic theology" as our studies advance but a word must be said at this stage of our study before we end this article. I must make a statement alarming to most traditional Christians who have not done the studies required to see this as of yet. Biblical theology rests more solidly than has ever been believed on Zodiacal backgrounds. The acquiring of this so needed knowledge and its presentation will be admittedly a matter of great significance and importance as our studies advance. As we get to this later we will see the unsuspected significance of two of the twelve signs, Virgo and Pisces, in the very heart of New Testament narrative. Let the reader picture before him the ordinary zodiac, with the house of Virgo at the western equinox point and that of Pisces directly opposite on the eastern side. The simple fact that they stand six months apart will presently be seen to assume great importance in the Gospel narrative as it relates to the "natural man" and the "Spiritual man", or between John the Baptist and Jesus. There is a relationship here that goes unnoticed but yet so often read in the Christian Scriptures without recognition; by that I mean the oft quoted verse in the Gospel of John:

John 3:3 3 Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. (KJV)

Let us just scratch the surface of this Zodiac and its relationship to "the Christ", "Jesus", and "Horus". This article must take a second to present a most puzzling and hitherto unexplained item of ancient religious myth, that the Christs, the Sun-Gods, the Messiahs, were all were depicted as having two mothers. Such a statement has been put on shelf #13 as nothing more than mythical rubbish and nonsense of early Paganism by Christianity for centuries. But is has not always been so. Yet little do we hear of our Church Fathers who both wrote and taught the same things.

Answer for yourself: What are we missing here? The profoundness and deepness of Ancient sagicity and scriptural intelligence, hiding sublime cosmic truth under glyph and symbol, has not been dreamed of yet explored by hardly any serious Christian "truth-seekers"; that is until now. Archeology, especially Egyptian Archeological discoveries are blowing the lid off of 1,900 years of Christian lies and deception to which its adherents have not a clue.

It really is so simple yet so deep that it escapes our minds full of darkness in need of God's illumination of His Spiritual Truth which goes misunderstood in the Bible which we read and think we understand. The depiction of the necessity of mankind's need of two mothers or two births should not be welcomed with such disbelief but sadly not possessing the "keys" for its proper interpretation passage after passage in the Bible goes misinterpreted by those who teach the flocks of God. It is time that this stops and because you are reading these articles you have been blessed to "see" what others desired to see, but did not.

We continue in the next article in this series.

ANTHROPOMORPHISM

Anthropomorphism is a long word that has its meaning a form of personification where one applies human or animal qualities to inanimate objects. Anthropomorphism is the attribution of human characteristics and qualities to non-human beings, objects, or natural phenomena; or to God. It is the attributing human forms or qualities to entities which are not human. Animals, forces of nature, and unseen or unknown authors of chance are frequent subjects of anthropomorphosis. Specifically, anthropomorphism is the describing of gods or goddesses in human forms and possessing human characteristics such as jealousy, hatred, or love.

Anthropomorphism (Greek anthropos, "human being"; morphe, "shape") is the attribution of human form or qualities to that which is not human. In the history of religion, anthropomorphism refers to the depiction of God in a human image, with human bodily form and emotions, such as jealousy, wrath, or love. Whereas mythology is exclusively concerned with anthropomorphic gods, other religious thought holds that it is inappropriate to regard an omnipotent, omnipresent God as human. In order to speak of God, however, metaphorical language must be employed. In philosophy and theology, seemingly anthropomorphic concepts and language are used because it is impossible to think of God without attributing to him some human traits. In the Bible, for example, God is endowed with physical characteristics and human emotions, but at the same time he is understood to be transcendent. In art and literature, anthropomorphism is the depiction of natural objects, such as animals or plants, as talking, reasoning, sentient, humanlike beings.

The earliest critique of anthropomorphism in the West was made by Xenophanes, a Greek philosopher of the 5th century BC. Xenophanes observed that whereas the Ethiopians represented the gods as dark-skinned, the northerners in Thrace depicted the gods with red hair and blue eyes. He concluded that anthropomorphic representations of the gods invariably reveal more about the human beings who make them than they reveal about the divine. The Greek philosopher Plato likewise objected to a human representation of the gods; in the dialogue The Republic, he particularly opposed the attribution of human failings to divine beings. Both Xenophanes and Plato wished to purify religion by eliminating elements that they considered primitive and crude.

Nineteenth-century German philosopher G. W. F. Hegel held that Greek anthropomorphic religion represented an improvement over the worship of gods in the shape of animals, a practice called theriomorphism (Greek therion, "animal"; morphe, "shape"). Hegel also maintained that Christianity brought the notion of anthropomorphism to maturity by insisting not only that God assumed a human form, but also that Jesus Christ was both a fully human person as well as fully divine. Because Christianity incorporates humanity into the very nature of divinity, it has been accused of anthropomorphism by both Jewish and Islamic thinkers.

PERSONIFICATION OF THE SUN IN THE WORLD'S RELIGIONS

Modern scholarship today has a hard message for Christianity and Christians everywhere. With the advancement of the media and the availability of volumes of information that was for years kept highly secret we see clearly today that Christianity and the Jesus of the "Jesus Story" found in the gospel stories is a rehash of the myths of other cultures – in fact, practically all of them rolled into one – in an attempt to unify the Roman Empire under one state religion. This secret is and has been known by the higher-ranking members of the fraternal orders, including the Jesuits, Protestants and Masons for centuries. Serious study today that takes advantage of the abundance of archeological information that has become available today exposes that "Jesus Christ" is a mythical character based on pre-Christian godmen found in the myths of other cultures around the globe. In reality, the story revolves around the solar hero, the personification of the sun, which was worshipped in numerous cultures for thousands of years. When one gets his hands on books by such distinguished and brilliant scholars like Thomas Paine, Rev. Robert Taylor, Gerald Massey, J.M. Robertson, Joseph Wheless, G.A. Wells and Barbara Walker then the puzzle pieces come together to reveal that the "Jesus Story" as found in the New Testament is little more than the "literalization" of prior Ancient allegories of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac along with other constellations which influenced this story in various degrees. One only needs listen to Thomas Paine:

"The Christian religion and Masonry have one and the same common origin: Both are derived from the worship of the Sun. The difference between their origin is, that the Christian religion is a parody on the worship of the Sun, in which they put a man whom they call Christ, in the place of the Sun, and pay him the same adoration which was originally paid to the Sun."

If we ever wish to get to the bottom of the Jesus issue and likewise wish to find the gods and goddesses of the ancestors of our race, we must look to the sun, the moon, the stars, and the sky, the earth, the sea, the dawn, the clouds, the wind, etc., which they personified and glorified. That these have been the gods and the goddesses of all nations of antiquity, is an established fact. They are better understood as being called "Solar Gods".

Answer for yourself: What is the real reason for the subterfuge and deception? As Pope Leo X is reputed to have exclaimed, "What profit has not this fable of Christ brought us!"

The words which had denoted the sun and the moon would denote not merely living things but living persons. From personification to deification the steps would be but few; and the process of disintegration would at once furnish the materials for a vast fabric of mythology. Every word would become an attribute, and all ideas, once grouped around a simple object, would branch off into distinct personifications. These attributes of nature and the Sun and stars would gradually be converted into incidents of their mystical careers. Later each would receive a local habitation with a corresponding name unique to each area. These would remain as genuine history, when the origin and meaning of the words had been either wholly or in part forgotten.

BUT HOW DO WE KNOW THE GENTILE NATIONS

PERSONIFIED....GLORIFIED...AND DEIFIED THE SUN AND NATURE?

The Aryans are said to have entered India through the fabled Khyber pass, around 1500 BC. They intermingled with the local populace, and assimilated themselves into the social framework. They adopted the settled agricultural life-style of their predecessors, and established small agrarian communities across the state of Punjab. The Aryans are believed to have brought with them the horse, developed the Sanskrit language and made significant inroads in to the religion of the times. All three factors were to play a fundamental role in the shaping of Indian culture. Cavalry warfare facilitated the rapid spread of Aryan culture across North India, and allowed the emergence of large empires. Sanskrit is the basis and the unifying factor of the vast majority of Indian languages. The religion, that took root during the Vedic era, with its rich pantheon of Gods and Goddesses, and its storehouse of myths and legends, became the foundation of the Hindu religion, arguably the single most important common denominator of Indian culture. The Aryans did not have a script, but they developed a rich tradition. They composed the hymns of the four vedas, the great philosophic poems that are at the heart of Hindu thought. "Veda" means knowledge, vedic culture means the spiritually aware society. And "dharma", as the meaning of life, the way to live the existence on Earth.

For the proofs of these assertions, the Vedic poems furnish indisputable evidence, that such as this was the origin and growth of the Greek and Teutonic mythology. In these poems, the names of many, perhaps most, of the Greek gods, indicate natural objects which, if endued with life, took on human personality. Such mythologies haven been grouped around the sun; grounded on those expressions which describe the recurrence of day and night; on the great tragedy of nature, in the alteration of summer and winter. Simply said it was "nature religion" with the Sun at the center.

Of the vast mass of solar myths, some have emerged into independent legends, others have furnished the groundwork of whole epics, others have remained simply as floating tales (Aryan Myths., vol. ii. pp. 51-53).

The results obtained from the examination of languages in its several forms leaves no room for doubt that the general system of mythology can be traced to its fountain head. We can no longer shut our eyes to the fact. For the comparison of legends current in different countries it is not necessary to carry the search further back than the worship of nature along with the Sun. With the origin of earliest man we find a common language know by all; a language without words. I am speaking about a common language as man interpreted his environment as speaking to him. We have before us a stage of language corresponding to a stage in the history of the human mind in which all sensible objects were regarded as instinct with a conscious life. The varying phases of that life were therefore described as truthfully as they described their own feelings or sufferings; and therefore every phase became for them a picture. Early man described the things he saw, felt, or heard in his world from his point of view. Man's language was the result of an observation of what his senses perceived. In this way, man could not fail to note the changes of days and years, of growth and decay, of calm and storm; but the objects which so changed were to them living things, and the rising and setting of the sun, the return of winter and summer, became a drama in which the actors were their enemies and friends. These myths, from the personification of nature and the sun, exhibit in their germs the myths which afterwards became the legends of gods and heroes with human forms, and furnished the groundwork of the religious epics, poems, whether of the eastern or the western world. It was only a short step from this personification of the sun and nature to human epics in which such forces or nature became deified in every nations' myths and heroes.

The mythical or mythmaking language of mankind had no partialities; and the Sun occupies the largest extent of the myths of these nations. Mankind did not fail to put into words their thoughts and emotions roused in them by the varying phases of the Sun and nature of their world on which we, not less than they, feel that our life depends, although today we know a great something more than they about its nature.

Thus grew up a multitude of expressions which described the sun as the child of the night, as the destroyer of the darkness, as the lover of the dawn and the dew. Such phrases would go on to speak of the sun as killing the dew with his spears, and of forsaking the dawn as he rose in the heaven. The feeling that the fruits of the earth were called forth by his warmth would find utterance in words which spoke of him as the friend and the benefactor of man; which the constant recurrence of his work would lead them to describe him as a being constrained to toil for others, as doomed to travel over many lands, and as finding everywhere things on which he could bestow his love or which he might destroy by his power. His journey might be across cloudless skies, or amid alterations of storm and calm; his light might break fitfully through the clouds, or be hidden from many a weary hour, to burst forth at last with dazzling splendor as he sank down in the western sky. He would be described as facing many dangers and many enemies, none of whom, however, may arrest his course; as sullen, or capricious, or resentful; as grieving for the loss of the dawn whom he had loved, or as nursing his great wrath and vowing a pitiless vengeance. Then as the veil was rent at eventide, they would speak of the chief, who had long remained still, girding on his armor; or of the wanderer throwing off his disguise, and seizing his bow or spear to smite his enemies; of the invincible warrior whose face gleams with the flush of victory when the fight is over, as he greets the fair-haired Dawn who closes, as she had begun, the day. To the wealth of images thus lavished on the daily life and death of the Sun there would be no limit. He was the child of the morning, or her husband, or her destroyer; he forsook her and he returned to her, either in calm serenity or only to sink presently in deeper gloom.

So with other sights and sounds. The darkness of night brought with it a feeling of vague horror and dread; the return of daylight cheered them with a sense of unspeakable gladness; and thus the Sun who scattered the black shade of night would be the mighty champion doing battle with the biting snake which lurked in its dreary hiding-place. But as the Sun accomplished his journey day by day through the heaven, the character of the seasons is changed. The buds and blossoms of spring-time expand in flowers and fruits of summer, and the leaves fall and wither on the approach of winter. Thus the daughter of the earth would be spoken of as dying or as dead, as severed from her mother for five or six weary months, not to be restored to her again until the time for here return from the dark land should once more arrive. But as no other power than that of the Sun can recall vegetation to life, this child of the earth would be represented as buried in a sleep from which the touch of the Sun alone could arouse her, when he slays the frost and cold which lie like snakes around her motionless form.

That these phrases would furnish the germs of myths or legends teeming with human feeling, as soon as the meaning of the phrases were in part or wholly forgotten, was as inevitable as that in the infancy of our race men should attribute to all sensible objects the same kind of life which they were conscious of possessing themselves.

By now you understand how the forces of nature and the sun could be understood by early man. These impressions were woven into various tales reflecting the crude understanding of mother nature as well as the Sun. Simply said, early man did not possess the knowledge to relate such events he encountered in scientific terms as we had today. Crude stories and myths based on his limited knowledge would have to do. Later such events were as stated personified, glorified, and finally deified. Such expressions have been handed down to us and many of them are carried over into the life of Jesus the Jew. The irony is that the Jewish people were called to be a light of knowledge and correction to such men and their myths. We have lost a lot in our attempt to be a follower of Yeshua; in fact the hard reality as I now plan to show you is that 2.5 billions good people who call themselves Christians are little better off than primitive man because they hold dear the same myths. The only difference is that the historical Yeshua has become the Christ of faith; such an object of faith as expressed in the New Testament is almost a carbon copy of what the earliest Sun-worshippers believed and taught. Let me see if I can prove it to you as we make comparisons between the Christian Savior and the various Sun Myths. After we are through then you can make an intelligent decision once you see the evidence for yourself.

One thing needs to be said before we end. After making such comparisons we yet don't understand what these Sungods and pagan Christs stood for or represented. Sure, our Jesus Christ might not have been "historical" or "literal" but he meant something to many who at one time held the "keys" to proper interpretation and understanding of this "Jesus Story".

Answer for yourself: What lies behind our misunderstood and mischaracterized "Jesus Story" and the other "Pagan Christ Stories". It is to that quest we now turn.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #4

I mentioned in an earlier article in this series that mankind, the microcosm of the Cosmos, is thus to be best understood as a replica of the Heavenly man imaged in the Universe which is the macrocosm or "Pattern" for all Spiritual realities represented in the visible Heavens above. This is the idea expressed in the most Ancient religious documents found in nation after nation. Macrocosm- Microcosm, is the belief that there exists between the universe and the individual human being an identity both anatomical and psychical (mental, cerebra, intellectual, Soulish). The macrocosm is the universe as a whole, whose parts are thought of as parts of a human body and mind. The microcosm is an individual human being whose parts are thought of as analogous to the parts of the larger universe. That man was a microcosm makes the identification of man and the cosmos almost complete. The element of incompleteness is the perfection of the macrocosm and the imperfection of man. The macrocosm has no imperfection for the simple reason that it is the model of perfection. That is why it is called a cosmos, the primitive meaning of which is "order". It is this "Pattern" of Spiritual reality in the Sky and Heavens above, this history of man written thus in the constellations of the Sky and the Zodiac, as discerned by the Spiritual Masters of Ancient Egypt and other early religious formulators, seers, mystics, Egyptian priests, etc., which was transferred as the Heavenly "Pattern" , idea, image, and record to Earth not only geographically but "theologically" as well. This is what the "uranograph" is all about.

Now we must learn two very important terms and the differences between them before we go on. The term panentheism is Greek for "all-in-God," or "pan-en-theos". A panentheistic belief system is one which postulates a God that interpenetrates every part of nature, but is nevertheless fully distinct from nature. So this God is part of nature, but still retains an independent identity. The term panentheism appears to have been originally used by Karl Christian Friedrich Krause (1781-1832), although aspects of it can be traced all of the way back to Plato and even earlier to Ancient Egypt. Panentheism says that all is in God, somewhat as if God were the ocean and we were fish. If one considers what is in God's body to be part of God, then we can say that God is all there is and then some. The universe is God's body, but God's awareness or personality is greater than the sum of all the parts of the universe.There is an understandable tendency to confuse panentheism with pantheism or even to consider panentheism to be a type of pantheism - a problem exacerbated by the fact that we simply don't hear the term panentheism very often and most people are unfamiliar with it.

Answer for yourself: What is the difference between standard pantheism and panentheism?

It is true that both panentheists and pantheists share the view that the universe and every natural thing in it is pervaded by divinity. All things exist and consist in God. However, since panentheism postulates that the universe is contained within God and not God in the universe, panentheists believe in a God who is present in everything but also extends beyond the universe. In other words, God is the universe but is also greater than the universe. Theistically, Panentheism differs from Pantheism in that according to Pantheism God is all things, whereas according to Panentheism God is in all things. Often panentheists also believe that this God has a mind, created the universe, and cares about each of us personally. Pantheists on the other hand believe that the universe itself is divine and do not believe in personal or creator gods. As a result, for those who are familiar with the concept, panentheism is a "middle way" between the extremes of impersonal pantheism in which personal freedom and creativity become nullified in an impersonal world, and extremes of philosophical theism in which the divine may be personal, but is too remote to be of any comfort or interest. Panentheism differs from Deism, which only postulates a God separate from nature. It differs from pantheism in that the latter identifies God with nature, although it agrees with pantheism that the god includes nature as a part of its being. Since God is the Universe, and more, then we begin to see both how and why the Ancients believed man was made in the Image of God and why mankind was but a microcosm of the whole Cosmos which is God's expression of Himself to us. If you have never read our article on "Made In The Image Of God" then stop right now and do so in order that you grasp this concept beyond any doubt. Now, let us move on.

This introduction was to alert the reader that this whole Cosmos, including the "Pattern in the Mount", is a manifestation of God. Actually the whole of the Cosmos/Universe (both visible and invisible) is the "body of God" and serves as a "blueprint" for mankind. But for this to work man must possess, or reacquire the "keys" to read God's Book in the Heavens ("Above") in order to bring these Divine Truths down to Earth ("Below"). Ancient Egypt did this the best of all nations and today, thanks to the efforts of modern scholarship and archeologists this "Book of Heaven" is available to all to read today.

As mentioned in the first article the Ancient Spiritually minded sages of Egypt, Mesopotamia, and even Israel, as well as other nations, adopted and followed the methodology of Uranography in transferring the "Pattern in the Sky/Mount in Heaven" to Earth (transferring the Mind of God to Earth). Fully aware that man was made in the image of this God then they reasoned that it was their duty to turn Earth into Heaven. In order to do this they began to distribute the various powers, forces, energies, phenomena and localities observed and witnessed in the Heavens and Sky above (neteru) over the national maps of their nations in accordance with the "Pattern in Heaven" as depicted upon the heavenly chart or "Uranograph"! I also made mention that Ancient Egypt as well as the Jewish nation will be leaders in such religious pursuits. Almost all nations tried to frame their own history and geography after the "Pattern of things in the Heavenly mount" but none did it better than Egypt and Israel.

Answer for yourself: Who were some of these other nations that are important for our understanding of the Bible? Mainly the Egypt, Mesopotamia, Persia and after them the Jews of Israel made this transfer almost completely from "Heaven to Earth". We will look at multiple examples of this as we go on in our studies.

Now we need to pay close attention to see "this Pattern" in the Heavens as we look at some more generalities at first. According to this chart in the Heavens, the Uranograph, each nation was given an upper and lower section. In Egypt we see, for example in the picture below left, that the land of Egypt was divided into an "upper" and "lower" Egypt. In the last article we gave a "summary" of this Uranograph as it generally applied to the nations; now we look closer. The nation was always divided into 2 sections. When we look to Israel we see this same division according to the "Pattern in the Mount"; a "Northern Israel consisting of ten tribes" and "a Southern Israel or Judah consisting of " two tribes" making therefore a dualistic geography of Israel as we find likewise in the Heavens above which are divided by the Milky Way, the "River of Heaven" (symbolic for the Nile and the Jordan). The Milky Way divides the night sky into two roughly equal hemispheres. But there are many "rivers" in Heaven that make up this Milky Way and we will get to that in a moment but you get the idea. Relative to the celestial equator, the Milky Way passes as far north as the constellation of Cassiopeia (one of those Circumpolar Constellations that have inherently within it the idea of "life after death" and "Eternal Life" and as far south as the constellation of Crux (the Southern Cross), indicating the high inclination of Earth's equatorial plane and the plane of the ecliptic relative to the galactic plane. On the left you can see a map of Ancient Egypt which is again shows the division of the nation into two parts. Egypt is a country made up of two separate land areas: Upper Egypt and Lower Egypt. The names refer to ones location according to the flow of the Nile river. Upper Egypt is land upstream, or to the south and Lower Egypt is land downstream, or to the north.

Answer for yourself: Here we find "another cross" in the Sky. Now we have more than one cross in the Sky and Heavens. Is their "Spiritual Message" to mankind the same? What is the connection between these "Circumpolar Constellations" and their message of "Eternal Life" and this "Southern Cross" in the Heavens? Since these Circumpolar Stars never "set" or "descend below" the horizon and just "circle" the North Pole Star then did the Ancients understand that God was sending them a message that there exists "life without death" in the Sky and Heavens "Above"? What is the real message of these "crosses" in the Sky and these "Sacred Geometric" shapes that the Ancients recognized in the Sky and Heavens? What are they saying to mankind "then" and to us "today" and have we heard and understood the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom correctly concerning these "crosses in the Sky and Heavens" or have we had a complete "reinterpretation" of this Sacred Wisdom and not know it? Do they foreshadow some later Jesus on a old rugged cross? If not then what do they mean to me?

Wow, what a study. Once you begin it you cannot go to sleep for the desire to "crack" this 2,000 enigma which energizes your very Soul to know the truth and draw close to God once you hear the ORIGINAL message given mankind about the "cross in Heaven". Well this truth on the "Cross in Heaven" will have to wait for another day as we must focus on the heart of what this article must teach. We continue with the Uranograph.

As far back as Ancient Egypt people believed that the hazy band of stars that divides the night sky, the Milky Way, was the "Silvery River" of Heaven. The Milky Way is but one of billions of galaxies in the universe, the Galaxy has special significance to humanity as it is the home of the solar system. The term "milky" originates from the hazy band of white light appearing across the celestial sphere visible from Earth, which comprises stars and other material lying within the galactic plane. The galaxy appears brightest in the direction of Sagittarius, towards the galactic center. As there were a "River in Heaven" the Ancient Egyptian located its counterpart in their own nation. I refer to the Nile River. So did Israel later with the Jordan River. The Nile actually divided nation of Egypt in half as did the "Silver River" in the Sky divide Heaven in half.

Answer for yourself: Why do we find "12" tribes in Israel and not 10 or 8 tribes? Is this because of "celestial symbolism" again? Was the number "12" significant to Ancient Egypt as well? Are these twelve divisions because the Zodiac has 12 divisions or Houses, Signs, or Mansions in our Father's House as well, His Heaven? Yes.

Now pay attention and when we are done just ask yourself if this is coincidental or if the Zodiac has played a pivotal role in shaping our lives without us even knowing it. The number 12 appears several times in the Bible, i.e., the twelve tribes of Israel, the twelve disciples of Christ, twelve stones, twelve princes, etc. It is my belief that these represent the twelve signs of the zodiac: Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius and Pisces. Now watch this:

- The Earth makes one orbit of the Sun passing through the 12 signs of the zodiac in exactly the same time that it takes the Moon to orbit the Earth 12 times.
- The largest planet in our solar system, Jupiter takes 12 years to complete one orbit of the Sun.
- There are 12 hours in the day and 12 hours in the night
- In ancient times there were 12 Greek gods
- There were 12 princes of the Aztec god king Queltzalcoatl.
- The 12 sons of Jacob founded the 12 Tribes of Israel
- There are 12 princes of Ishmail.
- Osiris, the Egyptian King had 12 apostles,
- Jesus had 12 disciples.
- There were 12 Knights of the Round Table
- There are 12 apostles of the Patriarch.
- There were 12 divisions of Solomon's Table
- There were 12 Altars of St. James
- There were 12 Labours of Hercules.
- In homoeopathic medicine there are 12 basic mineral salts, each equated to the influence of the 12 signs of the Zodiac.
- In weighing gold there are 12 ounces to the pound
- Diamonds have 12 axes.
- There are 12 members of a jury.
- In Astrology the 12 signs of the zodiac are divided into four triplicities which are Fire, Earth, Air and Water.
- The number twelve is symbolic of the creation of the universe as it represents the division or fractionating of unity (God) into twelve individual distinct vibrations or tones. This is most readily seen in music.

Answer for yourself: Is all of this repetition of the number "12" all a coincidence?

Now we are gradually becoming aware of the existence of this "Heavenly Pattern" that was reproduced on Earth by Egypt and Israel. This "Heavenly Pattern" is even reproduced in "Mother Nature" without the help of mankind. That being said then it should not surprise us to find that Israel divided its people and land into twelve districts or tribes representing the 12 houses of the Zodiac in order to conform to this "Heavenly Pattern". Likewise, King Solomon, really the Pharaoh Amenhotep III, of the 18th Dynasty of Egypt, previously divided Egypt as into 12 districts as well in order to conform Egypt to the Uranograph and "Pattern in the Heavens". No wonder Israel will do the same and follow this "pattern"; they copy their "parents" ideas which were taught them. What we fail to realize is the fact that Egypt owned and controlled the land of Israel at that time so it would not be out of character for such a division be made in both nations by Amenhotep III since he controlled both lands. Let us never forget that with the influence of the religions of Isis, Ra and El, or: Is(is)-Ra-El (Elohim-Lord) or Mother Father Son (as the personified Sun) the Hebrews named their nation Is-Ra-El, or "Israel" for a reason.

Answer for yourself: What is the etymology or origin of the name Israel? What is contained in the name of Israel? Think on what follows below and begin to grasp the importance of learning the truth about Egypt as it pertains to the knowledge of God which has come down to us through Israel and Judaism.

- Is....Isis
- Ra....Ra, the head of the Egyptian pantheon, the Egyptian God
- El...Lord Baal

Israel simply means Isis, Ra, and El. Thus Israel carries within its very name the concepts of Isis and Ra and El which reveals its Egyptian heritage.

Answer for yourself: What about the word "Krst/Karest" or "Christ"?

"Christ" simply means, "Ka", Ra, Isis. And this "Krst/Karest/Christ" is the key to all religions on way or the other. Another name for this Krst/Karest/Christ is the "Logos" which we are more familiar with as Christians today.

Answer for yourself: What is the "Ka"? Are you aware that hidden in the name of "the Christ" is the concept of the "Soul"? Could this meant that "the Christ" is the personification of "the Soul"? DID YOU HEAR THAT? Can this explain why the "Jesus Story" has been told for thousands of years as the "personification" of the Descent of the Soul into matter, or mankind? Now you understand the tragic consequences that enveloped mankind when Rome "literalized" the "Christ" and limited it to but one person. So sad; and then forged the earlier Gnostic New Testament which never taught a "historical Christ" but only the "Gnostic understanding" of "the Christ" within all mankind.

The "ka" is usually translated as "Soul" or "Spirit". The "Ka" was considered to be the essential ingredient or dimension that differentiated a living person from a dead one. Difficult to directly translate, possibly one of the most concise interpretations is "life force" or "sustenance". Each individual's "Ka", symbolized on the right, would come into existence at the moment of birth, subsequently serving as their "double" and sometimes depicted in funerary art as a slightly smaller figure behind the living being. Sometimes the creator god Khnum (one of the neteru or attributes of the One Sole God) was shown modelling the "Ka" on a potter's wheel, at the same time that He was forming the bodies of humanity. This sure sounds familiar when you read Isaiah:

Isa 64:8 8 But now, O LORD, thou art our father; we are the clay, and thou our potter; and we all are the work of thy hand. (KJV)

But then again these ideas should since Israel inherited them from Ancient Egypt. The "Ka" is represented in hieroglyphs by a pair of arms pointing upwards. The "Ka" came into existence when an individual was born when the Soul descended from Heaven into fleshly clay and matter. It was thought that when someone died that their "Ka", their Soul-Spirit would live on after their body had died. So it should not seem strange to us that we see in the very name of "the Krst/Karest/Christ" the Descent of the Soul into matter, a "death of sorts" told though an allegory of the this Deific Mind being "intersected" with the plane of fleshly matter. If you think hard then you can see that the offspring of Osiris (Father) and Isis (Mother) is the child Hours (Mind-Logos) or "Krst/Karest/Christ".

It is not time we deal with this now but the Ancients taught in their "Soul Science" that when this Deific Mind descended into "matter", the flesh of mankind, "it died"since being now limited by weaknesses and the constrains of physical matter (flesh). This is where we get the stories of the "Descent of Christ into hades" we read about, whom like other solar gods, likewise "descended into hades" (symbolic of the Descent of the Soul into the flesh of mankind). We read of this "descent into hades, the realm of the dead" over and over again in the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom. Today we have lost the "keys" to interpret correctly these ancient Spiritual dogmas when we encounter them in our Gospels which a handed down centuries since Ancient Egypt. It staggers the imagination that a pure Spiritual Concept of the "Descent of the Deific Mind of God into humankind" can, over thousands of years and at the hands of Rome, become so mutilated as to become the supposed descent of a human being into Hell to fight the Devil, which again is nothing more than "personified darkness". If you think ever harder then you see the genius of the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom; that the offspring of Creation, the fruit of "natural birth" culminates, in the Descent of the Krst/Karest/Christ into matter (mankind) and its "awakening" within mankind which is the "second birth"; the "birth of the Christ in us" and his subsequent "resurrection" in us when we experience being "born again" in the House of Pisces (the two fish, the two natures). Thus the immeasurable importance for learning about the two births of mankind and the two mothers. Now we see the importance for the Early Church Fathers when they taught that this Jesus was born at the Spring Equinox as well as at the Winter Solstice.

This should teach us quickly not only how much Spiritual Wisdom we as Christians and followers of "the Christ" has lost growing up under the influence of an anti-Jewish Christianity but just how influenced Israel was by Egyptian religion in its history in their new land. As you might surmise already this "Heavenly Pattern" must be reproduced on Earth; Heaven must come to Earth and it is through the efforts of Egypt and Israel that it did better than any other nations which tried to be the manifestation of Heaven on Earth. Thus we see the efforts of nations to conform their country, both geographically and theologically, to the "Pattern in the Mount" according to the celestial Zodiac and Star patterns above. Christianity, my birth faith, cannot make such a claim.

Again the "terrestrial" must conform to the "celestial" representation. This is more than a suggestion; it is the Command of God to mankind since the beginning of time. Each land, both Egypt and Israel, as you see, has two divisions which is a picture of Heaven on Earth which the Ancients understood that this also reflects the dual-nature of mankind:

- one natural-animal nature (in need of Spiritual awakening) and
- one Spiritual nature.

Let us not forget that what we are witnessing is the adaptation of the Uranography to Earth. Behind all of this is a Spiritual reality hidden by the Creator in the stars above that affects man's nature; both natural and Spiritual. I hope that all our readers are beginning to see the point.

Graham Hancock, in his Heaven's Mirror: The Quest For The Lost Civilization, beginning on page 88, states that Egypt believed that an initiate's ability to "ascend to the Sky", in order to make visionary journeys amongst the stars of Heaven, would be enhanced if he were to divorce himself from the concerns and "attachments" of material existence (the carnal existence). It was also believed that his contemplations would be richer if they were to be performed in an ambience that would make him acutely aware of his place in the Cosmos. This was essential because in Egypt, as in ancient Central America, "all the world which lies below" was viewed as having been:

"set it order and filled with content by the things which are placed above; for the things below have not the power to set in order the world above. The weaker mysteries, then, must yield to the stronger...the system of things on high is stronger than the things below...and there is nothing that has not come down from above" (Scott, Hermetica, p. 457, 521, 523).

The Hermetic Texts insistently describe Egypt as "an image of Heaven" (ibid. p. 341), as "the temple of the whole world" (Hermetica, translated by Brian P. Copenhaver, Cambridge Univ. Press, 1995, p. 81), and sometimes as "the sanctuary of the Cosmos" (Scott, Hermetica, p. 341) - the precious land where "all the operations of the powers which rule and work in Heaven have been transferred to Earth below" (Ibid. p. 341). As if that is not enough we learn from the Book of What Is In The Duat that the essential requirement for those seeking the Eternal Life was they they should build on the ground perfect copies "of the hidden circle of the Duat in the body of Nut [the Sky and the Heavens] (The Egyptian Heaven And Hell, Twelfth Division Of The Duat, p. 258).

Answer for yourself: What is the Duat? Simply said, for now, it is the "Stairway to Heaven", it is the same as "Jacob's Ladder"; a portal if you will or a "stargate" for the ascension and descending of the Soul. I would love to "jump into Duat" now but it must wait. More of this later when we look into where Egypt taught us it lies in Sky and Heavens above. It can be actually seen from Earth believe it or not. But be patient.

Whosoever shall make a copy thereof, and shall know it upon the earth, it shall act as a magical protector for him both in Heaven and upon the Earth (Ibid., p. 258).

It stands to reason that people who thought like this would have been almost compelled to express their ideas not only in religious texts but also in their architecture and geography of their own nations. This is actually what was done by the Ancients because of their understanding of the Heavens and the Sky above them. The foundation of their "Sky Religion" and their "Soul Science" was based upon the axiom "So Above, So Below". This is exactly what we find in Ancient Egypt and the emphasis on Uranography in their religious texts which later become the foundation for all later Sacred Texts and Bibles of the Ancient world as well as their monuments, Temples, and Pyramids and other sacred architecture and sacred geometry used in their construction. Thus we see that the Egyptian Temples and pyramids were a part of a deliberate and long-term program to copy Heaven upon the Earth; literally to build Heaven on Earth.

The picture on your left is the astronomical ceiling in the tomb of Ramses VI with depictions of scenes from the Book of the Day and the Book of the Night. The sky-goddess Nut, one of many neteru, the incarnation of the Heavenly firmament is shown curved into arch to emulate the celestial vault. Many times she is shown as a woman whose hands and feet touch the ground so that her body forms a semi-circle. As such she represents the Heavens. Her arms and legs represent the four pillars on which the Sky rests. In such a depiction we see the depiction of Nut as the Two Skies; the morning and evening Sky. In another depiction we see the ceiling of the tomb of Ramesses VI (1143-1136 B.C.E.). The ceiling depicts Nut, the Egyptian goddess of the sky. The path of the sun through the day and night skies is depicted, seen as the red disk born from Nut's loins and traveling along the length of her body (to the left of the picture) to be swallowed in the evening . The empty solar barque returns beneath her body (to the right of the picture) at night to begin the cycle again the next morning.

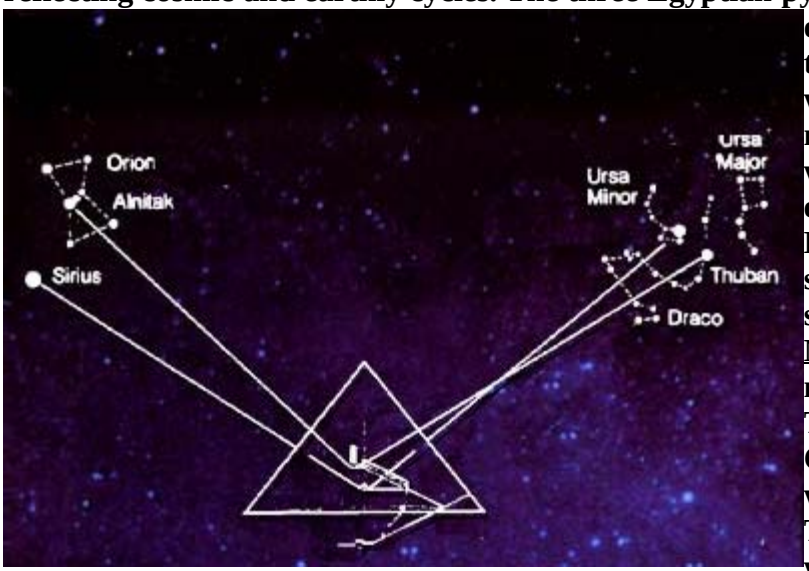
black dots above) in the evening and renewing it and releasing it again in the morning from her vagina (giving birth to new Living Energies once again..."the Sun" in this instance). This goddess Nut, this personification of the Sky and Heavens; this "neteru", therefore acquired a life-giving and regenerative role in her capacity of Lady of the Heavens and of the Stars, but also and primarily through her role as the mother of the Sun (the deceased Pharaoh was associated with the Sun deity since being a microcosm of the total Energy of the Cosmos) he shared in the Sun's rebirth through Nut (regeneration of Energies like the Sun and Souls), who also had another function, that of a protective goddess, warding off evil from the deceased. Understand the Sun was for the Ancient Egyptians the symbolic picture of this Solar System for the all encompassing Cosmic Energy of the Cosmos, this One Sole God. As this Sun was birthed daily from its daily demise and death at dusk, likewise on a smaller scale it was believed that the Pharaoh, a microcosm of the macrocosm, and mankind in general (many microcosoms), as but smaller representations of this Cosmic Energy, would likewise arise anew from the dead as well. Thus we see why Nut was pictured as swallowing the Sun with her mouth only to give birth to it again from her loins. This is a great picture of Eternal Life since all Energies in the Cosmos comprise this One and Only God. The sky-goddess Nut, served as the incarnation of the heavenly firmament and it is fitting that she be shown curved into a Heavenly arch to emulate this celestial vault above our heads. Nut was just one of the many attributes and manifestations of the One God; Nut was but one manifestation of the "Neteru". But more germane for us is the fact that this "Uranograph" of Nut was consciously transferred to Earth in not only the nations geography, but their architecture and Temple paintings by the score as well as their theology and this later becomes "lost in translation" down through history and we miss the Spiritual import of these original Divine Allegories and sadly today read these blurred accounts reflecting the very structure of the Heavens as if they were "literal historical narratives" in our Bibles which they are not. Rome is the culprit here with its "literalization" of "the Christ" into but one person and in so doing deprived the world of its Soulish goal.



The Zodiac is but one part of this "Pattern in the Mount" which is associated with the Goddess Nut. It is important to note that 36 other constellations lie outside the 12 that comprise the Zodiac. Some things need to be said about this Zodiac.

The root of Zodiac comes from the Greek word for "zoo", which literally means "circle of animals." But, to look at the stars themselves it would take a very vivid imagination indeed to envision actual animalistic forms by the actual placement of the stars of each constellation in space. The names were given to the constellations by the Ancient Egyptians and were directly tied to the natural observations of their repetitive life activity cycles throughout the year. Many give the Greeks the credit for the Zodiac and knowledge of the Precession of the Equinoxes but in so doing only betray their gross lack of knowledge concerning Egyptian Religion and its relationship to Astronomy. Needless to say the Ancient Egyptians were more spiritually evolved than people of the present and could from their observations deduce much finer things than the grossly materially minded of the present. Back then the skies were unpolluted and therefore much clearer. People became much more familiar with the skies and they became used to them as they defined the cycles of their lives. Due to the heat most worked at night so it was easy to become familiar with the skies and the stars in Ancient Egypt. So it was the original inhabitants of Egypt that named the Zodiac. The knowledge of the Stars came because of careful observation of the Stars which they could always see them because of the pure atmosphere rather than through clouded and the industrialized and light polluted skies which we have to deal with today. Most of them would sleep during the heat of the day and only venture outside in the coolness of the evening to do their work. They had the Constellations constantly in their vision, which gave them to opportunity to memorize the configuration of the Stars. They observed the Zodiac as an immense circle which was divided into twelve nearly equal parts, each segment having an individual constellation within it. But the Zodiac also moves in such a way that after 30 days the Sun came to be under a different sign. Ancient hieroglyphic texts affirm that Egypt was seen as the mirror of heaven, the mirror of the Zodiac. "As above, so below" was not merely an aphorism but a way of life. The quest of individual, king and country was to express divine harmony, the principle of goddess Ma'at, and thereby literally reflect Heaven on Earth. To mirror Heaven the Skies must be known. The ancients carefully watched the cycles of the Heavens because changes above portended changes below. Graham Hancock, in his Heaven's Mirror, reveals to the reader that this phenomena of "Uranography" is not to be limited to Ancient Egypt. In very different parts of the world, evidence exists of a common legacy--shared by cultures separated by hundreds, sometimes thousands of years as well as continents. The importance of this work lies in the author's discovery of the unifying thread that binds together the insights from previous cultures from east to west, north to south, which are expressed in the oldest remains of temples and other structures. We find them in pre-Dynastic Egypt at the city of Anu or On, called Heliopolis by the later Greeks, as well as at the city of Khemenu, dedicated to Tehuti, Djehuti, or Thoth, whom later Greeks called Hermes Trismegistus. Both were linked to the Shemsu Hor, Friends, Followers, or Sons of Horus, a mysterious brotherhood of teachers said to have founded Heliopolis. The same insights appear in cultures of Mesopotamia, whose main tangible testimonies are the ziggurats of Assyria/Babylonia; in Cambodia at Angkor Wat; on the Pacific Islands; and across the seas in Central and South America. In each case, a similar cosmological system "is associated with a school of sacred geometry and architecture and a cult of celestial imitation that finds mysterious virtue in making "copies' on the ground -- models, symbolic schemes -- of certain constellations in the sky" (p. 259). From Mexico to Iceland, Cambodia to Easter Island, China to Egypt, we are finding a common Astronomical Wisdom handed down from a time before history. The evidence includes diverse examples of megalithic architecture, the world over, which incorporate precise and sophisticated geometry and are positioned according to astronomical alignments and symbolism.

Answer for yourself: What should this say to us?

The Ancients understood that human life will never reach its full potential until our lives become a mirror of nature. God gave mankind a "blueprint" for our development in the Heavens "above" and was shadowed in Nature "below". Most cultures previous to the current industrial and technologically based societies, took into account not only the terrestrial but also the celestial cycles in designing their Temples. In ancient Egypt, music, architecture and astronomy were combined in a concise, harmonious unified system, where heaven and Earth were not isolated realms and science and religion were an integrated, mutually supportive system. From the research of Robert Bauval (The Orion Mystery) and Graham Hancock (Fingerprints of the Gods), and from the book The Message of the Sphinx, which they co-authored, we find many examples of Egyptian Temple designs reflecting cosmic and earthly cycles. The three Egyptian pyramids of the Giza Plateau mirror the offset line up of the three stars in the belt of Orion, with the Nile to the West, as the Milky Way's river of stars lies to the west of Orion. The Great Pyramid is aligned to true north-south (as opposed to magnetic North-South), which is based on the actual points around which the earth's axis spins. The shafts inside the Queens and Kings chambers were aimed directly at the bright stars that were important in Egyptian cosmology, such as Sirius, Orion and the Pole Star. As Hamlet's Mill so interestingly puts it, the language of archaic myth is astronomical. It is dealing with the Skies! Their very buildings were built to reflect the Constellations above them in the air! They correlated what was on Earth to reflect what was in Heaven. This occurred not only in Egypt, but in Cambodia, as well as the Nazca Plains in Peru, and at Stonehenge!

Answer for yourself: Now who gave them these exact alignments? And a short distance away, the Sphinx faces east, gazing at the point on the horizon where the constellation of Leo would have risen about 13,000 years ago (using computer technology to calculate the precessional drift).

In commenting on this Uranograph, the chart of Heaven and its impact upon Earth, both "celestially, geographically, and theologically", let it be said that each nation had a river flowing from the upper division down to the lower section. In Egypt we find the Nile and in Israel we find the Jordan which divided the nation into two separate regions.

Answer for yourself: How does the Uranograph apply to this?

Again this was symbolic of the two natures of mankind; one natural and one Spiritual which was separated within mankind (mankind being almost totally a body of water). Each nation had a central city representing the Holy City, a lake or sea, as well as a whole bunch of other parallel features which can be found in almost every case from nation to nation which again were mirrored in the Sky. It becomes more clear after each piece of this religious puzzle is acquired that there was the attempt by nation after nation to Pattern their nation, its geography and theology according to the "Pattern in the Sky". This explains, for instance, why nations first divided their nation into seven nomes or districts and later this division became twelve in order to match the 12 signs of the Zodiac mentioned above.

Answer for yourself: Are you becoming fully aware that all of the above which I mentioned is found in the Sky and the Heavens before they were later located on the Earth, and that they existed "celestially" before they existed "terrestrially"? Are you aware that from these visual observations of God's Heaven comes the various religious theologies down to Earth which we inherited in our lives today which exists in various conditions of degeneracy and accuracy when compared to the original intent of these original teachings when first given by these Ancient Spiritual Masters? Rome in the 3rd through the 5th century will "reinterpret" much of this and in so doing the original intent of these "celestial messages" and their intentions for the development of mankind's Soul will be changed .Knowing this then we must expend the greatest amount of effort to restore the "correct teachings" that God imparted to these mystical seers in the beginning of time and which He wrote for us in the Sky and Heaven above.

As you are beginning to see, each nation thus labored to have its unique history interpreted as a fulfillment of the sacred allegory found in the Heavens and Sky. Nation after nation molded its national history to conform as best they could to the form of the celestial myth. In other words the "celestial myths" in the Heavens and the Sky were adapted to almost every nation's national epic. And finally came the claim on the part of several, notably the Jews, that since their history fulfilled the outlines of the sacred story, and in so doing they reasoned that this proved that they were the "chosen people" of God. Now it all makes sense. Being the biological offspring of Ancient Egypt it is easy to understand how Egypt's children will adopt this same celestial Uranograph and being influenced by Egypt's adaptation of it then they will later do the same to their later homeland, their Temple, and their religious philosophy and theology and apply the distinction of being "God's chosen people" to themselves and in so doing they fitted their history into the sacred scheme aligned in the Heavens above.

Answer for yourself: You might wonder how I can make such a charge. Is there evidence that proves what I just said? Yes, abundant evidence exists today to prove both the above points; namely, that the children of Israel over 3000 years ago were the black-skinned children of the Egyptians as well as the attempt of later Israelites to adapt their nation epic to the "celestial myth" in the Sky as had their parents, the Egyptians. Lets look at this evidence before we close this article.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that in Egypt today, carved in the sides of stone monuments thousands and thousands of years old, some as old as 10,000 years B.C.E., are "names" of places that will find their "Earthly existence in Israel only within the last 3000 years"? Are you aware that Egypt had knowledge of these sacred names taken from the Sky and Heavens above thousand of years before there were ever Jews in Egypt let alone the Exodus? These Egyptian names taken from the Sky will be transferred later to various cities in Israel but their origin is from "above" our heads in God's Heavens. What we see is that our "theologies" today, from religion to religion, were adapted from Spiritual insight into the Cosmos by the Ancients and all later religions of mankind either built upon this knowledge or "lost this knowledge" and "reinterpreted" these Heavenly symbols and glyphs down through history.

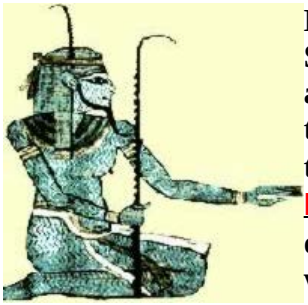
Now we must pay attention as the proofs of such a statement will be presented in greater detail to the reader. If you were to travel to Egypt today and have the capability to read the hieroglyphs you would see with your own eyes that there exists in Egypt ancient monuments that contains hundreds of Palestinian place names that were taken from the Sky and Heaven long before the Exodus and the settlement of the land of Israel by those fleeing Egypt after the reign of Akhenaten. What we find is that the Egyptian Religion, when it became localized in the Holy Land of Judea and adapted as "Judaism", only then used these names for cities and places in Israel and only after the supposed "historical" Exodus from Egypt. This is a study in itself that also has to wait for another day. That means that these names that we find in Israel later already existed in Ancient Egypt as taken from the Uranograph of the Heavens long before they every existed in the land of Israel. This explains why we find towns in Palestine today which bear the same name of a place long recognized in Egypt before there were ever the first Jew. We have already looked at "Bethany" but the list goes on and on. It is important for you to understand that just because these names were later taken from Egyptian Religion and incorporated as names for cities in Israel does not automatically make the Bible in these regards a "literal history". It only proves that the religious formulators of the national epic of Egypt as well as Israel had given to a certain place a name already found on the Uranograph or Spiritual chart and transferred there their Spiritual meanings.

At the bottom of all of this, as you will come to see the more you study, hidden in these stars and "Patterns Above" is God's will for the Spiritual maturation of mankind's Soul. St. Paul and Plato, Hermes and Orpheus, and the theologians of Ancient Egypt have long ago delineated the moral effort of mankind required to reach the acceptable level of man's Spiritual development while in these bodies of flesh. Paul speaks of the First and Second Adam, the first and second birth of mankind. Little do we know that these "Spiritual concepts" of the Soul's intended Spiritual growth and development find their origin in the Stars above; the "Pattern for the Soul" is in the Heavens above ("So Above, So Below". It is the task of the Second Adam to combat, overcome, transform, and finally embraces the union of the First Adam (the natural man of Earth which is carnal, sensual, and possesses an animal nature). First comes that which is natural, says St. Paul, then that which is Spiritual.

1 Cor 15:46-47 46 Howbeit that was not first which is Spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is Spiritual. 47 The first man is of the Earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. (KJV)



The natural man is born first in this creation and his clay body is to serve as the vehicle for the birth of the Second Adam and the Soul's maturation. Egypt teaches us this first in the religious myths of Horus, the original Krst/Karest/Christ and his opposition in the form of Set. If you look at the picture on the right you will see a figure with "two heads"; one an animal and one a hawk. The animal nature typifies all that is carnal within mankind and the hawk head of Horus is symbolic of heavenly sight that is possible for mankind and one who develops it has the ability to soar into the Heavens of God and see things the "natural man" cannot see. The victory of the Soul is won, then, by it transcending the instinctive animal nature and subduing it to the will of God and His Laws through the domination of "the Christ" within. This is the story of Horus and Set and their famous battle. This is the ancient teaching existing in some of the oldest records on our planet regarding man's Soul. The whole moral struggle in man is envisaged as the warfare between the two natures, the imprisoned potentiality of the Soul wrestling against the powers of flesh and blood to acquire dominion over them, to govern them according to reason and to subdue their fierce wild energies into the service of God's Divine Laws. Men of truly divine stature with heightened Spiritual sensitivity gave this wisdom of the Second Adam's victory over the First Adam to the race in its childhood and Paul of the Epistles only reiterates this struggle between man's two natures. And again all of these "Spiritual Truths" concerning the "Soul of mankind" came from the observation of the "Pattern in Heaven".These ancient sages sought to embody this Spiritual reality that exists in mankind in unforgettable forms of universal Spiritual religious myths that relayed to Earth this "Pattern in the Heavens, the Pattern in the Mount" for the Soul's birth, growth, maturation, victory, and release and return to God at the body's demise.

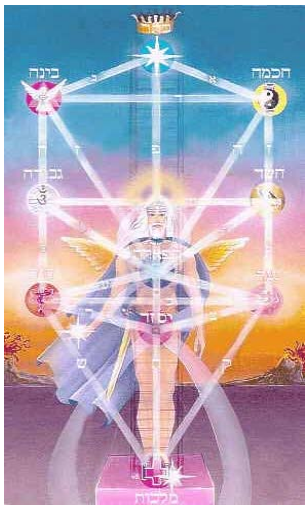
These "divine truths" were witnessed by these Ancient Spiritual Sages in the forms and phenomena of God's nature; both "celestial" and "terrestrial" (the Cosmos above and in Mother Nature). The medium that translated this "divine message" to mankind was that of the universal language of truth composed of the symbols drawn from nature itself, both "celestial" and "terrestrial". The great Bibles and Sacred Books of the world are works written in the language of symbols, with allegory, fable, parable, myth, drama, glyph, and astrograph as the primary elaborations of this Divine Truth witnessed in the Sky and Heavens above along with its confirmation in Mother Nature. In symbol after symbol man expressed this Cosmic Truth through the use of nature's symbols like the tree, the leaf, the seed, the root, the branch, the stump, the river, the Star, the sun and moon, Earth and water, air, fire, aether, the flood, the fish, beetle, cow, cat, dragon-fly, etc. Manifestations of nature provided the symbolism needed like thunder, lightning, rain, drought, and even the rainbow. Man even used geometrical shapes to covey this Divine Truth like the cross, the circle, the square, triangle, the arch, the ark, and a host of other forms and phenomena were the characters and expressions of this Soul Science.

So far I have explained the Spiritual concept of Uranography to the reader and just lightly touched on the subject. Uranography lies hidden in almost everything we read in the Bible one way or the other whether we know it or not. In order for you to believe what seems to most of us today to be almost improbable and or impossible then you need to see continually such evidence. In closing this article let us lightly touch the symbolism of "water" and "fish".

Gen 1:2 2 And the Earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. (KJV)



Everything begins with "water", Egypt called it Nun. The Egyptians symbolized this Spiritual concept, this neteru, as a bearded man with a blue or green body, symbolizing, as you might expect, water, fruitfulness and fertility. The Egyptians believed that before the world was formed, there was a watery mass of dark, directionless chaos. Genesis calls this the "darkness" which lies upon the "deep". The name of the water of chaos was Nun. This name "Nun" is very, very important as we shall come to see. In this "watery" dark-chaos lived the Ogdoad, undifferentiated "Energies" of God and potentiality which lay dormant in the One unmanifested God-Energy. It is from this unmanifested chaos that the attributes, forces, powers, energies, processes, cycles, and pattern within God, the latent Cosmic Mind, will issue forth and in so doing God will bring order, or "ma'at" and harmony to bear upon this chaos. Nun was thought to be the father of Ra, who was known as the father of the gods (neteru) and all that comes afterwards. It was from Nun that Ra (just one name for God) (or Amun, another of the Ogdoad who became prominent Middle Kingdom onward, and joined with the sun god as Amen-Ra) created himself, rising up on the first piece of land - the primeval mound (matter).

Gen 1:9 9 And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so. (KJV)

This concept is very important and lies at the very basis of what Quantum Physics is teaching the world today. Energies never end, they never cease, they just change form and in all of these energies and even their visible forms which we call "matter" lie a common Consciousness which I prefer to call "the Mind of God". So you might can visualize this concept as the Kabbalah teaches us that there exists a "Tree of Life"; planes of existence and manifestation of these Energies of God that transcend the "invisible" on down into a more progressive "visible" manifestation. Back to our point you might can say:

John 1:1-4 1 In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. 2 The same was in the beginning with God. 3 All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. 4 In him was life; and the life was the light of men. (KJV)

Key to our understanding is the word "Word".

Strong's Concordance: #3056 logos (log'-os); from 3004; something said (including the thought).

We all know that before a "word" can be spoken and come into existence for others to "hear" or be "written" it has its origin in "thought" first in our minds. Being made in the image of God then we should reason that this is the same for God as well. If "thought" precedes a written word then likewise it would for God as well. This Cosmic Intelligence and Mind first "thought" a "thought" and it became an "existence" in varied manifestations beginning with the invisible subatomic levels on down to the crudest material manifestations that we find in nature both mineral, plant, and animal and human levels of existence as this hierarch of external existences rises in complexity and consciousness. This is figuratively called the "Ladder to Heaven" that bridges the visible creation with the invisible creative origin for all things in the "thought" of the Mind of God. So this Cosmic Mind "created" Himself as Egypt teaches us from this "water abyss" of undifferentiated potential. Some call this the "neutron soup". Egypt knew how this worked and gave this Cosmic Intelligence and Energy the name Ra. You might say God's first name was "Ra". We find this in both the Egyptian and Genesis creation accounts actually which are so similar; we just don't recognize that Ra existed long before Elohim or YHVH was used to describe Ra. In other origin myths there are parallels which we find regardless if we look in those of the Egyptians, Sumerians and Babylonian stories, as well as Native American, South American, African, Tibetan, Hindu texts. There exist a state of chaos out of which is born matter and this matter is separated infinitively into higher intelligences and existences. Hence from this cosmic primal material are born or Emanated various deities and Energies - often elements of nature or necessary precursors to life itself. Therefore, chaos is a rich array of elemental forces all in place, but without form or differentiation. In this original context, chaos is all things in a hiatus, waiting for something, living in a sense of intelligent suspension. This is a vital ingredient in the creative process - any creative process; it requires the infusion of the Mind of God into this "primordial water" from which all else Emanates.

To understand Nun one must think of the primeval water that encircles the entire world, and from which everything was created. This was personified as a god or a "neteru" by God; one part of the whole of Whom God is. So we see that this "water" is the beginning of all later manifestations of life and existence; both inorganic and organic. I wish I had time to deal with this in depth but for now know that "water", in its association with life, speaks to us of the womb, the home of the Cosmos for all gestating life. In order for this potential life to come forth then a "mother", providing the adequate watery environment in her womb, is needed in order to ensure the next cycle of life as it evolves into the "Pattern" destined for it by our Creator. "Water" and "mother" go together. As mankind enters the picture we see that Ancient Egypt understood that actually "two mothers" are needed for the Spiritual completion of mankind; one natural and one Spiritual.

I wrote recently on articles entitled "Did Jesus Have Two Mothers". Not because I wrote them but the knowledge in these articles are pure "genius"; the credit to which I lay at the feet of the Ancient Spiritual Masters and Greek philosophers like Plato and Plotinus who were schooled by Egypt. It is very, very important to realize that in the mythicism of archaic literature beginning with Ancient Egypt the Sun-god, the Christos-Messiah of Egypt, specifically called in Egypt "Iusa" or "Horus", son of Osiris, had two mothers. In fact they were "sisters"; Isis and Nephytis. Remembering what we read above now it makes more sense to realize that the mother of all life is "matter" which comes from the Latin word "mater". This "matter", in the first chapter of Genesis, is twofold in it formation and organization. There is the firmament above and the firmament below. There are the waters above and the waters below. Let us not forget that "water" has already been disclosed to be the prime symbol of matter in Genesis and in the previous Egyptian creation accounts since it is from Nun that all Energies gestate in this "neutron soup" before being brought forth as the "thoughts" of Ra as tangible matter in its multiple levels of differentiation. As we might expect the conception of a primal body of water from which everything is derived is especially prevalent among peoples living close to coasts or in river areas:

- the Egyptian Nu (the primordial ocean)
- the Mesopotamian Apsu (the primeval watery abyss)
- Tiamat (the primeval chaos dragon).

Again of great symbolic significance to us and our study here is the fact that matter, water for instance, can exist in two distinct forms:

- one invisible vapor of water
- the other as a visible substance such as liquid or ice,

Answer for yourself: What should we learn from this?

All matter has evolved in two separate and distinct states; including mankind. It is first, in the formless state, not actually a substance but rather reflects only the "future potentiality" of possible substance and actualized "matter". This world of "two separate and distinct states" expresses the ideas in the world of Plato's "ideas" espoused in his "Cave teaching". This "celestial idea" as applied to mankind is the Adam Kadmon we read about; the perfect Universal Man the image of which is in the Stars above which is to be transferred to humanity below. It is inorganic, unatomic, invisible, the "great sea" of material potentiality which the ancients called "mare", "matter", or "Mary" which brings it forth. It is "Mary" or "matter" that brings forth the "first birth"; the "natural man". This is not the Adam Kadmon but only the "potentiality" of its existence (the "born again experience"). In this state "matter" or "Mary"; "the first mother," who generates in turn that which, unlike her mother, is organic, atomic, structuralized and visible substance, the "second mother". For "matter", or "Mary", when she becomes impregnated with the seed of Spirit-Cosmic Mind of God's "Word/Thought" is destined to give birth to the Krst/Karest/Christ/Christos in man's developed body.

Answer for yourself: What is this "Pattern" in Heaven teaching us?

What we see here is that the Ancients taught that there is first the inorganic or "virgin mother", "virgin matter", "virgin Mary", who is not yet "one flesh" with the Spirit, and secondarily there is the organic or "second wedded mother", who finally produces the the "Christ" in us all, the "god-son and god-daughter" in us all.

My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you, (KJV)

"Isis conceived him (matter, the first birth); Nephthys gave him birth (spirit, the second birth-born again)."

I hope you see that as mankind we all are to have experientially two mothers; one that give birth to the "natural man, the First Adam", and one who gives birth to the "spirit man, the Second Adam" in which the indwelling Krst/Karest/Christ, if formed and fed the "bread from Heaven", will continue to grow Spiritually and eventually dominate the animal nature in mankind.

Answer for yourself: Since we have a virgin birth from matter then can you begin to guess what is the offspring of such a virgin birth? Can you begin to grasp that this "second birth" of Horus/Christ is the "son of God" in each of us; the "the Christ" is the "Soul" awakened to maturity in mankind? You and I should look at the "Jesus Story" not as a "story" about another; rather, it is my story, your story, every man and woman's story.

It was "water" again which Egypt called Nun, that typified the general all-pervading first virgin essence of matter which was inorganic, undifferentiated, and unfertilized. It naturally follows that the "fish" is the form of "manifested life" which is to live in the organic water, as its first and universal creation of an organic structural constitution. It is this "fish" that is the symbol of the second mother or the "second Spiritual birth"; the symbol for the "indwelling Christ" in mankind. The "fish" is the symbol for the "second birth" of mankind and the formation of "the Christ" in all of us (symbolic of the totality of intended mankind; the natural and Spiritual births of mankind in what was originally inorganic and inert matter). What we find expressed in the Ancient Wisdom is that the Krst/Karest/Christ character in the allegorical depiction, then, would be the "son of the fish," or the "son of the "fish-mother," not of the "water-mother" since the "water mother" is the mother of the "first birth" (the natural man...latent potential matter devoid of the life-giving Christ-Spirit). This explains why we find that many of the goddess mothers of Sun-gods or Messiahs were actually called "the fish-mother" of the Son of God! This hopefully makes sense to you and explains the very constitution of mankind in need of a "second birth" that is symbolized in the Heavens by the Zodiac sign of Virgo and later by Pisces which are "two fish" (again symbolic of the Adam Kadmon, man who has experience both a natural and a Spiritual birth; "two births" - born again).

Now if you have followed this up to now then you deserve a pat on the back. Good job my friend.

Well we will continue this series in the next article as we continue to reveal our Bibles as uranography at its best.

THE SYMBOLISM OF THE THE CROSS IN THE HEAVENS #1

If you are a Christian, or ever considered yourself a Christain then the following Scripture has a special meaning for you:

Phil 2:6-8 6 Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: 7 But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: 8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. (KJV)

We are instructed that this passage refers to the literal crucifixion of a Jewish Rabbi and likely Messiah some two thousand years ago in Israel.

Answer for yourself: Is that true? No. If you want to know for certain that this passage has nothing to do with any supposed Jewish Messiah who was crucified on an "old rugged cross" the read intently the following article.

Answer for yourself: What is this "cross"? Is this "allegorical" or "literal"? What is this "death on the cross"? Could it be that the whole of Christianity, following this Roman "reinterpretation" and "literalistic misinterpretation" of the Ancient Soul Science, have completely misunderstood what being "crucified on a cross" actually meant for God? Could it just be, just be, and even against all odds, that a physical nailing to an old rugged cross is not within a thousand miles of the true meaning of the above reference in Philippians? Surely not you think; well that is until:

You do the studies in Comparative Manuscript evidences and trace the purposeful forgeries of the Hebrew Texts when carried over into the Greek and Latin and their subsequent continued forgery in many, many passages in our Christian Old Testaments and New Testaments,

Until you do the required studies in the falsification of Messianic Prophecies in the Christian Bibles where "key" Messianic passage after passage has been purposefully mistranslated, purposefully misquotes, purposefully taken out of context, and even invented out of thin air by the Christian redactors of the Christian Scriptures,

Until you do the necessary studies of comparing the lives of the Sungods from beginning to end with the "assumed literal and historical" life of a Jewish "Messiah-to-be" named Jesus as depicted in the New Testament and see for yourself that the "events" in his life, from beginning to end" are "EXACT" duplications of the lives of these prior allegorized and personified Sungods from thousands of years earlier;

Until you, based upon what you have already found in your studies above, set out to find any and all references for a possible historical Jesus Christ and sift through the evidence, or lack thereof, and see for yourself that all supposed "evidence" for the existence of a historical Jesus is deemed "forged" by the earliest Christians or "purposefully misinterpreted" or "misread" in one way or the other in order to try to materialize a "historical Jesus" when modern scholarship helps today to show us the truth about such deceptions,

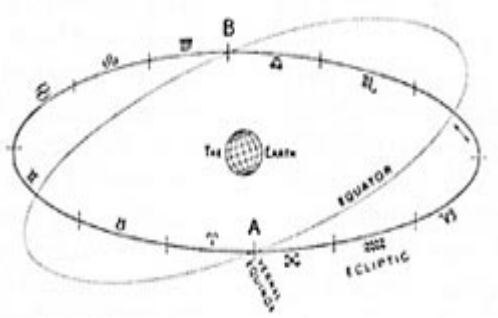
Until you study and master Gnosticism and see how personification, allegory, and metaphor was the medium used by these ancients who possessed "supreme Spiritual Knowledge" and wrote treatises that escaped the purge of literature and world-wide library burnings of Rome to reveal to us today that the Ancient Religious Belief of mankind was not the descent of a "literal Christ" to Earth as a baby but rather express the Descent of the Soul into matter into the whole of mankind and see that they as well used anthropomorphic language in describing this Celestial Event through a human-like example whom we call "the Christ" (many nations have this same story because they believed in this same Descent of the Soul into matter),



Until you do the required study into Astro-Theology and see for yourself how the personified path of the Sun through the Zodiac (the Sun being only the symbol for the Uncreated Intelligent Energy of the Cosmos whom we call God) is the "EXACT" same story from beginning to end, from Matthew 1 through Matthew chapter 28, which we find in our "supposed historical "Jesus Story",

...then and only then will you find the courage and the wherewithal to look at the "Cross" and begin to inquire, with good reason, that something other than a "historical" or "literal" interpretation lay behind it.

Answer for yourself: So what is it, what lies behind this "death of the cross" of which we hear and are warned is necessary to believe "to be saved" and "go to Heaven"? What is this cross and is our salvation dogmas in Christianity correct or grossly in error and we not know it? Let us focus upon this passage once again:

Phil 2:8 8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Have we possibly been misled to think that this "Christ" was crucified and nailed to a rugged old piece of wood and in reality had we possessed the "keys" of the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom we would have understood what this had meant since the beginning of time? And what was this? Simply, this "cross" is in the Heavens and not on Earth. It hides again this same teaching of the Descent of the Soul into matter which was hidden in the Precession of the Equinox and this "Cross", which is in Heaven involves the Celestial Equator and its intersection with the Ecliptic or the Equinoxes. We will tackle this in-depth momentarily.

Answer for yourself: What does "being found in the fashion of a man" mean in reference to being on a cross? What is this death? Could it be that this "death" has nothing to do with a nailing upon a wooden cross? Is that possible? Can we have so much so wrong and never know it? Who is responsible for changing the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom and this Celestial Soul Science and in so doing destroyed the original intent of the Deific Mind which taught in the beginning that this "death of the cross" referred ONLY to the Descent of the Soul into matter (the body) and its confinement in matter, a body, that was susceptible to disease, evil works of the flesh, and finally death? Was it Rome again who changed the concept of "death" in the Bible and the realm of the dead? Yes; they changed almost everything; such was their hatred of the Laws of God, the Torah, and the Jews that a radical "reinterpretation of the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom" was in order and we, as mankind, have walked in the blackness of such ignorance for over 1,800 years presently.

Answer for yourself: Could it be as the Ancients taught, before the later Roman "literalization" and "reinterpretation" of the Ancient Egyptian Soul Science, that this "cross" was symbolic for the metaphysical teaching of the intersection of the Deific Mind with matter (flesh)? Is this where "God crossed-over" into "matter" and when the "Deific Mind" of the Cosmos became tabernacled "in flesh"; a flesh that would require a "Second Birth"? Is this the real "incarnation" which is not limited to one baby in a supposed manger (by the way the "manger" is in the House of Capricorn, where we find the Sun in December (X-mas) and is in the stars where it should be)? Is this "incarnation" to be understood as the experience of all of God's children and not limited to but one person? Is this Philippians reference really a reference to a physical old rugged cross made of wood of which we sing in songs that supposedly refers to Jesus, the presumed Jewish Messiah, who was surmised to have been nailed some two thousand years ago to a wooden cross? Or could this Philippians reference refer to the Divine Energy of God (as the Soul) as it descends and "falls" and crosses into the plane of physical matter in its Descent from Heaven where it takes up abode in a body of fleshly "death"? Is this why there is no concept of "original sin" to be found in either Egyptian Religion or Judaism? Was this "fall" actually something else and was never intended to be connected with "sin"?

Wow the implications for these questions are astonishing and impact the core religious beliefs of a Christianity that has so strayed from the Ancient Truths thanks to Rome's hatred of the Jews as the children of Egypt.

We need to speak right now upon the "cross" and its symbolism. You might has surmised but this "Cross" is found in the Sky and is related again to the Sun, the symbol for this Intelligent Cosmic Energy-Creator we call God. It is connected as I said earlier with the Precession of the Equinoxes. If you are not well versed in understanding the Precession of the Equinox then you need to stop right now and read both articles, one and two, if you ever hope of cracking this "Jesus Story" and understanding all the "Sungod stories" were the same and why our "Jesus Story" in the Age of Pisces had to be the same and "conform to the Pattern in the Mount" as had done all the others which had come before from Age to Age to Age as we find in recorded history. Every Age had a new understanding of "the Osiris-Horus, the Krst, the Karest/the Christ" and this new interpretation came regularly every 2.100 years or so. Had we known the Ancient symbolisms of our Bibles before we ever read them then we would have never understood such passages dealing with this "cross" and "death" as we have in the Philippians passage. Instead we would have continued the unbroken chain of our Spiritual Ancestors and understood these Ancient Spiritual Concepts the same way that the Ancients understood them and we would have understood how they were intended to be interpreted. If we had had these "keys" to interpret this Astronomy Book we call the Bible then we would have immediately recognized the Spiritual Genius of the Bible as it was intended to be understood since it, and other Sacred Books of antiquity, which carried this same Religious Concept of the Soul and its Descent into Matter which had been taught for thousands of years before a presumed historical Jesus. Failing to know the "keys" of this Ancient Soul Science and this "secret language" we are easily led astray today by our Bibles and our "literalistic" interpretations that our Preachers assure us are correct. We simply don't know the Ancient Symbols in our Bibles and few are fluent in the language of symbols as Christians today. Symbols surround us in myriad forms and form an inextricable part of our daily lives, yet unlike our spoken languages, schooling in symbolism is left to the individual initiative. That means you have to take individual responsibility to study to find these higher truths for yourself and sadly so few do. We are content to read about some Circus trick as "Jesus walking on water" when in fact it has to do with "repentance" . We are lost in a maze of confusion and convoluted theologies as Christians; we call "black" as if it is "white" and "white" as if is "black" and never have a clue to the deception to which we have fallen; that is until we die and find out the truth. But what then?

Many of the symbols we take for granted today as static signs of religious or secular life were created long ago, representations of the movements of earth and heaven, symbols of the seasons, and representations of cosmic and earthly deities. Over time, they have acquired layers of increasingly complex meaning, and this evolution of meaning continues to stray from the original truth that it once taught. These symbols are powerful because they are archetypal; even cultures that do not share language share an innate understanding of symbols. We need to consider the basic building blocks of religious symbolism that have existed since Ancient Egypt and in so doing restore their original meanings.

The Circle is the most common and universal signs, found in all cultures. Yet this circle is related to "the Cross" as I will show you momentarily. The "circle" is the symbol of the Sun in its limitless or boundless aspect. It has no beginning or end, and no divisions, making it the perfect symbol of completeness, eternity, and the Soul. The circle is also the symbol of boundary and enclosure, of completion, and returning cycles. The circle reflected represents the dyad, the introduction of duality, and represents creation and manifestation. We see this on the left and this is called vesica pisces or "Jesus fish." The symbol of the dyad is known as the "vesica pisces," or fish bladder, because it appears as a fish.

The equal armed solar cross, on the right, is another universal symbol, which can be found in every culture with a knowledge of the passage of time. The Solar cross is probably the oldest religious symbol in the world, appearing in Asian, American, European, and Indian religious art from the dawn of history. Composed of a equal armed cross within a circle, "the solar cross" represents the solar calendar- the movements of the sun, marked by the solstices. Sometimes the Equinoxes are marked as well, giving an eight armed wheel. It is the first truly theological emblem, marking not only the points of the solar calendar, but the juxtaposition or intersection of the realm of the "material" with the realm of the "divine"; two planes of existence have merged together.

Answer for yourself: Does this "intersection" of two planes, as seen in the cross above, remind you of Heaven and Earth and where they come together as well? It should. Man has always knew that he came from "Above" and desires to return there. But getting to Heaven is the goal and plaguing quest of mankind since his beginning. The Pharaohs we saw believed that they "flew" to Heaven after they died. Other nations had this same idea which derived from this original Egyptian ancient religious belief. Thus this "Cross in the Heavens", this idea of intersecting planes of existences, has been adapted by many nations and all the while carries the hidden idea of "matter/flesh" returning to Heaven. Man came to believe he was "fly" to Heaven some way when he died. This religious concepts was captured by mankind in various art forms. Man depicted this "Crossing of existences" with wings to amplify such a concept. It is called the "Fravahar" by some. The Fravahar is the symbol of the Spirit of the human being that had existed before his/her birth and will continue to exist after his/her death. It was given wings to remind man that his goal in this Earthly life is to prepare himself so that at his death the can "fly to Heaven". It is to remind one of the purpose of life on this Earth, which is to live in such a way that the Soul progresses spiritually and attains union with God. This "God" for the Persians was called Ahura-Mazda (the Wise Lord). The Fravahar's face resembles the face of human being and therefore, indicates its connection to mankind. There are two wings which have three main feathers. These main feathers indicate three symbols of "good reflection," "good words," and "good deeds," which are at the same time the motive of flight and advancement. The lower part of the Fravahar consists of three parts, representing "bad reflection," "bad words," and "bad deed" which causes misery and misfortune for human beings. The circle in the middle of the Fravahar's trunk indicates that our Spirit is immortal, having neither a beginning nor an end. It was believed that when one lived a life full of "good words and good deeds" that at his body's demise the true "self", his Soul, will fly back to Heaven from which it came.

Every Ancient Nation had this same knowledge at one time in the history of humanity but as always such concepts had their beginning with Egypt and this original meaning we find in Ancient Egypt would change over time. The history of the Fravahar design begins in ancient Egypt, with a stylized bird pattern which is known as the spread-eagle. A spread-eagle as it is called in heraldry - features a flying bird shown from below, with its wings, tail, and legs outstretched. Such designs have been used in cultures throughout history, including American, where the seal of the U.S. Government features a spread-eagle. An Egyptian spread-eagle device is featured in the treasure of Tut-ankh-amoun which has a bird's body with a human head, and in which hieroglyphic symbols are held in the outstretched talons. These features will later re-appear, transformed, in the Fravahar. Closer still to the Fravahar are Egyptian designs which feature a Sun-disc with wings. This winged sun-disc represents Horus, the hawk-god believed by the ancient Egyptians to be incarnate in Pharaoh, the god-king. The "winged sun-disk" is a symbol originating in Egypt and has been used by a variety of groups such as Freemasonry, Spiritists, Theosophy, the Rosicrucians and the Bible Students (Jehovah Witness). In Ancient Egypt, the immortal soul of a human being, called a "ba", is represented by a stylized bird with a human head. The "Ba-bird" is depicted in many different styles and positions, including the familiar "spread-eagle" configuration we recognize in the Fravahar.

A Masonic reference work describes it this way: ... the Winged-Disk, with the Uraei of Egypt, the original of which we find in the text summarized by Naville in the Myths of Horus, p11. xii..."Horus commanded Thoth that the Winged-Sun-Disk, with Uraei, should be brought into every sanctuary wherein he dwelt, and into every sanctuary of all the gods of the lands of the South and the North, and in Amentet, in order that they might drive away evil from therein....". As not to forget one drives away the "evil from within himself" by developing a life full of "good deeds and good words" and make this his way of life thus preparing himself to "fly to Heaven" when he dies. This is what is meant by the Winged-Disks, with the Uraei, which are seen over the entrances of the courts of the temples of all the gods and goddesses of Egypt (Churchwald, Albert, The Signs and Symbols of Primordial Man, (London: George Allen & Co., Ltd.) 1913 p. 344). A Rosicrucian reference work says this: The Winged Globe is pre-eminently a Rosicrucian symbol, although the Illuminati may lay claim to it, and it may be admitted that it is of Egyptian origin. The Winged Globe is the symbol of the perfected soul making its flight back to the source of its creation in the Elysian fields beyond (Swinburne, Clymer, The Rosicrucians Their Teachings (Quakertown, PA.: The Philosophical Pub. Co.), 1923 p. 112. Quoted by Springmeier, p. 115).

... the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His wings... Malachi 4:2 (NKJ)

We find this same Ancient Symbol in our Hebrew Old Testaments again showing prior Egyptian influence upon the Jewish people. Some view this "sun of righteousness" in the Hebrew Tanakh as alluding to the Egyptian winged-sun-disc symbol.

Answer for yourself: What should we have learned so far from this symbolism and the "Cross" in the Heavens? Righteousness, good deeds, good words, and good actions prepares one for a later "flight" to Heaven prepared for the Righteous Soul of mankind. We return home from which we came; thus the "Soul Shafts" in the Pyramids which teach these same "metaphysical truths".

Micah 6:8 8 He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Had you ever thought before now that this "Cross" of which we have heard our whole life as Christians might only be a depiction of Astronomical and Metaphysical Religious Concept long before is was reinterpreted and made to refer to a physical death of a presumed Messiah? If this "Cross" referred originally to the crossing of the Path of the Sun at the two Equinoxes then do these "Celestial 2 markers" define an "ordered existence" for all life? Is there a "Pattern" of defined "order" in the cyclical renewal of life in this cycle of Equinoxes? Are we to get this idea from the harmony exhibited at these two Equinoxes when "light and dark" is "balanced" and "equal" on this particular day? Is this a Celestial Picture that man is to bring such an "order" within himself as well? Are we to learn from this that mankind is to "order his two natures" and bring them into balance within himself? Is this "order" the same captured by the Egyptian Religious Concept of "Ma'at" which means "Justice and Truth"? Do we dare forget what we learned about Set and Horus when they established harmony and balance between themselves once again?

This "winged Solar Disc", see above, is a form that the god Horus Behudety (Horus of Edfu) takes in his battles with Seth (the personified battle of light vs dark; good vs bad; evil vs righteousness, the good nature and the evil nature in mankind). The legend says that the god Thoth used his magic to turn Horus into a Sun-disk with splendid outstretched wings. The goddesses Nekhbet and Uazet in the form of uraeus snakes joined him at his side. This battle between opposing natures within mankind, as personified by Set and Horus, and as taught in the "two births" and "two mothers" is to culminate in peace being restored between the Set and Horus inside mankind; where man learns to master his animal nature through the indwelling "Krst/Karest/Christ" living inside of himself.

As stated earlier this solar cross is probably the most ancient spiritual symbol in the world, appearing in Asian, American, European, and Indian religious art from the dawn of history. Composed of a equal armed cross within a circle, it represents the solar calendar- the movements of the sun, marked by the solstices. Sometimes the equinoxes are marked as well, giving an eight armed wheel. (The swastika is also a form of Solar cross, emphasizing movement.) The Chi-Rho emblem can be viewed as the first Christian Cross. The Chi ro became an important Christian symbol when adopted by the Roman Emperor Constantine, representing the first two letters in the name of Christ- the Chi, or 'ch,' and Rho, or 'r.' According to Church Father Eusebius, on the eve of the Battle of the Milvan Bridge, the Emperor saw the emblem in a dream, with the inscription, "By this sign, you shall conquer." According to the story, the battle was won. In return for the victory, Constantine erected Christian churches. Unfortunately, this story is very unlikely, as Constantine's conversion occurred on his deathbed, if at all. In any case, the symbol was the standard of the Emperor's army, prominently displayed on the Emperor's labarum, or battle standard. Before it became the monogram of Christ, the chi rho was the monogram of Chronos, the god of time, and an emblem of several solar deities. In Hebrew, Chi-Rho equates to Tav-Resh. The chi rho was used in alchemical texts to denote time.

Now with that as a small background understand that this "Solar Cross" shows intersecting planes since normally reflecting only two planes. If you look at the Presbyterian Cross on the right you see "two long planes" vertically and "two short planes" horizontally. They are of different lengths because first of all they are symbolic not only of the Sun which we have shown dramatically on the Cross on the right but that this Sun is on this Cross in the Heavens. This Sun "crosses" a mark in the Heavens as seen from Earth by mankind and this "mark" is called the Equinoxes; both the Spring and Autumn Equinox. At these "Equinoxes" the amount of "light" and "darkness" are equal daily so according to "the Pattern" two planes of this "Cross" have to be equal and length and this is exactly what we find on the "horizontal beams". This is symbolic for the Spring and Autumn Equinox where the Sun "crosses over the intersection of the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptical Orbit of the Earth around the Sun" (as seen from Earth). The two longer planes, one shorter than the other, refer to the Solstices where light it longest per day on the Summer Solstice and shortest per day at the Winter Solstice. The great circle on the celestial sphere that lies in the plane of the earth's orbit is called the plane of the ecliptic. Because of the earth's yearly revolution around the sun, the sun appears to move in an annual journey through the Heavens with the ecliptic as its path. The ecliptic is the principal axis in the ecliptic coordinate system . The two points [the Cross] at which the ecliptic crosses the celestial equator of the Earth are the called the "Equinoxes" and it is at these two times that the amount of light and darkness on that particular day is "equal"; thus it is called the "Equal-nox" .

Now the other two planes are not equal in length; one being longer (symbolic for the Summer Solstice...the longest daylight of a day in a year and the others shorter which we call the Winter Solstice...the shortest daylight of a day in a year. Now you know about the "Cross in the Heavens" where the "Sun is on the Cross" or "Crucified on the Cross" as described by the Ancients. It is here, when the Sun emerges from below the Celestial Equator once a year as it moves into the Norther Hemisphere by "crossing over the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptic plane (this X in the Sky) did the ancients believe that the Sun had risen from the dead (the death of the Winter Solstice) and they were the recipients of the Sun, symbolizing of God, pouring out its life for them. This Sun was pouring out its life or its "blood" for them as seen in the "red rays" of Sunrise on the Vernal Equinox. Since the Sun was the symbol for this Invisible God who is the life-giver, then the Sun, as God's symbol, likewise was pouring out its "life" and "Energy" for them that assured them of "life and life abundantly" since the Earth was waking up from the death of winter, trees were beginning to boom, new crops were growing, animal and mankind were now receiving the bounty of Mother Earth once again. They were "saved" by God and His Sun. As this Sun poured out its "life" for them as renewed Energy that catalyzed photosynthesis likewise God had "poured out His life for them" or as they also said it "poured out His 'blood' for them". The Sun was "on the Cross" (the intersection of the Celestial Equator and the intersecting plane of the Ecliptic) pouring out His Life and "Blood" for mankind on the Vernal Equinox every year. This "crucifixion" was first "Celestial" before it was later believed to be "terrestrial". From this Astronomical event in Space we get all out later "crucified Sungod stories"; including our "Jesus Story".

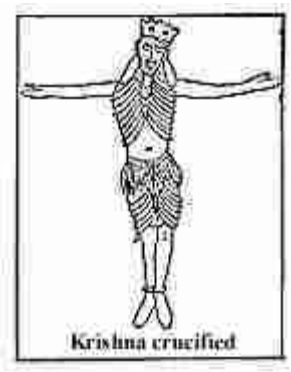
Answer for yourself: Am I making this up? No. Watch this!



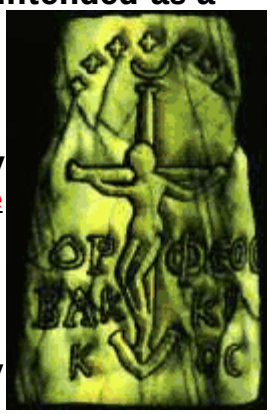
The Etruscan God Ixion was often depicted crucified on a solar wheel as seen on the right.

The Aztec solar deity Quetzalcoatl, depicted crucified on an equal armed cross is seen on the left. Here dramatically portrayed to you we find the concept of the "personified Crucifixion" in the Heavens which later became "literalized" in the story of other Solar gods like the "Jesus Story".

But these are not the only references to "gods" being "crucified" before the "Jesus Story". Another famous "god on the Cross in the Sky" is Krishna "crucified" as seen below. Now you can begin to understand the significance and importance for blood sacrifice and why this is the oldest and most universal act of piety known to mankind.

Answer for yourself: And why is that again? Simply because God, symbolized by the Sun, gave His life and "blood" for mankind at the Vernal Equinox ever year and mankind later, once understanding this concept, did likewise. The offering of animals, including the human animal, dates back at least twenty thousand years, and, depending on how you read the scanty archaeological evidence, arguably back to the earliest appearance of humanity. Many religions recount the creation of man through the bloody sacrifice of a God-man--a divinity who is torn apart to sow the seeds of humanity.

Answer for yourself: Who does this remind you of? Have you read about Osiris being dismembered and his parts distributed over the whole land of Egypt? What of Orpheus, of Baal, Dionysus? This "Pattern" continues from nation to nation.



Krishna's body, the God-man, was suspended to the branches of a tree by his murderer, being pinned by many arrows to the tree. It was Osiris again who was caught up in a tree as well. John Remsburg says in The Christ: There is a tradition, though not to be found in the Hindoo scriptures, that Krishna, like Christ, was crucified.

To wit, the legend of Krishna's death has been interpreted to mean that he was pinned to a tree, essentially representing a crucifixion. However, it is not just tradition but artifacts that have led to the conclusion that Krishna was crucified. Indeed, there have been found in India numerous images of crucified gods, one of whom apparently is Krishna, important information not to be encountered in mainstream resources such as encyclopedias. Moreover, it appears that Krishna is not the first Indian god depicted as crucified. Prior to him was another incarnation of Vishnu, the avatar named Wittoba or Vithoba, who has often been identified with Krishna.

In Bible Myths and Their Parallels in Other Religions, Doane elaborates:

It is evident that to be "hung on a cross" was anciently called "hanging on a tree", and to be "hung on a tree was called crucifixion". We may therefore conclude from this, and from what we shall now see, that Crishna was said to have been crucified.

I direct you attention to an amulet that dates from the third century AD. It is intended as a magical charm, and depicts a crucified figure of the wine god Bacchus. Above the figure is a crescent moon, and seven stars, referring to the 5 visible planets, the Sun and the Moon. It is unusual as it depicts a crucified figure other than Christ at time when similar images of Jesus were rare. But according to the "Pattern in the Mount" the Sun was "crucified and it was only a very short step to personification of the Sun and then we have the "Son of the SUN being crucified".

Answer for yourself: Are these just coincidences? Absolutely not.

Fourth century Bishop John Chrysostom writes : "On this day also the Birthday of Christ was lately fixed at Rome in order that while the heathen were busy with their profane ceremonies, the Christians might perform their sacred rites undisturbed. They call this the Birthday of the Invincible One; but who is so invincible as the Lord? They call it the Birthday of the Solar Disk, but Christ is the Sun of Righteousness." Again we have Christ connected by the early Christian Fathers with this "Astronomical Cross in the Heavens" symbolized as we saw above as the SUN of Righteousness.

Consider this- several other Gods share the December birthday, and like Mithras, they are also solar deities, who are born in the Winter Solstices, often of virgin mothers, die, and are reborn. One of these, a pre-Christian deity called Attis, was called "The lamb of God," and his crucifixion and subsequent resurrection were celebrated annually, with ritual communions of bread and wine. His virgin mother, Cybele, was worshipped as "The Queen of heaven." It gets more interesting the further back we look- Attis and Cybele's predecessors are the Babylonian Goddess Ishtar, and her consort Tammuz. It is from their legend that we get the name for the annual celebration of the resurrection of Christ- Easter, a name of the Goddess Ishtar.

This is not the only coincidence related to this ancient couple- the earliest use of the cross as a religious symbol is related to Tammuz. In fact, crosses are related to a variety of solar deities. Of course, the cross was not popular with early Christians, except in the form of an X, the Greek initial of "Christos." (Even this was borrowed symbolism- the initials belonging to the Greek Chronos.)

Hundreds of years before Jesus, there was a passion story told about a God man, born of a virgin mother, in a stable. He travels about with his followers, preaching and performing miracles, including turning water into wine. Eventually, he incurs the wrath of the religious authorities, who are appalled that he refers to himself as the son of god. He allows himself to be arrested and tried for blasphemy- a willing self-sacrifice. He is found guilty and executed, only to rise from the grave three days later, where the women weeping at his tomb do not recognize him until he assumes his divine form. This god, also one of the first depicted crucified, is the vine-God Dionysus.

Common to all of these 'mystery' religions (so called because one was required to be initiated or baptized into the faith to learn its doctrines)- including early Christianity- are themes of rebirth, redemption, and the transmission of life-changing information- spiritual salvation. So many religions in those times shared similar themes and with that usually we find that the deities became melded together. Early depictions of Jesus show him holding the Lyre of Orpheus, or driving Apollo's chariot. A talisman bearing the crucified likeness of Dionysus is inscribed Orpheus/Bacchus. The follower of Jesus, named Lazarus ('resurrected,' a derivative of the name of Osiris, the resurrected God of Egypt).

Of course, later Christians were terribly perturbed by these similarities to Pagan religions; religious by the way that they had defined as "pagan". These coincidences so disturbed one early Christian church father, Justin Martyr, that he accused the devil of sending an imitator of Christ in advance. Had he paid a little more attention to the past, he might have noted that the association of Jesus with Dionysus is not so strange-philosophers had been making connections between Jehovah and Dionysus for centuries.

Focusing on this "crucifixion" once again in the images provided by Moor in his book allow us to see for ourselves the representations of an Indian god, Wittoba/Krishna, in cruciform, with nail holes in his hands and feet like we see in our "Jesus Story". Notice if you will the image of the godman crucified is without any wood being present. This crucifixion, bathed in the rays of the Sun, occurs "in space,". This "Celestial Crucifixion" can also be found reproduced in Lundy's book, Monumental Christianity, wherein he asserts that this "Outer Space Crucifixion" is way before the emergence of Christianity and it uninfluenced by Christianity and thus represents an older tradition of a crucified god.With this transcendent cruciform of the deity and others in mind, Higgins, in his Anacalypsis, continues his intriguing detective tale:

... I cannot help suspecting, that it is from this Avatar of Cristna that the sect of Christians heretics got their Christ crucified in the clouds.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that long before Christianity we find this "crucified God" in other nations being depicted as being "Crucified In Space", in "Outer Space"? Did you look close to picture from Moor's (in his Hindu Pantheon) reproduction of ancient art and see the nail holes in the hands and feet of the "Celestially Crucified God"?

Answer for yourself: Do you mean to tell me that this "Cross of Crucifixion" is not on some hill of Golgotha in Israel but in Outer Space? No wonder we cannot find any "unforged" evidence for a historical Jesus being crucified in the world today that exists outside of this one book given us by these Roman forgers. No wonder Rome had to "purposefully misquote, mistranslate, and invent texts used in their Second New Testament in order to conceal this "Solar Crucifixion" and in so doing limit "the Christ" to but one person in their version of a religion crafted to dominate the minds of mankind through fear and ignorance.

Answer for yourself: Has this Sun on the Cross in Heaven and the Sky been personified and in so doing been brought down to Earth from Heaven to complete the mythos and the Uranograph? Yes. But sadly here what was "mystical" and "metaphysical" has been make "literal and historical" to which was attached the dogma that if you don't believe such a "literal-historical" even you are damned to Hell. Such simply is not true. Instead of a rugged cross to which a human body was supposed hanged for your sin we are to "put to death" the works of Set, the works of the flesh that lie within us:

Rom 6:6 6 Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. (KJV)

Again we need the "keys" to interpret this passage correctly. The Descent of the Soul was a "type of death" and "crucifixion" where the Soul was imprisoned in a body of death, disease, and which is capable of great evils. Man was to understand that like the "Christ imprisoned in a body of death" so likewise our Evil "Sethian" Nature is imprisoned inside us as well and that the only hope that we can rise above this animal nature within us is that we the "Krst/Karest/Christ" within us arise as the "Sun of righteousness with healing in his wings".

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

Col 1:26-27 26 Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints: 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

This is the only hope for mankind; to know who he is, from which we came, and to which he goes at the end of his life.

The "Pattern in the Mount" continues; sadly today without proper interpretation as evidenced by 2.5 billion Christian believers who will go to their graves believing in an assumed historical Messiah crucified for their sins when God only gave man repentance and good works to atone for such sins in the first place. Judaism and Egyptian religion has always known this; it is we who drink our Christian "grape kool-aid" Sunday after Sunday who have "died to the truth". Totally absent today from Christianity is the "keys" necessary to interpret the "Jesus Story" correctly and we lay this tragic condition to the efforts of Rome over the first 5 centuries to eradicate as completely as possible the righteous teachings of both Judaism and Gnosticism. In their place we are dumbed-down continually to believe a fairy tale instead of the truth about "the Christ" within us all.

We will continue in the next article investigating the Astronomy behind this Cross in the Heavens in more detail to make certain there is no doubt about the truth of the matter.

PRECESSION OF THE EQUINOXES...COMING UP TO SPEED ABOUT RELIGION

Precession means literally, "the act of preceding." The more specific meaning in astrology is "the motion of a spinning object - in which the body wobbles so that the axis of rotation sweeps out a cone." An everyday example of this is a spinning top, it spins but also the axis around which it spins goes around in a larger circle. The expression first appears in Ptolemy's [c 130 - 170 AD] Al Magest and is from the Latin, praecesse, which means to overtake or to outpass. In the astrological Movement of the Ages the object which is spinning around on its axis is the Earth, and the axis that it spins about is the imaginary line which runs between the Earth's True North and True South Poles: the Earth's axis. It is the Earth's axis which precesses. Viewed over a long period of time - and ignoring the Earth's orbit around the Sun - the Earth would look like a spinning top. The time taken for the Earth's axis to sweep out a complete cone, as viewed from above - one complete wobble of the Earth's axis if you like - is approximately 25 925 years [2002 AD], otherwise called a Great Year, or a "Platonic Year".

Answer for yourself: Why does the Earth "precess"?

- The Earth's axis is tilted at 23. degrees to the plane of the ecliptic. If the Earth and Moon were not tilted at all relative to the plane of the Ecliptic then there would be no precession. The Earth's axis would forever be at right angles to the Ecliptic.
- The Earth has 'a bulge.' It's a bit larger [43 km] in diameter at the Equator than it is between the poles. If the Earth had no spin, gravity would act the make the Earth a perfect sphere, but the Earth's spin throws its mass slightly outwards at the Equator.
- The gravity of the Sun and Moon then act on this bulge and their action is to try to 'drag' this bulge down on to the plane of the Ecliptic. [The same gravity action of the Sun and Moon is responsible for the tides.] The Earth's Equator doesn't lie on the Ecliptic, it lies at 23° 26' degrees to it [2004 AD]. It is the act of gravity trying to drag the bulge onto the plane of the Ecliptic that makes the Earth's axis precess. This last bit is pretty hard to visualise. [And was discovered relatively recently by Pierre Laplace, Traité de Méchanique Céleste 1799–1825 AD.] The picture on the right is depiciting the Moon and the Sun dragging on the Earth. This is an attempt to show the dragging action of the Sun and the Moon on the Earth at the "same time". This drag of the Earth's equatorial bulge towards the Ecliptic does not succeed. Instead it makes the Earth's axis wobble around in a circle.

Answer for yourself: What Consequences does the Precession of the Earth Have? It produces the Astrological Ages.

This precession of the Earth causes the Movement of the Vernal Equinox, the Precession of the Equinoxes, the Changing Pole Star and the Movement of the Ages. It is the cause of Astrological Ages and has become the foundation for all later "religious theologies" in one way or the other.

- The Movement of the Ages starts with the fact that the Earth spins on its axis.
- This produces a 'bulge' in the Earth at its equator. # The gravity of the Sun and Moon [luni-solar gravity] then act on this bulge.
- The Earth's equator is at an angle to the Ecliptic and so this gravitational attraction acts to drag the Earth's equator towards the Ecliptic.
- This causes the Earth's axis to Precess.
- The plane of the Moon's orbit about the Earth rotates with respect to the Ecliptic, this causes an effect called Nutation.
- The Precession of the Earth's Axis causes the Vernal Equinox Point to appear to Move clockwise against the background stars. The stars are not changing, the View Point from the Earth changes with time.
- This is known as the Precession of the Equinoxes.
- When the Vernal Equinox Point appears to move into another Zodiac Constellation, the Astrological Age is said to have changed
- As the Earth's axis is Precessing the North Pole Star to which it points Changes over time.

In the Precession of the Equinoxes, the Vernal Equinox Point precedes around the Ecliptic. i.e. each year it occurs in a slightly more easterly place on the Ecliptic. Vernal means "arriving in the Spring time". Equinox literally means "equal night", or equal length of light and darkness in a day. It happens twice a year; at the Spring Equinox and the Autumn Equinox. As the general motion of the heavenly bodies against the background Constellations, as seen from Earth, is from East to West - the Movement of the Vernal Equinox Point in this fashion is thought of as retrograde [i.e. backwards], and hence a "preceeding" motion.

Answer for yourself: Why does the Precession of the Earth's Axis Cause the Equinoxes to Precess?

This is not a very easy thing to visualise. One way is to have a picture of the night skies in which all the stars are stuck to a large sphere surrounding the Earth. This, in fact, was how Classical astrologers thought the heavens behaved. It's the concept of the Celestial Sphere. That Sphere has an axis, which is the Earth's axis extended off to touch the stars at the Celestial Poles. Currently the north part of the axis touches the Sphere at Polaris, the Pole Star. However, the Axis is Precessing, and so it slowly moves away from our current Pole Star. As it does so it shifts the axis of the Celestial Sphere.

However, the Ecliptic, the Earth's orbit around the Sun, is completely unaffacted by Precession. So it stays in the same place whilst the axis of the Celestial Sphere moves. This has the effect of moving the points where the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptic meet around the Ecliptic. One of the points where they meet is the Vernal Equinox Point and hence the movement is the Movement of the Vernal Equinox Point. Looking at the diagram on the right the vertical arrow represents the Earth's axis, as it is today pointing up towards the North Celestial Pole, and the Pole Star, Polaris. The other arrow represents the Earth's axis as it was thousands of years ago [or thousands of years in the future.] The Earth's axis has precessed to point at another point in the night sky. [The North Celestial Pole has moved and this Changes the Pole Star.] This changes where the Celestial Equator crosses the Ecliptic and hence moves the Vernal Equinox Point along the Ecliptic. Important for us to see in the diagrapm is the Vernal Equinox is the point where the Sun "crosses" the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptic and as well understand that this "point" moves over the centuries and from the Earth it appears that the Sun is moving through the Houses of the Zodiac from our position on Earth. The place the Sun is in against the stars seems to move. Through the course of one solar year the Sun's place seems to move through a full circle. I want you to look at the following two diagrams. This first chart on the right shows the path of the ecliptic against the constellations in the summer months [northern hemisphere], starting from the Vernal Equinox right, moving through the Summer Solstice [northern hemisphere] and ending with the Autumn Equinox [northern hemisphere]. On these three dates, the Sun Sign would be Pisces, Taurus and Virgo respectively. Virgo is out of the chart somewhat but easily seen in "succession" in the chart below on the "right".

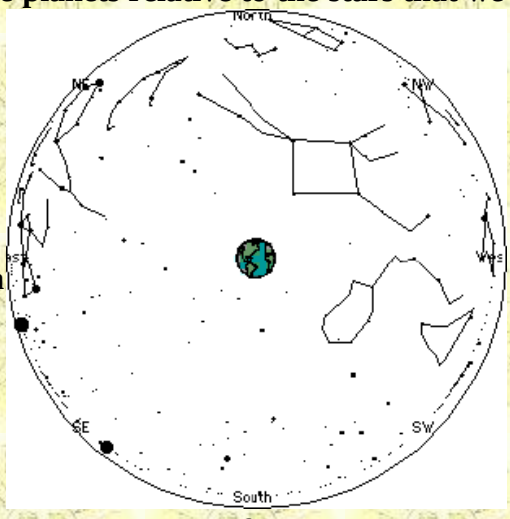
This chart shows the path of the ecliptic against the constellations in the winter months [northern hemisphere], starting from the Autumn Equinox [northern hemisphere] right, moving through the Winter Solstice [northern hemisphere] and ending with the Vernal Equinox. On these three dates, the Sun Sign would be Virgo, Sagittarius and Pisces respectively (Pisces seen above on the "right" of the pervious chart).

This circle, which can be thought of as a line drawn on the map of heavens by the movement of the Sun, is also called the Ecliptic, or the 'path of the ecliptic' or the 'circle of the ecliptic.' We now know that this vantage point on Earth gives us the perception of the Sun moving through the Houses of the Zoadiac when in fact it is the Earth that is being tilted for the reasons above that produce such a "picture for mankind". In this "picture" or this "Pattern in the Mount" we find a Celestial Message of the Soul that became the foundation for all the great World Relgions; having begun as far back as Ancient Egypt. It is this "personification" of the Sun, the Cosmic Energy of our Solar Syste, that the Ancient understood that was symbolic for the Sole Intelligent Energy of the whole Universe, that later became the religious myths and theologies that serve today as the foundations for all later World Religions in one way of the other. It is in these "personifications" of our Sun in relationship to Earth and mankind that the Ancient Spirital Masters saw a "cycle", an "order", a higher Spiritual Truth for the whole of mankind. It is from this path of the Sun through the Zodiac, as seen from Earth, than mankind personified such movments of this Living Energy and this became the foundation for our "Christian Christ Story" as well as the Ancient stories of Osiris and Horus as well.

In fact the Sun isn't moving. The Earth moves around the Sun during a year, giving the optical illusion of the Sun's movement. Therefore, the ecliptic is actually the track of the Earth's movement around the Sun. The Sun and Earth are said to lie in the 'plane of the ecliptic'. It is in this plane that the Earth rotates around the Sun.



The plane of the ecliptic, as viewed from above the north pole of the Sun. [One rotation of the Earth around the Sun takes one year.] The Earth rotates around the Sun marking out an ellipse-shaped disk. This disk is the plane of the ecliptic. The Sun seems to us to move throughout the year against the background stars [as visible during a solar eclipse] because we are viewing it from the Earth. But it's the Earth which revolves around the Sun - the Sun's movement is an optical illusion caused by our own moving view point. If, by magic, we could stop the Earth in its orbit the Sun Sign would be forever fixed in one sign.

In astrology we generally represent the stars and constellations as lying on this single sphere. We tend to think of the planets as lying between this sphere and the Earth and - whilst mostly moving along with the celestial sphere - possessing much smaller but independant motions of their own. [This is why the ancients called the planets the Wanderers.] This, essentially, was the view of the night skies held by the Classical astrologers, such as Ptolemy, who defined much of modern astrology. However, this view of the night skies isn't actually true in two important respects:

- In the celestial sphere view of the skies, the Earth stays still and the sphere rotates around it. This is the opposite of what really happens: in reality, the stars stay still and the Earth spins on its axis giving the illusion of stellar movement. Those small idependent movements of the planets relative to the stars that we can see happen each night are because they - and we on Earth - are orbiting the Sun. This way of thinking about the night sky can be confusing for we astrologers as it's not reality. The movement of the stars through the sky each night is because of the Earth's spin, not the movement of the stars around us. [West on the above sphere is to the right.] This is the reality: the Earth rotating around its axis once each day and producing the illusion of the movement of the stars through the night sky. The Earth spins west to east, giving the illusion of the stars moving from east to west, parallel to the celestial equator, each night. The stars seem to rise in the east and set in the west. In the daytime, so does the Sun. Again, this is simply an illusion caused by the Earth's spin. This is a view of the Earth at Equinox, so the light and dark portions of the Earth are the same size.

- The celestial sphere implies that the stars are all the same distance away from us; this is not correct. In fact, there can be huge differences in the distances from the stars to the Earth of the stars within a single constellation.

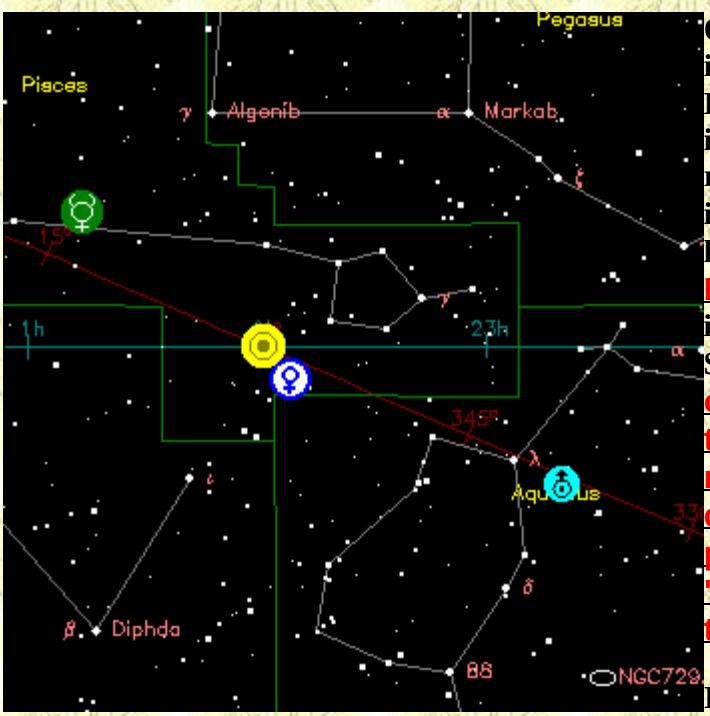
The Celestial Equator is the horizontal plane in the centre. A second plane tilted with respect to the Celestial Equator marks the Ecliptic. Where these two meet are the Equinoxes and where they lie furthest from each other are the Solstices. You could also draw a Great Circle between the Vernal Equinox and through the Celestial Poles. This marks the right vertical border on our star maps, the line of zero Right Ascension.



We need to mention one more thing and that is the Celestial Equator. On the bottom right this would be how the Earth looked through a telescope if you were viewing it from the Sun on the day of an Equinox - if by magic you could see the plane of the Ecliptic [in yellow] and the great circle of the celestial equator [in red]. The Earth's axis is shown coming out of the south pole of the Earth. The plane of the Ecliptic lies between the Sun and the Earth [it's not too well drawn here - where it just seems to surround the Earth], but the Earth 's axis is tilted relative to this plane, and therefore so is the Earth's equator and therefeore the celestial equator. Notice again that these two planes intersect or "cross".

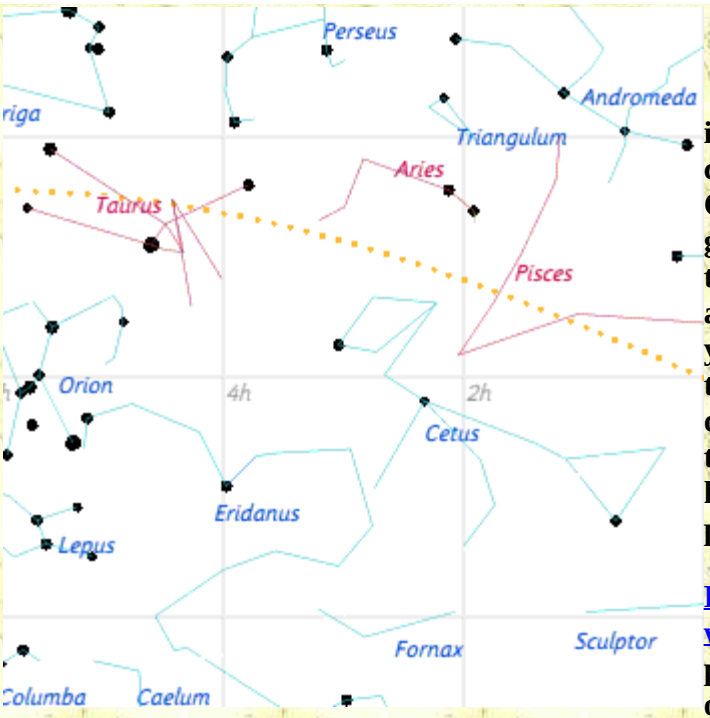
Answer for yourself: Could this be the origin of the "cross" or "crossing" or "crucifixion of the Sun and its light" as it came to Earth? Could this astronomical phenomena later become personified as the "Son of the Sun crucificed" on a "rugged cross" when it fact it as "atronomical" before it was "literalized" and "carnatlized" in our "Jesus Story". Have other personified "Solar neteru", or "Sungods" been crucified as well? Is there a "cross connected to the Heavens" and have me completely misunderstood its Spiritual Significance for our Soul and mistakenly allows ourselves be taught that it applied to just one person in an assumed existence given us by Rome who rejcted the Jewish Roots and Egyptian Roots of early Gnostic Christianity?



As the general motion of the heavenly bodies against the background Constellations, as seen from Earth, is from East to West - the Movement of the Vernal Equinox Point in this fashion is thought of as retrograde [i.e. backwards], and hence a "preceeding" motion. There are several definitions of the vernal equinox, depending on whether it is being thought of as an event in time, with respect to the length of the daytime, an event in time, with respect to the Sun and the Celestial Sphere or an event in space, with respect to Sun and the stars. The date on which the number of hours and minutes of daylight and night-time are equal - in Spring in the northern hemsiphere. This is either March 20 or March 21 [Gregorian calendar] each year. [It can vary slightly, primarily over the four-year leap year cycle.] Our Gregorian calendar was designed so that the vernal equinox lies on approximately the same date each year - the date it had in the year of the Council of Nicea [325 AD]. [Papal Bull, Inter Gravissimas, Pope Gregory XIII, 1582 AD] In the Roman, Julian Calendar the vernal equinox lay on 24 March, but it had slipped back by three days by the time of the Council of Nicea because of the innaccuracy of the Julian Calendar [introduced by Julius Ceasar in 45 BC].

On your left is a star chart of the Vernal Equinox for 2005, in particular the Uranopraphy for 20 Mar 05, of the Vernal Equinox Point. The Sun is in yellow, the path of the Ecliptic is shown in red (diagonal red line from top left to the bottom right) and the horizontal light green line in the center of the image is the Celestial Equator. The Sun, at Vernal Equinox, lies just at the point where the Ecliptic and the Celestial Equator meet - or "cross" the Vernal Equinox Point. This is "the Crossing" or "Cross in the Heavens" to which the Sun passes twice a year. It is the place where the "Sun is on the Cross" and the Springtime was the time when the Sun was on the Cross and the earth explodes in new "life" from the death of Winter". The Sun is celebrated as having "risen from the death". Later personification of the Sun led to the concept of the "Son of the Sun on the Cross and his resurrection from the dead".

In March 2005 this point is seen against the stars of the constellation of Pisces, the Fishes, towards the head of the second fish [up and to the right of the Sun]. Because this point in the sky is where the Sun is you would not actually be able to see these stars on 20 Mar 05, unless there was an Eclipse - which there can not be as, as can be seen from the chart, the Moon is not close to the Sun on that date. On the chart, Mercury in shown blue and white, Venus in Green and Uranus in Aqua in color. The chart contains the Pisces-Aquarius section of the night sky. The green lines are the constellation boundaries. The white lines join the stars of each constellation to make the constellation figure.

The vernal equinox marks the starting point for most star charts. In the section of a star map shown above, the vernal equinox point lies far right where the dotted and gray lines intersect. So the far right edge of the map is a great circle connecting the vernal equinox point and the North and South Celestial Poles. The dotted line is the the Ecliptic and the gray line the Celestial Equator. Because of the Movement of the Vernal Equinox Point, the gird of lines on the star chart above moves slowly with respect to the stars. Hence, every 50 years or so we need to re-draw all our star maps. It is not that the stars move, but our starting point for mapping them does. It's as if the Greenwich Meridian slowly moved with time instead of staying in place in London - we would always have to be redrawing maps of the Earth with new longitude positions on them.

For a larger map of above click this link and it will explain what the paragraph describes below. The Vernal Equinox point changes, against the stars, as the centuries pass. In other words the Vernal Equinox point a thousand years back was at a different place - further to the left, relative to the Ecliptic - in constellation of Pisces, the Fishes to the one we see it in today. But if we look further to the left we see that before the Age of Pisces the Vernal Equinox was in the House of Aries before then it was in the House of Taurus and in the House of Taurus before it was in the House of Gemini and before that the House of Cancer and before that the House of Leo and before that the House of Virgo, then Libra, then Scorpio, then Sagittarius, then Corpicornus, then Aquarius. And we have come full circle to where we are again today; awaiting the Age of Aquarius. There is a name for this Eternal Cycle where the Sun and the Vernal Equinox moves through each of the 12 Signs or Houses of the Zodica, it is called the "Great Year" or the "Platonic Year" and occurs because of the Precession of the Equinoxes.

I am going to introduce this cycle in the simplest way possible, as we only need a general knowledge of it to comprehend the wisdom this book intends to impart. The combined gravitational effects of the sun, moon, and planets on the Earth's equatorial bulge cause the Earth's axis to sway clockwise in a slow circle, like the motion of a spinning top. In the cycle of the great year, the Ecliptic intersects the Ecelestial equator a little west from where it crossed the year before. You can see this easily in the link. It takes 25,800 years for the Earth's axis to complete one wobble, sway, or clockwise circle. We call this 25,800-year cycle of our planet the Platonic year. It is also referred to as the Precession of the Equinoxes or the "Great Year" in a comprehensive dictionary. The great year is one of the longest cycles that are well known to our astronomers. This is known as the precession of the equinoxes. The sun, on a vernal or fall equinox, takes about 25,800 years to go all the way around the celestial equator or Zodiac and cross at the same point again. The Sun's plane, which is also called the Ecliptic, crosses the equator each year on March 21, the day of the Vernal Equinox. At the exact location where the Sun's plane crosses the equator, the Sun would be directly above the equator at high noon, and there would be no shadow cast by a perpendicular stick protruding from level ground at the equator (equal light and equal darkness....thus the "Equal"-nox).

When we take an imaginary line off the Earth's North Pole axis and extend it into the heavens, we find that the line points at a star that we call Polaris, our "North Pole" star. The cycle of the Platonic year causes the line off the North Pole to scribe a circle in the heavens approximately 25,800 years long. Polaris will reach the point at which it comes closest to aligning with the North Pole axis of our Earth in the year A.D. 2095. In two thousand years, because of the effects of the Platonic year, there will be no pole star, as there was no pole star two thousand years ago. The next North Pole star after Polaris will be Al Deramin around the year A.D. 7500; later, Deneb will hold that position. Thirteen thousand years from now, the bright star Vega will be the North Pole star again, as it was the North Pole star nearly thirteen thousand years ago. As the precession continues, Alpha Draconis, which is also known as the Dragon Star or Thuban, becomes the next North Pole star after Vega around the year A.D. 21600. The imaginary line off the North Pole axis of the Earth moves away from Alpha Draconis as it continues to scribe its 25,800-year circle in the heavens. Around the year A.D. 27900, our North Pole axis will once again point at Polaris, where it is at this time in history.

The Platonic cycle causes a slow backwards movement of the sun's apparent position in the Zodiac when viewed on successive Vernal Equinoxes. We refer to this slow-backwards movement as the precession of the equinoxes. The sun's apparent position moves a little bit west in a constellation when observed on the same day each year; it takes an equinox sun approximately 2,150 years to transit one of the twelve constellations on its 25,800-year jaunt around the Zodiac. At this point in history, the Vernal-Equinox sun is just entering Aquarius on the first day of spring. This is the scientific explanation for what we call the dawning of the Age of Aquarius or a new age. If we were to check the sun's position in the Zodiac on successive Vernal Equinoxes, we would see that it will take approximately 2,150 years for the spring sun to travel through the constellation of Aquarius on its way to Capricorn. If we were to live for 25,800 years, or one great year, we would witness twelve new ages. In the long view of things, the Earth has been at this place in the astronomical calendar thousands of times before, as each Platonic year spirals onward. Consider the twelve star constellations of the Zodiac the same way we think about the twelve months in the annual cycle of our planet. The Earth year consists of twelve months of about thirty days in each month. In the Platonic year, there are twelve ages of nearly 2,150 years in each age. Again we see that our Earth is a "microcosm" of a "macrocosm", thus recognizing the "Pattern in the Mount".

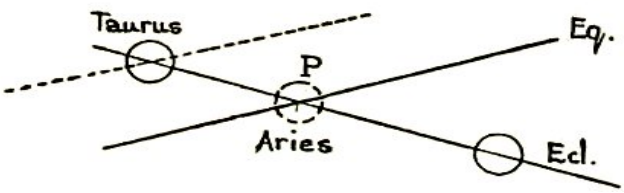
THE SYMBOLISM OF THE THE CROSS IN THE HEAVENS #2

We left off the previous article having done a short introduction to the "Crucifixion in the Sky...in Outer Space" as well as the "Astronomical Cross in the Sky". We looked at what it originally meant; the intersection of two planes of existences; one matter and one pure Spirit-Energy which has fused together. We have already seen that this refers to the Descent of the Cosmic Mind or Soul into Matter; where God become the "All in All". We saw that this was intersection of these two existences was seen "Celestially" before it was understood "terrestrially". We have seen that this intersection of these two existences was connected with the Vernal Equinox of the year as symbolized by the path of the Sun as it rose not only from the Southern Hemisphere into the Northern Hemisphere at the Vernal Equinox but as it moved over "an intersection of planes in the Heavens, the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptic". We need to spend some time to learn about this Vernal Equinox and all that is related to it and in so doing come to understand what God wants us to think about it and how it relates to mankind's existence and ultimate salvation.

The Vernal Equinox has all over the ancient world, and from the earliest times, been a period of rejoicing and of festivals in honor of the Sungod. This Sungod mind you is nothing more than the "personification of the Sun". Everyone understands and appreciates the joy of finding that the long darkness of the year associated with the Winter Solstice is gradually going away, that the Sun is growing daily in strength, light, and warmth, and that the days are winning a victory over the nights. The ancients told myths about this struggle between "light and darkness" and we find them in such stories like Set and Horus, Cain and Abel, Isaac and Ishmael, Jacob and Esau, and a host of others. The birds and flowers reappear, and the promise of Spring is in the air. But it may be worth while to give an elementary explanation of the astronomical meaning of this period, because this is not always understood, and yet it is very important in its bearing on the rites and creeds of the early religions. The priests were the early students and inquirers of the stars and had worked out this astronomical understanding of the Cosmos, and in that way were able to fix dates and to frame for the benefit of the populace myths and legends, which were in a certain sense explanations of the order of Nature, and a kind of "popular science."

The Equator, as everyone knows, is an imaginary line or circle girdling the Earth half-way between the North and South poles. If you imagine a transparent Earth with a light at its very centre, and also imagine the shadow of this equatorial line to be thrown on the vast concave of the Sky, this shadow would in astronomical parlance coincide with the Equator of the Sky--forming an imaginary circle half-way between the North and South celestial poles.



In the illustration on the left the signs of the Zodiac are represented by a belt which must be imagined at a practically infinite distance among the stars. The Sun is in the centre, and the dotted circle indicates the Earth's orbit--the numerals

1,2,3, etc., standing for the places of the Earth in the corresponding months of the year. Thus in January, to the observer at (1) the sun would appear to be in Aquarius; in February he would appear in Pisces; in March in Aries; and so forth. The diagram shows these relative positions fairly accurately as they were 3,000 years ago. Now, owing to the Precession of the Equinoxes the place of the Spring Equinox has moved to the right, and is in Pisces, and not far from Aquarius which is the next Age for mankind.

The Equator, then, may be pictured as cutting across the sky either by day or by night, and always at the same elevation--that is, as seen from any one place. But the Ecliptic (the other important great circle of the heavens) can only be thought of as a line traversing the constellations as they are seen at night. The Ecliptic is in fact the Sun's path among the fixed stars. For (really owing to the Earth's motion in its orbit) the Sun appears to move round the heavens once a year--travelling, always to the left, from Constellation to Constellation. The exact path of the sun is called the Ecliptic; and the band of sky on either side of the Ecliptic which may be supposed to include the said constellations is called the Zodiac.

Answer for yourself: How then, seeing that the Sun and the Stars can never be seen together, were the Priests able to map out the path of the former among the latter? We are not for certain but all we know is that they did it. Even with the very primitive instruments they had this ability to map the Heavens shows that their astronomical knowledge and acuteness of reasoning were unbelievable as we look at it today.

Let us suppose that the Equator and Ecliptic of the sky, at the Spring season, at the Vernal Equinox, are represented by two lines Eq. and Ecl. crossing each other at the point P. The Sun, represented by the small circle, is moving slowly and in its annual course along the Ecliptic to the left. When the Sun reaches the point P (the dotted circle) it stands on the Equator of the sky, and being neither North nor South, it shines on the two terrestrial hemispheres alike, and day and night are equal. Before that time, when the sun is low down in the heavens, night has the advantage, and the days are short; afterwards, when the Sun has travelled more to the left, the days triumph over the nights. It will be seen then that this point P where the Sun's path crosses the Equator is a very critical point.

Answer for yourself: Why is this so important? It is the astronomical location of the triumph of the Sun, or when personified of the Sungod and of the arrival of Spring. The Earth is awaking from the death of Winter and mankind can look forward to the food chain being restored.

Let's travel back for a moment to about 20,000 B.C.E. or so and try to put ourselves into the place of Ancient mankind. It's early evening, and the Sun had just set. In this time before sidewalks, street lights, headlights, and the glow of cities, the moonless night was truly dark, so dark that it was often dangerous to be outside at night. The blackness made it difficult to see the ground, and the dark gave cover to beasts and plunderers that prowled the night. At nighttime, it was very, very dark and until fire was discovered, it was man's most dangerous enemy and threatened his very survival. In the dark cold of night man realized his utter vulnerability to the elements. Each night, mankind was forced to wait for the "Rising of the Sun" to chase away the physical and mental insecurity brought on by the darkness. Therefore, the morning Sun focused man's attention on his heavenly dependence for his frail, short existence on Earth, and in doing so, you can see how the Sun became the appropriate symbol of the Creator's divine benevolence from heaven. And as Winter progressed Ancient man noticed that it became darker for longer and longer periods of time and much colder. It was inarguably, unremittingly, and unexplainably dark. Watching the Heavens primitive man saw the Sun was fading fast and receding at sunset on the horizon as it set. He feared that his source of "salvation" might stop shining altogether, and might never reappear. Ancient mankind saw the dark as his mortal enemy for it gave cover for all the bad things that could happen to him: attacks from other tribes, the capture of his family, attacks from predator animals, prey to poisonous snakes, injuries sustained by accidents that occur in the dark, etc. All the bad things seemed to happen in the dark. So until the discovery of fire which brought limited light into man's own little world of darkness, primitive man only had the "Great Fire of Day" which served the whole Earth with its heavenly presence.

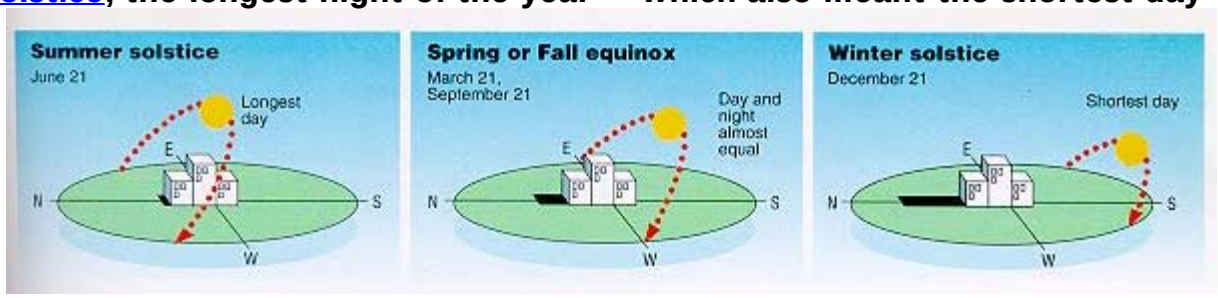
Answer for yourself: Is this the reason that several thousand years ago mankind said and believed at it says in Deut 4:24, and Heb 12:29 that the God of the Bible was a "Consuming Fire" in heaven? It sure was. Just how related is our religious concepts of God and our Sun? Now are you beginning to see how the ancients viewed God as symbolized by the life-giving Sun?

All mankind quickly came to realize that he was attached and bound to a life on Earth, but it was the sky that brought to him his "salvation" and man reasoned that this was the home of his God and Creator. The Heavens above was to the Ancients God's dwelling place. Over time as man created and reasoned his various "theologies" and personified the Sun, the symbol of his God, and its movements in the Heavens it would be a short step to personify the Sun as the "Son" of the Sun and they further reasoned that God's Son/Sun would also reside with his Father "up there in Heaven". It was assumed that God's 'Sun was but a visible representative of the unseen Creator in heaven. So it was said, "When you have seen the Sun, you have seen the Father " or "The Father is glorified in his Sun".

As you can imagine Ancient man had no problem understanding that all life on Earth depended directly on life-giving energy from the Sun because the Sun not only caused the crops to grow and produce a harvest that guaranteed his life and longevity but the light and warmth that it gave mankind was the main factor in his safety and security as explained above. Consequently, all life was lost without the Sun. It followed that God's 'Sun' was nothing less than "mankind's Saviour".



One of the things that amazed me in my study of Egypt was their unbelievable knowledge of Science, Physics, and Astronomy. You have to read it for yourself to see how they understood these disciplines in the way that they did but the ancients understood the intricacies of the atom and molecules. The Ancients understood energy and since life is energy, and energy from the Sun gave life, they then understood that their own existence was sustained by themselves taking energy into their bodies from the foods that they ate that was again sustained by the Sun. They again reasoned that Sun was giving up its life supporting energy in order that they could live. In such a way the Sun was pouring out "His life" and "His blood" that mankind might have "life" and "be saved". This is how this was described.

Answer for yourself: Is this where we get the concept that God's Sun, or God personified in the Sun, gives His life for us in order that we might live? We sure do.

As you now clearly see the Ancients reasoned that their lives came from and were sustained each day by "Their Saviour... in the form of God's Sun". But this truism only worked as long as the Sun would return each morning to pour out his life for them. Primitive mankind's hope of salvation, both present and future, would be secure only if his "Savior, in the form of the Sun was 'Risen'". This might sound complicated but it is not. The Ancients tracked the Sun, their Savior, across the sky daily and yearly for thousands of years and little escaped their scrutiny. You only have to read the extent and depth of their Astronomy and their records to be amazed and flabbergasted at what they knew and the knowledge they possessed. They knew that if their Sun, their Savior did not rise from his grave of darkness in the dead of Winter then all would be lost for mankind. To understand this you need to understand the schematic that follows.

At the dead of Winter the Sun was noticed to set progressively southward in the horizon and the days progressively possessed less light and warmth. It appeared to the Ancients that the Sun was dying. Ancient mankind reasoned that light was dying; the Sun was dying just as he had seen others of his species die. It was the most scary time for the Ancients. As what we now call mid-December came closer, the days got shorter still. Then came December 21, what we call the Winter Solstice, the longest night of the year -- which also meant the shortest day of the year, with Sunlight practically imperceptible after that harrowing dark night. Our prehistoric ancestors wondered how vegetation and animals would survive, how they would they survive without the Sun. Little wonder that in almost every nation and their recorded histories we find that traditions and ceremonies and customs evolved, some of them not so nice, to propitiate the dark and entice the Sun to come back strong.One element of this frenzy for light, once it was feasible, was bonfires. They kept the dark at bay and illuminated festivities aimed at winning back the Sun. All the world waited patiently for the Son's 'imminent return". They further reasoned that surely the Divine Father and Creator would never leave them at the mercy of this world of darkness. Over the centuries man, through his observations of the Sun and the pattern of its movement, was reassured that the Creator's Heavenly promise concerning his Sun was surely that..."He would come again"...to light their path, and save those lost in the darkness. He was reassured every morning and every year as the cycle of the Sun through the Heavens and the Zodiac seemed to repeat.

Logically, the Ancients reasoned that even if man himself died, as long as the Sun continued to dawn and set each day, life on Earth will continue forever. Therefore, it was said in the Ancient texts that "everlasting life was 'the gift' that the Father gives through his Sun.

Answer for yourself: We have mentioned that the Sun, over time, became personified as the "Son". Understanding that these Ancient and Eternal and Divine concepts were captured for all time in legend and myth by the Ancients then when we read for example:

John 3:16 16 For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him (God) should not perish, but have everlasting life. (KJV)

then is it too far of a stretch to see that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten SUN that we may have life everlasting"..on the Earth?

Early mankind not only feared the dark but the manifestations of evil and harm that lurked at every turn in the fearful dark of night. He further reasoned that all evil or harmful deeds were naturally, the..."works of darkness." Let us not forget that anthropomorphism or personification is the attribution of human characteristics to inanimate objects, animals, forces of nature, and others. Anthropomorphism in the form of personification consists of creating imaginary persons who are the embodiment of an abstraction such as Darkness, Death, Lust, or War. In our study we are concerned with the personification of Light and Darkness as man's greatest

Savior and greatest Adversary. Early man simply personified these forces because it was extremely difficult for them to picture or discuss God or these forces that came from the Creator of all without an anthropomorphic framework. Thus we see the darkness personified as the "Devil":

- With the return of the Sun each morning, man felt more secure in his world and therefore, was at peace. Therefore, God's 'Sun' was with his warm rays of life and hope...The Great "Prince of Peace".
- Conversely the dark evil of night was ruled by none other than..."Prince of Darkness"

I want to show you something having understood now the personification of forces:

- The Dark was Evil
- Primitive mankind reasoned it as "Dark"-"Evil"
- "D"-"Evil"
- the "Devil"..get it?

Not only that at the darkest time of the year, December 21st through the 24th, the Sun sank lowest in the Southern horizon and man feared that as the Sun remained motionless for 3 days that the Sun had been "killed by the Darkness". So for 3 days it was said that the Sun descended to fight against the Darkness only to rise in victory after 3 days; that day being the "birth of the light of the World" or our Christmas day of December 25th. Personify this a little and then you have the "Son of God" fighting the "dark-Evil" or the "D-Evil" for 3 days before his victory and "birth" or should I say "rebirth". All the Solar-gods and personified godmen were born on December 25th, the Winter Solstice which is the time for the "rebirth" or "birth" of the Sun anew.

You have just seen the origin of one of the biggest theologies known to man.

Answer for yourself: What is that? It is many. We have here the birth of the "Son of God" as well as the imaginary concept of "the Devil" which is nothing but darkness personified and we as Christians read our Bibles "literally" and we don't know it and we raise millions of dollars to fight an imaginary war in our Churches to fight this Devil and pray against him and fast and bind him over and over again as if he and God are in some mortal combat which they are not. Because of such ignorance of this religious concept and its origin let along the forgery of our Christian Bibles the Kingdom of Heaven goes lacking when needy people should be the recipients of such funds in our Churches instead of larger TV antennas and ministries to fight a fictitious enemy when ignorance is our foe. It seems we have learned nothing and find ourselves at the very same stages of development of primitive man thousands and thousands of years ago. God surely is not pleased at our mental stagnation let alone the famine of the truth about the Word of God. At least the Egyptians understood this whole thing as a Divine Allegory and Christians think it is real today. We should be ashamed for living and dying on this planet never coming to the knowledge of the truth behind our Bibles.

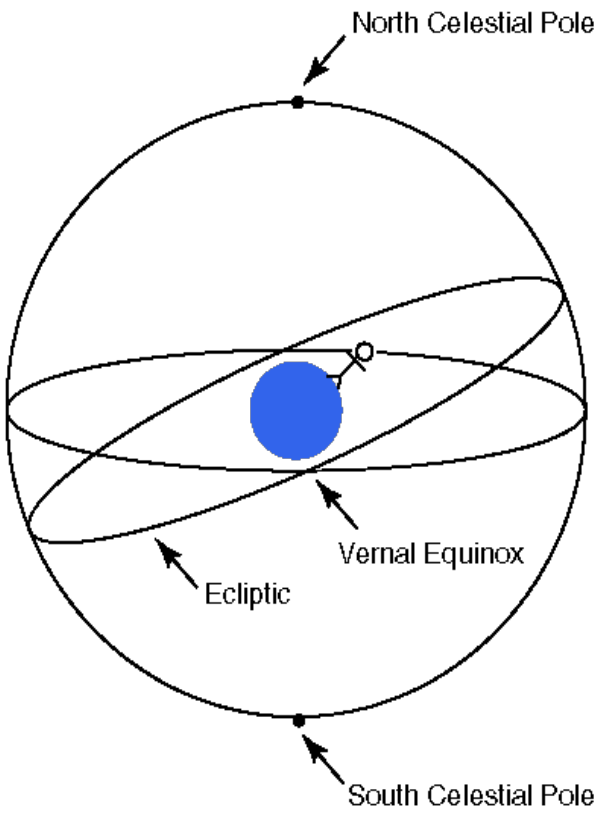
Answer for yourself: Did you know that we get our English words 'Good' and 'God' from the German word 'Goth' as in 'Gothic'? Now we see God is Good, and Devil is Evil.

Hopefully you can now see that it is only a short step to see "The Light of God's Sun" equated with the light of truth and evil equated with darkness. From then on, it was simple to understand... "Light was good and dark was bad". If you were born around the equator with more melanin in your skin and have "dark" skin you were born liable to experience the ignorance of others in the form of racism you whole life simply because then ever came to understand primitive mankind's used of darkness to personify evil.

Answer for yourself: Could this be behind all racism where people hate the darker skinned of mankind? You bet it is!

That being true, then that Great Orb of Day, God's Sun, can rightly say of itself,

John 9:5 5 As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world. (KJV)



We now have before us two cosmic forces or "brothers" - one very good, and one very evil (the prototype for Set and Horus).

Answer for yourself: Is the first story of this cosmic brotherhood and struggle found in the story of Osiris and Set and their conflict and struggle that ends with Osiris' death and resurrection (similar to the Sun being raised from the dead once a year) and Horus' victory over Set (personified darkness)? You bet it is. This conflict between light and darkness is replayed in almost every religion of the world between its saviors and its adversaries. Christianity is not immune to this pattern as well.

One of these forces brings the "truth to light" with the "light of truth". The other is the opposite, or in opposition to the light - "The Opposer"... "The Adversary"..."The Devil"..."The God of this world"..."The Prince of this World of Darkness".

So we see that it is the return of "light" and "life" that accompanies the Sun that man looked forward toward after the Winter Solstice because for him it meant the guarantee of "life" not only for himself but for his family as well. Man looked forward to God's gift of "life" that was renewed every Spring Equinox. With this as a backdrop now let us return to our study of the Vernal Equinox, the point where the Sun's path crossed the Equator and the Ecliptic; the "Cross" in the Heavens.

Answer for yourself: How was this location, this "Cross" defined? Among what stars was the Sun moving at that critical moment when it "Crossed" the intersection of the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptic? It is important to understand that the Sun was deeply influenced by the Constellation through which it was, or appeared to be, moving. It seems then that at the period when these questions were occupying men's minds--say about three thousand years ago--the point where the Ecliptic crossed the Equator was, as a matter of fact, in the region of the Constellation Aries or the "he-Lamb". The triumph of the Sungod was therefore, and quite naturally, ascribed to the influence of the particular Constellation which was the "backdrop" for the Sun which happens to be Aries in this case (3000 years ago).

Answer for yourself: Why is this important?

The lamb, the symbol for the Constellation Aries, became the symbol of the risen Sun, the risen Savior (personified for the risen Sun, the "Savior" of mankind from the Winter death at the Winter Solstice) at the Vernal Equinox at the changing of the Age from Taurus to Aries), and of his passage from the underworld into the height of Heaven (the Sun moving from the Southern Hemisphere above the Celestial Equator into the Northern Hemisphere). Mankind recognized that this was the time for the salvation of mankind.

Every years man was saved by the resurrection of the Sun "from the dead" when the Sun, or

God, fought the "Dark-Evil" of Winter (personified darkness mentioned above) and especially at the changing of the Precessional Age; from Taurus to Aries for example when God manifested to mankind Himself anew with always a new and deeper revelation of Himself to mankind accompanied with a deeper understanding of the salvation of humankind. At first such an explanation sounds unsound; but a thousand texts and references confirm it; and it is only by the accumulation of evidence in these cases that the student becomes convinced of a theory's correctness. Having done the required studies over and over again believe me these concepts above are as firm and sound as they could be. It is reproducible over and over again from many varies and infallible proofs and from all over the world and the ancient religions. It must also be remembered, and I have mentioned before, that these myths and legends were commonly adopted not only for one strict reason but because they represented in a general way the convergence of various symbols and inferences.

Let me enumerate a few points with regard to the Vernal Equinox. In the Bible the Celestial festival, the Vernal Equinox, is called the Passover, and its supposed institution by Moses is related in Exodus, ch. 12. Few are aware that Egypt observed this "Passover in the Sky" for thousands of years long before a historical Moses was ever born. This fact alone should make you set up straight and think thoughts that you never have thought before. What we uncover in such a study is that mankind, long before the Jews and since the beginning of time, understood that God put in the Heavens "signs" and "seasons". These "signs" and "season" were not just for Nature to function but behind them are the very core secrets of mankind's life and the life-cycle and "Pattern" for his Soul's Spiritual Maturation. These "Divine Truths" are captured in the Biblical Festivals which reflect the Equinoxes and Solstices or the "Pattern for the birth-life-death-rebirth" of the Soul.

Back to our point in every house the Bible stresses that for the Jews a "he-lamb" was to be slain, and its blood to be sprinkled on the doorposts of the house. Then the Lord would pass over and not smite that house. Historically this happened in Egypt long before Moses and I urge the readers to read Ralph Ellis' book Jesus: the Last of the Pharaohs to see this for yourself. That is not to discount however how these later Jews would learn of this important sacred time of God and "reinterpret" it for themselves as a "new people" who emerged from Egypt with Akhenaten-Moses in what is described as the Exodus in our Bibles and in ancient history. The Hebrew word for the "Passover" is "pasach" which means "to pass".

Answer for yourself: "Pass" what?

Of course as we saw this refers to the Sun as its "passes" over not only the division between the Southern and Northern Hemisphere yearly but "over the intersection of the Celestial Equator plane and the plane of the Ecliptic" in the Sky and Heaven (the Cross in the Heavens). So "Passover" is the correct term; it is only us today who do not understand the real meaning of the world and only look to this later "Jewish historical reinterpretation" for our only meaning of the word as if this was the origin for both the "word" and "religious concept". But it is not. It is said that pasach sometimes means not so much to pass over, as to hover over and so protect. Since "protect" and "salvation" are similar the concept is easy to understand. Possibly both meanings enter in here. If you have a second look at Isaiah 31:5. The lamb slain was called the Paschal Lamb.

Answer for yourself: But what was that lamb really? Evidently not an earthly lamb--(though certainly the earthly lambs on the hillsides were just then ready in the Spring to be killed and eaten). This lamb was first and foremost the Heavenly Lamb in the Sky and Heavens which was said by the Ancients to have been slain or sacrificed when the Lord, in the symbol of the Sun, "passed over" the Equator and obliterated the Constellation Aries.

Answer for yourself: What is meant here by the "obliteration of Aries" or the "killing of the Lamb" by the Sun?

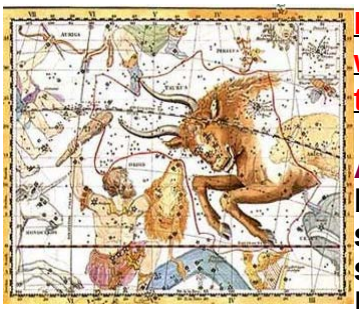
When the Sun "passed over" (Passover), or rose above the horizon on the Vernal Equinox then the Constellation Aries, lay behind the Sun much farther out in Space. This Constellation of Aries lay on the horizon just before dawn and visible to all due East at the time of the Spring or Vernal Equinox. This Constellation of Aries will spend 2,160 years dominating the Vernal Equinox and it was again observable before dawn, but as the Sun rose it the Constellation of Aries was obscured by the emerging light of the Sun. The ancients said that at Sunrise the Constellation Aries was no longer visible and that the Lamb in Heaven had been killed. The ancients said this with each symbolic representation of the Constellations or the particular House or Sign of the Zodiac that ruled during the Vernal Equinox as related to the Precession of the Equinox. For 2,160 years the Sun Sign or House of the Zodiac, if it were an animal, was either symbolically "killed" or "destroyed" by the rising Sun rising on this very important day of the Vernal Equinox and this went on year after year. Before the Age of Aries when the Constellation of Aries ruled the Vernal Equinox for 2,160 years it was the Constellation of Taurus; therefore you can expect and do find that the Bull of Taurus likewise obliterated by the rising of the Sun and it was said of him that also was "killed on the Vernal Equinox". Thus the personified symbol of Sun that was connected the Constellation behind the rising Sun on the Vernal Equinox was constantly obliterated on this day at the beginning of each Age and we get from this the idea of God "dying" that man might have new life and life abundantly each new Spring and this was confirmed as the Earth awoke from its death at the previous Winter and the Winter Solstice (the coldest times of the year when Mother Nature appeared asleep or death). Considering the Age of Aries, this was the Lamb of God which was slain each year and did so for the length of each Age; for 2,160 years, and "Slain since the foundation of the world." This period of the Passover (about the 25th March) was to be the beginning of a new year. The Hebrews followed this same "Pattern in the Mount" as we see in the Book of Exodus in the Hebrew Tanakh.

Exod 12:1-3 1 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying, 2 This month shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you. 3 Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall take to them every man a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house: (KJV)

Now we know why they used "lambs" and not "Bulls"; the Age of Aries had dawned and the Astrological Symbol for Aries was "the lamb" and not the "Bull". The "Pattern in the Mount" had to be maintained on Earth as it was in Heaven.

The sacrifice of the Lamb, the symbol for the Sun, and its "blood", which symbolized its life, were to be the promise of redemption for mankind. The sacrifice of the Sun, as it poured out its life and Energy for mankind following its death, and as associated with the Constellation of Aries at the Vernal Equinox for 2,160 years, became the recurring promise of redemption and salvation for mankind. Man recognized this and celebrated this "promise of mankind's salvation" every year at this special time. This salvation, mind you, was both "terrestrial"; occurring at the Spring Equinox each year but also "Celestial", as man came to see the same Eternal Cycles repeated in the Heavens above and in Nature below which testified to him of the unbroken "Pattern in the Mount" of "birth, life, death, and rebirth". Seeing this, then man knew that he would follow in this Eternal cycle himself; that he would live again after his death as did the Sun, the Moon, and Mother Nature. Since the "Celestial Pattern in the Mount" followed this "Pattern" of "birth, life, death, and rebirth" in unbroken fashion and as Mother Nature did the same as well then Ancient Mankind came to see that he was created in the same image of God above and that these same "Patterns in the Mount" will operate in him as well. That is why the Egyptian Religion focused on being prepared to die by living a life of righteousness and good works according to the Egyptian Laws and Commandments of God...their own Torah.

Thus we find in our Exodus story that the door-frames of the houses were to be sprinkled with



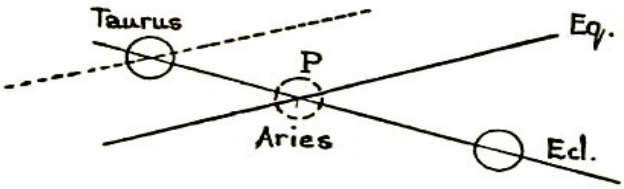
"life"; literally the blood of the Lamb which at that time was the symbol for the ruling Constellation at the Vernal Equinox. This is nothing more than a repeat of what had been done previously with the "blood of the Bull" in the previous Age of Taurus.

Answer for yourself: Why use "door-frames"? Simply because they were symbols of the entrance into a new life.

It is even said, in Frazier's The Golden Bough, vol. 3, p. 185, that the doorways of houses and temples in Peru were at the Spring festival daubed with blood of the first-born children--commuted afterwards to the blood of the sacred animal, the Llama. Here we find the exact same belief that the Sun poured out its life, its "symbolic blood" that man could live in and on a re-renewed and resurrected Mother Earth. This proves and shows that half-way around the globe we find the same "Celestial belief" concerning this "Cross in the Heavens" and how the Sun was "crucified on the Cross in the Heavens" at the Vernal Equinox and mankind was following in similar symbolic fashion the Heavenly meaning of this Celestial Event. And as to Mexico, Sahagun, the great Spanish missionary, tells us that it was a custom of the people there to "smear the outside of their houses and doors with blood drawn from their own ears and ankles, in order to propitiate the god of Harvest" (Kingsborough's Mexican Antiquities, vol. vi, p. 235). This belief is "universal" a long time before there ever was a supposed "historical Jesus" who likewise is believed to have poured out his blood for mankind as well; a similar personification of this Divine Concept.

Later, the imagery of the saving power of the blood of the Lamb became more popular, more highly colored which we see at the pens of the Early Church Fathers. And we have the expression "washed in the blood of the Lamb" adopted into the Christian Church. Few Christians are aware that this very same phrase, "washed in the blood" was used for 2,160 years prior to the Age of Aries when the Age of Taurus ruled the Vernal Equinox. During this 2,160 years it was in vogue to be "washed in the blood of the Bull" since the Constellation of Aries ruled the Vernal Equinox before Aries. This was accomplished by the initiate descending into a pit where he was bathed in the blood of a Bull, which was sacrificed above him so that the blood poured down through a grating and over the initiate. There are also references to a Criobolium, which involved the slaughter of a Ram or sheep, hence no doubt the actual, historical reality behind such metaphorical Christian hymns as "Washed in the Blood of the Lamb."

In order fully to understand this extraordinary expression and its relationship to the "Cross in the Heavens" and its origin we must turn for a moment to the worship both of Mithra, the Persian Sungod, and of Attis the Syrian god; both of which will throw a great amount of illumination upon the Christian cult and ceremonies. It must be remembered that in the early centuries of our era the Mithra-cult was spread over the whole Western world. It has left many monuments of itself as far away as Britain. At Rome the worship was extremely popular, and it may almost be said to have been a matter of chance whether Mithraism should overwhelm Christianity, or whether the younger religion by adopting many of the rites of the older one should establish itself as it did in the face of the latter.



Now we have already mentioned in many other articles on this and other websites that in the Mithra cult the slaying of a Bull by the Sungod occupies the same sort of place as the slaving of the Lamb in the Christian cult.

Answer for yourself: Any why is that? The Age in which these religious beliefs were expressed was during the Age of Taurus which has for its symbol for God the "Bull" and later Christianity picked up on the Aries symbolism of the Lamb as the Precession of the Equinoxes moved the House of Aries behind the Sun after displacing the House of Taurus.

This slaying of the Bull took place at the Vernal Equinox as will later the slaying of the Lamb as the Constellation of Taurus is likewise obliterated by the dawning Sun as it moved across this "Cross in the Heavens" and it is easy to see how the blood of the Bull (the symbol of all "life") acquired in men's minds a magic virtue.

Lev 17:11 11 For the life (SOUL) of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul. (KJV) 12 Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, No soul of you shall eat blood, neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood. (KJV)

Since the Soul lives in the blood we see the importance for "blood" and its relationship to "salvation". Mithraism was a greatly older religion than Christianity; but its genesis was similar. In fact, owing to the Precession of the Equinoxes, the crossing-place of the Ecliptic and Equator was different at the time of the establishment of Mithra-worship from what it was in the Christian period; and the Sun instead of standing in the He-lamb, or Aries, at the Vernal Equinox stood, about two thousand years earlier (as indicated by the dotted line in the diagram on the left), in this very Constellation of the Bull (around 5000 years ago). As you can see the Sun moves through the galaxy and in so doing it move through this Zodiac and the diagram show us that the Sun moves over this "Cross in the Heavens" from Sun sign to Sun sign, for House to House in the Houses of the Zodiac. The Sun was in Taurus 2,160 years before it entered into the House of Aries and 2,160 years later it moved into the House of Pisces, etc.

As we would expect the Bull therefore became the symbol of the triumphant God, and the sacrifice of the Bull a holy mystery. Nor must we overlook here the agricultural appropriateness of the Bull as the emblem of Spring-plowings and of service to man.

The sacrifice of the Bull became the image of redemption. God was pouring out not only His life but His Energy once again that man might have "life" and have "life abundantly" as again, according to the "Pattern in the Mount" the Earth was awaking from the dead once again. In a certain well-known Mithra-sculpture or group, the Sungod is represented as plunging his dagger into a Bull, while a scorpion, a serpent, and other animals are sucking the latter's blood. From one point of view this may be taken as symbolic of the Sun fertilizing the gross Earth by plunging his rays into it and so drawing forth its blood for the sustenance of all creatures; while from another more astronomical aspect it symbolizes the conquest of the Sun over Winter in the moment of "passing over" the sign of the Bull, and the depletion of the generative power of the Bull by the Scorpion--which of course is the Autumnal sign of the Zodiac and herald of Winter.

Man was being redeemed by God by Him pouring out His "life" and "Energy" upon mankind. Man was saved by God pouring out His life and Energy for the salvation of mankind; first understood "Celestially" and then "terrestrially". This Celestial Concept was recognized on a daily basis by the continual rising of the Sun but much more dramatized at the Vernal Equinox each year it was again revealed when the Sun had risen from the Dead to bring mankind new hope and new life.

This emergence from the dead by the Sun, which personified the Invisible God, was likened to God pouring out his "life" or His "blood for mankind" and well so since the rays of this "new born" Sun were "red" and this "new life" was connected with the "red-life" of man; his blood as well. Through simply symbolism it was said that God was pouring out "His Blood" for mankind's salvation; and all of this mind you was symbolized by the Sun (itself a symbol for the Invisible Living Intelligent Energy whom we call the God of the Cosmos).A brilliant Sunrise is all we need to to see to grasp this point beyond any doubt as framed in the mind of the Ancients. This crossing of the planes of the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptic by the Sun, the return of the Sun to the Norther Hemisphere as the symbol for the Invisible Ra or God of the Cosmos, at this very special day, the Spring Equinox, where the Sun was on this "Cross" in the Heavens along with it pouring out its "life and Energy" for mankind, was the basis for all later ideas and concepts of the Sun being crucified (on the Cross) in the Heavens for mankind and mankind's salvation. This idea was later again applied to the personified Sun as the Solar saviors who were likewise "crucified on Crosses"; and this "Celestial Crucifixion" was transferred to Earth (the Uranogrpah, "So Above, So Below") and we end up with crucified sungods who all fit the "Pattern in the Mount" and this explains why our "Jesus Story" is but a reproduction from start to finish of the previous live of the Sungods. This explains it; they all are personifications of the Path of the Sun through the Zodiac. Jesus Christ is the last in a long line of similar Solar personifications and this explains why all their life-stores and wisdom sayings are all alike; they all as the personified Sun followed the same path through the Sky and the Zodiac. That is why our "Jesus Story", mistaken for a "literal-historical" person, is but another in a long line of personifications of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac.

In the worship of Attis there were (as I have already indicated) many points of resemblance to the Christian cult. On the 22nd March (the Vernal Equinox) a pine-tree was cut in the woods and brought into the Temple of Cybele. It was treated almost as a divinity, was decked with violets, and the effigy of a young man tied to the stem (the Crucifixion). The 24th was called the "Day of Blood"; the High Priest first drew blood from his own arms; and then the others gashed and slashed themselves, and spattered the altar and the sacred tree with blood; while novices made themselves eunuchs "for the kingdom of heaven's sake." The effigy was afterwards laid in a tomb. But when night fell, says Dr. Frazier, sorrow was turned to joy (Adonis, Attis and Osiris, Part IV of The Golden Bough, by J. G. Frazier, p. 229). A light was brought, and the tomb was found to be empty. The next day, the 25th, was the festival of the Resurrection; and ended in carnival and license (the Hilaria). Further, says Dr. Frazer, these mysteries "seem to have included a sacramental meal and a baptism of blood."

"In the baptism the devotee, crowned with gold and wreathed with fillets, descended into a pit, the mouth of which was covered with a wooden grating. A Bull, adorned with garlands of flowers, its forehead glittering with gold leaf, was then driven on to the grating and there stabbed to death with a consecrated spear. Its hot reeking blood poured in torrents through the apertures, and was received with devout eagerness by the worshiper on every part of his person and garments, till he emerged from the pit, drenched, dripping, and scarlet from head to foot, to receive the homage, nay the adoration, of his fellows--as one who had been born again to eternal life and had washed away his sins in the blood of the Bull" (Ibid.).

And Frazer continuing says: "That the bath of blood derived from slaughter of the Bull (tauro-bolium) was believed to regenerate the devotee for eternity is proved by an inscription found at Rome, which records that a certain Sextilius Agesilaus Aedesius, who dedicated an altar to Attis and the mother of the gods (Cybele) was 'taurobolio criobolio que in aeternum renatus'" (That is, "By the slaughter of the bull and the slaughter of the ram born again into eternity")."In the procedure of the Taurobolia and Criobolia," says Mr. J. M. Robertson, Pagan Christs, p. 315, "which grew very popular in the Roman world, we have the literal and original meaning of the phrase 'washed in the blood of the lamb'; the doctrine being that resurrection and eternal life were secured by drenching or sprinkling with the actual blood of a sacrificial Bull or ram."

If you are a "thinking believer" I have to believe that you can see for yourself what I do and the conclusions we draw are basically easy. There is not any reason for supposing that the priests of Mithra or Attis regarded baptism by blood very differently from the way in which the Christian Church has generally regarded baptism by water--namely, as a symbol of some inner regeneration. There may certainly have been a little more of the magical view and a little less of the symbolic, in the older religions; but the difference was probably on the whole more one of degree than of essential disparity. But however that may be, we cannot but be struck by the extraordinary analogy between the tombstone inscriptions of that period "born again into eternity by the blood of the Bull or the Ram," and the corresponding texts in our graveyards to-day. The Bull in Heaven--the symbol of the triumphant Sungod--and the earthly Bull, sacrificed for the good of humanity were one and the same; the god, in fact, sacrificed himself or his representative. And Mithra was the hero who first won this conception of divinity for mankind--though of course it is in essence quite similar to the conception put forward by the Christian Church.

"At Rome," he further says (p. 230), "the new birth and the remission of sins by the shedding of Bull's blood appear to have been carried out above all at the sanctuary of the Phrygian Goddess (Cybele) on the Vatican Hill, at or near the spot where the great basilica of St. Peter's now stands; for many inscriptions relating to the rites were found when the church was being enlarged in 1608 or 1609. From the Vatican as a centre," he continues, "this barbarous system of superstition seems to have spread to other parts of the Roman empire. Inscriptions found in Gaul and Germany prove that provincial sanctuaries modelled their ritual on that of the Vatican."

It would appear then that at Rome in the quiet early days of the Christian Church, the rites and ceremonials of Mithra and Cybele, probably much intermingled and blended, were exceedingly popular. Both religions had been recognized by the Roman State, and the Christians, persecuted and despised as they were, found it hard to make any headway against them--the more so perhaps because the Christian doctrines appeared in many respects to be merely faint replicas and copies of the older creeds.

Now you know why many, many people and scholars (who possess this knowledge) have come to not only think but believe that the association of the Lamb-god with the Cross arose from the fact that the Constellation Aries at that time was on the Heavenly Cross (the crossways of the Ecliptic and Equator), and in the very place through which the Sungod (as the personified Sun) had to pass just before his final triumph. And it is curious to find that Justin Martyr in his Dialogue with Trypho (a Jew), chapter xl, alludes to an old Jewish practice of roasting a Lamb on spits arranged in the form of a Cross.

Answer for yourself: Coincidence? Hardly! "The lamb," he says, meaning apparently the Paschal lamb, "is roasted and dressed up in the form of a cross. For one spit is transfixed right through the lower parts up to the head, and one across the back, to which are attached the legs [forelegs] of the lamb."

So now we see that the Lamb-god and the sacrifice of the Lamb were honored by the devotees of Mithra and Cybele in the Rome of the Christian era. It is a small jump to apply this to an "assumed historical person" as did Rome. Let we forget the the sacrifice of the Bull and the baptism in Bull's blood were the salient features of the Persian and Phrygian ceremonials, some centuries earlier.

Answer for yourself: How can this be reconciled as existing to divinities belonging to such different periods, or ascribe them both to an astronomical origin?" The answer is simple enough. As I have explained before, the Precession of the Equinoxes caused the Sun, at its moment of triumph over the powers of darkness, to stand at one period in the Constellation of the Bull, and at a period some two thousand years later in the Constellation of the Ram. It was perfectly natural therefore that a change in the sacred symbols should, in the course of time, take place; yet perfectly natural also that these symbols, having once been consecrated and adopted, should continue to be honored and clung to long after the time of their astronomical appropriateness had passed, and so to be found side by side in later centuries. The devotee of Mithra or Attis on the Vatican Hill at Rome in the year 200 A.D. probably had as little notion or comprehension of the real origin of the sacred Bull or Ram which he adored, as the Christian in St. Peter's to-day has of the origin of the Lamb-god whose vice-regent on earth is the Pope.

It is indeed easy to imagine that the change from the worship of the Bull to the worship of the Lamb which undoubtedly took place among various peoples as time went on, was only a ritual change initiated by the priests in order to put on record and harmonize with the astronomical alteration. Anyhow it is curious that while Mithra in the early times was specially associated with the Bull, his association with the lamb belonged more to the Roman period. Somewhat the same happened in the case of Attis. In the Bible we read of the indignation of Moses at the setting up by the Israelites of a Golden Calf, after the sacrifice of the ram-lamb had been instituted--as if indeed the rebellious people were returning to the earlier cult of Apis which they ought to have left behind them in Egypt. In Egypt itself, too, we find the worship of Apis, as time went on, yielding place to that of the Ram-headed god Amun, or Jupiter Ammon. Tacitus (Hist. v. 4) speaks of ram-sacrifice by the Jews in honor of Jupiter Ammon. So that both from the Bible and from Egyptian history we may conclude that the worship of the Lamb or Ram succeeded to the worship of the Bull.

Finally it has been pointed out, and there may be some real connection in the coincidence, that in the quite early years of Christianity the fish came in as an accepted symbol of Jesus Christ. Considering that after the domination of Taurus and Aries, the Fish (Pisces) comes next in succession as the Zodiacal sign for the Vernal Equinox, and is now the Constellation in which the Sun stands at that period, it seems not impossible that the astronomical change has been the cause of the adoption of this new symbol.

Anyhow, and allowing for possible errors or exaggerations, it becomes clear that the travels of the Sun through the belt of Constellations which forms the Zodiac must have had, from earliest times, a profound influence on the generation of religious myths and legends. To say that it was the only influence would certainly be a mistake. Other causes undoubtedly contributed. But it was a main and important influence. The origins of the Zodiac are obscure; we do not know with any certainty the reasons why the various names were given to its component sections, nor can we measure the exact antiquity of these names; but--pre-supposing the names of the signs as once given--it is not difficult to imagine the growth of legends connected with the Sun's course among them.

The "Jesus-story", it will now be seen, has a great number of correspondences with the stories of former Sungods and with the actual career of the Sun through the heavens--so many indeed that they cannot well be attributed to mere coincidence or even to the blasphemous wiles of the Devil! Let us enumerate some of these:

- the birth from a Virgin mother;
- the birth in a stable (cave or underground chamber); and
- on the 25th December (just after the Winter Solstice).
- the Star in the East (Sirius) and
- the arrival of the Magi (the "Three Kings"); there is
- the threatened Massacre of the Innocents, and the consequent flight into a distant country (told also of Krishna and other Sungods).
- There are the Church festivals of Candlemas (2nd February), with processions of candles to symbolize the growing light;
- Lent, or the arrival of Spring; of
- Easter Day (normally on the 25th March) to celebrate the crossing of the Equator by the Sun;
- Simultaneously the outburst of lights at the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem.
- There is the Crucifixion and death of the Lamb-God, on Good Friday, three days before Easter;
- There are the nailing to a tree,
- The empty grave,
- The glad Resurrection (as in the cases of Osiris, Attis and others); there are
- The twelve disciples (the Zodiacal signs); and
- The betrayal by one of the twelve.
- Then later there is Midsummer Day, the 24th June, dedicated to the Nativity of John the Baptist, and corresponding to Christmas Day;
- There are the festivals of the Assumption of the Virgin (15th August) and of
- The Nativity of the Virgin (8th September), corresponding to the movement of the god through Virgo;
- There is the conflict of Christ and his disciples with the autumnal asterisms, the Serpent and the Scorpion; and

- Finally there is the curious fact that the Church dedicates the very day of the Winter Solstice (when any one may very naturally doubt the rebirth of the Sun) to St. Thomas, who doubted the truth of the Resurrection!

These are some of, and by no means all, the coincidences in question. But they are sufficient, I think, to prove--even allowing for possible margins of error--the truth of the general contention. To go into the parallelism of the careers of Krishna, the Indian Sungod, and Jesus would take too long (we have done this at other places on this website); because indeed the correspondence is so extraordinarily close and elaborate.

Answer for yourself: What good books can I read to show this to me?

Robertson's Christianity and Mythology, Part II, pp. 129-302; also Doane's Bible Myths, ch. xxviii, p. 278.

Answer for yourself: Having seen this small representation of the "Pattern in the Mount" and its Celestial origin and the duplication and reproduction of this "crucifixion" in the Sky and Heavens of these prior Sungods, Jesus of which is the last one, then how certain are we that our Eternal Salvation is based upon some supposed "historical person" who was crucified for me "literally"? No wonder Judaism and Egypt has always taught repentance atones for sin and not some mystical blood of a sacrificial victim. Our failure to understand completely the role of "blood" in the Sacrificial System of Judaism, has contributed to us being led astray when reading about the "blood" and its role in the Sacrificial System. You will find it most surprising if not breath-taking when you study for yourself to find out that the "blood", at the core of the Sacrificial System, NEVER brought atonement for any sin; it only served as the inert vehicle for the "life", your "life", which atones for sin. The "blood" was only a picture of your right-standing with God which allowed you, via your symbolic "blood" to be on the altar with God. It was your repentance, contrite heart, confession of sin, righteous deeds, and renewed obedience to the Torah of God which had procured your "forgiveness" and "atonement" long before you went to Temple and participated in a "sin offering"; thus demonstrating to all that "all was right with you Soul" for you had already done these actions of contrition before going. Now you understand why Isaiah chapter 1 says that these blood offerings done "without repentance" wearies God and are worthless.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #5

"Do you not know, Asclepius, that Egypt is an image of heaven or, to be more precise, that everything governed and moved in heaven came down to Egypt and was transferred there? If truth were told, our land is the temple of the whole world" Asclepius III 24-26

Answer for yourself: How is this quote above connected with the Soul of mankind? How is this quote above connected with being "born again" or is it? What you just read above is at the very heart of the Egyptian Religion and its "Soul Science". What role does the Uranograph play in this "Soul Science"?

We continue where we left off in the first article. We make mention in earlier articles that the Bible and the world's Sacred Books are concerned with the Soul from beginning to end and the necessity of mankind's two births. We saw that this "Spiritual Message" concerning mankind's Soul was recognized written in the Stars and Constellations in the Sky and Heaven by the Ancient Spiritual Masters in Ancient Egypt and Israel as well as a host of other nations. We saw that this "Spiritual Message" in Heaven above was translated to Earth "below" and inscribed in Egypt's geography, architecture, Temples, Pyramids, and "theologies". This, as you know, is central to our "Jesus Story" as well.

Our "Jesus Story" begins almost with the admonition of "the Christ", the dramatic figure of the divine principle in man, who taught and announced it categorically in declaring to Nicodemus that "ye must be born again." Nicodemus asks if this means that we must enter a second time into our mother's body and experience a second birth in the natural manner. Jesus replies that we "must be born of water and the Spirit."

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the Latin word "spiritus", translated "Spirit" in many passages, means as well "air" or "breath"? One of the great keys to restoring true understanding to the Bible and the intended meaning of its passages is the correct understanding of the four "elements" of ancient mythicism:earth, water, air and fire:

- The body of the physical or natural man was conceived as being composed of the two lower elements of ancient mythicism: earth and water.
- The higher or Spiritual man was conceived of being composed of the commingling of air and fire, representing mind and Spirit.

Thus man has two natures; a dualism if you will. Understanding this then we can look at Jesus' statement to Nicodemus and render it: being "born of water and air."

And in the New Testament text we find that John the Baptist uses three of the four elements when he states that he, the forerunner of the Christos, and therefore a type of the lower natural man, indeed baptizes us with water (omitting earth), but that there cometh after him one higher than himself who shall baptize us with the holy spiritus (air) and with fire. Jesus thus affirms that we have two births, necessitating two mothers, and John the Baptist adds that we must have two baptisms.

Mankind possesses a "Spirit" which is an indestructible fragment of God's own mighty Spirit. This has been rightly called a "tiny spark of that cosmic Intelligence and Love which we call the Mind of God". That being so the ancients typified the divine element in man by fire and in contrast the lower or human element by water.

Answer for yourself: What does this mean: The ancients taught that the fiery Soul of man is housed in a tenement of flesh (earth/clay) and matter which is seven-eighths water by actual composition!

Answer for yourself: Why do all the sungods, messiahs and "Christs" cross rivers and seas and why are these solar heroes immersed in water and baptized in the ancient mythologies that long predate Christianity? Why is the Christ baptized and cross the lake of Galilee? Why do almost all other solar-god walk on water, calm stormy seas, etc.? Is this a "Pattern" and what does it mean to us? Is this "calming" of water have anything to do with the Soul of mankind? The crossing of the rivers and seas and the immersion of solar heroes in water in olden mythologies, and the rite of baptism in theology, signified nothing beyond the fact of the Soul's immersion in a physical body of water nature in its successive incarnations.

Now we have seen that mankind is distinctly a creature compounded and made of two natures:

- a higher and a lower,
- a Spiritual and a sensual,
- a divine and a human,
- a mortal and an immortal, and finally
- a fiery and a watery

These two natures are conjoined in a mutual relationship in the organic body of flesh. Says Heraclitus: "Man is a portion of cosmic fire, imprisoned in a body of earth and water." Speaking of man Plato affirms: "Through body it is an animal; through intellect it is a god." To create man God incarnated the fiery Spiritual principle of his life in the watery confines of material bodies. That is the truest basic description of man that anthropology can present. All problems spring from that foundation and are referable for solution back to it.

In the figure on the right we see Horus and Set join forces to tie up the symbol of Union (Sema). The Sema symbol refers to the union of Upper Egypt (Spiritual man) and Lower Egypt (fleshly man) under one ruler, but there as intimated is a more subtle level of understanding.

Answer for yourself: Who or what is this "one ruler" over both mankind's natures?

It refers to one's Higher Self and lower Self (Horus/Set) (Muata Ashby, The Egyptian Book of the Dead, p. 42). Man is, then, a natural man and a god, in combination. Our natural body gives the Soul of man its baptism in water; our initial Spiritual body is to give us the later baptism by fire! We are born first as the natural man; then we are to be born "again" as the Spiritual man (or that is the Divine Plan and "Pattern in the Mount" which we will soon look at when we study the Constellation Orion. Or, said differently but meaning the same, we are born first by water and then by fire. Of vital significance at this point are two statements by St. Paul:

1 Cor 15:46-47 46 Howbeit that was not first which is Spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is Spiritual. 47 The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. (KJV)

Again he says:

1 Cor 2:14 14 But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. (KJV)

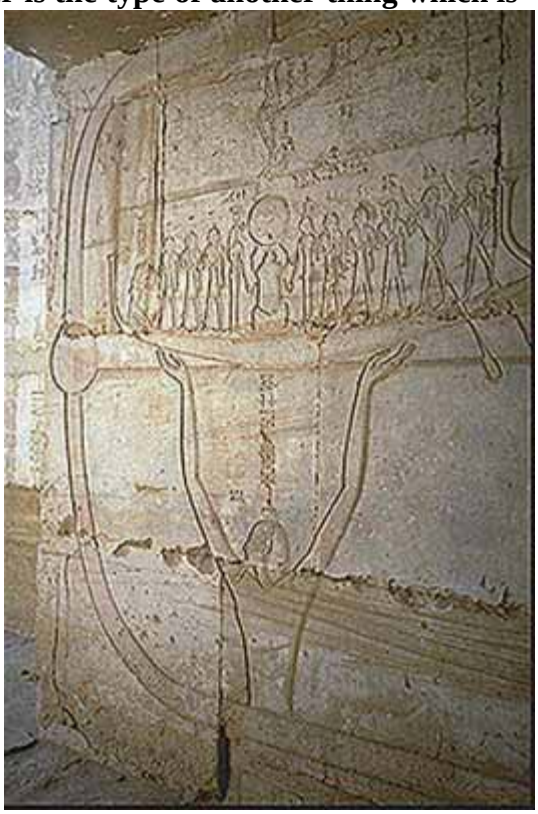
This should hopefully make sense to all for the "natural man" is not yet in that higher kingdom of evolution, and he must be transformed, transfigured, lifted up into a superior world of Spiritual consciousness before he can recognize Spiritual things. Spiritual Evolution will thus transform him, and nothing else will.

Using astrological bases for portraying cosmic truths, the ancients localized the birth of the natural man in the zodiacal house of Virgo and the birth of the Spiritual man in the opposite house of Pisces. These then were the houses of the two mothers of life. The first was the Virgin Mother (Virgo), the primeval symbol of the later Virgin Mary that predates the Mary of the Gospels by thousands of years B.C. Virgo gave man his natural birth by water (from the primordial waters...Egypt call this "Nun") and became known as the "Water-Mother".

Gen 1:2 2 And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters [primordial waters] (KJV)

Pisces (the Two Fishes by name) gave mankind his birth by the Fish and was denominated the "Fish-Mother". The virgin mothers are all identified with water as symbol and their various names, such as Meri, Mary, Venus (born of the sea-foam), Tiamat, Typhon and Thallath (Greek for "sea") are designations for water. On the other side there are the Fish Avatars of Vishnu, such as the Babylonian Ioannes, or Dagon, and the Assyrian goddess Atergatis was called "the Fish-Mother." As you can see many nations had this "revelation" of the "necessary re-birth" of mankind; from a "natural man" to a "Spiritual man". Virgo stood as the mother of birth by water, or the birth of the natural man, the first man of the earth, earthy. But Pisces stood as the "Fish-Mother" of birth by Spirit or fire, or the birth of Spiritual man; the second man which is later described by St. Paul as "the Lord from heaven."

1 Cor 15:47 47 The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. (KJV)



Virgo was the water-mother of the natural man, Pisces the fish-mother of the Spiritual man" (Alvin Kuhn, The Lost Light, p. 7). Their relationship of "natural" and later "Spiritual" was first taught to mankind through the constellations of the Zodiac. Look again at the grouping of Virgo and Pisces and see that they "oppose" each other being 6 months apart in the path of the Sun just like Horus and Set are forces and powers of opposition to each other. The myth of this "opposition" of these two natures in mankind comes to light in the battle of Horus and Set and Jesus and Satan is but another retelling of this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom; although not literal they both teach a supreme Divine Truth but only as a Spiritual allegory. To make this opposition of powers or "neteru", in Horus and Set, or in Jesus and Satan, both "historical" and "literal" is to destroy the Divine Teaching hidden in both these stories and myths. This might be your first introduction into the serious questioning of the historical reliability and truth behind the "Jesus Story" but it has to begin somewhere if you ever hope of coming to the ultimate truth behind the "Jesus Story" we received and were taught to believe was a "historical" event "without ever questioning it" or studying it out.

It is obvious that water is the type of natural birth because all natural birth proceeds in and from water. If fact prior to natural birth it is common to say "her water broke". Even NASA teaches us that the first thing they look for when exploring other planets or worlds is "water". Science today teaches us that all first life originated in the sea water. This does not preclude the idea of "Intelligent Design" in such an evolution of life. The fish is a birth in and from the water, and it stands patently as the generic type of organic life issuing out of inorganic! The fish typifies and is a symbol of life embodied in a physical organic structure. Organic life is born out of the water, and is the first birth, the child of the water-mother. And if organic life is in turn to become the mother herself for another life then its child or "offspring" the ancients taught will be mind and Spiritual consciousness, which is likened to "the Son of the fish-mother"! In brief, water is the mother of natural physical being, and organic structure becomes the later mother of the Divine mind and Consciousness of God that incarnates in organic matter; in this case mankind.

But the parallels are not yet complete. Water is the type of another thing which is still more germinal of life, namely, physical matter. Matter is the virgin mother of all life. All things are generated in the womb of primordial matter, the "old genetrix" of Egyptian mythology. And it is by a consideration of the nature of matter and its evolution that we are enabled to arrive at last at the true meaning of the double motherhood of life. For oddly enough, matter is seen to exist in two states, in each of which it becomes mother of life, at two different levels. Primordial matter, the sea of (to us) empty space (Egypt called this Nun), is the first mother of all living forms. The Egyptians believed that before the world was formed, there was a watery mass of dark, directionless chaos. Nun was believed to be symbolic of the chaotic waters before the First Time. The god was shown as either a frog-headed man, or as a bearded blue or green man (symbolic of water). He was also shown rising up out of a body of water, carrying the solar barque in his up stretched hands. This is the primal "abyss of the waters" of which we read in the Book of Genesis. It is from this "sea of latent patentability" that all later "manifestation" and "Emanation" of matter will usher forth. The Latin word for "mother" is our very word "matter," with one "t" left out--mater. And how close to "mater" is water! And all organic structure is the second mother, the parent of the developing Spiritual Mind.

The ancient books always grouped the two mothers in pairs. They were called "the two mothers" or sometimes the "two divine sisters." Or they were both the wife and sister of the God, under the names of Juno, Venus, Isis, Ishtar, Cybele or Mylitta. In ancient Egypt they were first Apt and Neith; and later Isis and Nephthys. Gerald Massey relates Neith to "net," i.e., fish-net (again the second mother of the two)! Clues to their functions were picked up in the Egyptian Book of the Dead: "Isis conceived him; Nephthys gave him birth." Or: "Isis bore him; Nephthys suckled him," or "Nephthys reared him". The full sense of these statements was not discerned until they were scrutinized in the light of another key sentence which matched them: "Heaven conceived him; the Tuat brought him forth."

Answer for yourself: What is this teaching saying? Is this mumbo-jumbo or is a deep Spiritual revelation lurking here?

For that which is to issue forth in the cycles of evolution as the Divine Mind in an organic creature (mankind is a perfect example) is at first conceived, as taught by the Ancient Egyptians, first by Divine I ideation (Divine Thought originates first) in the innermost depths of the Creator's Cosmic Consciousness, or in the purely noumenal world, or again in the bosom of Infinite Spirit, where Spirit is identical with pure undifferentiated matter. We have read this our whole life as Christians never fathoming the depth of such a statement:

John 1:1-3 1 In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. 2

The same was in the beginning with God. 3 All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. (KJV)

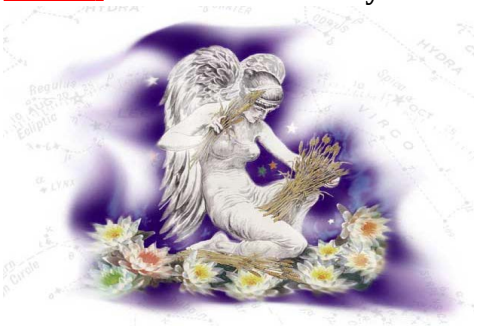
Answer for yourself: What is this "word"?

Strong's Concordance:

3056 logos (log'-os); from 3004; something said (including the thought);

We see that before something can be "said" its first origination is in "thought"!

This idea of the evolution of the Divine Mind in matter, for example mankind, is mirrored in the Egyptian statement that "Isis conceived him". Matter in its invisible, inorganic state was the womb of the first conception. Isis is a virgin, i.e., pure matter, or matter waiting transformation into a Spiritual existence. The Tuat, on the other hand, is really earth, as the type of physical matter, or matter organic, aggregated into substantial forms, called by us physical matter. It is matter as substance, constituted and existent in the visible world in structural forms.



Answer for yourself: Have we just said that in the Mind of God, the "template or pattern or idea in the invisible realm", becomes "visible and physical"? Yes. That is what we just described. With God "thought" become" reality" and eventually manifests in physical organic existence in which the Mind of God awaits "awakening". Isis was matter subsistent as empty space (Nun), and Nephthys was atomic matter, constituent of visible structural forms. The physical worlds which we must now think of as floating in the sea of empty space like fish in the water, are the second form of matter, and their organic bodies of substantial matter give birth to the Logos in the solar systems and to the "Krst/Karest/Christos" in man. So divine Spirit is conceived in the womb of Isis, the first universal mother, and brought to birth in the womb of Nephthys, the second mother, the immediate incubator and gestator of its manifest expression. One might paraphrase this situation by saying that a human child is first conceived in mind of its parents, and exists in the "thought" of its parents at first, only later to be born from the womb of its physical mother when that "thought" is "realized" physically. Thus life has two births and must of necessity have two mothers. Life is Spiritually conceived and materially born. Or, man may be said to be born as a natural creature from Spirit into matter, and born later as a Spiritual god when he emerges from his baptism in the water of the body as "reborn" in a Spiritual sense and this "rebirth" is culminated when he re-enters the bosom of his Father at the demise of the physical and visible body which housed his "awakened Soul". Or, finally, he is born first as man, by water; and reborn later as god, by fire.

Matt 3:11 11 I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire: (KJV)

Mistaken for a presumed "literal-historical" event we have before us the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom which describes the birth of the Deific Mind in mankind, the "Christ being formed in us" and we fail to grasp this awesome reality when reading this and other verses like it in the New Testament. Surely we are smart enough to grasp the allegorical language in such a verse for literal fire would consume all of us. And this first birth was depicted by Ancient Egypt as taking place on the western side of the Zodiac, in the house or womb of the Virgin Mother, Virgo, because in the west the Sun, universal symbol of Spiritual fire, descended into organic matter in its setting, or incarnation (the Sun appeared to descend into the Earth at dusk). So the Ancient Spiritual Masters both recognized in the setting Sun, the Fire of God as it descended into mother Earth, or matter, inseminates mankind for the necessity of his "second Spiritual Birth". Mankind is born as natural man on the west (Virgo), only to be regenerated as the Spiritual man on the east (Pisces). The Spirit's descent on the west makes it mankind; its resurrection on the east, like the Summer Sunrise, makes it deity again. This descent of God in matter (mankind) and the Spiritual Awakening in mankind is the the death and resurrection of the god in all religions of antiquity which is the "Pattern" we find in all the sungods as "dying and rising" gods. This idea of a "dying-rising" god, like the "Jesus Story", is nothing more than the incarnation of Divine Energy and Spirit-Consciousness into matter (mankind) and mankind's "awakening" to his true identity and later return to the Father Spirit at the demise of physical matter (the death of the flesh of the body). In the texts we read this cycle of "Spiritual Evolution" is described as the descent of the Christos (the Messiah) into Egypt (symbol for the physical body) and his exodus back to Canaan (the Promised Land of Spiritual reality). There you have it!

Further scrutiny of such Ancient Spiritual Wisdom brings to light other links of connection with the Bible. The chief one is found in the symbol of bread in connection with both Virgo and Pisces. Pisces is the house of the Fishes by name, but it is not commonly known that Virgo in astrological symbology was the house of Bread. This is indicated by several items of ancient typology. Many centuries ago in the Precession of the Equinoxes, the end of the year was marked by the position of the great Dog-Star Sirius, mighty celestial symbol of the divinity in man. The Ancient Egyptian Religion taught that precisely at midnight of December 24Sirius (the birth star of the "Jesus Story") stood on the meridian line from the zenith to Egypt. At the same moment there arose on the eastern horizon the Constellation of the Virgin (Virgo). Understand that Virgo and Sirius are key players in this "Symbolic Theology" and Soul Science.

Answer for yourself: Why was this important? There were two very important Stars in this Constellation that has important theological implications for the Ancient Egyptians and us today as well:

- Virgo, bearing in her left arm was a star which symbolized the Christ child, the symbol of the Christhood coming to function in mankind once it was awakened by the "reborn" experience and second birth, and
- Virgo, bearing in her her right hand was the great star Spica (Latin, a head, or "spike" of wheat) which was the symbol of that same divinity coming as celestial food from Heaven for mankind.

It must ever be remembered that in the "Jesus Story" we are told that as followers of "the Christ" we are to virtually eat his body as food, and drink his blood, if we would inherit Eternal Life. So typology represented the Christos as coming in the form of man, the babe Christ, and as food for man, the wheat. John speaks of the Christ principle in the words: "This is that bread which came down from heaven, that if a man eat of it he shall hunger no more." Jesus broke a loaf into fragments and gave to his disciples, saying that it was his body, broken for them. But Horus did this "miracle" first first 10,000 years before the "Jesus Story". The "Pattern in the Mount" is eternal and must be kept intact and it was. We now have Virgo established as the house of Bread and Pisces as the house of Fish. But the characterization of the two Houses must be brought along to a more specific evolutionary reference to which we look next.

Answer for yourself: What are these "Houses," thus defined? They are, as at first, the two states of matter which we addressed above, but now we look deeper and see that they are an immediate reference to the life of man on earth. They are in the final stage of the meaning man's body itself, which consists of matter in both its invisible and its visible forms. For man has a natural body and a Spiritual body. Man's body itself houses the two mothers. The body is this double house of Bread and of Fish; natural then Spiritual.

Now what comes next I find startling and life-changing and its impact upon the "Jesus Story" is not to be underestimated. We made mention in passing that the Egyptians had an actual Egyptian city, where the rites of the death, burial and resurrection of Osiris or Horus were enacted each year. This city was called "Anu" but this name we saw bears a theological significance that is not to be underestimated and this city and what it represents is "celestial" before it is "terrestrial" and was given to a geographical town. This name "Anu", was given also to the human body as the location of this "Spiritual Transformation"; the body is the site of the "death, burial and resurrection of Osiris-Horus, "the Krst/Karest/Christ". This is the Pattern in the Mount which has become so tragically blurred and misinterpreted and mistaken today by a "literalist-historical" Christianity. This 3 letter word and short name carries the central meaning of all theologies. The name of this "city" now rises out of the dust of the ancient Egyptian book, the Book of the Dead, to help enlighten us to make proper comprehension of our Christian Bibles and the stories we read.

It is to such a study that we turn next.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #6

I made mention in closing the previous article that what comes next in our studies is startling and life-changing and its impact upon the "Jesus Story" is not to be underestimated. This is an "understatement" when the full ramifications of what you will learn next hits home.

We made mention in passing that the Egyptians had an actual Egyptian "city"; a "location" where the rites of the death, burial and resurrection of Osiris were enacted each year. This is very important!!! Understand that this city in Ancient Egypt was representative of a "Spiritual Transformation" that occurred to Osiris, the "Pattern" again for all humanity. And this "Pattern in the Mount" above us was incarnated into the theologies have come down to us today in various degrees of mutilation and degradation. Again this is Uranography at its very best as you shall see.

Answer for yourself: What is the name of this city? It is was called "Anu".

This city was called "Anu" but this name bears a theological significance that is not to be underestimated and this city and what it represents is "celestial" before it is "terrestrial" and was given to a geographical town. This name "Anu", was given also to the human body as the location of a "Spiritual Transformation"; the body is the site of the "death, burial and resurrection of Osiris-Horus, "the death, burial, and resurrection of Krst/Karest/Christ". This is the Pattern in the Mount which has become so tragically blurred and misinterpreted and mistaken today by a "literalist-historical" Christianity. This 3 letter word, "Anu", and this short name carries the central meaning of all theologies and all religions. The name of this "city" now rises out of the dust of the ancient Egyptian book, the Egyptian Book of the Dead, to help enlighten us to make proper comprehension of our Christian Bibles and the stories we read.

Answer for yourself: Why is the Egyptian Bible called the Book of the Dead? What good does a book do anyone if they are physically "dead"? How can they read it? Could "dead" meaning something other than what we are accustomed to believe it means? Could we be "dead" while we yet "live"?

Egypt understood that this body is a prison for the Soul and when it descends from unlimited freedom and Spirituality in Heaven to Earth. In such a descent into matter the Soul becomes imprisoned in a body full of disease, sin, and works of the flesh. They likened such a condition to "death"; the Soul was "dead" once it incarnated. This body is "hades", the "realm of the dead" to the Ancient Spiritual Masters. We have lost the ancient Spiritual understanding and have it completely backwards today in Christian theology. Thus we find the admonition of the early Gnostics to "awaken" from the dead while we yet live:

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

Now you can easily see that this Egyptian Book of the Dead was a book to help instruct and prepare the "living-dead" for their ascent to Heaven once their physical bodies died; it was a book intended to be used "now" while we yet live in these bodies of "death"; thus the title the Egyptian Book of the Dead.

Thus the next link for us to realize in our studies is that this physical body is for the Soul the house of death and in its regenerative phase, the house of rebirth. It is the house into which the Spirit-Soul descends to its partial obscuration in the darkness of the grave of dense and darkened matter, into the night of death, or incarnation, out of which it is to arise in a new birth or resurrection on the opposite side of the cycle (first in Virgo and then in Pisces). A significant passage from the Book of the Dead recites: "Who cometh forth from the dusk, and whose birth is in the house of death"--referring to the incarnating Soul in physical matter which imprisons the Soul as a form of "death". In a Spiritual sense the Soul "dies" on entering the body in its incarnation, but has a new birth in it as it later resurrects from Spiritual deadness within it. This is the "Born Again" experience we have seen imaged in the House of Virgo and Pisces previously. The body is therefore the house of his death and rebirth, or the place of the Soul's crucifixion and resurrection. This is how the Ancient Spiritual Masters described it; a "death" and "crucifixion" at it descended and intersected with matter. We will look more into this "crucifixion" in a body of "death" later and its implications for an "old rugged wooden cross".

No wonder "Anu" is the location for Spiritual Transformation, no wonder this is located in the bodies of humanity. This city of "Anu" refers to a city within the the bodies of mankind where the Sun (Energies) of God, as the Soul sank to its death on the cross of matter (Spirit intersected matter in its descent into the flesh of mankind), only to re-arise in a new birth within this Temple made without hands. Historically, according to the Uranograph, Egypt named such a city "of the Sun" Heliopolis which is the term in the Greek. The Ancient Egyptian knew the body was the focus of the Energy of God, it was a "little Sun". This does not tell us much but when we learn that in the Egyptian Religion that this city of "resurrection from the dead" lies "within our body", like the parent city in Heaven from which it was taken in the Uranograph, then the implications for us are startling. This city is "ANU" and is taken from a Heavenly city above. The "death and resurrection" of the Krst/Karest/Christ is to occur in us; not in some tomb of stone in Israel.

Gal 4:19 19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed [birthed] in you, (KJV)

Col 1:27 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

The Ancient Egyptians had a name for the body as the location of these transformations of nature, which carry the central meaning of all theologies. This name now rises out of the obscurity of ancient Egyptian books to enlighten all modern Bible interpretation; especially our New Testaments. This city of the body, where the sun of Soul sank to its death on the cross of matter, to rearise in a new birth, a resurrection, was called the city of the Sun, or in Greek, Heliopolis, but in the Egyptian, "ANU".

This "theological concept" was of such importance that Ancient Egypt gave a name to a literal city according to the Uranograph and this city, as mentioned above, is "Anu", and it was here in Egypt where the rites of the death, burial and resurrection of Osiris were enacted each year; but understand that according to the Uranography this name "Anu" bore a theological significance before it was given to a geographical town.

Answer for yourself: Why is this important? It was at the city of Anu where the rites of the death, burial and resurrection of Osiris were enacted each year and these were a picture for all mankind. This was the "Pattern" for all mankind and their "Spiritual Awakening". It is appropriate that in our bodies, where Ancient Egypt taught lies the city of "Anu", while we yet walk and talk ,that we as humanity experience this same "resurrection from the dead" while we yet live. This is Egyptian Soul Science at its best. This is very important for understanding "this Pattern in the Mount" which has come to Earth in our bodies. "So Above, So Below". When this fact is connected with the fact that this "city", where "rituals of resurrection" occurred lies within the body of mankind, then we have something dramatic to ponder and experience while we yet live in these "bodies of death". This name "Anu" therefore bears a theological significance long before it was given to a geographical town later in Israel but this is how it should be as we have so far seen in our studies of the Uranography. The discovery of this, along with the above information is the reason why I love the study of Comparative Religion for it is in such pursuits that you learn the truth behind our Christian fables and "literalized misinterpreted stories".

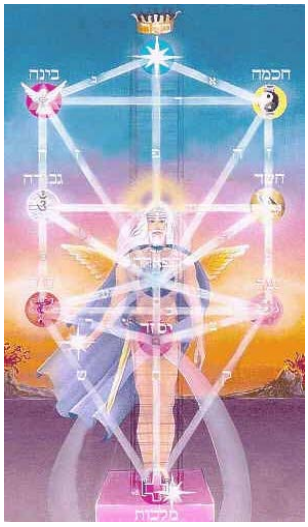
But we are not through yet. Many thousands of years ago in the literature of old Egypt we find the mention of this place called "Anu" in the Book of the Dead being described as being "the place of multiplying bread." Horus multiplied bread in Anu. As Christians we have heard that Jesus multiplied bread but we were never taught that like Jesus so did Horus thousands of years earlier. We find Horus in the Ritual, in the Egyptian Book of the Dead, Jesus' Egyptian prototype thousands of years earlier from which the "Jesus Story" is taken, doing the same things that Jesus does in the New Testament. Horus was the earlier Iusa, or Jesus prototype. When we learn that an ancient Greek or Egyptian "U" becomes "Y" when transferred to English then we find that this Divine Transformation of mankind occurred at the Egyptian city of "Any" ("Anu" become "Any"), known as the house of bread (and of fish, no doubt), and when the Hebrew word for "house," which is "beth", is added, the result is found in the Gospel's city of Beth-any!



Now you know why the New Testament Christ feeds mankind with both bread and fish. He has to in order to keep the Spiritual Allegory taken from the Sky and Heaven intact. This is not really a "literal" and "historical" miracle but a "Divine Allegory" which teaches a completely different Spiritual message that is sadly completely lost in Christian standard "literalistic" interpretation. As you can see the truth that God wants man to know is not some supposed "historical-literal" story of feeding a multitude of hungry people on a mountain on a sunny Sunday afternoon after Synagogue or "Church", which actually never happened by the way, but rather the Spiritual implications of such a story that is discerned only when one possesses the "keys" to the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom of Egypt. We should not be surprised then when we find that our New Testament Gospels themselves contain the allegory of the Christ character feeding a multitude of hungry people by miraculously multiplying bread and its companion symbol, fish. The "Spiritual Mythos" is intact but lies void of its true understanding. He has to according to the Egyptian Religion and the Uranography in the Sky.

Understand that this story of Horus/Jesus comes down from Heaven and the "Spiritual interpretations" of the Stars but we never know this "Spiritual interpretation" because we interpret this story as if a "historical-literal" account which is not the intent of God in the first place. It is in Heaven and in the Stars and Constellations that God, who is not a man with a mouth, or hands, or flesh, teaches us about mankind's two natures and His will that man be "born again", that man experience a "Spiritual resurrection" while he yet lives in these bodies of "death" (the Second Birth) and that man feed himself on Heaven's bread and not carnal bread and fish.

Before you get too excited at these truths know that this concept of being "Born Again" can be found in Judaism long before it is misinterpreted on purpose by Roman Christianity in order to cover up the actual Spiritual meaning that it applies to mankind obeying the Torah and the Laws of God's Cosmos as part of this "Born Again" process. These Laws, these Commandments, these mitzvoth maintain the harmony of Heaven on Earth. Egypt call it "ma'at" and they are contained in the 42 Negative Confessions which is the foundation for the later "Torah" of Moses. Likewise the need to be "Born-Again" was first taught in Egypt as we might expect since all Spiritual Realities in their original meanings find their origin in Ancient Egypt and their Religious Mysteries taken from the Uranograph in the Sky, the "Pattern in the Mount". Heaven above teaches man that he must be "Born Again" and we will see this shortly with the Constellation Orion and his "immersion" in the River Eridanus in the Sky. Again we see the real interpretation of stories we assumed to be "historical-literal" are but Heavenly allegories teaching on Soul Science. It would serve us well right now to understand the Spiritual Concept of "Being Born Again" from the Jewish perspective since it is from this we can draw helpful conclusions that will impact our Souls while in these mortal bodies.

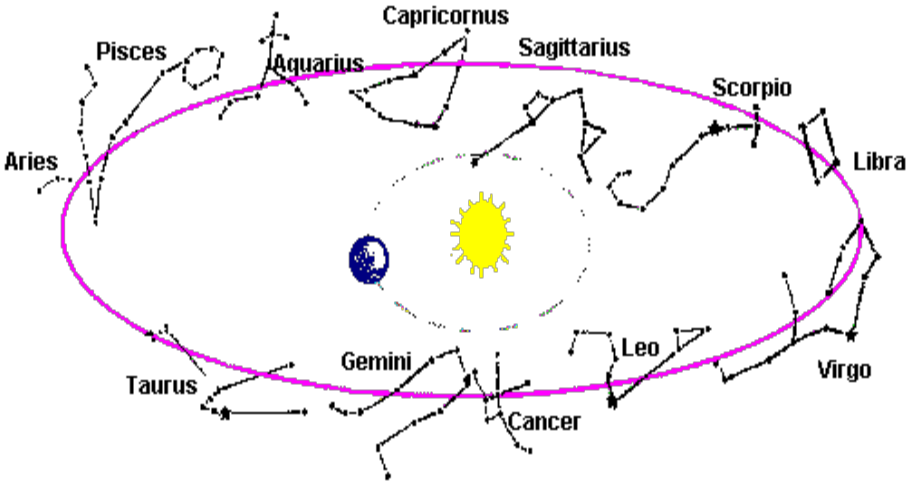
We saw above that the Egyptian Book of the Dead gives to "Anu" the characteristic designation, "the place of multiplying bread"! Here in the long silent tomes of old Egypt is found the original, the prototype, of the miracle of the loaves and the fishes in the Gospels of Christianity. But this is true of every world religion today; the original prototype for all later religious dogmas as found in their most innocent and uncorrupted state in Ancient Egypt. At last we can know the truth; that this "miracle" of "Spiritual resurrection from the dead" happens within us, within mankind, since Anu is the term for the "body".



We are to catch in the assumed miracle the sense that the physical body, as A-NU, was the place where the corpus of the Christ's deific power was to be broken into an infinite number of fragments and distributed out among a multitude of creatures in the Descent of the Soul among the human species. The Ancient Spiritual Masters taught that the Soul in its descent into matter was deprived of the food of Spiritual life in its sojourn in the three kingdoms, the mineral, vegetable and animal. It is when it re-ascends the "Ladder of Heaven" and reaches the plane of Mind and Soulish-Consciousness that it can be righfully said that man is made in the "image of God". It is in this plane of Conscious existence that man can choose to feed his Soul on the Bread from Heaven. Here are all the elements of the inner meaning of the Christian Eucharist: the broken but multiplied fragments of the body of the God, as the Krst/Karest/Christ incarnated and distributed to feed hungry humanity the Soul's food which our Father intended. And as humanity is composed of twelve groups of divine conscious units, there were gathered up twelve baskets of fragments! The Divine Mythos is kept intact. And this episode of the Christ's pretended physical life is found to be Egyptian totally in origin and meaning and is totally symbolic in character! Thus in the the Hebrew city of "Anu", or "Any", the Hebrews had at some time in the past prefixed their word for "house" (beth) to the Egyptian word "Anu" and in so doing gave to this city or location in our bodies the astrological reference as the zodiacal "house of bread." Therefore, "Beth-Anu", a city in Egypt, became "Beth-Any" which is "Bethany" in the Gospels!

The "keys" to interpretation of this Soul Science are coming together. It should by now become progressively obvious to the reader that the Hebrews came along and appropriated Egyptian material and re-wrote and re-interpreted it under their unique cultural and religious perspectives and and out comes the religion of Israel. They picked up the name "ANU" and fitting it back into its Zodiacal setting as Virgo, they called it the "House of Bread." This required their adding to "ANU" their word for "house," which, as anyone knows, is "Beth". This yields us Beth-Anu as we have said. But there is more. We have seen that Beth-Anu now stands before us as the Bethany of the Gospels! Bethany is thus just the sign of Virgo, as the "house of Bread," the home of the great star Spica, the head of wheat!

As the Spiritual man (the Soul) comes down and descends into matter in his incarnation we are met right at the beginning with opposition from our animal nature. This is evident even in a very small child; they don't call it the "terrible twos" for no reason. This conflict and opposition between these two natures within mankind is expressed in the allegorical conflict between the "two brothers, Set and Horus, the prototype for Isaac and Ishmael and Jacob and Esau" (the two natures in mankind). A war of sorts breaks out between Spiritual and the natural man. At first it is the Spiritual that decreases (the Spirit is immature, like a baby Jesus, or infant Horus) and it is the physical-animal nature in mankind which has no restraint; it is the animal nature that increases (just like what John the Baptist mentions that needs to decrease). When the bottom of descent of the Soul is reached (and "Sinai" means "point of turning and returning"), and the re-ascent of the Soul is begun, the reverse is true; the physical decrease and the Spiritual increases. It is then the first or natural man who diminishes, while the buried Spiritual genius germinates and increases as "the Christ" within this body, within this city of "Anu" or "Any" which is our fleshly abode. Now we can understand why the "natural man", John the Baptist says: "must decrease, and he (the Spiritual man/the Krst/Karest/Christ must increase." And this whole Spiritual metamorphosis occurs (the decrease of the animal nature/flesh and increase of Spiritual) within mankind....within our bodies of "Anu".

It is very significant that "Anu" is mentioned as "the place of multiplying the divine bread." The birth of the Krst/Karest/Christ-soul in all men surely multiplies that Bread from Heaven which is broken for all souls as the Eucharist. So, through association with Virgo and its symbolic name, the House of bread and the opposite house of Pisces, House of the fish, we have merged both symbolisms with its polar opposites, and the two symbols, bread and fish, became the twin forms of man's divine food as well as symbolic of man's first birth (natural) and second birth (Spiritual).

Answer for yourself: So what does this say to us? Both in ancient Egypt and in the Hebrew-Christian Scriptures the Christ figure dramatized the miracle of feeding the multitude of mortals in this symbolic city of Anu by multiplying the divine bread and fish. This is "Spiritual" and never intended to understood as "literal" or "historical". It is but a Divine Allegory to show mankind his intended experience while tabernacling in these "bodies of death"; that mankind is to experience a "Spiritual Resurrection" from the dead while he yet lives.

Answer for yourself: Should we be surprised to find that in the Gospels this Jesus, as "the Christ", does this very thing, multiplying the fish loaves and two small fishes to feed a multitude? No, but in reading this "miracle" we never had an idea that this "miracle" is to happens in us.

Answer for yourself: What lies behind the name "Anu"?

The name is obviously made up of "NU" (the Egyptian Nun), the name for the mother Heaven, or empty space, or abyss of nothingness, and Alpha privative, meaning, as in thousands of words, "not." "A-NU" would then mean "not-nothingness," or a world of concrete actuality, the world of physical substantial manifestation. "A-NU" is then the physical body of man on earth. The Soul descends out of the waters of the abyss of the "NUN", or space in its undifferentiated unity (Heaven), which is the sign and name of all things negative. The "NUN" is indeed our "none." Life in the completeness of its unity is negative. To become positively manifest it must differentiate itself into duality, establish positive-negative tension, and later split up into untold multiplicity. This brings out the significance of the Biblical word "multiply." The Book of Genesis depicts this "division" and "multiplication" over and over again in its early chapters. Life can not manifest itself in concrete forms until it multiplies itself endlessly. Unit life of Deity must break itself up into infinite fragments in order to fill empty space with a multitude of worlds and beings of different natures.

Answer for yourself: Is this why the body of Osiris was cut up and spread throughout the land and why all the allegorical solar-gods were "torn to pieces" and distributed about as a picture of the descent of the Divine into all forms of matter including human kind? Yes.

The primal Sea or Mother must engender a multitudinous progeny, to spawn the limitless shallows of organic fish-worlds. This is the meaning of the promise given to Abraham, that his seed should multiply till it filled the earth with offspring countless as the sands of the seashore. And if life was symboled by bread (Virgo), as the first birth, and by fish, as the second birth (Pisces), then we might expect to find in old religious typology the allegory of a Christ figure (Horus and Jesus) multiplying loaves and fishes! And we do!

This is astonishing enough, but it yields in amazement to the next datum of Comparative Religion which came to our notice as a further tie between the Bible and antecedent Egyptian mythology. Few can accurately access the seriousness of the challenge of this knowledge presents the Gospel's historicity. As stated, in The Egyptian Book of the Dead, there exits reference to "Anu" as the body of mankind as the "the place of multiplying bread"! It is in the human body where this miracle is to take place in a Spiritual sense; not on some Israel hillside on a sunny Sabbath afternoon. Here in the long silent volumes of Ancient Egypt is to be found the original, the prototype, of the miracle of the loaves and the fishes in the Gospels of Christianity. Instead of a "literal" interpretation as we have learned as Christians only in the Book of the Dead do we find the heightened original Spiritual meaning. And a meaning never before apprehended or thought by most preachers must now be read into this New Testament account at last. It is time for a major repentance in Christian Biblical interpretation. Finally we are enjoined to catch in the miracle the sense that the physical bodies of mankind, as A-NU, are the place where the Christ's deific power not only has descended but was broken into an infinite number of fragments and distributed out among a multitude of creatures, hungered after a three-days' fast, or deprivation of the food of Spiritual life in their sojourn in the three kingdoms, the mineral, vegetable and animal, before reaching the plane of mind in the human creature. Here are all the elements of the inner meaning of the Christian Eucharist: the broken but multiplied fragments of the body of the god, distributed to feed hungry humanity in the form of the indwelling Krst/Karest/Christ. And as the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom taught, humanity is composed of twelve groups of Divine conscious units, there were gathered up twelve baskets of fragments! Amazing when you get a little knowledge. And this episode of the Christ's alleged "literal" and "historical" life as a Jew in Israel some 2,000 years ago is found to be totally Egyptian in origin and meaning and symbolic, allegorical, and metaphorical in character ONLY! Faced with such knowledge we must call for a complete "reinterpretation" of this "Jesus Story" in order to return these great Spiritual Truths to mankind in the way they were originally intended to be understood.

But new implications arise and lead us on to more startling disclosures the more me study. The Hebrews came along and appropriated Egyptian material. They picked up the name "ANU" and fitting it back into its zodiacal setting as Virgo, they called it the "house of Bread." This required their adding to "ANU" their word for "house," which, as anyone knows, is in the Hebrew the word "Beth".

Answer for yourself: What do we get now?

We mentioned in passing above the hidden secret behind the word "Beth-Anu". Now it is a fact of common philological knowledge that the ancient Greek and Egyptian "U" is rendered as "Y" when the words are brought over into English. The "U" became a "Y," and "Beth-Anu" now stands before us as the "Beth-any" of the Gospels! Bethany is thus symbolic for the sign of Virgo, as the "house of Bread," the home of the great star Spica, the head of wheat!

Answer for yourself: How does one says "house of bread" in ordinary Hebrew? You say it thusly: Beth (house), lehem (bread) --Bethlehem! Bethlehem is Bethany, house of the combined bread and fish. For the Christ, as Jesus says positively, is the product of two births, the one natural, of water; the other Spiritual, of spirit (fire); or of bread (Virgo) and fish (Pisces). This is the "Pattern" for mankind and it all comes from the Heavens. We have heard it our whole lives: "Ye must be born again," the famous saying uttered by the Jewish Christ; one must be born of water and the spirit-fire. Virgo is the first great Mother of life as the formless unformed matter, the Virgin Motherhood; and her name was almost everywhere a form of the name for sea or water. Pisces in the Zodiac represented the second

Mother of life, organic matter that has been impregnated by the rays of the divine Energy-Sun of life, or Divine Spirit-Energy. Virgo can give birth only to natural man; Pisces gives birth to the Spirit-Soul, the "Christ-Horus-Soul" which inorganic matter inorganic could never do. Pisces is the Fish, the symbol of organic life born out of the sea, so that its Christly offspring, the Christs themselves, are all fished up out of the sea. Later it seems that the two signs, Virgo and Pisces, and their symbols, bread and fish, were almost interchangeably confused or commingled in the symbolic imagery. This was natural, since the two signs represented the same body of man in its two aspects of dying and being reborn, and the two processes are confusedly interblended. Likewise, according to the Uranograph, Jerusalem, Egypt, Sodom and others are therefore only Spiritual names transferred to the later geographical map from the celestial chart. And behind them all lies hidden teachings of "the Soul". We will see this clearly when we take up the passage that "our Lord was crucified in Sodom and Egypt" later.

If Pisces is then the "house" in which the Christ in man comes to his birth, it is pertinent to ask if there are evidences in the Bible or Christianity that Jesus was colored with the fish typology. Here we encounter abundant material enough to provide another opportunity to study. For we find in the Gospels that Jesus is colored with many items of the Piscean symbology:

- He picks his twelve disciples from the ranks of fishermen (in Egypt they were as well carpenters, reapers, harvesters, sailors, rowers, builders, masons, potters, etc.);
- He told Peter to find the gold in the fish's mouth;
- He performed the miraculous draught of fishes;
- He declared that he would make them "fishers of men."
- In the catacombs under Rome the symbol of the two fishes crossed was displayed on the Christ's forehead, at his feet, or on a plate on the altar before him.
- And the Romans for several centuries dubbed the early Christians Pisciculi, or "Little Fishes," members of the "fish-cult."
- And the Greeks denominated the Jesus of the Gospels as Ichthys, the Fish.

All this fish symbolism can not be explained away as sheer incident material or coincidence. This "fish symbolism" as attached to "the Christ" is the product of the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom, which figured the Christs under the symbolism of the reigning sign of the zodiac, according to the precession of the equinoxes. And this was Pisces, the symbol for the "Second Birth" in mankind.

But we are not done yet. The Christ, as it has here been delineated, is the offspring or creation of a conception of Deific Mind, first in the inner bosom of Spiritual matter, then in organic bodily structure. Primeval space, we have seen, was called in Egypt the NUN, or the Waters of the Nun. The ancient Egyptians believed that Nun was the primordial waters from which creation took place. It is these same "waters" that we read about in Genesis. All Bible students recognize a familiar ring in the phrase "Joshua, Son of Nun." Hardly anyone knows with definiteness that "Joshua" is just a variant name for Jesus. The phrase is actually written in some old documents as "Jesus, Son of Nun." At any rate Joshua is just Jesus, no less. So here is the Christ, called Jesus, son of the primordial space, son of the primordial water, or the NUN. But the amazement increases when we turn to the Hebrew alphabet and find that while "M" is called and spelled "Mem" and means "water," "N" is called and spelled "Nun" and means--of all things--"Fish"!

Answer for yourself: So what have we seen? Jesus, then, is son of Pisces, the Fish-sign, as he indeed is in the Gospels themselves.

And Horus, the Egyptian Christ, who is identical with the Jesus of the Gospels in some one hundred and eighty particulars, performed at Anu a great miracle.

Answer for yourself: What was this miracle? Horus raised his father Osiris from the dead, calling unto him in the cave to rise and come forth. Now follow this closely. "Anu", as we have seen, became "Beth-any" of the Gospels; and it was at Bethany that Jesus raised Lazarus from death! So we have both Osiris and Lazarus risen from the dead at "Bet-Anu" or "Beth-Any". Is t his a coincidence or are they the same? Did this resurrection occur at a literal city in Israel or does this "resurrection" occur in our bodies as we have shown above?

Answer for yourself: And who was Lazarus? Here is one of the greatest of all the marvels as this chain of comparative data unfolds under our eyes. According to Budge and other eminent Egyptologists the ancient designation of Osiris was "ASAR". But the Egyptians invariably expressed reverence for deity by prefixing the definite article "the" to the names of their Gods. Just as Christians say, or should say, "the Christ", they said: "the Osiris". It will be found that the article "the" connoted Deity in ancient usage. Our definite article, "the" is the root of the Greek word "theos", God; the Spanish article, masculine, "El," is the Hebrew word for God; and the Greek masculine article, "ho," is a Chinese word for deity. To say the Osiris was equivalent to saying "Lord Osiris".

Now when the Hebrews took up the Egyptian phrases and names they converted the name of "the Osiris" or "Lord Osiris" directly into their own vernacular, and the result was "El-Asar." Later on the Romans, speaking Latin, took up the same material that had come down from revered Egyptian sources and to "El-Asar" they added the common Latin termination of the second declension masculine nouns, in which most men's names ended, namely, "-us"; and the result was now "El-Asar-us." In time the initial "E" wore off, as the scholars phrase it, and the "s" in Asar changed into its sister letter "z," leaving us holding in our hands "the Lazarus" whom Jesus raised at Bethany (Beth-"Anu" where the rites of resurrection of Osiris were held)! No wonder Lazarus was raised at "Beth-Any" (Beth-Anu).

Likewise it was at Bethany that as Christians we read that "Lazarus" was raised from the dead by the Gospel's Son of God. The link previous will take you to an article revealing how the Gospel's account of the raising of Lazarus is in all actuality the raising of Osiris who, known by his Egyptian name, Asar, or as "El-Asar-Us", makes the parallel stories identical. As, by reincarnation, a man is reborn and resurrected to new life from the "dead" state of inertia under the lethal dominance of the instincts of the flesh and this is accomplished by the new projection of himself into body as his own son (Osiris raised in Horus, the second birth from the first birth, the Spiritual birth from a natural birth), so, according to the "Pattern in the Mount", it is always the divine son who in all the allegories raises his father from the dead. Could anything be more astonishing, then, than the discovery that "Lazarus" is an old Egyptian derivative, which with the prefixing of the Hebrew word "El" for "God," and the Latin masculine terminal -us suffixed to "Asar", the original form of the name of Osiris, gives finally "El-Asar-us", or Lazarus! So the Christ of Egypt, Horus, raised from the dead his father Asar, or Osiris. And this took place at, you got it, Anu, or (Beth)any, in our bodies and not some hilly countryside.

This speaks to us of the "resurrection of 'the Christ" within us". This is the "Second Birth"; the "Born Again" experience. This is the only "Coming Of Christ" we will ever experience! Think on that! As Osiris raised in Horus, the second birth from the first birth, the Spiritual birth from a natural birth, we are to experience our "resurrection" while we yet live in these bodies of death and find our new existence in the Christ being formed in us as Paul states. This is the "Pattern in the Mount" which we will look at more closely when we turn to Orion in the Sky and the Constellation Eridanus, the River in Heaven in which Orion-Osiris is immersed.

To evidence that this derivation is not a fanciful invention or sheer coincidence the Biblical names of High Priests may be cited. We find one with the name of El(e)azar and another by name Azar-iah, "iah" or "jah" being suffixes of great deific connotation, matching "el." And so we are faced with the irrefutable evidence of Comparative Religion that Jesus' raising of Lazarus at Bethany is but a rescript of the old Egyptian dramatic mystery in which Horus, the Christ, raised his "dead" father Osiris, or El-Asar-us from the grave at "Anu". And the Egyptian recital was in the papyri perhaps 5000 years B.C.E. or much earlier.

The identity is even carried out to the point that there are in both allegories the two women present for this resurrection of Osiris as Horus, whose names reach similarity in the Gospel Mary and the Egyptian Meri (parallel to the two sisters of Osiris, Isis and Nephytis). Also at the Egyptian scene were present the two divine sisters, Isis and Nephthys. An old source-name for Isis was "Meri", basic for the Latin mare, "the sea". The Egyptian plural of "Meri" was "Merti". In Latin feminine form this became "Mertae". In Hebrew it resolved into what was rendered in English as Martha. So even in the ancient Egyptian transaction there were present the two Maries, or Mary and Martha, the sisters of Lazarus!

All this sets the stage for the crowning item in this whole article. In the Gospel drama John the Baptist bears the character of the firstborn or natural man, coming first to prepare the ground or make straight the path for the advent of the Spiritual man or Lord Christ. Remembering our "Symbolic Theology" we have learned so far, then John the Baptist would therefore stand as the son of the water-mother, Virgo, and under the astrological symbolism (Virgo is an Autumn Constellation) would be born at the Autumn Equinox, or in his mother's house. On the other side of the cycle of "descent and resurrection", Jesus, the Christos, would be the son of the "fish-mother", and would be born in his mother's house, Pisces.

Answer for yourself: What is hidden here?

These houses, Virgo and Pisces, are six months apart astrologically. We have mentioned this before as these Two Houses of the Zodiac are in opposition (Natural birth, Spiritual birth). The whole structure of Gospel historicity quivers under the impact of the strange dramatic circumstance, given in Luke, that the annunciation to Mary of her impregnation by the Holy Ghost came when John the Baptist was six months in Elizabeth's womb. The natural man, having covered the "six months" between his birth and the date of his quickening into Spiritual status in the evolutionary cycle, was thus quickened, or leaped in his mother's womb, when the time for the birth, or advent, of the Spiritual Christ had arrived. This is not a coincidence but must occur according to the "Pattern in the Mount". The water baptism was to be consummated with the fire at the baptism of Jesus by John, a fire was kindled in the waters of the Jordan (symbolic for the water body of mankind which houses the slumbering Soul of mankind awaiting "resurrection" by the fire of God).

St. Paul declares that we come to birth spiritually only as we die carnally, which means that the quantity of divine character in us grows in proportion as the amount of raw nature declines. As the Spiritual man, Jesus, son of Nun, the fish, increases, the natural man, John, son of Virgo, the Water, must decrease. Astrologically, as a Constellation or Star sinks below the horizon in the west, its opposite Constellation would be rising in the east. As John, type of the natural first birth, went down, Jesus, type of the Spiritual second birth, rose on the world. And, says John the Baptist: "I must decrease as he must increase"!

Answer for yourself: Coincidence? After having read and hopefully understood the previous articles what can we say without a doubt about our Bibles that we did not know before? Well there are some important things to grasp from such a study so lets summarize.

Based on years of the most diligent research, it is a fact that it is impossible to understand the allegories of the Bible without a knowledge of ancient methods of sacred writing, and of the ancient philosophies and Ancient Spiritual Wisdom concerning this "Soul Science". My efforts and diligent study in this field has been rewarded by a number of the most signal discoveries which are basic for further grasp of the material.

- The composers of ancient scriptures were poets, allegorists, dramatists and mythicists. They never wrote literally. They were in the line of generations of sages and seers who had developed the art of Spiritual representation to a point of the utmost ingenuity and complexity, completely shrouding the intended real meaning under veils of symbolism, which have utterly misled modern scholars who could not pierce the outer veil to read the veiled Spiritual truth hidden underneath. This means for you and me that our Bibles, let alone most of the holy books of the world, cannot be read without the "keys" of interpretation that unlock these religious and Spiritual myths, allegories, metaphors, legends, and the reference to the symbols used. The ancients themselves testify plentifully that the scriptures are allegories. Origen regards the whole Bible as a set of allegories. But the most astonishing declaration to this effect is St. Paul's own statement in Galatians that the whole story of Abraham and Sarah and Hagar is *"an allegory."

- The Ancients Spiritual Masters were also esotericists, writing only of the inner life and for initiated pupils and not for the common folk. They wrote of inner things under an outer veil. They wrote of the Greater Mysteries which were never given out to the multitude, but taught in secret to disciplined students. Spiritual truth was never published or made available in the ways we might expect and are familiar with today likes our "literalism" and "historicity" of almost all things we read. Whatever was written, was veiled under glyph and symbol. Mostly it was taught by oral tradition.
- Then the ancients were "Uranographers" and in so doing the translated and transferred the very "chart of Heaven" to Earth and captured the higher Spiritual realities and truths behind the veil of glyph and symbol. In so doing they laid out and charted in esoteric language the very Spiritual constitution and physiology of man, the psychic centers, areas of Spiritual force, and all "after the pattern of things in the heavens" that spoke of mankind and his Soul. Man, the microcosm, is a replica of the heavenly man and the universe. From the history of man written thus in the Constellation of the Skies, the early religious formulators transferred the record to earth and distributed the various phenomena and localities over the national maps in accordance with the heavenly chart! All nations tried to frame their own history and geography after the pattern of things in the heavenly mount. Mainly the Egyptians and after them the Jews made this transfer almost completely. Each nation thus strove to have its history interpreted as a fulfillment of the sacred allegory; and its national history, thus diverted into the form of the celestial myth, was made into the national epic. And finally came the claim on the part of several, notably the Jews, that since their history fulfilled the outlines of the sacred story, they were proven to be the "chosen people" of God.
- Finally, after years of intense and scholarly study, it dawned upon me that all religious writings deal with but one central fact, the incarnation of man, or the descent and resurrection of the Soul in mankind. This is the whole story of religion after religion from beginning to end. The old hoary sacred books from nation to nation, including our Bibles as Christians and followers of "the Christ", deal with nothing beyond this story and its associated parallels of instruction. This fact alone is the key to all philosophy and religion. In the light of this one fact all complicated meanings can be reduced finally to a concise and clear meaning that can unite the whole of the human race. This fact and knowledge alone unravels the infinite complexities of the symbology that have confounded the learned scholars and theologians for thousands of years since mankind lost the "keys" to interpret the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom imparted to the race of mankind in the beginning of time. That man is a god dwelling in an animal form is the central and cardinal fact of all religion along with the necessity that the god in him, in the form of his Soul, conquer, master, and subjugate the animal nature within himself in order to have the whole person serve the interests of God His Creator.

Given these 4 grand conclusions above it is my hope and dream that I have contributed in some small way to help heal the fractured brotherhood in human society which lies separated by religion after religion; all claiming the way to truth and Heaven when few if any today possess the "necessary keys" to unlock the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom that is go grossly misinterpreted today to the world at large. It is again my hope that my efforts have helped in some small way expose the great injustice done to God's truth by the traditional "literal-historical" interpretation of the Sacred Scripture which was never the intent of the writers or their message for mankind in the beginning of time.

Let us continue our studies in the next article in this series.

THE BATTLE OF HORUS AND SET: PERSONIFICATION OF LIGHT VS. DARKNESS

When a jealous Seth slew the beloved Osiris and dropped his body into the Nile, the wife of Osiris, goddess Isis, moved all forces of nature to rescue the body of her husband. Isis prepared for the ceremonial burial of Osiris, but his murderer, his brother Seth, stole the body away and hacked it into pieces. Isis searched all of Egypt, gathering together his pieces and, with the god, Anubis, bound him together to make him whole. With the resurrected god Osiris, Isis conceived a son, Horus.

Osiris, then descended into the Netherworld to reign over the kingdom of the afterlife. Isis took her newborn son, Horus and escaped to the papyrus marshes, jealously guarding her son from the vengeful god, Seth. Goddess of love, goddess of protection, goddess of nurturing, Isis, succeeded, raising her son in secret. She raised her son, Horus, to ascend to his rightful throne, take his place over Seth.

Horus, the god, emerged from the marshes. Horus sought his father, Osiris' heritage. Horus presented his claim to the gods. The sun god, presiding over the court, secretly favored Seth and caused the court to procrastinate. The judges retired to an island to deliberate. Other gods came to chide their inaction, to coax their judgment. It is said that the goddess, Hathor, went to the sun god and offered him a blissful joining. But, the negotiations drug on, until the god Osiris sent a letter from the netherworld, to the disagreeable gods. The message is simple: The fearsome and terrifying messengers that brought the message, would drive all of the gods into the land of the dead. It was decided. The verdict, in favor of Horus.

The quarrel did not end there. Seth and Horus had an epic battle, power against power, god to god. And, in this battle, Horus lost an eye and Seth, his testicles. The eye of Horus was found and restored by the god Thoth. Horus presented the healed eye to his father, Osiris. This eye, represented the restoration of royal power. Seth, ultimately, recovered his testicles. And, though these gods, at times, did battle, they would, as well, aid each other.

Pharaohs were seen to be the living Horus. Many of the pharaohs, as did the all ancient Egyptians, still held Seth in fearful reverence. Often, a pharaoh preparing for war, would invoke the spirit of Seth, the god of the unyielding, fierce desert, in order to overpower his enemies. But, always, when pharaoh died, he became Osiris.

Horus is represented as a man, or as a hawk or falcon-headed man, often wearing the Pharaoh's crown or with a sun disc on his head. The god, would likely carry a was scepter and an ankh, the symbol for eternal life. The predator bird, the falcon is a symbol of the god, Horus. Since, Horus lost and regained his eye, the eye itself is a potent symbol, called the eye of Horus. The eye, or wadjet eye as it is called is worn or displayed as a powerful amulet of protection. The retrieved eye is seen as the moon, the other, as the sun, thus Horus has influence over these powerful forces of nature. Seth's testicles, weren't revered, but were commonly referred to in crude oaths. By the balls of Seth! they might say. And, thereafter, the opposing, balancing forces of the two gods lived for all time, with Horus, the god of the pharaoh and the fertile lands; Seth, the god of the desert lands and foreign peoples.

Horus and Set were originally expressions of the primal duality, the two aspects of Heaven, the day-sky and night-sky. As the Egyptian mythology was elaborated towards its final chaotic state, their symbolism drifted away from these absolute poles into the middle ground, first becoming solar, and finally taking on a variety of solar/martial and zodiacal characteristics. Yet their final form can still be expressed in a concise symbology, that of the astrological signs of Aries and Scorpio. Taken whole, their symbolism is that of the primal duality manifesting in its male aspects.

It is worth noting that in the beginning of Egyptian dynastic history Seth was a member of the venerated gods of Egypt. It is Seth that stands in the bow of the boat of Ra and slays the enemies of Ra as the ship traverses the sky on it's daily journey. It seems that in very early times the followers of the god Seth may have been conquered by the followers of the god Horus whom went on to unite upper and lower Egypt. If that is true then Seths fall from power has historical and political beginnings. It also must be considered that the roots of these stories may lie in the fact that Seth was a deity of the night and darkness. Therefore, these battles may represent day verses night or dark verses light as well as the ideas of good verses evil. Set was one of the earliest Egyptian deities, a god of the night identified with the northern stars. In the earliest ages of Egypt this Prince of Darkness was well regarded. If we look at these stories with that in mind we find ideas like; "an aging king fighting the powers of darkness that are conspiring against him". In some texts he is hailed as a source of strength, and in early paintings he is portrayed as bearer of a harpoon at the prow of the boat of Ra, warding off the serpent Apep. Yet the warlike and resolute nature of Set seems to have been regarded with ambivalence in Egyptian theology, and the portrayal of this Neter went through many changes over a period of nearly three thousand years. Pictures of a god bearing two heads, that of Set and his daylight brother Horus the Elder, may be compared to the oriental Yin/Yang symbol as a representation of the union of polarities. In time, the conflict between these two abstract principles came to be emphasized rather than their primal union. This concept can easily be equated with the sun setting and being overpowered by the darkness of night. We can also assume that this battle rages through the night only to find that the sun is once again victorious with the sunrise. By midday, the enemy is all but defeated but the victory slips away as the forces of darkness join the battle as the day grows older towards sunset. And so the battle goes; not only day to day but season to season as the Sun moves through the equinoxes and solstices (the Zodiac yearly). As Set was a god of the desert and probably symbolized the destructive heat of the afternoon sun, and thus was thought to be infertile. The hieroglyph for Set was used in words such as 'turmoil', 'confusion', 'illness', 'storm' and 'rage'. Strange events such as eclipses and thunderstorms were all attributed to him (again all manifestations of darkness).

Set's battle with Horus the Elder grew from being a statement of the duality of day and night into an expression of the political conflict among the polytheistic priesthoods for control of the Egyptian theocracy. This was rewritten as a battle between Good and Evil after Egypt expelled the Hyskos in the 18th Dynasty. Some say the Hyskos were Asiatic invaders, and others say they were an indigenous minority that seized control of the nation. This tribe ruled Egypt for a time and happened to favor the Set cult, seeing a resemblance to a storm-god of their own pantheon.

The Set cult never recovered from this identification with the Hyskos. Images of Set were destroyed or defaced.

By the time Greek historians visited Egypt, wild asses, pigs, and other beasts identified with the Set cult were driven off cliffs, hacked into pieces or otherwise slaughtered at annual celebrations in a spirit akin to the driving out of the Biblical scapegoat. The report of these historians is often thought to be a valid account of a a timeless and immutable theocracy, but just looking at the frequency with which the ruling capital moved to different cities (each being a cult-center) is enough to dispel this idea. One controversial Egyptologist has suggested that the worship of Set might have predated the concept of paternity. Later cults incorporating a father god would reject this fatherless son. This introduces another bizarre factor in the transformation of the Night/Day battle between brothers into an inheritance dispute between Set and Horus the Younger. Any book on Egyptian myth you pick up contains the gory details of this cosmic lawsuit. I have always been intrigued, though, that while all books affirm that Set tore Osiris to pieces, everybody knows about Osiris, and it is quite hard to collect the pieces of the puzzle that is Set. Egyptologists have never agreed what the animal used to symbolize Set actually is. Since the sages of ancient Egypt did not use an unrecognizable creature to represent any other major deity, we may guess that this is intentional, and points to an esoteric meaning.

This mythology of the two heroes has appeared in nearly every human culture (Cain/ Abel, Romulus/Remus, Jacob/Esau myths). The examples above are merely a few of the more familiar past expressions but know that behind them all is the eternal tension between light and darkness.

Let us continue our study.

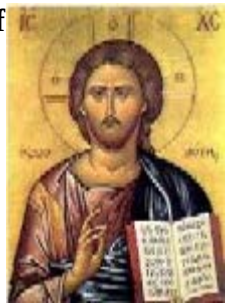
THE RASING OF LAZARUS...TRUTH OR SUN MYTH RETOLD?

Now a certain man was sick, named Lazarus, of Bethany, the town of Mary and her sister Martha.....Therefore his sisters sent unto Him saying, "Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick." When Jesus heard that, He said, "This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby." Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus. When He had heard therefore that he was sick, he abode two days still in the same place where he was. (John 11:1-6)

We have read the story since we were children of this mighty miracle performed by Jesus in the New Testament. But we never knew that this story is another teaching concerning the Winter Solstice and the rebirth of the "dead Sun" who was slain by the darkness of Winter and who remained in the grave of darkness for 3 days until raised in newness of life on the 4th day. Of course this 4th day we all know to be December 25th; the famous day for the birth of all the sungods. As we begin I make mention to notice with me the peculiar reference to "light" in the verses that follow the account of the Lazarus.



John 11:9-17 9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world. 10 But if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him. 11 These things said he: and after that he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep. 12 Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well. 13 Howbeit Jesus spake of his death: but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep. 14 Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead. 15 And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe; nevertheless let us go unto him. 16 Then said Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow disciples, Let us also go, that we may die with him. 17 Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did the above passages refer to a man walking in daylight who does not stumble in darkness because he is aided by the "light of the world" which is the Sun? It sure does but we don't pay attention to that and just move on but we must not; we must come to terms with the Ancients and their understanding that the Sun was called "the light of the world".

Before we go on it is important that we do a quick review in order to make the necessary connections to the information that follows.

Answer for yourself: Have you read and thoroughly familiarized yourself with the solar concepts connected with the Winter Solstice in the previous articles which teach how the Sun was viewed by the Ancients as having died for 3 days and was raised to life on the 4th day, that day being December 25th? Well if you have you should be struck at the parallel in the above account of Lazarus being dead and raised presumably on the 4th day. Don't you think it rather "telling" that at one moment we are discussing the resurrection of a dead man and the next we are speaking in an allegory of light, darkness, sleep, death, and next the "light of the world" which to the Ancients was always the Sun? Notice the nimbus or the solar halo around the head of this early artist's depiction of Jesus from early church history. The connection is obvious.

John 8:12 12 Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. (KJV)

The language of the Bible has a way of leading unsuspecting readers into thinking it was recording human historical events when, in reality, it was referring to the patterns of the stars. A general overview serves to explain how the Bible's allegorical language reflects a superstitious fear of darkness. Well we need to look into this for sure.

You should be struck by the somewhat strange comments following in the Gospel of John, verses 9-17, regarding "12 hours of daylight and 12 hours of darkness" as well as the reference to Lazarus being "dead for 4 days" especially in light of the prior understanding when studying the Winter Solstice that it is on the 4th day, December 25th, following three days where the Sun remained "asleep" or "dead" as it sunk and remained at the same spot on the southwestern horizon as the Sun set for 3 days in a row. Remember for just a second what we learned; namely, that the Sun was "reborn from the dead" on the 4th day which just happened to be December 25th.

Ancients were correct in seeing the sun and its light as indispensable to life, but to the point where they worried that as daylight hours got shorter, the sun was endangered of dying a permanent death. When sunlight hours began to increase again after the Winter Solstice men rejoiced for the Sun had risen from the dead. Thus darkness was personified as evil, because to them, darkness was the sun's enemy. This tension between good and evil ebbed and escalated every year as seen in the picture of the Zodiac and its "cross". Notice in the picture that the Zodiac has four quadrants that represent the four seasons of the year. Starting at the bottom of the picture, in the mindsets of the Ancients, when the Sun kept setting lower in the horizon and as the days of light and warmed diminished consecutively the Ancients feared in increasing darkness which to them meant the bitter cold of Winter along with the diminishing to their food stores which could mean a sure death to them and their families. Then came a period of 3 days when the Sun in its travels across the sky reached a point when setting in the horizon that it no longer made a southwestwardly trek but remained fixed at the same point of the horizon for 3 days and the Ancients, in their mythos, reasoned the Sun was dead . This fixed position of the Sun lasted for 3 days and these very important days are from December 22 to 24. But on midnight of December 24th the Sun miraculously began a northward movement as it began to ascend again in the Sky and this brought hope for warmth, protection, and an abundant harvest in the Spring. The Sun had come back to life. It was reasoned that the Sun was was resurrected on December 25 when daylight hours start to increase. Evil was in power during the dark winter months, but it was also a time, as daylight hours were increasing, when the sun was winning its way back to glory. At the spring equinox, when daylight and nighttime hours are equal, the sun has nullified the dark forces. As the days get progressively longer, the sun is on its righteous path back to full strength. It is the only season of the year when there is no dissension and there is peace on earth. At the summer solstice, when the sun is at its zenith, it is on its throne at full power. As the sun starts to descend, the dark forces are starting to edge their way back. As the days get progressively shorter, the sun is still strong, but its strength is being sapped by all this constant tribulation. At the fall equinox, things begin to look bleak. There is not much more that can be accomplished before the sun is betrayed and killed. This is the mythos behind the story of Lazarus as we shall now see to hold on as the myth of the resurrection of Lazarus is exposed as nothing more than a sun myth retold.

Well some might say that this is pure coincidence. Well you won't for long as you read what comes next.

WAS LAZARUS REALLY A REFERENCE TO THE EGYPTIAN OSIRIS?

There are clear parallels between the "Jesus raising Lazarus" story and the Egyptian "Horus raising "El-Azar-Us" or "El-Osiris" story, and given that there is a gnostic sarcophagus or maybe two that depicts Jesus as beardless man with a wand raising Lazarus who is wrapped like a mummy, that would suggest that we are speaking here of the mythic mystery over the literal historical interpretation of the raising of Lazarus or "El-Azar-Us" (the Egyptian word we recognize today as Osiris). In that case, the story of the raising of Lazarus should be considered in its pagan mythical mystery layer, as opposed to first viewing the story as if it is reflection of a historical account that involved a historical Jesus as well as one poor dead soul. It seems we are right back to where we have been since the beginning; namely are we to interpret the stories in our New Testament as "literal occurrences" or "allegories" that expressed Divine Truths which were later "literalized. Well the facts will help us decide.

There is at least one ancient picture of a Jesus-like figure with a wand raising a mummy-wrapped figure in the early history of the Christian Church. A wand would indicate divine magic power to raise the dead. The canonical Jesus figure is portrayed as a channel of some sort of transcendent, supernatural power to raise the dead. In fact this picture is the earliest picture we have of Jesus raising Lazarus and it is dated from 400 A.D.

Answer for yourself: Was the story of Jesus raising Lazarus from among the dead intended to be primarily read as a mythic description of the raising of the Sun from the dead at the Winter Solstice or was it intended to be understood as a historical report of a unique incident through a literalist interpretation of a physical miracle performed upon a man named Lazarus? Was the raising of Lazarus actual history or a personified myth regarding the path of the Sun at it rose into the norther sky following the Winter Solstice?

Today's audience already knows full well the literalist interpretive framework that is offered as the fully predominant one in today's church and in today's conservative and liberal historical-Jesus scholarship. The interpretive framework which is not obvious today is the pagan mystic mythic mysterious view of Jesus' raising of Lazarus which finds its origin in the myths of Egypt and primarily with Osiris and his death (Osiris personified Sun).

Answer for yourself: What is the opposite of the interpretive framework of modern historical-Jesus scholarship? What have they eliminated or failed to relate to the Christian? Did the ancients mean for the story of Jesus' raising of Lazarus to be read first of all as a literal report, through the interpretive framework of literal historical events or did they understand it as an allegory for the death and rebirth of the Sun at the Winter Solstice?

THE EGYPTIAN CONNECTION...THE SUN REBORN

The Lazarus story has a connection with Egypt and we find parallels to it in the "Pyramid Texts". The Pyramid Texts are inscribed on the walls on ten pyramids which are all situated at the necropolis of Saqqara. These pyramids date to the Fifth, Sixth and Eighth Dynasties of the Old Kingdom (2705-2213 BC). The main part of this enormous collection of texts is inscribed in the pyramids of the kings of the Fifth and Sixth Dynasties: Unas, the last King of the Fifth Dynasty, his successor Teti, who was the first king of the Sixth Dynasty and his successors Pepi I, Merenre and Pepi II. Let us look at some very interesting things found written on the walls of the Pyramids of Egypt for 2700 B.C.E.

It is in these "Pyramid Texts" that we first find a unique play on words when we look at the word Bethany.

Answer for yourself: Where did Lazarus supposedly live? He is mentioned at living at Bethany.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the word "Bethany, when translated back into the Egyptian language is "Beth-anu" and it means the House of the Sun?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware than many of the details of that story of the raising of Osiris have analogs in the story of Lazarus? Helms' book Who Wrote The Gospels has a section on Lazarus. On pages 121 - 126 Helms talks about the Lazarus myth in relation to the "Pyramid Texts". He uses R.O. Faulkner as his primary reference.

When compared to the story of Osiris that predated the Lazarus account by thousands of years we find that the resurrection of Lazarus is nothing more than another version of the story of the solar year. Robert Taylor, a Christian minister, gave a sermon about this very thing in 1830 which you can find in his famous work that got him imprisoned in the colonies which is entitled The Devil's Pulpit. He shows us that the resurrection of Lazarus is a plagiarized story taken from the Ausarian Resurrection (Osiris) of over 12,000 years ago, which was also based on the Sun and its resurrection from the dead at the Winter Solstice.

Answer for yourself: Do you know the Osiris story? I believe that all Christians and followers of all world religion must understand this story for it is from this story that all religions emanate in some degree. It is in this story that the God Ausar (Osiris as the personified Sun) was killed by his brother, Set (personified darkness from which we later get the concept of the adversary of the Sun whom we call Satan).

Answer for yourself: Do we find in the Osiris story the cosmic dualism of light fighting the darkness for mastery? It is in the study of these equinoxes and solstices that one sees the tension between darkness and his mastery over the light as well as the resurrection of the light and his ultimate mastery over the darkness? We sure do. The story of the resurrection of Osiris (Sun) back to life is the ultimate triumph of the struggle of light versus darkness and this triumph is accomplished at the Winter Solstice but not fully realized until the Vernal or Spring Equinox with the bursting forth of Spring and Mother Nature which at that time responds to the victory achieved previously at the Winter Solstice. To complicate things more over time the Sun was personified as the "Son". Thus the Sun and the Son are basically the same in that they tell the same story over and over. The son (Sun) of Ausar (Osiris), named Heru (Horus in Greek) avenged his father's death by fighting with Set (the darkness). Heru (Horus) triumphs over Set (darkness) which we see in the Universal Laws of the Cosmos and then Horus' father Osiris is then was resurrected from death of darkness. This is the ultimate Dualism that we find expressed in so many ways in all world religions. In ancient Egypt a dualistic tendency appears, on the one hand, in the religion of the sun-god Re (light), the principle of life and truth, who has a perpetual adversary, Apophis, the gigantic serpent of darkness; on the other hand, a similar tendency appears in the later legend of Osiris, in which Set is the adversary who kills Osiris and constantly opposes Isis and Horus. However, Re (or another good god) might be represented as the universal creator. As for Set, who had been the principal god in certain provinces, he was for a long time regarded as capable of doing good in certain respects; only in a later epoch did he become the personification of evil. Moreover, he was regarded as the brother of Osiris, which means they had a common origin.

Whether or not you believe in battles between the forces of light and darkness, this idea nevertheless occupies an important place in a substratum of collective belief in Western culture. The idea of light-and-darkness is as old as the hills. The alternation of night/day and winter/summer has been a fundamental human experience throughout time. The interaction of light and dark created life. To the Ancients all creation was seen to result from infinite variations of these two polarities which together make one. As prehistory unfolded, people became increasingly habituated to hurting and harming one another. A shock to human values and sensibilities, this brought up the 'problem of evil'. What made people do this? Was there an evil force causing people to act anti-socially or to go against the Laws of Creation? Thus arose the idea of a universal battle, not merely an interaction, between the forces of light and darkness. This is generally known as dualism. In this scenario, light became 'good' and darkness 'evil'. This Cosmic principle was preserved by the Ancients through the aid of myths and legends that captured for all time this Eternal Principle and we find it expressed through the agents of Osiris, Horus, and Set to begin with but others would follow in every nation under the Sun (forgive the pun).

This contest between good (life) and bad (death) and light and darkness is played out in many legends the world over; only the names change. The New Testament account of Lazarus is but one of many of these myths. The original story of such a tension between good and evil and light versus darkness goes all the way back to Egypt and the legend of the triumph of life and light over darkness and death begins with Osiris. Thus the stories of being raised from the dead goes back to Egypt. It relates to one of the best known and most powerful myths, the raising of Osiris, the god of the dead.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the European plagiarizers changed El-Ausar (Osiris) of Egypt to Lazarus? Are you aware that similarly Heru or Horus was changed into Jesus, the son (Sun) of God? This original story (prototype for Constantine's bible) is published in detail in the Egyptian Book of the Dead.

Answer for yourself: Are you also aware that the word Lazarus when translated into the Egyptian language means "El- Azur or El-Osiris" which means "God Helps"? We find these similarities with Judeo-Christianity due to the influence of the Alexandrian influence of Hellenistic Judaism. I have a book in my library written by Randel Helm's entitled Gospel Fictions and it this book it relates that the "Pyramid Texts" describe a story of Osiris being raised from the dead by Horus. Now what follows next is very important to our understanding of the Lazarus story in the gospel of John.

The word "Lazarus" is a thinly disguised depiction of "L-ASURAS". "Ausar" is the real name of Osiris in Egyptian. 'L' just means "the", and functions as a definite article in English. This means that "L-Asuras" or Osiris is just another name for Lazarus and it was this Osiris who was raised from the dead following 3 days in the tomb. It is interesting to note that in Hindi the Sun is called Asurya or Surya or Sri. This is where we get our Sire or Sir, when referring to a man of status and education.

THE STORY OF THE EGYPTIAN LAZARUS...OSIRIS

The story of Ausar (Osiris) is one of Egypt's most ancient myths. So old, it's origins have been lost in time. It was an important story to the Egyptians because of Ausar's (Osiris) role as the king of Egypt who is resurrected as the "King of the dead". The god Ausar was the central deity in ancient Egyptian mortuary rituals. In Egyptian mythology he is ruler of the Underworld and associated with resurrection. Ausar is also associated with agricultural renewal and the resurrection of Mother Nature as well. He is often depicted with a green face and likewise is depicted as a man wrapped in white mummy bandages and holding the crook and the flail, both symbols of kingship. Osiris, Ausar, is the god of the dead, and the god of the resurrection into eternal life; ruler, protector, and judge of the deceased, and his prototype (the deceased was in historical times usually referred to as "the Osiris" [L-Ausar/Lazarus..see above the word play]). His cult originated in Abydos, where his actual tomb was said to be located.

Osiris is the husband of Isis. In that after thousands of years all female goddesses became merged as an aspect of Isis, she too is central to Egyptian symbolism. Most scholars know of the tragic story of the death of Osiris. Osiris was murdered by his evil brother Set (personified darkness). Darkness overpowers and kills the light following the Autumn solstice. The days and the length of the darkness per day get progressively longer and does so right up to the Winter Solstice. Set, darkness and the adversary, is equated with Typhon-Apophis of the Greeks and our Satan today. Satan is based on the personage of Set. According to Egyptian mythology, Ausar was murdered by his brother Seth then brought back to life by the love of his sister and wife, Auset (Isis). This myth describes the forces of destruction that initiated the process of mummification. The love of Auset is symbolic of regeneration and the promise of eternal life. The cycle of destruction, death and rebirth was repeated each year in the annual flooding of the Nile, the river that provided the essential ingredients needed to sustain life, giving birth to one of the first civilizations.

But Set, the Evil One as personified darkness, the brother of Osiris and Isis, envied Osiris and hated Isis. The more the people loved and praised Osiris (the Sun was the Savior of mankind), the more Set hated him; and the more good he did and the happier mankind became, the stronger grew Set's desire to kill his brother and rule in his place. And when Osiris returned from his travels (the Sun is constantly moving in the Heavens) Set was among the first to welcome him back and kneel in reverence before "the good god Pharaoh Osiris" (darkness yields to the light of the Sun for 6 months of the year). Set, the darkness), with the help of of seventy-two of his wicked friends planned the death of Osiris (the Sun). Osiris was murdered by his brother, Set, who then chopped the body into smaller pieces. Isis and Nepthys, her sister, found the pieces (except his penis) and gave wax models of them to the priests to worship. With the aid of the god Thoth Isis reassembled Osiris but you know what its like, you open the box and there's an important part missing; so Thoth helped her to fashion a magic phallus (said to be from gold), Isis turned it on and became pregnant. Ra sent Anubis and Thoth to mummify Osiris and Isis brought life back into his body. Afterwards, Osiris had to stay in the underworld and judge the souls of the dead and was called Neb-er-tcher ("lord of the outermost limit"). Meanwhile Isis gave birth to a son, Horus the son of God, the son of the Sun, at Khemis on the west bank marshes of the Nile Delta. Later with the assistance of the magical Thoth, Horus defeated Set (the Sun defeated the darkness at the Winter Solstice) in a mighty battle that cost Horus his eye and Set his testicles. The gods intervened and sat in judgement. Horus was granted a magical eye and was reinstated as King. Immediately that Horus was crowned he legged it to the underworld to find his father's body. Whereupon he rendered the 'magic eye" to Osiris causing his resurrection (res-erection). Osiris then became God of the Underworld and Judge of the Dead.

The essence of Osiris left to establish a kingdom in the constellation of Orion, while his body went to the underworld. The worship of Osiris, like that of the sun god Ra, was one of the great cults of ancient Egypt. It gradually spread throughout the Mediterranean world and, with that of Isis and Horus, was especially vital during the time of the Roman Empire and it would be Rome again who gives us the New Testament. Identified variously with the waters of the Nile, the grain of the earth, the moon, and the Sun, Osiris was the great symbol of the creative forces of nature and the imperishability of life (the triumph of life over death and light over darkness as seen in the path of the Sun through the Heavens).

Osiris died and the Sun stood still on the horizon for 3 days and men feared the Sun had died. Through the power of Birth (Isis) under the authority and skill of Thoth (The Higher Genius) Osiris arose on the physical plane as the great avenging god Horus, his son. On the spiritual plane Osiris became the great god of the underworld. Like Christ he became the god that the Egyptians needed to become in order to be saved. What this means is that unless the initiate allows for the complete transformation of the self under the direct guidance of the Higher, no true and lasting power can be obtained.

Gal 4:19 19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ (Osiris-Ausar) be formed in you, (KJV)

Osiris is called "The Bornless One."

John 1:1-5 1 In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. 2 The same was in the beginning with God. 3 All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. 4 In him was life; and the life was the light of men. 5 And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not. (KJV)

To the Egyptians one must become Osiris. In that no one can or could deliver the forty-two negative confessions in the hall of truth, because no one is perfect in earthly life.

Rom 3:23 23 For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God; (KJV)

By identification with Osiris the candidate who stands in the Hall of Truth can indeed deliver the negative confession (the "Negative Confession" or the "Declaration of Innocence" comes from the 'Book of Going Forth By Day' commonly called the 'Book of the Dead'. This declaration of innocence had to be said by the deceased in the Hall of Two Truths, in order to be purified and to be allowed Rebirth). The reason is clear, it is not him, but him in Osiris that is delivering the 42 negative confession that the Egyptian believer made at his death. This was the ultimate statement of one's righteousness in life.

Osiris, being the first living thing to die, subsequently became lord of the dead. His death was avenged by his son Horus, who defeated Set and cast him out into the desert to the West of Egypt (the Sahara). Prayers and spells were addressed to Osiris throughout Egyptian history, in hopes of securing his blessing and entering the afterlife which he ruled; but his popularity steadily increased through the Middle Kingdom. By Dynasty XVIII he was probably the most widely worshipped god in Egypt. It is in this 18th dynasty that emerges the Pharaoh Moses who overturns this worship of the godman and refocuses worship of Egypt upon the invisible Creator of the Universe. We need another Moses today to refocus our worship from the false godman of Nicea, Jesus of Constantine's doing, back to the invisible Creator God.

So we have now see that Lazarus, or L-Asuras or Osiris is raised from the dead. Asur, is the real name of Osiris in Egyptian. But this again goes back to Egypt. It relates to one of the best known and most powerful myths, the raising of Osiris, the god of the dead which is nothing more than the personified story of the rebirth of the Sun from the dead following the Winter Solstice.

Let us now remember the ancient quote from Thomas Payne:

The Christian religion is a parody on the worship of the Sun, in which they put a man whom they call Christ, in the place of the Sun, and pay him the same adoration which was originally paid to the Sun.

Fortunately, centuries of Christian book burning (like the burning of the Alexandrian library and its 700,000 volumes by Rome in the 4th century) cannot erase the stars. By looking at the Gospels through the eyes of an astronomer and astrologer, we can understand why the Gospels follow the same story outline. The tale of Jesus takes place within one Zodiac year. By breaking down the Gospels according to each of the twelve Zodiac constellations, we can track Jesus as the sun through references to each motif that the constellations correspond to. This was hard for me to believe until I understood such a laborious study and was thoroughly convinced by what I uncovered.....I had believe a lie and was an ordained pastor of a false religion. In repentance I have devoted my life to correcting my past false teachings in hopes that when I meet the Creator my penitence is enough.

A Christian's religious belief system, when tested and exposed to contradictory facts from Archeology, Biblical languages, Biblical history, Biblical culture, Comparative religion, Astronomy and Astrology must in the Spirit of Truth and Repentance, be flexible enough to change.

Answer for yourself: What are we to make of this Astrotheology behind this event as found in the "Jesus Story?

IN LIGHT OF THE EVIDENCE THEN WHAT ARE WE TO MAKE NEW TESTAMENT EVENTS IN THE LIFE OF JESUS CHRIST THAT COME FROM ASTRO-THEOLOGY IN LIGHT OF MODERN SCHOLARSHIP?

Taken together with all the evidence we have seen from the study of prior articles it seems more and more that the possibility of the existence of a historical Jesus is less and less. It would appear as our knowledge of the Sun and constellations increase that the "Jesus Story" is nothing more than a parody on the Sun and its path through the sky as witnessed by the Ancients and captured in personified myths that were later "literalized" by Rome when they created the New Testament.

The reader needs to know that there is not a shred of legitimate historical evidence anywhere that the "Jesus Story" originated as the biography of a man named Jesus, and there exits today an abundant amount of evidence that proves that a historical Jesus never existed. Likewise the reader needs to know that Comparative Religious studies teach us that the basic plot of the Jesus Story, including the motif of a crucified savior, already existed in many other religions long prior to the alleged time of Jesus. And lastly the "Jesus Story" is nothing more than "Solar Mythology"; the "Jesus Story" is actually an allegory for what would naturally be the oldest and most important story humans would notice and write down, that being the annual passage of the Sun through the Equinoxes and Solstices (the seasons of the year). But let us go on to learn the Divine Truths hidden behind this tragic historical presentation of this "Jesus Story" and finally come to the knowledge of the Descent of the Soul into mankind; the real story behind Rome's "Jesus Story".

Answer for yourself: What are we to make of this article let alone the many others from Bet Emet Ministries that shows the astronomical origins for what we have been taught is the "literalized Jesus Story?

It is not easy for modern Christianity to be confronted with the evidence that it has never known the inner meaning of its own Bible let alone the truths that lie behind the "Jesus Christ" . Yet that bold assertion can be made and supported by many infallible proofs today thanks to modern scholarship and the efforts of determined archeologists to give the world the "truth". It is my hope that the mind of the student and reader will be awakened by the disclosures of this hidden sense of religious meaning behind our "literalized Jesus Story" which our articles reveal. Likewise I hope that these truths brought forward by Bet Emet Ministries have such an impact upon each reader that he cannot help but wonder himself as to how completely the true significance of other fundamental structures in the Bible and Christian theology may likewise have been missed or misinterpreted in the teachings we inherited today in the traditional Christian faith. It is hard to come to the realization that as Christians we are almost totally ignorant of the meaning of the Book which for sixteen centuries has stood as the spiritual light and guide for Christianity. It must be most challenging for the mind of the reader to realize that Christianity has taught a salvation message connected to a "historical Jesus" which is utterly groundless and untruthful; a message trusted my untold millions on their way to the hereafter which can now be shown to have never been understood correctly or interpreted correctly by those of the early faith which crafted this New Testament in the first place. How orthodox exegesis missed the true import of its own scriptures is almost beyond belief; but missed it they did and instead of the truth about the "Karest/Christ" which was taught by Egypt in the beginning of recorded time the world received a false rendering and a false salvation message designed and taught by Rome since the 3rd century A.D.

Not alone one, or two, but all of the doctrines of Christianity in vogue since the 3rd century of the Christian era will have to suffer drastic revision and restatement in light of the astronomical interpretation of the "Jesus Story" alone and this does not even take into consideration the damaging impact from the Gnostic Nag Hammadi Library and Dead Sea Scroll discoveries just a little over 50 years ago. The depth of the darkness that has involved the whole region of Christian religious intellectualism can be sensed without difficulty when one begins to acquire the facts of Comparative Religion, Gnosticism, and Astro-Theology where we find the earliest teachings of the "Descent of the Soul/Christ" into matter (flesh/mankind). Not possessing the "keys" to interpret the Ancient allegories of "the Karest/Christ" Orthodox Christianity stands in need of reinterpretation of every single dogma that has been sadly distorted out of its original sense. It is time for a serious inspection of Egyptian religion in hopes of recovering the necessary clues and "keys" to correctly interpret the Christian "Sungod Story" called the "Jesus Story" today.

Taken together with all the evidence we have seen from the study of prior articles in this website as well as the many other websites from Bet Emet Ministries it seems more and more that the possibility of the existence of a historical Jesus is less and less. It would appear as our knowledge of the Sun and constellations increase that the "Jesus Story" is seen as nothing more than a parody on the Sun and its path through the sky as witnessed by the Ancients and captured in personified myths that were later "literalized" by Rome when they created the New Testament. Lacking the "keys" to the proper interpretation of these Sungods one is resigned to almost disbelief, fear, and discouragement when such facts are presented without their proper interpretation as cherished by the Ancients who gave them to the world thousands and thousands of years ago. Seeing the uncanny parallels to the Christian "Jesus Story" is unsettling to say the least for every Christian. But once one receives the "gnosis" and necessary "keys" for their proper interpretation one sees the absolute genius in them as the vehicle for preserving and spreading the knowledge of the Descent of the Soul/Christ in the flesh of mankind.

The reader needs to know that there is not a shred of legitimate historical evidence anywhere that the "Jesus Story" originated as the biography of a historical man of the first century named Jesus, and instead there exits today a plentiful amount of evidence that proves that a historical Jesus never existed. Likewise the reader needs to know that Comparative Religious studies teach us that the basic plot of the "Jesus Story", from beginning to end as seen in our Christian Gospels is paralleled by the lives of the nations "Sungods" over and over again. I must draw your attention to the fact that these parallels also include the the motif of a crucified savior. These "parallel events" between the lives of the nations Sungods and the "Jesus Story" already existed in many other religions long prior to the alleged time given for Rome's supposed "historical Jesus". And lastly the reader needs to know that the "Jesus Story" is nothing more than "Solar Mythology"; the "Jesus Story" is actually an allegory for what would naturally be the oldest and most important story humans would notice and write down, that being the annual passage of the Sun through the Equinoxes and Solstices (the seasons of the year).

Now for some good news. We must continue our studies in order to learn what lies behind these "crucified Sungods" that predate the "Jesus Story" by thousands of years. I implore you that you continue your studies in order to learn the Divine Truths hidden behind this tragic "literalization of the Jesus Story" and its mistaken historical presentation by Rome. We must in honesty and in sincere love for truth come to the knowledge of the Descent of the Soul into mankind and its implications for every person; this I remind you is the "real Karest/Christ Story" and the real story hidden and lost behind Rome's literalized "Jesus Story". When we approach such a study we will come away from such an intense investigation not seeing a supposed historical person in the first century but rather seeing only the Spiritual history of a "typical figure" as an example for all mankind. All previous Messianic characters, or Sungods, were only such typical dramatizations of man's inner life, under the form of a representative "history". The Christs were simply ideal figures held up before mankind to provide them with an inspiring picture of their own attainable perfection. Unbelievable at is may appear, it is the fact of history that with the lapse of time and the decay of philosophical culture, the more ignorant came to take these dramatic heroes for actual living persons. And a designing priestcraft, either itself now sunken in similar ignorance, or motivated by selfish agendas and the quest for power, or both, found it advantageous to the interests of a worldly ecclesiastical system to operate secretly and promote such a gross misunderstanding of the Ancient "Karest/Christ" to which they welded fear of damnation if one rejected their own special brand of "Jesus". At any rate, the Gospels, which were only spiritual allegories as testified by such writings of Philo, Clement and Origen, as well as Paul's (remember Paul states that the story of Abraham, Sarah and Hagar "is an allegory"), were about the third century converted into a "literal history". Lost at that time is the Spiritual Teachings of the "Descent of the Soul/Christ" into matter; otherwise known as "the Descent of the Soul". You see the "Jesus Story" is the "Soul's Story". It is to be yours and my story. Never was the "Descent of the Soul", as personified in the nation's "Godmen" to be understood as if confined to but one historical person; real or otherwise. And it was at this juncture that the Ancient Spiritual meanings connected with "the Christ" and "the Descent of the Soul" and man's responsibilities to "awaken to his Divinity hidden within him" were lost to even the most learned of the leaders of Christianity, and with it fled all possibility of retaining or regaining the deep inner sense of the scheme of correct theology. Lost for over 1,700 years is the truth of the "Indwelling Christ Crucified in matter/flesh" of mankind. Lost for over 1,700 years is the true meaning behind the "crucifixion of the Sungod in the Sky at the Equinoxes which is but a symbol for the crucifixion of the Christ/Soul in mankind. The Soul of man, "the Christ", or the conscious mind of man, in not man's highest Spirit, but it is a ray or fragment of that Spirit that is projected downward and linked with the animal's sensorium and the thinking mind. Being the resultant of the Energies of Spirit unified with those of sense, it becomes the "one new man" of St. Paul's description. I speak of "the Christ" coming to his new birth in our experiences and in our natures as human beings. The "Jesus Story", instead of some historical person's story is "the paradigm" taken from prior similar stories from the nation's Sungods.This is the "pattern for the birth, life, death, and rebirth of the Soul within mankind. The "Jesus Story" is only just that. The "Jesus Story", patterned after the Energy of the Cosmos (birth, life, death, rebirth of the Sun (God's Energy) is the "pattern" for similar Energies that in-dwell the flesh of mankind; the "pattern" for the Soul's "birth, life, death, and rebirth" as we learn from scrutiny of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac (the picture for the Soul). So Above, So Below. This is the "pattern" we as human kind is to emulate; the Sungods' stories, like the "Jesus Story" is to be your story, it is to be my story. Paul states that he groans and travails with the Christians until "Christ be formed within you". Our life of combined Spirit and flesh on earth is to give birth to the "Christ Consciousness" in us. This is the radical fundamentalism in all religions. In humanity the Christ nature is to be made conscious of its own divine Selfhood. It is to be brought by human experience from merely potential divinity to divinity actualized, that is, made aware of its own deific being. And this is accomplished by allowing the Christ to live and direct us toward "good works" as defined by the Torah (the Laws of God).

We live in an information age and truly "the rocks are crying out" and in so doing exposing the theological lies and deception of Rome and their "replacement religion" called Christianity today. It is time for the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth concerning "the Jesus Story".

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #7

After twenty years of scholarly study I can say for certain that the world's religions, mythologies, gods, goddesses, etc., are derived from the Ancient Spiritual teachings of Africa, both Ancient Ethiopia and Egypt, a system founded upon expressing the cosmic, universal principles of all life modeled for mankind in the Heavens above. Essentially, the world's religions, as they exist today, are various degrees of corruptions or distortions of the Ancient African and Egyptian theology and Egyptian mysteries. "Original Judaism" and "Original Christianity" were one and the same. Both began as African Cosmology from Ancient Egypt, the land of Ham. Judaism existed long before the "Jews"! Christianity existed long before Christ!

Gerald Massey presents massive evidence for the African origin for Christianity in his writings. He shows that the Old and New Testaments are wholly traceable to the religious records of Ancient Egypt. Gerald Massey traces the Christ legend (Jesus Christ) back 10,000 years B.C.E. to Africa's Nile Valley. Massey is quoted by John Jackson: "The alleged facts of our Lord's life as Jesus the Christ, were equally the alleged facts of our Lord's life as the Horus of Egypt, whose very name signifies the Lord...Whether you believe or not does not matter, the fatal fact remains that every trait and feature which go to establish the human personality were per-existing and pre-applied to the Egyptian and Gnostic Christ, who never could become flesh" (John Jackson, Christianity Before Christ, p. 169).

Answer for yourself: And why is this so?

The reason that this is so is because the whole "Osiris-Horus Story", the paradigm and pattern for the whole later "Jesus Story", is discerned from observations and personifications of the Heavens and the movement of the orbs within. The genius in all of this is that these Ancient Mystics and Spiritual Masters came to understand that the Creator put in the Heavens the Word of God that gives mankind the only Bible that He was ever to trust.

Answer for yourself: And which one is this? The one written in the Sky and Heavens above.

These personifications of Divine Intent for the human race and its Spiritual development were the carriers of Divine Truth given by the Creator that are necessary for mankind's Spiritual awakening and proper Spiritual growth.

African Cosmology is the root and source of all world religions including "Eastern Religions". Like the Human race and world civilizations, all major world religions and mythologies sprang from Africa, from the African Mysteries. This illustrates a basic and profound principle of the universe.

Answer for yourself: And what is this?

Namely; all things have a common source, both in Heaven and Earth. This is why there is a major similarity between the deities, names and characters of the deities, stories, themes, rituals, prayers, symbols, and teachings of the world's religions. Mankind saw the same things in the Heavens; basically the stories were the same only the names were different from nation to nation. The Africans distributed their cosmology around the whole planet in antiquity, along with civilization. "Egyptian mythology, the source and fountainhead of all ancient wisdom and legendary lore, could not be understood apart from this [its astrological foundation], neither can astronomy be explained apart from the mythology" (G. Massey, Ancient Egypt: The Light of the World, p. 591).

With that as an introduction let us recall that the previous article dealt with "water" and "fish" which was ultimately concerned with the two natures and two births of mankind; one in "water", the "natural birth" in Virgo (Virgin), and one in Pisces, the "two fish" which represented the "Spiritual birth". Now let us continue to look at the Bible in this regard and some of the characters and stories in our Bibles that are related to these two Constellations that I mentioned above which find their origin in the Celestial Heavens. Now read closely and see what comes next.

Acts 7:44-45 44 Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen. 45 Which also our fathers that came after brought in with Jesus into the possession of the Gentiles, whom God drove out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David; (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What is "Jesus" doing in this verse; a verse that applied to the Old Testament times before King David? Isn't this scripture referring to Joshua, son of Nun rather than than to a Jesus who supposedly lived some 3,000 years later? Here is another instance.

Hebr 4:7 (KJV) Again, he limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To day, after so long a time; as it is said, To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts. 8 For if Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day.

Again, the context of the passage above reveals, like the Scripture above it, that this Scripture is referring to Joshua, the son of Nun and not to some supposed person who would live some 3,000 years later. But yet it says "Jesus" and not "Joshua". All other translations put "Joshua" here. Yet the KJV has "Jesus" translated in the verse? Why? What is hidden behind this "Joshua-Jesus" interpolation?

Answer for yourself: Why then is it translated "Jesus"? The answer lies in the Greek/Latin corruption of the original Hebrew name of Joshua. The reason the King James Version has "Jesus" in those two verses is because when the Gentiles tried to transliterate the name Joshua into Greek, they came up with "Iesous". When "Iesous" was transliterated into Latin, it became "Iesus", which was then carried over into English it became our modern day "Jesus" when the letter "J" developed.

Answer for yourself: What should this teach us? The reason the King James Version has "Jesus" in those two verses is because Jesus is actually the same name as "Joshua". Therefore both Joshua and Jesus are both the "Son of Nun".

- Encyclopedia Britannica (15th ed.) "Jesus Christ---...The same is true of the name Jesus. In the Septuagint it is the customary Greek form for the common Hebrew name Joshua;" (Vol. 10 p.149)
- Barnes' notes: (Note on Matt. 1:21) "His name is Jesus: The name Jesus is the same as Saviour. It is derived from the verb signifying to save. In Hebrew it is the same as Joshua. In two places [Acts 7:45 and Hebrews 4:8] in the New Testament it is used where is means Joshua, the leader of the Jews into Canaan, and in our translation the name Joshua should have been retained."
- The Acts of the Apostles, by Jackson and Lake "Jesus--- This is the regular Greek translation of the Hebrew Joshua."
- Smith's Bible Dictionary: "Jesus Christ ---- The name Jesus means Savior, and was a common name, derived from the ancient Hebrew Jehoshua."

- A Dictionary of the Bible, by James Hastings "Jesus -- The Greek form of the name Joshua or Jeshua. Jeshua ---- Yahweh is Salvation or Yahweh is opulence."
- Catholic Encyclopedia: "The Sacred Name ---- The word Jesus is the Latin form of the Greek "Iesous" which in turn is the transliteration of the Hebrew Jeshua, or Joshua, or again Jehoshua, meaning 'Jehovah is Salvation' " Vol. 8, p. 374
- Interpreter's Bible: (Note on Matt. 1:21) "Jesus: for He shall save: The play on words (Yeshua, Jesus; yoshia, shall save) is possible in Hebrew but not in Aramaic. The name Joshua means "Yahweh is salvation"
- Matthew Henry's Commentary (on Matthew 1:21) "Jesus is the same name with Joshua, the termination only being changed, for the sake of conforming it to the Greek."

Answer for yourself: Then is it just as correct to say "Jesus, the Son of Nun" as it is to say "Joshua, the Son of Nun? Yes it is.

Answer for yourself: And what was this Nun again? The Egyptians believed that before the world was formed, there was a watery mass of dark, directionless chaos. It was from this watery mass of directionless chaos, called Nun, that all later manifestations of Creation appeared. It is within this hierarchy of manifestation that "the Christ" was Emanated by the "thought" of God, the Primal Cause. Despite all the various Creation myths that the Egyptians subscribed to, they had one thing in common, Nun. Even though the myths named different gods and powers and forces as "attributes" of the One original Creator, they all agreed that He sprang from Nun, the primordial waters of the Cosmos. Nun was more than an ocean, He was a limitless expanse of motionless water. Even after the world was created, Nun continued to exist at it's margins and would one day return to destroy it and begin the cycle again. Nun was portrayed as a bearded man with a blue or green body, symbolizing water and fertility. Sometimes he is shown with female breasts as well. In one hand he holds a palm frond, a symbol of long life and wears another one in his hair. On the left Nun is shown rising up out of a body of water, carrying the solar barque (the boat of Ra that travels as the Sun across the Sky) in his up stretched hands.

And the KJV Bible says that "Jesus Christ" is the Son of this Nun! This should give us much cause to think and study to find the "truth" behind our "Jesus Story".

This name, the name of "Jesus", for example, is found in many places in the Old Testament; we just don't recognize it. Most astounding however is that the name "Jesus" can be found in Ancient Egypt some 10,000 years B.C.E. Joshua is not the only place where we find hidden the name of "Jesus". Jonah is another perfect example.

Let's look at an Old Testament use of the same word we are more familiar with today as "Jesus". By that I mean the word "Jonah". For example, the name "Jonah" is a type of the name "Jesus". Jonah's name translates into English as "dove" and his father's name as "truth", and Nineveh means "progeny", so right away the story is intriguing to those of us who lean toward the mystical view. A dove showed Noah that God's judgment upon earth had truly ended and the flood waters were receding (Gen.8:11). Peace had been restored between the Creator and His creation. For the very poor, a dove was the prescribed offering for sin, restoring peace between the sinner and God (Lev. 5:7). The Spirit of the Lord descended upon Jesus "like a dove" in Matt. 3:16 and we know that He came to restore peace between mankind and God (Col. 1:19-20). The story of Jonah involves restoring peace between the people of Nineveh and God and so it's fitting that God sent a Dove, the offspring of Truth to warn His progeny. As with most Old Testament interpretations found in the New Testament, the Jesus' interpretation is primarily "typological"'. Jonah becomes a ''type'' for Jesus and both are again symbolic of "Horus"; the original Krst/Karest.

- By his baptism Horus was transformed into the beloved and only begotten Son of the Father, the Holy Spirit, represented by a bird (just like the "Jesus Story"). It was here that Horus had a complete change in character.

- By his baptism Jesus was transformed into the beloved and only begotten Son of the Father, the Holy Spirit, represented by a dove/bird.
- By his baptism into the watery tomb of the belly of the fish Jonah emerges "born again" exhibiting a changed behavior; only his emotions needed to follow his actions. But like the New Testament so appropriately says, "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also" Matt 6:21 21 . (KJV). The passage teaches that our "emotions" follow our "actions". Jonah's repentance in preaching repentance to the city of Ninevah will in time change his heart and his feelings about those who were the former enemies of his nation.

If you have ever read or studied the "Horus Story" you are stuck at the similarities to what we as humankind go though in the formation of our "Spirit man" or "Spirit woman" (the Krst/Karest/Christ in us). It is quite similar to the "Jonah Story". Unlike the "Jesus Story", which is a depiction of the "Spiritually Mature" man who never fails, the goal of our Spiritual perfection, we find the "Horus Story" is the progressive story of the successes and failures of the Soul in its relentless struggle to master the basest carnal instincts of this animal nature within us in the Spiritual evolution of the Soul within humankind. The "Horus Story" is the story of the Soul's struggle to overcome the failures of the flesh and the "works of the flesh"; happily it teaches that such a Spiritual progression of the Soul while encased in physical "matter" is a real possibility. Happily the "Horus Story" is the story of the "Perfection of the Soul"; a Spiritual Pilgrimage of sorts that shows mankind the "formation of the Christ" within the species.

Answer for yourself:

- Jonah spent three days in the belly of the fish;
- Jesus will spend three days in the ground.

Answer for yourself: How is this connected to the stars?

The whale is a symbol of the abysmal dark. It appears, for example, in the Bible Story of the prophet Jonah, who evaded the divine charge to preach in Nineveh, was cast over board, swallowed by a huge fish (usually represented as a whale), and cast up on land 3 days later (symbolically interpreted as Christ's death, entombment, and resurrection). The whale, like other animals such as the crocodile, elephant, and tortoise, is seen in the mythologies of many peoples as carrying the universe ("The Herder Symbol Dictionary" 1978, Herder Freiburg, Chiron Publications, p. 213). The Belly-of-the-Whale myth of Jonah in the Bible is typical of the initiation rites of death and rebirth which again depicts symbolically the "Path of the Soul" in mankind as it does the "the Descent of the Soul into death [the human body], the burial [in dense matter], and the resurrection [awaking of the Soul within mankind-matter]". This is the core of the "Christ Story"; the "Jesus Story". Astronomically, Cetus is a large winter Constellation. As large as it is, Cetus has been identified as the Biblically famous whale who swallowed Jonah. In that quadrant in the Sky called "the Celestial Sea", Jonah is likely represented by Aquarius the waterman. Look at the "sky chart" and notice the proximity between Aquarius, Jonah, and Cetus, the great whale which swallows "Jonah". The "Celestial Sea" is a dark pool of faint stars and is located on the southern horizon below Pegasus. These watery constellations are:

- Capricornus, the Sea-Goat;
- Aquarius, the Water Bearer;
- Pisces, the Fishes;
- Piscis Austrinus, the Southern Fish;
- Cetus, the Whale; and finally
- Eridanus, the River

17 And the LORD appointed a great fish to swallow up Jonah; and Jonah was in the belly of the fish

three days and three nights. (Jonah 1:17)

Cetus also represents the sea monster sent by Neptune to devour Andromeda. Cetus was turned to stone when Perseus showed the monster the head of Medusa.

The Ancient Spiritual Masters taught that mankind is affected by astronomical cycles because he is an integral part of the whole Cosmos, and these cycles mark the periods when mankind as a whole will undergo a change. For example, the phases of the moon affect the tides, water, and our bodies are are about 85% water. It stands to reason that mankind experiences some effects from the moon let alone the other planets and Stars in the Cosmos. In the sacred books of all nations these are often mentioned, and are in the Bible of the Christians, as, for instance, in the story of Jonah in the belly of the whale. This "Jonah Story" is an absurdity when read as history, but not so as an astronomical cycle. "Jonah" is in the constellations, and when that astronomical point which represents man reaches a point in the Zodiac which is directly opposite the belly of Cetus or the whale on the other side of the circle, by what is known as the process of opposition, then Jonah is said to be in the center of the fish and is "thrown out" at the expiration of the period when that man-point has passed so far along in the Zodiac as to be out of opposition to the whale. Similarly as the same point moves thus through the Zodiac it is brought by opposition into the different Constellations that are exactly opposite from century to century while it moves along. During these progresses changes take place among men and on earth exactly signified by the Constellations when those are read according to the right rules of symbology. It is not claimed that the conjunction causes the effect, but that ages ago the Masters of Wisdom worked out all the problems in respect to man and found in the Heavens the means for knowing the exact dates when events are sure to recur, and then by imprinting in the minds of older nations the symbology of the Zodiac were able to preserve the record and the prophecy. Thus in the same way that a watchmaker can tell the hour by the arrival of the hands or the works of the watch at certain fixed points, the Sages can tell the hour for events by the Zodiacal clock. This is not of course believed today, but it will be well understood in future centuries, and as the nations of the earth have all similar symbols in general for the Zodiac, and as also the records of races long dead have the same, it is not likely that the vandal-spirit of the western nineteenth century will be able to efface this valuable heritage of our evolution. In Egypt the Denderah Zodiac tells the same tale as that one left to us by the old civilization of the American continent, and all of these are from the same source, they are the work of the Sages who come at the beginning of the great human cycle and give to man when he begins his toilsome ascent up the road of development those great symbols and ideas of an astronomical character which will last through all the cycles.

In the New Testament "the Christ" plays on the imagery of Sheol found in Jonah's prayer. While Jonah metaphorically declared, "Out of the belly of Sheol I cried," Jesus likewise will be depicted in the belly of Sheol. Finally, Jesus compares his generation to the people of Nineveh. The "parallels" between the "Jonah Story" and the "Christ Story" are astounding and they should be; for this is the "same entity" in both accounts. Jesus fulfills his role as a type of Jonah, however his generation fails to fulfill its role as a type of Nineveh. Nineveh repented but his generation, which has seen and heard one even greater than Jonah, fails to repent. Through his typological interpretation of the story of Jonah, Jesus has weighed his generation and found it wanting.

Answer for yourself: When looking at our "Jonah" story which, if any , astrological connection do we find if any? Do both the "Jonah Story" and the "Jesus Story" come from the Stars? It would appear so.

We again find a fish and hidden symbolism referring to the Constellation of Pisces which teaches us of "the two births"....see previous articles). Behind the "Jonah Story", really a "Pattern" for the later "Jesus Story" told over again, we find the "celestial story" of mankind being birthed anew by a "fish" which symbolized the "second birth" of mankind. Referring to this "watery re-birth/womb" it is said:

John 3:4 4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb (watery place of birth-rebirth anew), and be born? (KJV)

The "Jonah Story" is really the same story told over again; it is the same story of "Virgo-Pisces", the same story of the "Osiris-Horus Story". The "Jonah Story" is but the retelling of the same metaphysical story which is retold through different symbolisms and names but the Spiritual message is the same.

Answer for yourself: How is that? It is about "two births" which are so necessary for mankind.

Once the "natural man" as Jonah, with all his hatred toward the enemies of Israel, the Assyrians of Ninevah along with all his character flaws and moral failures, is swallowed by the great fish and enters the realm of dead inside the womb of the fish's belly for 3 days, again we are confronted with the symbolic death in the belly of the great "Fish" (Pisces) which is paralleled to the tomb or womb which ushers forth a "new birth". Jonah enters into the belly of the fish which is symbolic for the death of the "natural man". Next Jonah exists the womb and belly of the fish "reborn" only after the death of the "old man and his carnal nature". This expulsion of Jonah is the "rebirth" or "second birth in the fish" which is the "Spiritual birth" that is culminated in Jonah's obedience and his eventual obedience to God and his preaching to Ninevah. The Spiritual analogy is perfect and parallels both the "Horus Story" and the "Jesus Story". Jonah emerges as a changed man after his "second birth" which is the will of God for all mankind. It is after these 3 days that Jonah conquers the "darkness within his Soul" and is "born again" and we need only read the fruit of such a "recreation" to see its authenticity. Just like the Sun which is reborn after 3 days dead fighting the darkness of the Winters Solstice so is our "Born Again" Jonah. Again let us not lose sight of the Uranograph in the Sky as connected with Cetus as well as the "two fishes" of Pisces which taught this Spiritual truth of the necessity of mankind's "two births" long before a Jonah story or a "Jesus Story" was rendered as if a supposed "historical-literal" narrative. Nor let us loose sight of the Sun and its "rebirth" after the Winter Solstice at December 25th (a symbol for the "birth" of "the Christ" - the Soul in humanity). It is not an accident that "Jesus" or "Jonah" is connected with the "fish" which is the symbol of the second birth of the whole of mankind as it is related to the Constellation Pisces (the two fish, the two births, the two mothers of all matter). Now we can better understand why the Early Church Fathers taught that Jesus had two births; one at the Spring Equinox and the other at the Winter Solstice. Unquestionably "Jonah" is a variant of the divine name, "Jesus", which is found in some twenty-five or more forms in the Old Testament. But this story is repeated over and over both in the Old and New Testaments and we miss it since we mistakenly approach these stories as if assumed "historical narratives" and "literal discourses" which they are not; they are celestial allegories and myths carrying the same Divine message of God in the visible Heavens to the Souls of mankind.

Answer for yourself: So what are we saying about "Heaven" and the stories we read in our Bibles like the "Jonah Story" and the "Jesus Story"?

Although most of the Old Testament has been accepted by fundamentalists as the gospel truth, even they have confessed to doubts about Jonah and the whale. For a man to be swallowed live by a whale and survive to tell the tale was either a Biblical miracle or a bit of fisherman's braggadocio. There have been many attempts to interpret the allegory. However, since most of the main characters in the Bible personify the Sun (symbolic of the Living Energy we call God), we can safely assume that Jonah also represents some aspect of the solar orb. Those three uncomfortable days and nights were the Winter Solstice. Between the twenty-first and twenty-fourth of December the nights are the darkest and longest of the entire year and these 3 days (Dec. 21 through Dec. 24th) were known to ancient astrologers as the Whale's Belly. No doubt this has reference to the winter Constellation Cetus, the Whale, which is just above the horizon at that time. The "whale" was, therefore, in a position to swallow Jonah when he, as the personified Sun, plunged into the sea. Thus it was that Jonah, the personified Sun, spent three days and nights in the Whale's Belly, where he meditated on the Lord. Behind this is the "new birth" of the Sun and this "new birth" was symbolic of a Higher Spiritual reality in mankind that was pictured for him in the Sky and Heavens above. The same story of the Soul is being taught over and over again in the Heavens above. This is quite amazing when you see it. God's only Bible that has not been altered or forged or tampered with is in the Sky and Heavens above. All we need is the "keys" to its proper interpretation because as Christians we approach almost everything in the Bible as it there were "literal historical narratives" that involve other people when the truth is that they are but pictures of "ourselves".

Again this whole "Spiritual" teaching of the "two births" comes from the Heavens and the Stars. In the course of the Precession of the Equinoxes, about 255 B.C., the Vernal Equinox, the vernal birthplace of the Sun (personified in Ancient theology as the "Son of the Son of God") passed into the sign of the two Fishes, Pisces, and the "Savior/Messiah" from Heaven, who had been represented for the previous 2155 years by the Ram or Lamb during the Age of Aries, and previously before that for another 2155 years by the Apis Bull (Age of Taurus), was now imaged as the Fish, or the "Fish-man," called Ichthys in Greek. The reader should understand that with each changing of "the Age" there was always a new "interpretation" of "the Christ" which was related to the "House" of the Zodiac in which the Sun traveled at the Vernal Equinox. The original Fish-man, the An of Egypt, and the Oan of Chaldea, dates from the previous cycle of the Precession of the Equinoxes, or 26,000 years earlier. With the changing of the Age and the end of the Age (our New Testament calls this mistakenly the "end of the world" in Matt. 28:20); and about 255 B.C., the new manifestation of God's salvation to mankind as His "Savior/Messiah", as the Fish-man, was to come as the "Savior-Messiah) up once more and rise above the celestial waters of Nun once again anew (this water chaos called the body of mankind). What you don't know is this "coming of the Messiah-Savior" is the awakened manifestation of "the Christ" in humanity where it is not limited to but one person as Rome would have you believe. Mankind, humanity is taking steps toward its Spiritual Evolution as "the Krst/Karest/Christ is formed with us" and this, as the Ancients taught, comes in steps that coincide with astrological changing of the Ages which brings with it a higher Conscious in the "evolution of the Christ" within all the peoples of the world. There is a "Pattern in the Mount" here. The original birth of Jesus, as the depiction of "the Christ" anew, was marked when the Sun entered the stars of Pisces the fishes. Thus Jesus is the personified Sun in the age of Pisces. So when Jesus says he will be with us until the close of the age, he meant the age of Pisces. The Sun will enter the Age of Aquarius sometime in the second decade of the second millennium.

Matt 28:18-20 18 And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. 19 Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: 20 Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen. (KJV)

Alternate translations record this correctly and the KJV above does not:

... 20 teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, to the close of the age (Pisces... when I will come again in a different Spiritual understanding as connected with the Constellation Aquarius).” (Matt. 28:20)

Answer for yourself: What is this reference to "26,000 years earlier"? J. Lewis, in Astronomy of the Ancients, states: "Simplicius (sixth century A.D.) writes that he had always heard that the Egyptians had kept astronomical observations and records for the last 630,000 years...Diogenes Laertius carried back the astronomical calculations of the Egyptians to 48,863 years before Alexander the Great. Martianus Capella corroborates the same by telling posterity that the Egyptians had secretly studied astronomy for over 40,000 years before they imparted their knowledge to the world". Needless to say the 6,000 year dating by Bishop Ussher for the age of mankind and the planet is but a ruse. Hidden within these great ages with the changing of each "Age" we have a change in the interpretation of the "Salvation of God". Look at the example below.

The coming Messiah is called "Dag", the Fish, in the Talmud and this coincided with the coming of the Age of Pisces; and the Jews at one time connected his coming with some conjunction, or occurrence, in the sign of the Fishes (the Age of Pisces)! This is as we should expect knowing the Astronomy and the "mythos" involved with the Constellation of Pisces. Let us not forget that it was in the House of "Pisces" that we find the culmination of the "second Spiritual Birth" of mankind! It is in the "second Spiritual Birth" than man obtains Eternal Life. The reader should not be surprised to find that God's salvation comes "anew" and always with a new "interpretation" with each changing of "the Age" and each new interpretation always involves the Soul and its salvation in this matter we call the body in one way or the other. This is immensely important that you grasp this as God's message to mankind and his Soul is both progressive and new with each changing of "the Age" (Taurus, Aries, Pisces, Aquarius, etc.) This fact, that the Jews in their Talmud call their Messiah "Dag" shows the Jews were not only in possession of the astronomical allegory at one time in the past, but also of the tradition by which it could be interpreted correctly. But this is as it should be since they are the children of the Egyptians, or at least once was a long time ago. It was the Mythical Messiah alone who was, or could be, the subject of prophecy that might be fulfilled--prophecy that was fulfilled as it is in the Book of Revelation--when the Equinox entered the sign of Aries, the Ram in 2,410 B.C.E. It was at this time, as it had always before with each new Vernal Equinox that initiated the new Age, that the Celestial Cross was re-erected at the Vernal Equinox, and the foundations of a new Heaven were laid. This was repeated when the Equinox entered the sign of the Fishes in 255 B.C. Prophecy, and get my point, will be again fulfilled when the Equinox enters the sign of the Waterman at the commencement of the Age of Aquarius. This "Cross of Christ" has always been "celestial" and astronomical; not "terrestrial".

Here is where we run into the problem. The uninstructed Jews, over time will lose the "keys" to the interpretation of their own mystical religious truths. Later generations of the Jewish nation, unfamiliar with the astronomical and astrological "keys" to their own mystical Spiritual wisdom materials that teach of the Soul of mankind which was inherited from Ancient Egypt as observed in the Heaven above, will confuse the prophecy, whose meaning is solely astronomical and solely related to the cycles of time, with a future possible "literal-historical" fulfillment in human history. That was bad enough but even more damaging is that this mistaken Spiritual information will be handed down to the still more ignorant Christians. The same tradition of the "Coming One" is extant amongst the Millenarians and Adventists, as amongst the Moslems. It is the tradition of El-Mahdi (the political and religious leader), the prophet who is to come in the last days of the world to conquer all the world, and who comes announcing the "Day of the Lord is at hand," which shows that the astronomical allegory has left some relics of the true Ancient Egyptian tradition among the Arabs, who were at one time learned in astronomical lore. Massey, in his The Historical Jesus and Mythical Christ, states: "The Savior/Messiah, symbolized as the Fish-man, is foreseen by Esdras ascending out of the sea as the 'same whom God the highest hath kept a great season, which by his own self shall deliver the creature.'"

Answer for yourself: Is this Savior/Messiah external to each person and limited to one or is it hidden inside each child of God awaiting manifestation in these bodies of matter and clay? Is this "Messiah-Savior" to arise from within each body of "water" which comprise our human vessels? Is this "Jesus, Son of Nun" to awaken and arise within the human species? Does this "Savior" dwell within each of us? Does this "Savior", the Son of the Fish-Mother, only arise from the water of Nun inside us when we experience the "Second Spiritual Birth"? I think by now you know the answer.

According to the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Spiritual Tradition the ancient Fish-man only came up out of the sea to converse with men and teach them in the daytime. "When the sun set," says Berosus, "it was the custom of this Being to plunge again into the sea, and abide all night in the deep." So the man foreseen by Esdras is only visible by day. As it is said, "E'en so can no man upon earth see my son, or those that be with him, but in the daytime." This is parodied or fulfilled in the account of Ichthys, the Fish, the Christ who instructs men by day, but retires to the lake of Galilee, where he demonstrates his solar nature by walking on the waters at night, or at the dawn of day." (Alvin Kuhn, The Lost Light, p. 7-8). We are told that his disciples being on board a ship, "when even was come, in the fourth watch of the night, Jesus went unto them walking upon the sea." Now the fourth watch began at three o'clock, and ended at six o'clock. Therefore, this was about the proper time for a solar God to appear walking upon the waters, or coming up out of them as the Oannes.

Answer for yourself: What is being taught by the Krst/Karest/Christ "walking on the water"? This is not to be understood as if some historical event but an allegory for the submission of this watery chaos, the animal nature in mankind by the Spiritual nature or "the Christ" within mankind (Horus vs Set; Jesus vs Satan).

Oannes is said to have taken no food whilst he was with men: "In the daytime he used to converse with men, but took no food at that season." So Jesus, when his disciples prayed him, saying "Master, eat," said unto them, "I have meat to eat that you know not of. My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me." The mythos is kept intact.

This is the perfect likeness of the character of Oannes, who took no food, but whose time was wholly spent in teaching men. Moreover, the mythical Fish-man is made to identify himself. When the Pharisees sought a "sign from heaven," Jesus said, "There shall no sign be given but the sign of Jonas. For as Jonas became a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the son of man be to this generation," The sign of Jonas is that of the Oan, or Fish-man of Nineveh, whether we take it direct from the monuments, or from the Hebrew history of Jonah, or from the Zodiac. The voice of the secret wisdom here says truly that those who are looking for signs, can have no other than that of the returning Fish-man, Ichthys, Oannes, or Jonah: and assuredly, there was no other sign or date--than those of Ichthys, the Fish who was re-born of the fish-goddess, Atergatis, in the sign of the Fishes, 255 B.C. After whom the primitive Christians were called little fishes, or Pisciculi. This date of 255 B.C. was the true day of birth, or rather of re-birth for the celestial Christ, and there was no valid reason for changing the time of the world (Ibid.).

Quoting Massey: "The Gospels contain a confused and confusing record of early Christian belief: things most truly believed (Luke) concerning certain mythical matters, which were ignorantly mistaken for human and historical. The Jesus of our Gospels is but little of a human reality, in spite of all attempts to naturalize the Mythical Christ, and make the story look rational. The Christian religion was not founded on a man, but on a divinity; that is, a mythical character. So far from being derived from the model man, the typical Christ was made up from the features of various Gods, in which the traits of several persons are merged into one that is not anybody...It is not I that deny the divinity of Jesus the Christ; I assert it! He never was, and never could be, any other than a divinity; that is, a character non-human, and entirely mythical, who had been the pagan divinity of various pagan myths, that had been pagan during thousands of years before our Era. Nothing is more certain, according to honest evidence, than that the Christian scheme of redemption is founded on a fable misinterpreted; that the prophecy of fulfillment was solely astronomical, and the Coming One as the Christ who came in the end of an age, or of the world, was but a metaphorical figure, a type of time, from the first, which never could take form in historic personality, ...that no Jesus could become a Nazarene by being born at, or taken to, Nazareth; and that the history in our Gospels is from beginning to end the identifiable story of the Sun-God, and the Gnostic Christ who never could be made flesh. When we did not know the one it was possible to believe the other; but when once we truly know, then the false belief is no longer possible. The mythical Messiah was Horus in the Osirian Mythos; Har-Khuti in the Sut-Typhonian Mythos, Khunsu in the Amen-Ra Mythos, Iu in the cult of Atum-Ra, and the Christ of the Gospels is an amalgam of all these characters (Ibid., p. 9).

The above is the "key" to discovering what lies behind our supposed "historical-literal Jesus Story". Once you receive the "gnosis" as to what is behind our "Jesus Story" you should be struck by the Spiritual message that lies behind such Celestial Allegories woven unknowingly within our "Jesus Story"; that the Creator intends that mankind, as the natural fruit of a virgin birth evolve Spiritually until "Horus be formed" in you, until "Christ be formed in you" by being "born anew" in the House of the Fish (Pisces). This makes all the more sense if the reader knows the Horus story as to how, like Jonah, Horus struggled against his former nature and its works of the flesh and eventually conquers them as the resurrected "Spiritual Horus". And all of this concerning mankind's Spiritual transformation and "two births" comes from the stars in God's Heaven! This is the "Pattern in the Mount" which is to be reproduced both in you and through you in this physical plane in which we live.

We need a break and will continue in the next article in this series where we investigate the connection between "Joshua" and "Jesus" to a fuller extent.

Let us continue in the next article in this series.

THE RE-BIRTH OF THE SUN...THE WINTER SOLSTICE

The Winter Solstice is also known as Yule, Christmas, and Saturnalia, occurs in mid December.

It is when the ancients celebrated the birth of the new Solar year and the beginning of Winter. The Goddess manifests as the Great Mother and the God as the Sun Child (the pattern as applied to many personified gods and godmen as well as Jesus). The God also appears as Santa Claus and Old Man Winter. The colors connected with the Winter Solstice are Red, Green, and White. This is a festival of inner renewal.

Today, many people in Western-based cultures refer to this holiday as "Christmas." Yet a look into its origins of Christmas reveals its Pagan roots. Emperor Aurelian established December 25 as the birthday of the "Invincible Sun" in the third century as part of the Roman Winter Solstice celebrations. Shortly thereafter, in 273, the Christian church selected this day to represent the birthday of Jesus, and by 336, this Roman solar feast day was Christianized. January 6, celebrated as Epiphany in Christendom and linked with the visit of the Magi, was originally an Egyptian date for the Winter Solstice.

Most of the customs, lore, symbols, and rituals associated with "Christmas" actually are linked to Winter Solstice celebrations of ancient Pagan cultures. While Christian mythology is interwoven with contemporary observances of this holiday time, its Pagan nature is still strong and apparent.

Winter Solstice has been celebrated in cultures the world over for thousands of years. This start of the solar year is a celebration of Light and the rebirth of the Sun. In old Europe, it was known as Yule, from the Norse, Jul, meaning wheel.

Today, many people in Western-based cultures refer to this holiday as "Christmas." Yet a look into its origins of Christmas reveals its Pagan roots.

The primary, motivating factor that inspired early man to worship god, was his fear and dread of the potential fierceness of his environment. His (primitive man) major impetus for worshipping and sacrificing to the Sun God was to assure that the Sun God would continue protecting mankind from the ravages of the dreaded winter.

So for primitive man, the inception of winter, Dec. 22, was the worst day of every year for him. This day, Dec. 22 was the start of winter and marked the beginning of the worst stage of his yearly struggle for survival. This day, Dec. 22, is referred to by astronomers as the Winter Solstice. This word, Solstice, according to Webster's Dictionary means "to stand still, pause, a turning point." Primitive man even believed the Sun had died as he could detect no movement of the Sun in the sky for 3 days and and these 3 days were days having the shortest daylight of the year. This day, Dec. 22, the start of winter, was the harbinger of his potential perdition.

On Dec. 22 of each year, the Sun reached its Winter Solstice, the lowest point of the trajectory (angle of rays) of the entire year. After Dec. 22 (the turning point), the Sun again rises northward, which is a sign that summer shall come again!

Even though Dec. 22 marks the beginning of winter and the weather turns progressively worst from that point (Dec. 22) until the spring (March 21), all is not lost. Because the fact that the angle of the Sun's rays projecting on the earth, was moving progressively northward told early man that the warmth and comfort of the summer Sun would eventually prevail. But there was a period of doubt, for early primitive civilization. Primitive man did not understand our universe and solar system as we do today. We, today, know exactly what causes the four seasons of the year. But early man did not. He did not possess knowledge of our Solar System, the axis of the earth, its rotation and revolving around the Sun. He did not understand that these forces operated by a Natural, Providential Law, that would stay its course, no matter what. Early man only understood the result, not the cause. Because of this he would "reason" such events as best he could and these resulting "myths" would be handed down among mankind until Science would advance to replace such foolishness. The problem is that such foolishness would be later personified into acts of each nation's heroes and later ascribed to Jesus by the Sun-worshipping Romans who had control over the New Testament.

Now you can better understand that each year, early society awaited the approach of Dec. 22, with foreboding. Dec. 22, the day of the Winter Solstice (definition is to stand still) was a day of reckoning for them. Because it seemed to them, as they observed and tracked the North to South movement of the Sun, that on this day DEC 22, the sun entered its grave. The North to South progression of the Sun can be likened to a swinging pendulum. You know that when a pendulum reaches its solstice (the point where it swings back - its turning point), that for a slight imperceptible moment, it actually stands still. But in terms of our vast solar system, the point of solstice is not imperceptible. It lasts for days, three days to be exact. For three days, after the sun reaches its solstice, it appears to stand still. This period of pause, between the Suns descent and ASCENT, wrought paralyzing dread and fear into the hearts and minds of the early pre-Christians. Over time, they established rituals and traditions concerning this period (DEC 22 to DEC 25). They passed the word through oral tradition, and eventually, after their societies established writing, wrote it down, concerning their Sun God: the sun shall lay in a grave (point of solstice) for 3 days. But after 3 days the sun shall rise, be resurrected, (according to Webster's Dictionary, the word resurrect is linked to the word resurge, which means "To Rise Again", to revive), and ascend toward heaven, (progressively ascend northward to the position of the summer Sun). And when the sun completes its ascent upward toward the point of its summer solstice, it will comfort us and bless us with warm weather and long days and will save us (be a savior) from the ravages of winter. So, this, that I have explained to you here, is the ORIGINAL, authentic, true CONCEPT of the resurrection. As the revelation of God would grow among Mankind, men could see how the God of the Universe has spoken such to them in the Cosmos.

When the pre-Christians spoke and wrote of the resurrection of the Sun; they meant exactly that. It did not refer to a person, but to the SOLAR SUN. That would come later. We see the the culminating of it in the teachings later connected to Jesus.

What you, the reader must be sharp enough to see, is that many "untruths" have been mixed with "truths" in the life of Jesus as portrayed in the New Testament and "cast out the leaven."

But, when the Gentile Church broke from their Jewish Roots the Gentile priesthood began to associated with the inherited traditions about Jesus their older "religious traditions" of the Sun-gods. Long ago their Gentile ancestors had changed the "Sun" to "Son". This, if you remember is personification; in particular the personification of the Sun which lies at the foundation of almost all world religions. The priesthood told the pagans that the SON (Christ) was born on DEC 25, just like their SUN. They told them that the Son had been dead in a grave for three days and then was resurrected (revived) and ascended to heaven (upward) just like their Sun. This is totally a matter of faith for you, the reader.

WHAT CAN WE LEARN...AND WOULD GOD WANT US TO?

Emperor Aurelian established December 25 as the birthday of the "Invincible Sun" in the third century as part of the Roman Winter Solstice celebrations. Shortly thereafter, in 273, the Christian church selected this day to represent the birthday of Jesus, and by 336, this Roman solar feast day was Christianized. January 6, celebrated as Epiphany in Christendom and linked with the visit of the Magi, was originally an Egyptian date for the Winter Solstice. If you have ever studied the Jewish Roots of Christianity you can easily see that Yeshua was conceived at Hanukkah (the Festival of Lights...light to the world) and was born at the High Holy Days (9 months later). This is why Bet Emet exists for we desire to help the readers to sanctify themselves before the L-RD and one day meet Him with truth in their lives instead of paganism passed off as truth!

Most of the customs, lore, symbols, and rituals associated with "Christmas" actually are linked to Winter Solstice celebrations of ancient Pagan cultures. While Christian mythology is interwoven with contemporary observances of this holiday time, its Pagan nature is still strong and apparent. Pagans today can readily re-Paganize Christmas time and the secular New Year by giving a Pagan spiritual focus to existing holiday customs and by creating new traditions that draw on ancient ways.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #8

In the previous article we looked extensively at the "Jonah Story" in the Sky and the Stars. We saw that it the same story that we find in the "Horus Story" and the "Jesus Story"; that at its very core lies the necessity of mankind's "Second Birth" or the necessity of being "Born Again" Spiritually. And we saw all of this in the Stars and Heavens above where our Loving Creator placed His Word and His Bible in the "Good News" in the Stars. Ancient Egypt understood this and discerned "the Pattern in the Mount" and endeavored to bring this "Pattern" down to earth: So Above, So Below.

Now we pick up this interesting study in Soul Science with the "Joshua-Jesus" enigmas.

Another similar story along the same line of the "Jonah Story" is our "Joshua Story" as to which there is not the slightest possibility of dispute as to "Joshua's" identity being identical with "Jesus" as I revealed before in the prior article. "Joshua" and "Jesus" are the same names in all actuality. Usually we read that Joshua is "son of Nun" never connecting it as the Egyptian "Nun" and the symbolism contained in it as the "first birth".

Answer for yourself: What is this Egyptian Nun? Well we mentioned it long ago but possibly we need a refresher; especially in light of the fact that both "Joshua" and "Jesus" are the Sons of Nun since their names are interchangeable.

We said before that everything begins with "water", Egypt called it Nun. The Egyptians symbolized this Spiritual concept, this neteru, as a bearded man with a blue or green body, symbolizing, as you might expect, water, fruitfulness and fertility. The Egyptians believed that before the world was formed, there was a watery mass of dark, directionless chaos. Genesis calls this the "darkness" which lies upon the "deep". The name of the water of chaos was Nun. This name "Nun" is very, very important as we shall come to see. In this "watery" dark-chaos lived the Ogdoad, undifferentiated "Energies" of God and potentiality which lay dormant in the One unmanifested God-Energy. It is from this unmanifested chaos that the attributes, forces, powers, energies, processes, cycles, and pattern within God, the latent Cosmic Mind, will issue forth and in so doing God will bring order, or "ma'at" and harmony to bear upon this chaos; the end result of which is "the Creation" of all matter. Nun was thought to be the father of Ra (a name for God), who was known as the Father of the gods (neteru-Energies comprising the Godhead) and all that comes afterwards. It was from Nun that Ra (just one name for God) (or Amun, another of the Ogdoad who became prominent in the Middle Kingdom onward, and joined with the sun god as Amen-Ra [the Sun being a symbol for the Energy of the Cosmos whom is God) created himself, rising up on the first piece of land - the primeval mound (God manifesting Himself in all forms of matter, both visible and invisible). And our focus is not on not only "Joshua, the son of Nun" but "Jesus, the son of Nun as well.

Answer for yourself: What again is being taught here? The "Christ" is the fruit of Nun, this watery origin of undifferentiated chaos of potential "being; the fruit from the "first birth, the first "becoming or Creation", end-result of eons of manifestations of God in hierarchies of existences, more particular the fruit of the "natural man", the First Adam, which manifests itself only in the "second birth" within this natural man, "the Spiritual man". We are speaking of the incarnation of "the Soul/Christ" or "Deific Mind" in inorganic matter where the "Mind of God" takes hold in inert yet potential "matter". You could say that this Egyptian Nun is a type of Cosmic womb that brings to its intended Spiritual goal "this Mind of God" in the eventual home for its greatest expression; humanity. We speak of "the Krst/Karest/ Christ" which is to be formed in each human being on this planet as the "goal" of Creation. We used to sing a song: "in Him we live, and move and have our being". Yes, that is true but more true is: "in us He lives and moves and has His being" and this "being" is in the form of "the Krst/Karest/Christ". This Nun is the name of the actual Hebrew letter "N" and means, of all things,--"fish." Joshua, the Son of Nun, as Jesus, is as you can now see, the "Son of the fish, or Son of the fish-mother" that is to be birthed in the whole of mankind. We already saw that the fish is the ancient symbol for the "second birth" in mankind as it relates to the Constellation Pisces. So both "Joshua" and "Jesus", being interchangeable names, are the Sons of Nun. The "Pisces" symbolism is dramatic for Jesus and should bring to your thoughts the ideas we have already seen concerning the "Second Birth" or the "two natures" and the necessity of being "Born Again".

We mentioned two Scriptures in passing before. Now lets see them:

Acts 7:44-45 44 Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen. 45 Which also our fathers that came after brought in with Jesus into the possession of the Gentiles, whom God drove out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David; (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What is "Jesus" doing in this verse; a verse that applied to the Old Testament times before King David? Isn't this scripture referring to Joshua, son of Nun rather than to a supposed "literal-historical" Jesus who supposedly lived some 3,000 years later? Or are they the same "Divine Concept" that is personified and in so doing we believed it to refer to a historical persons? Here is another instance.

Hebr 4:7 (KJV) Again, he limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To day, after so long a time; as it is said, To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts. 8 For if Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day.

We see in these verses the substitution of "Jesus" in place of "Joshua" which we most likely would NOT expect to read given the context of these passages. This is troubling for the "literal-historical" Jesus belief; it only betrays that behind our "Jesus Story" lies something else; a Divine Spiritual Reality and concept that was never meant to be taken as if a "literal-historical" story.

Answer for yourself: What impact should these verses have upon the assumed "historicity" of the Gospels let alone the assumed "literal-historical" existence of a human Jesus Christ in the first century? You will have to decide.

But yet, in spite of the context of the passages, the redactors of the KJV Bible inserted "Jesus" into these verses. They made the same connection as we should given the Ancient Spiritual knowledge in these articles. So both "Joshua" and "Jesus" are the Sons of Nun, the primordial waters, and we saw in Hebrew that Nun is the name of the Hebrew letter "N" and means "Fish". I hope you see that this "Jesus", as "the Krst/Karest/Christ is Emanated into matter eventually tabernacling in mankind awaiting "resurrection" from these bodies of death (the body was called by the Ancient Egyptians "Anu"; a focal point both in our human bodies where the "death/incarnation" and "resurrection" of the Soul (the Osiris story) occurs) like we have mentioned before. Thus both "Joshua" and "Jesus" are Sons of the Fish mother.

We should all be familiar with the symbol of "the fish" because the Greek world in the first three centuries of Christianity designated the Christian Jesus as Ichthys (Ichthus), the Greek word for "fish." Augustine and Tertullian both expressly name Jesus as "the great fish", and his followers as the "little fishes," (Latin, pisciculi). And again the origin for these teachings is to be found in the Zodiac and the Constellation Pisces; God is teaching mankind Soul Science from the stars. Nor is this all or the most significant detail but one of many "hidden Spiritual truths" that originate in the Sky and Heavens above.

Answer for yourself: We have dealt above with some pretty heavy "theology" that challenges our accepted "literalistic" and "historical Christianity" to its very core, but where did these ideas come from? What is the real origin for the "first birth" and the "second birth" required for the whole of mankind? Where did the idea of the "animal nature" and the "Spiritual nature" within mankind originate? Where did mankind look to receive these divine teachings concerning the Soul of mankind and the need for man to be "born again" from above? Simply said...the Stars above. We have already connected the "two mothers" with Nun, the primordial waters of the Cosmos so we should not be surprised. We have already shown the reader that the Early Church Fathers connected the two births of this Jesus with the Spring Equinox and the Winter Solstice which is impossible for a human being. The purpose of the "two mothers and the "second birth" is for the Spiritual Nature in mankind to subjugate the Animal Nature in humanity. well. Often this animal nature is called "Satan". Consequently we have all heard "The Devil made me do it!" But did he really?

Answer for yourself: How would the Torah view this particular slogan? Believe it or not, "The Devil" is not the problematic part. Though many people may not realize it, his roots are firmly planted in the Jewish tradition and they go all the way back to Ancient Egypt. The only problem is that "the Devil" does not exist outside of ourselves. Let me explain. The word, "Satan," comes from a Hebrew root that means to hinder or denounce; there are many references to him in the Talmud and Midrash--not to mention the Book of Job, where he makes perhaps his most famous appearance.

As we learned earlier that Osiris is called "'the' Osiris" we find that Satan is called as well ("'the' Satan). This address we said was the way the Ancients connoted "deity" which lies at the very core meanings of the "neteru" of whom both Osiris and Satan are classic examples. Yes, both Osiris and Satan are "neteru"; Energies that comprise parts of the whole of God. "The Satan" is real: Satan is an angel (neteru), that is to say, a Living Spiritual Force created by Hashem to play the role of Accuser, and Tempter of the the human race. He is neither "good" nor "bad"; just serves God for in God he find his existence as but one "attribute" of the One God of the Cosmos. Within God is both "positive and negative" forces and powers of opposition. A manifestation of the Satan exists inside of God as he does in every human being in fact. It is the powerful force that the Jewish Sages call the "yetzer ha'ra," or "evil inclination." As one great contemporary Torah scholar defines it, the yetzer ha'ra is "the collective name for the drives and attitudes which interfere with [i.e. hinder] man's search for spirituality and closeness to God" (Rabbi Aharon Feldman, The Juggler and the King, p. 21). We can spot the footprints of the yetzer ha'ra in our almost insatiable desire for pleasures, honor, wealth, attention. If not kept in check, this desire can swamp that opposite yearning we have inside of us for spiritual growth and holiness, the manifestation of the yetzer ha'tov, or "good inclination." The idea is to keep these "inclinations" or "natures" in balance, in harmony (Egypt call it ma'at) and this is the task of the "indwelling Christ". So there is a Devil inside us, if you will, a force whose very purpose is to challenge us. But he was put there by God, the King of All, and reports to Him (He's not an independent force gone berserk). And the reason God put the yetzer ha'ra inside of us is so that we will rise above it-i.e., gain spiritual reward (and fortitude) by following the promptings of the yetzer ha'tov instead (the good inclination-nature). We develop our spiritual muscles by refusing to follow the yetzer ha'ra--however strong the temptation--and by heeding the guidelines of the Torah…and of our own higher selves. Far from being a tragedy, then, the existence of the Satan/yetzer ha'ra is for our own benefit. It exists in order to help us become better people, and more loyal servants of the Holy One. And this victory is won by nurturing "the Christ" in us whereby we master this "evil inclination" and bring it into subjection to the will of God in the Torah (the Laws for both Jews and non-Jews, Divine Laws which actually frame our respective Covenants with God). In a sense, we can characterize the struggle against the yetzer ha'ra as the very purpose of our existence on earth!

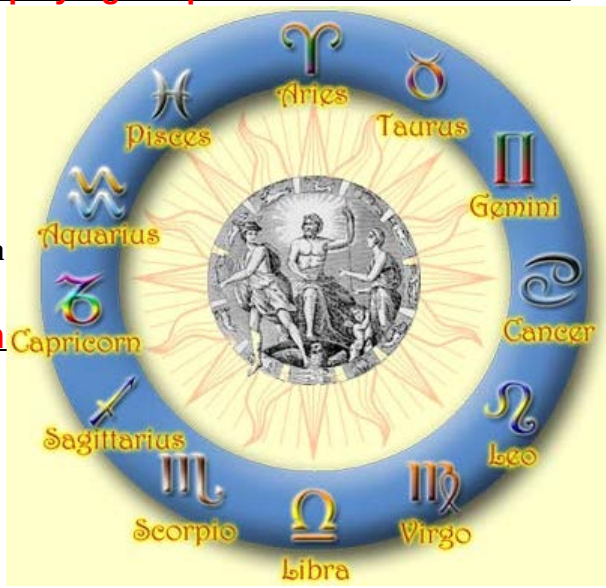
Answer for yourself: And where do we find this first taught? Yep, Ancient Egypt in the Horus-Set battle in the Osiris Myth that reveals this Divine Concept to mankind in the beginning of time. And to think all of this was discerned from the Stars and the Heavens above by the Ancient Egyptians and other nations of antiquity. You see, there is a War in Heaven; a picture of the War in mankind. So Above, So Below.

Let us continue to see how all this theology came from the Stars and how this was captured by the Ancients in the Uranograph. I mentioned this before in earlier articles but the importance of it requires I address it again for those who need a "refresher" or who might have found this "article" out of sequence when surfing the Internet.

In earlier article we showed the reader that there exists a "Pattern in the Mount". We looked at the religious significance of the Constellations Virgo (the virgin) and Pisces (the two fish) and the role they play in both Egyptian Religion, Judaism and Christian theology. We saw how that the astrologizing early mythicists allocated the birthplace of the first or natural man in the sign and Constellation of Virgo, the Virgin (matter/water), and placed the birth of the second or Spiritual man, "the man Christ," in the sign directly opposing Virgo, or which was six months opposite Virgo in the zodiac. We showed the reader that this sign or House was Pisces, who like Virgo, is also a water sign. We showed the reader how the New Testament allegory uses bread and fish as the divine food that the Christ brings wherewith to feed mortal man in order to immortalize him, in the "miracle" of the feeding of the five thousand and how this was connected to both the Houses of Virgo and Pisces. We showed the reader that the sign Pisces, the House of the fishes, was also termed, by association with the opposite sign Virgo, in which the Virgin carries in her hand the great star Spica ("the head of wheat" from which the divine bread was to be made). We showed the reader that Virgo is a Constellation that was called by the Ancient Egyptians the "House of bread," and drew connection between that divine Bread that Jesus says in the New Testament came down from heaven and was made man, as the Christ, the God in mankind which comes from the Descent of the Soul from "Above". We showed how Pisces was the House of the Great Fish, or the dual fishes (the picture of the two natures in man the "yetzer ha'ra, the evil inclination and the yetzer ha'tov, the good inclination). We shared with the reader how the Bread and fish were therefore made the symbolic dual food for man: the one representing the physical food for the "natural" man and the other representing the Spiritual nourishment from Heaven for the "Spiritual" man. We continued to show the reader that the "House of bread" in Hebrew is, as any scholar knows, Bethlehem! And we drew the obvious conclusion as you might expect; there can be no other place for the Christos to be born than in "Bethlehem," the Zodiacal "House of bread" and of fish. That is why the Early Church Fathers teach that Jesus had "two mothers" and was at the same time they also taught that Jesus was "born at the Vernal Equinox and the Winter Solstice".



Answer for yourself: How can all of this be a coincidence? These above facts are in reality various particulars involving the same story of the Soul which is only expressed through the Zodiac and auxiliary Constellations as well as through the path of the Sun in the Heavens in its relationship to its Equinoxes and Solstices. This is why the "Jesus Story" follows the path of the Sun when personified throughout the Zodiac, from House to House as it is read from Matthew chapter one through Matthew chapter 28. All of this "assumed historical narrative" is but Spiritual Allegory and Symbolism for the Descent of the Soul into matter and its struggle for Spiritual Maturity while houses in these bodies of death in which it only finds its release and return to Heaven at the death of the body. There you have the "Jesus Story"; in reality the personified and anthropomorphic depiction of the pilgrimage of the Soul through this plane of fleshy existence. Historically and naturally all of this above is an impossibility for a human being but not so in the Celestial Allegory and Spiritual Mythos which was the origin for the "Horus/Jesus Story" in the first place.

Answer for yourself: Is then this "Jesus Story" simply a story of the Soul expressed as the Energy of the Sun (symbolic for the Spiritual Energy of the Soul-God) as it matures and moves through its stages of maturation through the Zodiac as the Sun? Yes it is Answer for yourself: We have seen this but maybe not as clear as it appears now. When does the New Testament have the birth of Jesus in relationship to the birth of his cousin, John the Baptist? We made mention in earlier articles that the first chapter of Luke records Jesus' birth as occurring just six months after that of John the Baptist, who expressly announces himself as playing the part of the first or natural man, who must come first to "prepare the way of the Lord," the Spiritual Christ and who must, as the "natural man" DECREASE so that the "Spiritual man" may come forth and INCREASE! Beyond any possibility of doubt these six months in Luke's narrative must be interpreted as the half-year on the Zodiacal chart or Uranograph and can be understandable only in this manner. This is not a historical story. What we have here is a momentous disclosure of the presence of ancient astrological symbolism which lies at the very heart of the Christian Gospels; really our whole Bible. Again if we look at the Zodiac on the right we see that 6 months separate not only Virgo (first natural, water birth) and Pisces (second Spiritual birth/water) but also, as the Early Church fathers taught, 6 months separate the two births of Jesus (one at the Spring Equinox, the natural birth, and one at the Winter Solstice, the Spiritual birth). These Early Church Fathers, in describing Jesus having two births, admit that this "Jesus" is "celestial and not terrestrial". These celestial correspondences lie at the very core of our Soul Science as Egypt first taught with Osiris-Horus which is the pattern for all later "Jesus Stories".

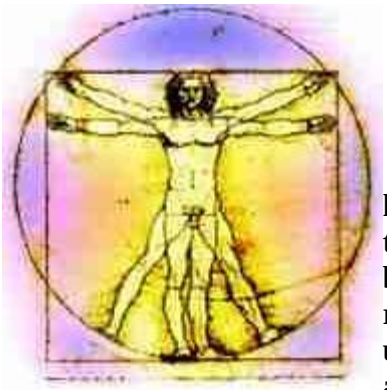
Answer for yourself: What should this teach us? The Creator is teaching us the same story over and over again throughout the Sacred Books of the world and even in the many varied stories in our Bibles. We learn from this namely that mankind has two natures requiring two different types of nourishment for required normal growth and maturation; first a "natural nature" requiring natural food and a second "Spiritual nature" requiring Spiritual food. Sadly so never has so much been passed off by the Church as "spiritual food" which is anything but that when the "keys" to Biblical Truths are found by hungry parishioners. There is truly a famine of the Word of God in our churches today. We have simply misunderstood this Bible from cover to cover. This is obvious in the diagram of "Pisces" alone since it contains "two fish" which is indicative of mankind's two natures: a "Spiritual nature" residing along side the "Animal nature" in mankind. You can see the genius of the "Spiritual" minds of Egypt as they discerned Spiritual realities from the Heavens above and developed it into their Soul Science. Not only the Constellations but the very cities of the nations were often named from some function of the deific life.

Thus as you can see all of this "theology was "witnessed" and "testified" to from intuitive Spiritual sensitivity to the visible Cosmos, Sky, and Heavens above which held in "coded" form the "keys" to the Soul that descended into matter, into human flesh and its intended Spiritual development while in our mortal bodies.



As stated briefly above the Uranograph was again the chart of the heavens with the Constellations demonstrated thereon and depicted in symbolical representation. From the most remote times the ancients dealt with a celestial chart or map, on which their earliest teachers had attempted to depict the features of the Soul's experience in the scenes which their enlightened imaginations had traced about the star clusters.

Answer for yourself: Did the ancient Spiritual masters of Egypt and Mesopotamia see in the path of the Sun (the focused representative Energy of our Solar System) as it moved through the 12 hours of the Zodiac to be but the symbolical representation of the birth, life, maturation, death, and revivification of the God's Soul and the Christ of God? Yes they did! And this "Horus Story" or the "Dionysus Story" or the "Mithra Story" or the "Jesus Story" is but Spiritual allegories of the Descent of the Soul into matter and it birth, life, death, and return to the Father at the demise of the earthly body. That is why all the lives of the sungods read as if taken from the same story.

The stellar zodiacs below at Denderah, Pylae and elsewhere are impressive reminders of the influence of this heavenly Uranograph. The Great Pyramid, even now untouched by time is, according to the Denderah zodiac, more than 78,000 years old. This planisphere on the ceiling of one of the oldest Egyptian temples, with its mysterious three Virgins between Leo and Libra, is understood today to have confirmed the truthfulness of the Egyptian priests who affirmed that even since their first Zodiacal records were commenced, the Poles had been moved three times within the plane of the ecliptic. This means that three sidereal cycles of 25,868 years each have passed in the history of mankind (H.P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine, Vol. II, 368; 432-433). The civilization of Egypt is untold ages old. Never was there a time when it appears to have been in its infancy, but all her arts and sciences were ever in full development. The discovery in quite recent years of the Somerset Zodiac in England, a giant zodiac, is calculated to have an origin at least as old as 2700 B.C. In the natural features of the countryside covering one hundred square miles, with the figure of Leo, the Lion, four miles from nose to tail-tip, is another most authentic attestation to the basic significance which symbolical astrology has held in ancient religious formulations. Present students have as yet little conception of how generally this graph was employed in Spiritual ideography and how pervasively it colored the composition of the scriptural writings. It is next to impossible to grasp subtle references in the Bible and other archaic literature without a knowledge of the features of this planisphere. Bibles are in fact, in a broad general sense, just the literary extension and amplification of the symbology of the Zodiac which is God's teaching tool given to mankind to learn of his Soul! To those not possessing these "keys" of proper interpretation of the Divine Message in our Bibles as taken from its Heavenly original representation this might sound mighty strange or impossible. Let me warn you to hold you contempt or your possible anger at me, the messenger, until you have mastered the studies required to see the genius in such Spiritual Depiction which the ancient sages witnessed in God's Heaven above them. The sages with elevated Spiritual insight that few seem to possess today were the first to write the history of the human Soul from what they witnessed in God's starry skies. I hope this give you a sense of "awe" the next time you walk outside at night an look at God's Heaven.

If we hold the ancient Spiritual Master of Egypt, for example, guilty of having thus perpetrated what seems to us today to be but pure fantasy then I assure you we are men and women whose ignorance knows no bounds. Upon scholarly study the reader can see for himself that these Spiritually inclined peoples were depicting history in that sphere where it had first occurred, before it continued later with mankind on earth. The undeniable fact revealed by such serious study is that Spiritual history had been established on a cosmic scale in the Heavens, in higher ranges of cosmic life, before it was ever to be repeated and copied according to "the Pattern in the Mount" in the human drama on this planet Earth. The heavenly man, in whose image and likeness earthly man is made, and in whose body the suns and planets are but cells and organs, was the prototype of man himself. We barely can grasp the above statement. The Egyptian Great God Ra, the Logos, was regarded by them as the unseen although immediate overall Deity of our local universe and the Milky Way in its entirety, the later existing within his unfolding aura. Our own Sun was thus thought of as but a very partial expression of Ra's whole being, even the solar system as a whole representing merely a small part of his objective physical form. Thus, our planet Earth has to be viewed here from the Egyptian viewpoint in the context of a microcosm of Ra's macrocosm, fulfilling a partial role in the life of Ra's vast organic life cycle, and being therefore also directly subject to the effects felt within it of His feelings, emotions, and thoughts. Man was the progeny of Ra and the product of his Divine Thought; a microcosm of the macrocosm of Ra...God. Ra thus expressed his "thought" through those things visible through the Cosmos:

Rom 1:20 20 For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse: (KJV)

Maybe you need to read the above verse once again and ponder it as did the Ancient Egyptians. And so it comes that humanity was in primordial times instructed to build its life "after the pattern of things in the heavens." Now we better understand the famous Egyptian axiom: "So Above, So Below". The planisphere was the historical and anatomical graph of the Divine Cosmical Man, and it became at once a secret glyph for the benefit of worldly humanity.

In the spirit of this understanding the religious teachers of yesterday ever sought to write into human, racial, national and individual history the reflection or "Pattern of the Uranograph". This effort to reproduce the Uranograph of Heaven on Earth was the secret motif back of all national epics and the allegorical Scriptures that we mistake for history today. The epic was an attempt to fashion national history in the similitude of the structural unity of the divine plan for macrocosmic, and by reflection, microcosmic, man. This is in general the theme of such an esoteric work as the Jewish Kabbalah.

"Do you not know, Asclepius, that Egypt is an image of heaven or, to be more precise, that everything governed and moved in heaven came down to Egypt and was transferred there? If truth were told, our land is the temple of the whole world" (Asclepius III 24-26).

As we might expect the next step was for these ancient Spiritual master to weave the dramatic features into their national history and their unique religious theology. Egypt and the Hebrew tribes are perhaps the most outstanding examples of the operation of this methodology on an extensive scale, how extensive the general student of the present age is unprepared to believe. We have mentioned previously and will look again at the Uranograph of Egypt and Israel to study once more that in these Uranographs we find:

- Always a Holy City, a "Jerusalem" of sorts; a residence of the king and the eventual home of all the King's subjects and elect.
- An Upper and Lower Land, typifying the dual segmentation of heaven and earth, or spirit and body, or the two natures in mankind (Spiritual and flesh) which was in all systems held to be the union of a divine with an animal nature or principle.
- The requirement that these two natures to be blended in a harmony and unified into one whereby the Upper Egypt conquers the Lower Egypt (which happens in the mythos as well as history).

- That the two sections or lands seem to be always connected by a river, rising in the higher mountainous sources in the Upper Kingdom and flowing down to the Lower Kingdom, carrying its blessings of fertility, down into the Lower Kingdom, which is thus nourished by the living waters from above.
- We find the recurrence of similar name for such a river. The Nile is the most familiar as connected with Egypt.
- We find that there seems to always be a bordering sea, symbolical in every case of the stormy short-living scene of the mortal life.
- There are also lesser bodies of water or lakes like the Sea of Galilee, Dead Sea, Black Sea, Red Sea, Jordan River, Styx River, etc., which were to be crossed by the voyaging Soul to reach the more blessed isles, or farther shore of Spiritual bliss.
- There were also the further division of the land into seven tribal provinces, a heptarchy or heptanomis, as in Egypt, Judea, England and elsewhere. This division was representative of the seven kingdoms of nature, the seven stages of unfoldment through which life must pass in the completion of every cycle. At other times the division was a decad, after the pattern of the Sephirothal Tree of the Kabbalah, but eventually redistributed in twelve sections, as in the case of the Hebrews, Athens, Afghanistan and some others, reflecting the twelve-fold segmentation of the Zodiac, which in turn typified the twelve levels of man's evolutionary attainment, or "twelve manner of fruits"º on the branches of the Tree of Life, the twelve divine elements of man's perfected being.
- There seems always to be a definite locality designated as the birthplace of the god, which was in many instances also his place of death and burial and following resurrection.
- There are also other centers marked the scene of his initiations, temptations, baptisms, trials, crucifixion and transfiguration, every stage of his evolutionary experience, in fact.
- There were cities dedicated to the special cult of the sun, the moon, and even such stars as Orion, the stellar symbol of the Christos; or of Sirius, the great Dog-Star, symbol of the advent.
- The four cardinal points were featured, as emblematic of the four pillars of mati's constitution, his physical, emotional, mental and Spiritual bodies and natures.
- There is always a warfare between the Upper and Lower Lands and their kings was generally a part of the "history," ending in the conquest of the Lower by the Higher and the union of the two under the crown of dual sovereignty. This drama was enacted so often in the 'history" of so many kings of Egypt that even a scholar of the eminence of the late William H. Breasted, in his History of Egypt, expresses his puzzlement over the fact that nearly every Pharaoh of the dynasties had to conquer Lower Egypt afresh and unite the two halves of the country under a common hegemony!
- There was a mountain or holy hill of the Lord, and there were points of entrance and exit from and to the lower world of Amenta.

As you can see the Mythos was being acted out, lived out below. This better helps us understand "So Above, So Below". In all likelihood the physiography and organic structure of the cosmic-heavenly man was to some extent copied in the distribution and construction of Pyramids, Tombs, Temples and other sanctuaries, and the Pyramids themselves were quite obviously astronomical graphs with ceremonial design and conformations. The celestial typology was as we have seen above was engrafted on the the geography, architecture and theology of the country itself. Egypt is a perfect example. Thus the names associated for ages with cosmic and Spiritual typism were spread out over the maps of the different lands; and the national kings, heroes, warriors, sages became so-called characters in the immemorial heavenly drama. I

In the light of this knowledge and this custom we as "truth-seekers" are in a position to reach a conclusion that is of the greatest importance for us as we apply it to our ideas of as a supposed "literal history". More often than not such Scripture is not a "literal history" but an allegory of a divine and Spiritual symbol taken from the movement of the orbs in God's Heaven. For we are confronted with the unassailable fact that the names and events in religious scripts were for the greater part not the products of objective history in the first place as we might think on the contrary that these names and events in "assumed history" were a deposit from the religious books of antiquity that find their origin in the religious mythos which have come down to us today devoid of the proper "keys" so necessary for their proper interpretation. The names of kings, heroes, cities, lakes, rivers and mountains were on the Uranograph long before they appeared on national maps! Again into play comes the ancient Egyptian axiom: "So Above, So Below". They were transferred from the Uranograph to the maps! The facts of the matter taken from such scholarly study reveal conclusively that the occurrences of Bible "history" had been enacted annually or nightly among the stars of the Sky long before they became incorporated in the epics of religion. And they had been in the religious epics before they became assigned to actual localities and personages. Heavenly regions and Spiritual transactions were finally brought to earth and given a local habitation on land and in history long after they were discerned in God's sky and Heaven. In short, the naming of geographical features was done by the sacerdotal and priestly castes in each country where the Spiritually minded priests simply sought to pattern their country and its history after the scheme of the Uranograph! Their map and their history were crafted as far as could be done in the mold of the cosmic chart. Each nation designed to make its configuration and history reflect and fulfill the heavenly model!

Understand that what I have elaborated to teach the student and "truth-seeker" in this article is no "theory"; it is attested by many scholarly opinions:

- We need look only to our own Bible for the clue to this endeavor of capturing divine truth in Heaven and translating it to the earth when looking at the injunction given to Moses in the Bible: *"See that thou make all things after the pattern shown thee in the Mount . . . the pattern of the heavens."
- "It has already been suggested that the mapping out of localities was celestial before the chart was geographically applied and that all common naming on earth came from one common naming of the heavens, commencing with the Great Bear and the Dog. The mapping out of Egyptian localities according to the celestial Nomes and scenery is described in the inscription of Khnum-hept, who is said to have 'established the landmark of the south, and sculptured the northern--like the heaven. He stretched the Great Bear on its back. He made the district in its two parts, setting up their landmarks, like the heaven'" (Records of the Past, XII, 68.)
- "Jerusalem, the Mount of Peace, the Nabhi-Yoni of the Earth, was one of these sacred cities that were mapped out according to the Kamite model in the heavens" (Gerald Massey, The Natural Genesis, I, p. 168).

"The pattern of things in the Mount," "the pattern of the heavens," has not hitherto been seen to be the Biblical analogue and symbol of Plato's ideal forms. The Mount, the heavens, are of course the heights of divine ideation, whereon God projected His new world in thought forms before He impressed them upon matter. The Heavens are the uplands of consciousness, or spheres of being, not physical localities. God formed His mental models on the Mount of Vision and Imagination before He cast them into concretion.

Practically conclusive evidence that Bible names are not objective or historical (in the first place) is to be found in the fact that there are in the Bible some scores of allusions to such local names as Egypt, Jerusalem, Nineveh, Babylon, Tyre, Sidon, Gilead, Assyria, Galilee, Ethiopia and others which, if taken in the earthly geographical sense, yield no intelligible meaning whatever. Further evidence is to be found in the notable fact that the divisions and localities on mundane maps do in the main largely match the celestial features. Charts of the "Holy Land of Canaan" have been found extant in early Egypt as much as three hundred years before the alleged Israelite Exodus, whence it is to be presumed that this promised land of peace and plenty was allegorical before it was historical. Massey states that an entablature on the wall of an Egyptian temple bore a list of some hundred and twenty place names afterwards localized in Palestine, at a date at least one hundred and fifty years before there could possibly have been an Exodus of Israelites from Egypt. It requires little "proof" to ascertain that "Egypt" as used throughout the Bible has the meaning of the lower self or animal-human personality, indeed the physical body of man itself. Jerusalem means the "holy city" or the heavenly realms, which are in consciousness, not on the map.

"The picture of this paradise in the Hebrew writings, the Psalms, the Books of Isaiah, Ezekiel, Zechariah and Revelation, were pre-extant long ages earlier as Egyptian. What the so-called 'prophets' of the Jews did was to make sublunary the vision of the good time in another life. There were always two Jerusalems from the time when Judea and Palestine were appendages of Egypt. Two Jerusalems were recognized by Paul, one terrestrial, one celestial. The name of Jerusalem we read as the Aarru-salem or fields of peace in the heaven of the never-setting stars. The burden of Jewish prophecy, which turned out so terribly misleading for those who were ignorant of the secret wisdom, is that the vision of this glorious future should be attained on earth; whereas it never had that meaning. . . . Thus Jerusalem on earth was to take the place of Jerusalem above and the Aarru-hetep became Jerusalem simply as a mundane locality" (Gerald Massey, The Light of The World, p. 539).

From numberless texts in the Bible itself which point to the correctness of the Uranographic interpretation of names we take one alone, which by itself is enough to substantiate the claim made in this connection which I have shared in this article. In Revelation, Chapter 2:8, speaking of the two witnesses whom it is said the dragon will rise up and slay, the apocalyptic writers says: "And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which Spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified."

There is enough in this verse to confound the entire corpus of Christian theology as historically based. It implies a clear refutation of the whole Passion Week and Good Friday ritual, as commemorative of "history." Jesus, so it says, was not crucified in an earthly Jerusalem, but only in a Spiritual one, the name of which is indifferently Sodom or Egypt, the latter not even the name of an earthly city, but of a country! Jesus crucified in Egypt (in the body...in the incarnation of the Soul in its Decent into Matter..flesh....as "the Christ"). Now you have it!

Answer for yourself: In light of this what are we to do with the whole of the Gospels as supposed "literal" history? Are these stores in our Bibles in which we were led to believe were "historical" narratives and "historical accounts" nothing more quite often but allegories of the Descent of the Soul into Egypt; Egypt being the flesh of mankind? It would appear so.

I almost feel sorry for sharing such knowledge with Christians as I can only remember my anguish when the light of God's truth broke through and enlightened my mind to the depth of my Spiritual deception at the hands of a corrupt Roman Priesthood long dead which so tragically strayed from the divine mythos and God's divine truth when they gave the world a falsified "historical Jesus". Christianity as a supposed "literal" history must be relegated in the light of such knowledge and facts to nothing more than a sacred myth where it always belonged. The crucifixion was, on the authority of the Bible itself, a Spiritual and not a historical transaction that deals with the "fall" of the Soul or the Descent of the Soul into matter (the indwelling Krst/Karest/Christ in the flesh of mankind).

The Spiritual masters of old surely never dreamed that an age would come that would have so far misplaced and lost the mythical intent of their writings as to suppose that conveyed no longer Spiritual allegory but were "literal" representations of supposed historical events. Surely these anointed sages of Egyptian antiquity and ancient sagicity could not know that the wisest scholars of a distant age would be so blinded by the forces that oppose enlightenment and the spread of knowledge as not to realize that the old religious sacred books from Ancient Egypt on down through history spoke only in the terms of those earthly forms that prefigured Spiritual realities. The old masters of religious science were not in the habit of speaking "precisely"; they spoke under the forms of figure and symbolism always. They could not suspect that their indirect poetical method would so outrageously bewilder and confuse Christian theologians for over 1,900 year as it has even yet today.

Unquestionably then the cosmic operation and cosmic significance that lie behind the twelve constellations of the zodiac and the thirty-six or more other stellar configurations must raise their voices once again today to enlighten our understanding and interpretation of our Sacred Religious texts and Bibles. The planisphere or chart of the heavens was doubtless the first of all Bibles, pictorially edited. It is time to realize that all Bibles are amplifications and elaborations of the original volume of ideography first written on the open face of the sky, charted in the Zodiac and Heavenly maps, and later transferred to Earth and written in scrolls and parchments. Man was instructed to fashion his new body of Spiritual glory "after the Pattern of things in the Heavens," the Heavenly or Zodiacal man. And a graph of the structure and history of this celestial Personage was sketched by the enlightened sages in the configurated star clusters. Zodiac comes from the Greek word "zodion", a small living image, signifying that it is a graph of the microcosmic life of man, which is cast in the form of the macrocosmic life of the Universe, or of God. Man's own small body is a replica of this body of God, made in its image and likeness. The vast frame of Cosmic Man was outlined in the scroll of the heavens, the solar systems and galaxies being living cell clusters in his immense organism. The visible truth of this is above our heads every night.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #9

We ended the prior article by stating that the Spiritual Masters of old in Ancient Egypt surely never dreamed that an age would some day come in the far future which would have so badly misunderstood and misconstrued there sacred writings as ours today. But it has. It is ours.

It would have been beyond their wildest notion that any nation would later arise who, completely devoid of the methodology of their allegorical, metaphorical, and symbolic writing style, could so completely misjudge, misconstrue, misunderstand and misinterpret the mythical intent of their religious writings as to suppose that these religious writings conveyed not spiritual allegories but were instead to be understood as if "literal" representations of supposed historical events. Lost to generations of supposed scholars these last two thousand years is the fact that the great Scriptures of antiquity on which our Occidental faiths have been built up have had not only a remote Egyptian origin but that they are based upon astronomical and astrological analysis of the Heavens and the messages written there for the whole of mankind by the Creator. These ancient writings convey their profound message of truth and wisdom in a language of semantic crypticism that has first baffled, then deceived the minds of all the theological scholars and sages, both Jewish, Islamic, and Christian, who have endeavored to interpret their esoteric and hermetic significance. Never in the last two thousand years, since the days of Egypt's ancient glory, has this profound and secret meaning behind the Christian Bible and other nation's Sacred Books, involving, as it does for the Christian Faith, the very reliability of the historicity of both the Old and New Testaments, been known or published along with the "keys" for its proper interpretation until the last one hundred years or so. And this knowledge comes to us today from the chiseled pylons, temples, pyramids, pyramid texts and coffin texts and other Sacred Books of Ancient Egypt which hold the "secrets" to all these Sacred Books of antiquity collected down through history from nation to nation. This spiritual knowledge discovered in Egypt with the "keys" for its proper interpretation is one, if not the most significant revelation in the area of religious intelligence in twenty centuries at least. This knowledge, as I found progressively upon some twenty years of study, and the truths it teaches, has the power to not only threaten but to reveal as ludicrous the main theological tenants of Christianity and Islam and to a much lesser extent Judaism in some regards. Such restoration of this spiritual knowledge could generate a New Enlightenment in the life of religion not only in the West, but in the world at large. This knowledge could cause the world to beat their swords into plowshares and end their religious enthusiasm for world dominance. This is so needed in our world and in our day on this planet. Surely these anointed sages of Egyptian antiquity and ancient African sagicity could not have known that the wisest scholars of a far distant age several thousand of years removed from theirs would be so blinded by the maleficent forces that oppose spiritual enlightenment and the spread of knowledge as not to realize that all the old religious Sacred Books from Ancient Egypt on down through history spoke only in the terms of symbolism and allegory and in so doing prefigured spiritual realities which were "literal" only in the invisible metaphysical realm in which they existed. These Ancient Religious Mystics and sages could not suspect that their indirect poetical method of religious writings and instruction would so outrageously befuddle and discombobulate Christian theologians for over 1,900 years as it even up to today. It is time to change this state of affairs especially in light that this knowledge is being made available today for the first time in over 2,000 or more years due to the determined efforts of honest archeologists and Egyptologists that have risen up in the last two hundred years and in so doing threaten the very standing of the entrenched

"old school Egyptologists" of yesterday which refuse such new Archaeoastronomical knowledge from Ancient Egypt because it threatens the inherited religious traditions of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam which have supported the hypothesis of these older "religious" Egyptologists. Let me begin this article with two statements about truth:

Galileo: All truths are easy to understand once they are discovered; the point is to discover them.

Mark Twain: In religion and politics people's beliefs and convictions are in almost every case gotten at second-hand, and without examination, from authorities who have not themselves examined the questions at issue but have taken them at second-hand from other non-examiners, whose opinions about them were not worth a brass farthing. Autobiography, 1959

The quote from Mark Twain hits home with me. I had to know "for myself" the truth behind my Christian faith when Seminary opened my eyes to this "swiss cheese theology" which is so full of "theological" holes which I was awakened to while there for 3 years earning my Masters's degree. The quest for truth behind the contradictory passages of my Bible stimulated my quest and search for the hidden truths behind my "Jesus Story" and has continued to spur me on to deeper truths going one now for almost 20 years. The results of such a quest for the "truth" behind my inherited Christianity are to be found on my websites which bring these "hidden truths" to the light of day once again. Having said that then let our study in the uranograph and chart of the Heavens that lies behind our Bibles continue.

We only begun in earlier articles to look together at the cosmic operation and cosmic significance that lie behind the twelve constellations of the Zodiac and the thirty-six or more other stellar configurations. But we have only so far just scratched the surface. It is my hope that the reader is beginning to see that the planisphere, uranograph, or chart of the heavens was doubtless the first of all Bibles, iconographically edited, which have come down through time to us today in such a confused state that they this stellar knowledge in our Bibles lie before almost all of us devoid of their intended original understanding. All Bibles are amplifications and elaborations of the original volume of ideography first written on the open face of the sky, charted in the Zodiac and heavenly maps, and later transferred to earth and written in sacred scrolls and parchments. Man was instructed to fashion his new body of spiritual glory "after the pattern of things in the heavens, the Pattern in the Mount, the heavenly or Zodiacal man". The Ancient Spiritual Sages, knowing this, then extrapolated and later sketched "the theology in the Sky" and once interpreted brought it down to Earth in both their theology, architecture and in their "man-made" geography and "sacred geometry" in order to conform to the "Pattern in the Heavens", the "Pattern in the Mount". The term "Zodiac" comes from the Greek word "zodion", a small living image, signifying that it is a graph, map, and chart of the microcosmic life of man, which is cast in the form of the macrocosmic life of the universe, or of God. Man's own small body is a replica of this body of God, made in this God's image and likeness. The vast frame of Cosmic Man was outlined in the scroll of the Heavens, the solar systems and galaxies being living cell clusters in his immense organism which were represented microcosmically in the actual bodies of mankind.

We will deal with this momentous "symbolic theology" as our studies advance but a word must be said at this stage of our study. I must make a statement alarming to most traditional Christians who have not done the studies required to see this as of yet. Biblical theology, from beginning to end, rests more solidly than has ever been believed on Zodiacal backgrounds. The acquiring of this so needed knowledge and its presentation will be admittedly a matter of great significance and importance as our studies advance. As we get to see this over and over as our studies advance we will see the unsuspected significance of various signs of the twelve signs of the Zodiac and the role they play "silently" behind the stores we read from Genesis through Revelation in our Bibles. We have already taken a look at Virgo and Pisces as they lie at the very heart of New Testament narrative but this is only the beginning. Let the reader picture before him the ordinary Zodiac, with the house of Virgo at the western equinox point and that of Pisces directly opposite on the eastern side. The simple fact that they stand six months apart will soon be seen to assume great importance in the later Gospel story of John the Baptist's introduction of Jesus. It is the analysis of such Biblical stories, once we possess the "astronomical keys" for their proper interpretation, that we come to grips with the real "historicity" of what we read in our Bibles. The good news, the real Gospel, is that it is possible today to find and learn the "real Heavenly truths" that the Creator intended these "allegories" and "stories" in our Bibles to convey. There is a relationship here between what we think are "literal-historical" narratives and the "celestial spiritual truths" that exist and which were intended originally to be understood only as spiritual allegory and metaphor. This relationship too often goes unnoticed as we read in the Christian Scriptures without recognition of the "real spiritual meanings" of what it is we are truly reading; by that I mean the often quoted verse in the Gospel of John:

John 3:3 3 Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. (KJV)

More than likely more pen and paper have been used in writing about being "born again" than any other topic if the Christian Faith. But as a Pastor for 8 years I found few Christians if any who really could tell me what it meant let alone the "Jewish understanding" or the even older "Egyptian understanding" of "being born again". To properly understand the passage and the intent of "born again" we must scratch the surface of this Zodiac and its relationship to "the Christ", "Jesus", and "Horus" of Egypt. "Astounding" I hear you say, but it is the truth as you will come to see. It should amaze you that "being Born Again" was recognized in Ancient Egypt some 10,000 years ago from looking at the Zodiac and the Sun's path through it; in particular the Spring Equinox and Winter Solstice. This mind you, carried the same meaning in Ancient Egypt as it does today in Biblical Judaism; only when we come to 3rd century Christianity do we find the "re-interpretation" of the saying whereby it loses its original intent. Inherent in this saying, "born again", is the idea of a "new birth" and a "new mother". This article must take a second to present a most puzzling and hitherto unexplained item of ancient religious myth, that the Christs, the Sun-Gods, the Messiahs, were all were depicted as having two mothers. Such a statement, that God's Christs, have had "two mothers" seems ludicrous at first sight and has been put on shelf #13 by many as nothing more than mythical nonsense and hogwash of early Paganism by Christianity for centuries. But is has not always been so. Yet little do we hear of our Church Fathers who both wrote and taught the same things. It is amazing what you can learn when you read and quit listening to someone else "preach" to you. If the reader has not read and understood these prior articles in the above "links" I strongly suggest he do so at this time before preceding with this study.

Answer for yourself: What are we missing when we read our Bibles as typical Christians devoid of this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom as a background to what we read? We totally miss the profoundness and deepness of Ancient sagacity and their discerning, sound judgment, and farsighted wisdom and scriptural intelligence which goes unnoticed since they purposefully hid exalted and lofty cosmic truth under emblem and symbol which we, as "uninitiated" Christians, not possessing the "keys" to this symbolism, mistakenly interpret as if "literal" or "historical" events. Such a course for proper Biblical interpretation of our cherished Sacred Book has not been dreamed of yet nor explored by hardly any serious Christian "truth-seekers"; that is until the last hundred years or so with the advances in Egyptian archeology.

It really is so simple yet so deep that it escapes our minds which languish in full darkness in need of God's illumination of His Spiritual Truth which goes misunderstood in the Bible which we read and at the same time think we understand. The depiction of the necessity of mankind's need of two mothers or two births is case in point. Such statements should not be welcomed with disbelief as they are but sadly not possessing the "keys" for the proper interpretation of such statements let alone passage after passage in the Bible then "Symbolic Theology" goes misinterpreted as if "historical-narrative" by those who teach the flocks of God when the intent of the verse is just the opposite from what is being taught.

Answer for yourself: Why is this? Well for starters the "Jesus Story" begins almost with the admonition of "the Christ", the Christ being again the dramatic figure of the divine principle in man, who taught and announced to Nicodemus that "ye must be born again." Nicodemus asks if this means that we must enter a second time into our mother's body and experience a second birth in the natural manner. We see that even Nicodemus looks at this doctrine as if "literal-natural" when in fact the Christ does not.

Answer for yourself: There is a big lesson to learn here. What is it?

1 Cor 15:46 46 Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. (KJV)

The "natural man" sees only "the natural"; he can only see and "think first" of a "literal-historical" understanding and approach to life. The "spiritual man" sees deeper and must always if he hopes to know the deep things of God.

Jesus, the New Testament's personified Christ replies that we "must be born of water and the spirit."

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the Latin word "spiritus", translated "spirit" in many passages, means also "air" or "breath"? One of the great keys to restoring true understanding to the Bible and the intended meaning of its passages is the correct understanding of the "symbolism" used within it. There is a secret language we all recognize, but few are fluent in the language of symbols. Symbols surround us in myriad forms and form an large part of our daily lives, yet unlike our spoken languages, schooling in symbolism is left to the individual initiative. Few students or Christians every grasp the importance of symbolism and its correct interpretation when they read Scriptures because they allow their own experience do be "the interpreter" when in fact this only guarantees that they miss the intent of the writer or speaker who speaks to us often from many thousands of years ago and from another culture and religion so distant from us today. Many of the symbols we take for granted today as stationary signs of religious or secular life were created long ago, representations of the movements of earth and heaven, symbols of the seasons, and representations of cosmic and earthly powers and forces. Over time, the symbols have acquired layers of increasingly complex meaning and in so doing they have not only lost the "ancient truths" held by these symbols in their beginning but these "later meanings" often have so strayed from the original intent of the symbol that their original meanings and God's intent behind their representations have been lost. Knowing not this religious symbolism, typification, allegory, and typology behind our Bibles and the "keys" to its correct interpretation, mankind staggers today in darkness proclaiming the brightness of it; never aware that he calls the "dark light" and the "light dark". In other words we have so far strayed from the truths that God gave mankind in the beginning of our existences that if the scope of such a vast departure from truth was capable of being realized by the vast majority of Christians today the churches would remain vacant and preachers would be out of jobs. Signs and symbols, ideograms (graphical symbols that represent words), pictograms, logograms, and phonograms, as used in our Western religious traditions, share a common ancestry that dates before the creation of writing all the way back to "sign language" long before man learned to communicate "orally" with one another. The unique feature of ideographs is that they may be used by a plurality of languages which may pronounce them differently while using them in conformity to the same norms and ideas shared by mankind. These symbols are powerful because they are archetypal - even cultures that do not share language share an innate understanding of symbols.

Let us look at the four "elements", "symbols", and "ideographs" of ancient mythicism: earth, water, air and fire:

- The body of the physical or natural man was conceived as being composed of the two lower elements of ancient mythicism: earth and water.
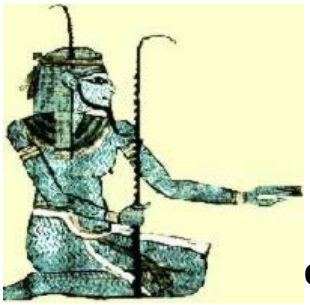
- The higher or spiritual man was conceived of being composed of the commingling of air and fire, representing deific mind and spirit.

As recently as a few thousand years ago, Western scientists considered the whole earth to be made of 4 elements: Earth, Air, Fire, and Water. The concept of a fundamental element or elements forming the basis of all matter has existed since the ancient Greeks dominated science and philosophy but its true origin goes way back to Ancient Egypt. Empedocles, and later Aristotle, developed the theory that all things are composed of four elements: air, earth, water, and fire. Although modern scientific understanding of the elements has grown substantially since the time of the ancient Greeks, the mystical connection between humanity and the elements of nature remains. Even though science has taken a different turn, we can still use this ancient wisdom to make sense of the world. Even today, earth, water, air, and fire are not bad symbols for the four states of matter -- solid, liquid, gas, and plasma. Science has discovered new ideas, but in the field of religion and Mysticism these elements are still important today, to illustrate the oneness of all things which find their existence in God.



Answer for yourself: Why is this concept of the 4 elements so important?

This very idea of the whole of all existence is made up of 4 elements: Earth, Air, Fire, and Water lie at the very core of our religious beliefs and philosophy no matter what the religion might call itself to day. We find it at the very core of Egyptian Religion, Judaism, Christianity and Islam. Thus, as we saw previously with the constellations of Virgo and Pisces in earlier articles, God is teaching His Creation that man has two natures; a type of dualism if you will, which is founded upon these 4 elements. Understanding this then we can look deeper now at Jesus' statement to Nicodemus and render it the same but a little different: "born of water and spirit" or actually being "born of water and air" (notice this is two of these 4 basic building blocks of all elements and nature).

And in the New Testament text we find that John the Baptist uses three of the four elements when he states that he, the forerunner of the Christos, and therefore a type and "symbol of the lower natural man", indeed baptizes us with water (omitting earth), but that there cometh after him one higher than himself who shall baptize us with the "holy spiritus" (air) and with fire and in so doing give life to the "spirit man". In an earlier article I said that my studies in Egyptian Religion, Gnosticism, and Astrotheology has shown me that the series of myths that line the pages of both the Old and New Testaments deal not with a wide variety of spiritual or cosmical situations, but only with one situation in endless repetition; the incarnation of the Divine in matter, the Descent of the Deific Mind-Soul-Krst-Karest-Christ into matter (mankind). Thus again in this passage concerned as it is with being "born again" we see the same teaching over and over again regarding our Souls which we saw in our prior study of Virgo and Pisces: the Christ thus affirms that we must have two births (a second birth-"born again"), necessitating two mothers (Virgo/Pisces), and John the Baptist adds that we must have two baptisms (one of Air/Fire).

Answer for yourself: What is this "fire"?

Mankind possesses a "spirit" which is an indestructible fragment of God's own mighty Spirit. This has been rightly called a "tiny spark of fire, a tiny "Sun" of fire/Energy of that cosmic Intelligence and Love which we call the Deific Mind of God". The Christ is the offspring or creation of a conception of Deific Mind, first in the inner bosom of spiritual matter, then in organic bodily structure (the incarnation, the Descent of the Soul into matter, the Descent of the Deific Mind of the Cosmos into matter-mankind). Primeval space, we have seen, was called in Egypt the NUN, or the Waters of the Nun. Everything begins with "water", Egypt called it Nun. The Egyptians symbolized this spiritual concept as a bearded man with a blue or green body, symbolizing, as you might expect, water, fruitfulness and fertility. The Egyptians believed that before the world was formed, there was a watery mass of dark, directionless chaos. Genesis calls this the "darkness" which lies upon the "deep". The name of the water of chaos was Nun. This name "Nun" is very, very important as we shall come to see. In this "watery" dark-chaos lived the Ogdoad, undifferentiated "energies", also called "the attributes" of God and these attributes or energies of God lay dormant in the One unmanifested God-Energy; that lay dormant in the darkness of the neutron soup of the NUN. It is from this unmanifested chaos that the attributes, forces, powers, energies, processes, cycles, and patterns within God, the latent Cosmic Mind, the Krst-Christ-Logos, will issue forth and in so doing God will bring order, or "ma'at" and harmony to bear upon this chaos. Nun was thought to be the father of Ra, who was known as the father of the gods (neteru) and all that comes afterwards. It was from Nun that Ra (God) (or Amun, another of the Ogdoad who became prominent Middle Kingdom onward, and joined with the Sun god as Amen-Ra) created Himself, rising up on the first piece of land - the primeval mound (matter). Now for something startling.

Num 27:18 18 And the LORD said unto Moses, Take thee Joshua the son of Nun, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him; (KJV)

All Bible students recognize a familiar ring in the phrase "Joshua, Son of Nun." As we have seen the name "Joshua" is just a variant name for Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware we find this phrase "son of Nun" applied to Jesus in old Christian documents from the early centuries? Isn't Joseph Jesus' Father or, depending upon your theology, is not God Jesus' Father? Who is this "Nun"?

The phrase is found actually written in some old Christian documents which never made it into our New Testaments as "Jesus, Son of Nun." At any rate "Joshua" is "Jesus" and "Jesus" is "Joshua". So here is the Christ, called Jesus, son of the primeval space, or the NUN. But the wonderment increases when we turn to the Hebrew alphabet and find that while "M" is called and spelled "Mem" and means "water," "N" is called and spelled "Nun" and means—of all things—"Fish"!

Answer for yourself: What does this teach us? Hidden in the Hebrew then this Jesus, is son of Pisces, the Fish-sign, as he indeed is in the Gospels themselves. And we already have seen that this new interpretation of "the Christ" emerges at the changing of the Age from Aries to Pisces. Again we see the astrological and astronomical significance of the concept of "Jesus" and "Joshua" instead of an assumed historical personage. Again we see the hidden uranograph behind the theological concepts we have today.

Christ is the personified Sun as found in Scripture:

Matt 17:2 2 And was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the Sun, and his raiment was white as the light. (KJV)

Fire, symbolized as the Sun, supports and sustains life. It maintains the body temperature at 98.4 degrees Fahrenheit, which is essential for sound health. Moreover, fire is also present in the form of digestive fire in the human body that "burns up our calories" and gives our body energy for its very life and bodily processes. Fire is immanent even in stones which will become apparent when two stones are struck against each other. One can notice the presence of fire even in trees. When two branches rub against each other, fire emanates. Ask any boy scout. Now you begin to get the idea of how these 4 basic elements are deposited in all things that exist; they just are hidden at times, latent as we described above in the NUN. We just don't see them always as they are "hidden" within all matter. Now let us look at "fire" and "theology" and how it is related to Eternal Life. Fire plays a central role in the process by which a mortal may escape the cycle of rebirth and ascend to the Isles of the Blessed (Heaven) according to the Ancients. To understand this we must begin with the normal progress of the Soul after death, for similar rituals are used for immortalization of this event in this life and in the afterlife.

We are speaking about "fire". The Pythagorean Alcmaeon (Greek medical writer and philosopher-scientist who lived around 500 B.C.E.) and others related the immortality of Soul to the immortal, divine stars (celestial energies/fire/suns). Plato also taught that the fiery substance of the stars, which he called Aithêr, is divine (the very visible representation of living Energies of the Cosmos which finds its origin in the God of all Cosmic Energy), and in the Cratylus (397c) he connected the term "Aithêr" to the Gods (Theoi) and to "run, move", because the Gods, like the stars, move eternally.

Answer for yourself: What is Plato teaching us?

Basically Plato taught us that anything that "moves" is "alive" with the life and "fire" of God. This Divine Fire is found both outside surrounding us as human beings and inside us at the center of our being. Man's whole nervous system is literally small "fire" which can be likened to a small "Sun". It is this "fire" that bridges the synapse. For communication between nerves, actually between neurons to occur, an electrical impulse must travel down an axon to the synaptic terminal. Therefore, at the very core of our body and our nervous system which charges our whole body and causes it to operate we find the very "fire" of God. Thus it is said "man is made of portions of the cosmos, and in death like returns to like" (Burkert, Lore & Sci. in Anc. Pythag. 362): the Soul goes to the heavenly Aithêr, and the body goes to Earth, each returning to its own element. Egypt taught as a fundamental religious truth: fundamental rule "the body to earth, the spirit to the sky". Thus, according to the Orphic golden tablets, when the Soul reaches its destination, it should say, "I am a child of Earth and Starry Heaven, but my race is of Heaven alone; this Ye know Yourselves." Now you know where we get the idea that when we die we "go to Heaven". Now you can understand why we are taught that when we die we, as smaller "energies" of God, as small "Suns" from the One Sun of the Cosmos, as a part of the Consciousness of God, small incarnations of God's Deific Mind as our Soulish makeup, as God's "small Suns" and "cosmic energies" entrapped in matter, return or "go to Heaven", "we go to the stars" from which we have come.

Answer for yourself: Is this not strange that resurrection from the dead was likened to becoming a "star"? It sure seems to be until you understand again the "symbolic theology" which we read which expresses the metaphysical concepts that we yet believe today. The Ancients spoke through symbolism; again they were not "literalists" like the Greek-minded Americans we are today.

This phraseology of "becoming a star" is the way the Ancients expressed Eternal Life; they understood that we as human beings have come from God, the Living Universe, and we return to the Living Universe on a higher plane that we inhabit in our terrestrial bodies and so return from which we have come as Living Conscious Energies and that collectively all of humankind make up this "body" of God which we call the "body of Krst/Karest/Christ". Truly amazing when you obtain the "keys" to its proper interpretation. Now you understand when your about Egypt that the dead righteous Pharaoh was, after his death, believed to become a "star". Later this concept of Eternal Life limited in the beginning to the Pharaoh was extended to all people.

The Egyptians had extended knowledge of the night sky and the stars above. The circumpolar stars (the set of stars that seemed to "orbit" the North Star through the course of the night and thus never dipped below the horizon) were called the "Imperishable Ones". These sets of stars in the northern hemisphere that do not rise and set on the horizons were known as the "Imperishable Ones" by the Egyptians because those ancient people associated the setting of any heavenly body as synonymous with death and the rising of the body as rebirth. Since they never "dipped" below the horizon they were thought to "never die" but "live forever". The infinite and unchanging nature of the stars overhead influenced the development of not only the Egyptian calendar but their beliefs regarding the life after death. God was teaching them of "birth, life, death and rebirth" by the cycles of the Sun and its path through the Zodiac as well as the movement of the stars in the Heavens. They both told the "same theological story" of God. It was the "Pattern in the Mount" which was duplicated in Mother Nature below: So Above, So Below.

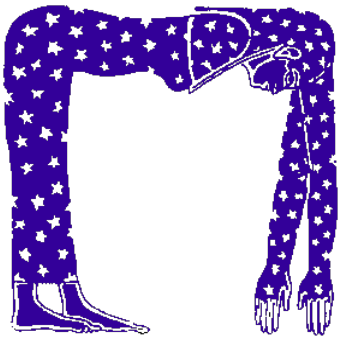
As we might expect since now familiar with the uranograph, every Egyptian temple was a complex model of the cosmos and thus many images of the stars, constellations and stellar deities grace temple ceilings. Every Egyptian temple building was a microcosm reflecting the Cosmic Macrocosm. Again we see "So Above, So Below". The New Testament teaches the same theology:

Matt 6:10 10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. (KJV)



You just read "the Pattern in the Mount". Egypt was the "Mirror of Heaven" and designed their architecture to reflect Heaven on Earth. All the parts of the temple structure had its specific symbolism, which is most clearly seen in the developed New Kingdom temples. Egyptian Temples were a model of the Universe. To get the idea here is a picture on the left of the Zodiac found at the Hathor Temple at Dendara, Egypt. This is the "Pattern in the Mount" which spoke spiritual realities to mankind from God's Heaven. God, who has no mouth or hands or body speaks yet from His Throne of this Cosmos to all of His Creation; to mankind whom was made in His image. The architecture of the Egyptian temple was a symbolically recreated cosmos, fully functional according to Ma´at, the inner sanctum being the most well-protected part, where the god could be in residence. What I just described to you is exactly what we find in the Temple in Jerusalem; an Equinox Temple which Holy of Holies faces East and opens to the East to meet the rising Sun. As you might expect many Temples in Egypt were orientated so that the Sun, a symbol of God, would follow its main axis from East to West during the course of the day. The second axis was orientated to follow the course of the Nile from its source to the delta. Often it was located on a rising slope to help the architecture recreate the conditions of the Primeval Mound from which all life will usher forth from the Nun. The ritual for the laying out of the foundation of a new temple building was very precise. It was carried out at night with only the king and certain priests present. The neteru, the goddess Seshat, as an attribute and Energy of God, was believed to overlook the procedure with the king marking out the foundation by stretching a cord between two poles. The cornerstones of the temple was determined by the position of the stars and for this the king used a specific sighting tool. Again you get the idea; the "Pattern in the Mount" was brought down to earth according to the uranograph and found expression in not only architecture but "theology" as well. The uranograph is the "key" to this "Pattern in the Mount" being "incarnated" in Mother Earth and Egypt knew it. So did Israel and we find this "Heavenly Speech" in their Religion today; the "key" is to interpret these ancient spiritual writings "correctly" and in order to do that you have to have familiarity with the ancient's "spiritual symbolism".

In instances where the night sky was charted on the ceiling of Temples, brighter stars were sometimes designated by circles - like the Sun disks. In decorative uses, the sky hieroglyph and the body of the sky-goddess Nut was decorated with five-pointed stars. It was believed that the stars did not just inhabit this world, but in the Duat (land of the afterlife) as well. The Egyptians believed that the "ba" (the word "ba" is usually translated as "soul" or "spirit"; however, "ba" is probably better translated as "spiritual manifestation") might ascend to the sky to live as a star (a conscious cosmic "Energy") in Heaven (the Soul as the "fire" of God, as a part of the whole Energy/Spirit of God, returns to its Cosmic source).Many tombs also featured deep blue ceilings dotted with bright yellow stars in the exact image of the hieroglyph in hopes to make the "ba" (Soul) feel at home in its new dwelling place. The stars were called the "Followers of Osiris" and represented the Souls in the underworld (it was Osiris again who was resurrected from the dead). The five-pointed star, often with a circle around it, was the Egyptian symbol of the Duat. Here you see on the left the "boat of Ra" where one makes his journey to the next life. Now it makes sense why almost all religions teach that when we die we "go to Heaven" or "we go to the stars" or at least hope it does.

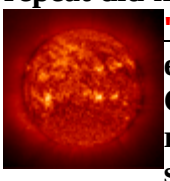
Equipped with this knowledge then we better understand why the Pharaoh's body was preserved so that he himself might have a real existence as an adult in the Otherworld of the Celestial regions in which he was supposed to reach the sky. Some early and late texts told of a "ladder" similar to that which Jacob saw in his dream.

Gen 28:12 12 And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it. (KJV)

A Pyramid text tells of the gods "fixing together the ladder for King Pepi," and another calls on King Unis to climb the ladder so as to reach the Sky. The ladder ultimately became a "stairway to Heaven" and was taken over the Osiris cult after the Paradise of that god had been raised to the regions beyond the Sky. Sometimes it was said that the Pharaoh was raised to Heaven by the wind, or that he climbed a column of smoke and then used a cloud as his vehicle. In many ancient Egyptian pictures of the Soul, the "Ba" is depicted as a human-headed bird. The idea of the Soul reaching the Sky in "bird form" is found to be as old as the Pyramid Age, when the gods, as stars, were supposed to flutter by night into the darkened Sky. The insistence in the Pyramid Texts that the dead should go Eastward suggests, however, the existence of the belief that admission to the Celestial regions was possible only at dawn. No wonder in our "Jesus Story" he is found "risen" at dawn. Coupled with this is the idea that with the rising of the new Sun at dawn daily then the picture of the "renewed" and "resurrected Energies of God", here seen in the Sun, only foreshadowed the "Pattern in the Mount" that out repeatedly taught mankind that Energies that pass from earthly existence continue to exist and life as does the same Sun that dies and resurrects daily. It is the "same Sun" that rises, the "same Moon" that passes into total darkness (death) that reemerges reflecting the Energy of God once again (the moon reflects the light of the Sun). God, who is the same yesterday, today, and tomorrow was demonstrating to the Ancients the unending "Pattern in the Mount" which was reflected upon the Earth since these same cycles, patterns, and Laws were found to be operating on Earth exactly as they did in Heaven



"above" and Earth "below": So Above, So Below. Mankind knew that they never cease to exist even though there Earthly tabernacle for their Soul fades. Now we see that the night Sky was the visible presence of that next world beyond the horizon.

Egypt taught that for this "Celestial Goal" to happen one must live righteously and fulfill in his life acts of righteousness called the 42 Negative Confessions. "Deification" of the "dead" depended on the moral conduct of the deceased when he was still alive in accordance with his obedience to the "Laws of God (the Egyptian Torah). Henceforth it was possible for all "just people" to attain immortality in their own right - after successfully passing the examination of the gods at the "Judgment of the Dead". According to the Egyptian philosophy, man is born mortal but contains within himself the seed of the Divine; "the fire of God". His purpose in this life is to nourish that seed, and his reward, if successful, is eternal life, where he will reunite with his divine origin. The essence of the Egyptian metaphysical beliefs is that man is created to accomplish a specific role, within the grand cosmic scheme. According to Egyptian traditions, one cannot succeed in earthly life merely by default. One must use his metaphysical faculty (Deific Mind symbolized by the heart) and his physical faculty (action symbolized by the tongue). These actions will be in agreement or at variance with natural harmony. If during his/her earthly life, the actions are not harmonious with nature, he or she will reincarnate again to the earthly realm, to try another time. At the end of one's earthly existence, a performance evaluation will determine his/her fate.Thus man has within himself the "fire of God".

Fire is the element with the highest vibrations. Fire is the only element with the power of transformation. All the other elements have only clearing and cleaning power. This is very important. In the physical plain FIRE is the Sun, flame and a blaze; in the spiritual plane "fire" is LIGHT. The physical fire transforms by burning material stuff, changing the material, matter, "stuff" into gas by raising its vibrations (producing heat) and leaving the minerals as ashes. In so doing as the "vibrations increase" it emits "light". The spiritual LIGHT transforms by raising the vibrations of energy, thus turning dark (light-less) and heavy energy into shinning LIGHT again.

Answer for yourself: So what have we said here?

Thus the principle of the Element of FIRE is: LIGHT or Energy which is "life". Another symbol of FIRE is the Sun, the symbol for FIRE in its highest perfection. Egypt looked at the Sun and they did not, I repeat did not "see God" or "worship the Sun"; rather the Ancient sages of Egypt saw the Sun as the "visible" representation of the Cosmic Intelligent Energy who is the Creator of all. That explains why the Pharaohs were believed to become "like stars" when they die; they return to the Cosmic Intelligent Energy from which we all have Emanated and come whom we call God; they return to "the light"; the God who is the totality of the Cosmos - Heaven- Sky. One Egyptian legend states that each day, Ra was born and began a journey across the sky in Ra is just another name for God. Ra has been known by many names and takes many different forms. This makes him one of the most confusing gods to understand:

- At sunrise he is Khepera, represented by the sacred scarab.
- Around noon, when the Sun is at its full power, he is Ra.
- At sunset, when the Sun is said to be weak, growing old and dying he is Tem or Temu.

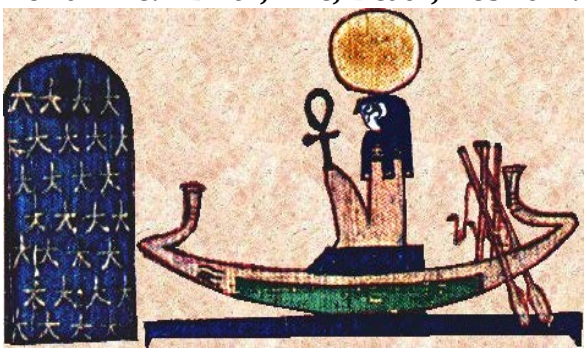
Answer for yourself: What did we see? Even the Energies of God have "life-cycles"; a birth, sustaining of this life-cycle, and eventual death and re-issuance of this "same Energy" (birth, life, death, rebirth). This "Divine Cycle" is demonstrated in the cycles of Heaven with the Sun and stars as well as in Mother Nature on Earth. Man noticed and applies the same "Laws of the Cosmos" to his own existence. This "Divine Cycle" was symbolized through "religious myths" and in so doing these Divine Truths were teachable to others. Ra is a perfect example.



Ra, as the symbol for this Intelligent Creative Energy of the Cosmos, travels across the sky with the Sun upon his head in two boats. Each day, Ra was born anew and begins a journey across the sky. Ra was believed to travel in the Manjet-boat or the "Barque of Millions of Years" on his "day voyage". He was joined on this daily journey by a crew of many gods . The Manjet-boat would sail through the twelve provinces, representing the twelve hours of daylight. The boat used in the morning is called Matet, which means "becoming stronger" (as the Sun does as it climbs in the sky). From midday on he travels in the Semktet ("growing weaker") boat. When Ra completes this travels and begins to decline below the horizon or has "set" (note the play on the word "darkness" at sunset) like the Sun at dusk, he begins his journey into the underworld or the Duat/Tuat. At the end of each day Ra was thought to die and embarked on his "night voyage". Ra sailed in a boat called the Mesektet-boat or night-barque on his journey through the twelve hours of darkness. For this night voyage and journey Ra was called Auf, which means 'corpse'.

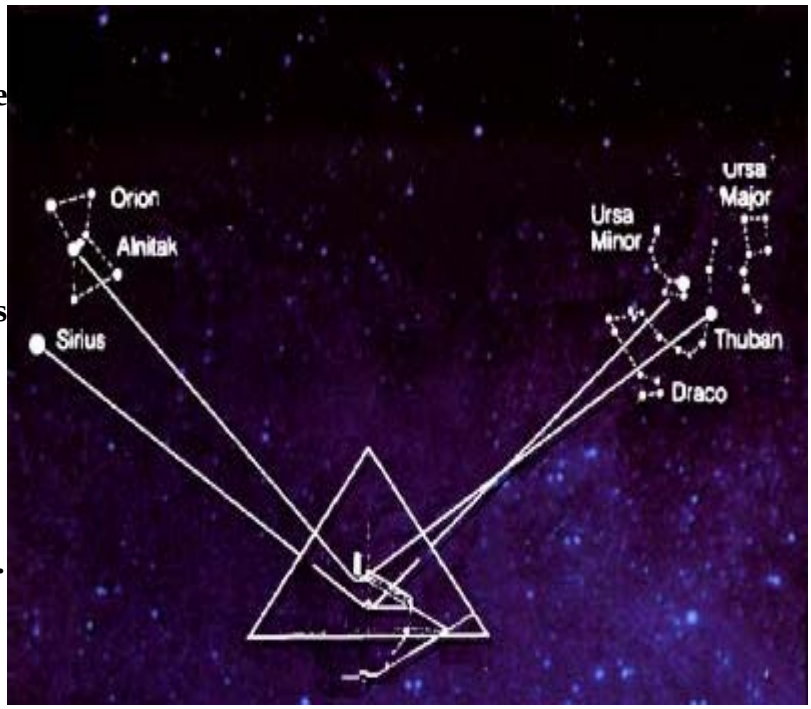
Answer for yourself: What did we just read? We read of God's design for all life: "Birth, Life, Death, Rebirth". It was not always smooth sailing on these ships. During the day Ra had to defeat his chief enemy, a serpent or snake named Apep (personified darkness). Apep was the ancient spirit of evil and destruction who dwelled in eternal darkness. Every day he would attempt to devour the Sun Boat of Ra as it sailed the heavens. Set's original role was to battle Apep and keep him from destroying the boat. Apep became a symbol of evil, and he was depicted often as a serpent-dragon. You see, Ra would travel through the Underworld, Amenta, every night in his Boat of the Sun. Each night, Apep would try to end Ra's journey, but each night he failed.

Occasionally, Apep would succeed, and the world would be plunged into darkness (a solar eclipse). But Set and his companion Mehen would cut a hole in Apep's belly to allow the Sun Boat to escape. A great battle was fought between Ra (LIGHT) and Apep (DARKNESS), and Ra was usually victorious. The picture inlay on the left shows Set destroying the evil serpent of darkness; however on stormy days or during an eclipse the Egyptians believed that Apep had been victorious and swallowed the Sun. As Apep was thought to live in the underworld, he was sometimes thought of as an Eater-up of Souls. Like Ra, after his death symbolized by the setting Sun, the Egyptian monarch/Pharaoh was believed following his death to likewise ascend into the Sky-Heavens did Ra (symbolized by the Sun) to join the entourage of the Sun god; in other words he went to Heaven to be with Ra (God). He as the "fire" of God returned to the Heaven of all Energies, to God the Father of all Neteru.



Answer for yourself: What did we just read when we looked at the rising and setting of the Sun which was personified as "Ra" and "Apep" and their eternal battle? We read the story of our Soul vs our flesh: Cain and Abel, Isaac and Ishmael, Jacob and Esau, Horus and Set, and Jesus and Satan! Are these stories above but Spiritual Allegories? You continued study will reveal this answer to you. Did you know that Esau and Set, the murderer of his brother Osiris, had ruddy skin and red hair? Why is it mentioned that Esau has "red hair"? Coincidence?

We just read the eternal conflict between the two opposition powers and forces of the Cosmos; positive and negative, light and dark, good and evil, etc. God is ONE but within Him dwells a dualism that brings all things into expression; even polar opposites which we call "evil" in our estimation today. No wonder in the Bible that Satan is subservient to God; he is but another "neteru". If your lost here then read about the "neteru" and come to understand correctly the Spiritual Concept of "Set" or "Satan".

One more thing needs to be said about the dead Pharaohs becoming "stars".

Answer for yourself: Could this be why there exists "shafts" in the Great Pyramid? Could this be why one of the shafts pointed to various stars like the constellation Orion? Was this symbolic of the Pharaoh's ascent to Heaven following his death? Was this the path of his Soul? Are these "Soul Shafts"? This is the most probable explanation, based on the solid data we have available to us. At least it corresponds to the system of religious beliefs of the ancient Egyptians. The Great Pyramid contains four tiny shafts, which lead upwards and outwards, northwards and southwards respectively, from the Great Pyramid's so-called King's and Queen's Chambers. For many years it was assumed that these shafts were for ventilation purposes, but there have always been Egyptologists who have argued for a ritual or symbolic function. Two such scholars were Alexander Badawy and Virginia Trimble, who put forward a theory in the 1960s that the shafts were aligned to certain stars, with one of them being targeted towards Orion's Belt. Professor R. T. Rundle Clark, who had a great respect for the Pyramid Texts, notes that "the rising of Orion in the southern sky after the time of its invisibility is the sign. . . Osiris has been transformed into a 'living soul.' "

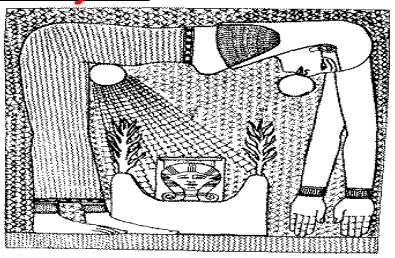
"Behold he has come as Orion, behold Osiris has come as Orion. . . O king, the sky conceives you with Orion, the dawn-light bears you with Orion. . . you will regularly ascend with Orion from the eastern regions of the sky, you will regularly descend with Orion in the western region of the sky." (Pyramid Texts, line 820-2)



"O king, you are this Great Star, the Companion of Orion, who traverses the sky with Orion, who Navigates the (Duat) Netherworld with Osiris; you ascend from the east of the sky, being renewed in your due season, and rejuvenated in your due time. The sky has born you with Orion. . ." (Pyramid Texts, line 882-3)

Thus the dead King, as an "Osiris," evolved to inhabit a newly born stellar matrix in the constellation of Orion. It would appear beyond any doubt that again the uranograph has played a large part in the architecture of Egypt; the "Pattern in the Mount" has been built upon Earth to conform to the Spiritual Symbolism in the Sky and Heavens above. The "Heavenly Theology" has been duplicated on Earth according to the uranograph. The Duat, translated as Netherworld by most Egyptologists, actually appears to be the star birth Bardo field in the heart of Orion. There the newly immortal King must "Navigate the Duat" as a companion of Orion/Osiris. Significantly, the Osiris-king announces: "The sky is pregnant of wine (the dawn-light), Nuit has given birth to her daughter, the dawn-light, I raise myself indeed. . ." (Pyramid Texts, line 1082-3). The "fire" of God dwelling the body of the Pharaoh is symbolically depicted as returning to Heaven in the construction of the Great Pyramid and it utters this Divine Truth to all who will listen today as well.

If the Pyramid Texts are truly the operating manual for the monuments on Giza and their evolutionary resonance with the star fields of Orion, then they deserve much more study than they have received in the century or so since their discovery. Others, primarily Robert Bauval in The Orion Mystery, have drawn attention to these clues, but Egyptologists and archeologists have been slow to respond. No attempt has been made to examine other texts of comparable antiquity, such as the Builder Texts of Edfu and Dendera, for more clues.

But the reader should see that Osiris, mankind's example and symbolic representation, as the "Energy" from God, returned to the Heavens like a "star"; itself another Living Energy of God.

That being so the Ancient Spiritual Masters typified the divine element in mankind by fire and this so makes sense. In contrast the lower or human element was typified by water. From the Egyptians the Greeks got their ideas of the afterlife and their philosophies followed this same path. Egypt taught that when a righteous man dies he goes to Heaven; his Soul ascended to NUT to become a star and accompany RE (God) in his boat of 'millions of years'. Now you understand this. This is all an allegory for a deeper "spiritual principle"; the story is not "literally and historically" true; yet it is "spiritually true" because the Laws that operate in the visible Heavens and in Mother Nature teach this!

Answer for yourself: What does this mean: The ancients taught that the fiery Soul of man is housed in a tenement of flesh (earth/clay) and matter which is seven-eighths water by actual composition! In man God's fire, God's Energy as Consciousness, lives in water (a microscopic Nun...primordial waters of creation). Man is a small universe with his own Sun and its "own fire"; the Christos, the Deific Mind of God dwelling in this "dark" matter awaiting the epiphany when God's light again shines out from the darkness. This is being "born again" where the "Krst/Karest/Christ" awakens in us to lead our flesh to perfection; "be ye Holy for I am Holy". And it was the Sun and stars above that taught them this; that God's energies in the Cosmos operate according to a "Pattern" and this "Pattern" was visibly demonstrated to the Ancient Spiritual Masters by the many cycles, patterns, figures, and designs that operate in God's Heaven and in Mother Nature which teach the "same truth" over and over again; namely that out of "death comes life"; the "same life" since it was the "same Sun" that rose every morning and not a new one. Eternal Life is a Cosmic Law that applies to all forms of "fire" and "Consciousness". Again, like we saw above, these 4 basic elements, like "fire" and "life" are hidden within each other element in the whole of the Cosmos. Now let us focus on our religious theology more acutely when we look at the necessity that our "fire" , our "Soul", our "lives" cross the river-water in the Sky-Heavens.

We continue in the next article in this series.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #10

We ended the previous article discussing the relationship between the Soul, the Christ, and the "fire/Energy" of the Intelligent Creative and Sustaining Central Energy of the Universe whom we call God. We saw that this Deific Mind, this "fire of life", this Cosmic Consciousness descended into matter and brought with it the Mind of God as our Consciousness which is the home of "the Krst/Karest/Christ" within the "matter" we call humankind. Egypt called the "Krst" one of the many "neteru" which compose the wholeness of God. We mentioned that the ancients taught that the fiery Soul of man is housed in a tenement of flesh (earth/clay) and matter which is seven-eighths water by actual composition! In man God's fire, God's Energy as Consciousness, lives in a watery environment (a microscopic Nun of sorts...the primordial waters of creation). We discussed man as a small "cosmos" reflecting the larger "cosmos"; that man is a small universe in himself. We spoke of the "Pattern in the Mount" and how is was understood and reproduced upon the Earth both geographically, architecturally, and "theologically" by both Egypt and their offspring the later Jewish nation. I want the reader to understand that as science today explores this cosmos that we learn wonderful things which help paint more accurately our concept of God. Space does not allow for a full treatise at this point but know that our Sun has its own "Sun" which it circles as does our planets our Sun. Understand that our Solar System circles a larger system. And know as well that our Solar System experiences its own Equinoxes, Solstices, and Seasons as does our planet. What I am saying that once you understand the "Pattern in the Mount" and come to understand that we, a humankind on this planet is but a "copy" of the "larger" then the Mind of our Creator is shown to have no limit to its wonder and working. Egypt understood then and devoted their nation and their lives, generation after generation, to duplicating this "Pattern in the Mount" upon Earth. They understood that Egypt is the "Image of Heaven" and "man is the image of God".

Answer for yourself: We mentioned previously the Nun as the personification of the swampy water chaos and neutron soup from which uncreated "potential" slept awaiting "birth" and its own "creation" in order to bring forth worlds and eventually mankind. We also make allusion to the "watery" environment from which a fertilized ovum is given "life" on a "microcosmic" scale which again is according to the pattern of all life emanating from "water" in one form or the other. Even scientists today when examining satellite information from Mars and other planets look for "water" first. That being said then is it not surprising that these various "Christ stories" and "sungod stories of the nations", stores like Horus of Egypt for example, even our "Jesus Story", have the central characters all either "walk on water" or "cross a stormy sea"? What does this mean? Why do they all do this? What is behind the "theological teaching" connected with these personifications of the Divine Energy of God "crossing water" or being "immersed in water"? Is this "theological teaching" painted in the night Sky above our heads and we never knew it? Was this "theology" and necessity for mankind to be "immersed" into water a "second time" recognized by Ancient Egypt as mapped in the stars of Heaven? We sure do!

As my studies advance in astronomy paralleled with theology I would find that uranography seems to have no end when it comes to religion and theology. All religion comes from the interpretation, both visibly and spiritually, of the Sky and visible Heavens above. All Bibles and Sacred Books have at their core "uranography". God is speaking to mankind about himself, his true identity, his purpose, his path, and the goal for his spiritual existence from the Sky above.

Answer for yourself: Why is this "uranography" so important to understand and learn? Over the centuries nations lost this great spiritual knowledge written in the Sky and Heaven to various degrees; some nations retained more and others lost most if not all of it. Other nations, not possessing the "keys" to interpret the Sky, or not desiring to follow the "Pattern in the Mount" created their own and forced it upon mankind at the point of a sword. Today billions live in the darkness of man-made theologies which they are taught necessary to believe in order to "go to Heaven" when kindly said such is not true. But the ability to see and understand these "theological falsehoods" for what they really are, as presented Sunday after Sunday on unlimited media in America, does not come either easy or quickly. It has taken me almost 20 years of serious study to see the whole of this "theological nightmare" we inherit as Christians today. Today we live in a most wonderful time in which we can recover this precious understanding of God's true message to mankind and in so doing, when compared to our inherited Christian theology we can spot the "truth" and "deviations from it" and make necessary corrections in our religious belief systems and how we live our lives under the sight of our Creator. This assures that when we pass into the next existence our love for God need not be tainted by gross disobedience painted as "orthodoxy" by religions which long ago lost their truths. Now let us learn.

There is a river in Heaven. Eridanus, the river, wends its way from Orion the Hunter's foot, heading southwest to the southern circumpolar zone. It is on the banks of this same river that Orion stands, with his left foot touching the water. In theology "Orion in Heaven, symbolic for the Soul of mankind, is entering into and crossing the river Eridanus, also known as the Nile and the Jordan". This river in Heaven is a theological "key" to our interpretation of man's two births and two mothers as we shall see. This river in Heaven lies at the very core of the "born again" doctrine we have heard our whole lives and it is amazing to realize that this glorious teaching of being "born again" originated in Ancient Egypt as far back as 10,000 B.C.E. Really it began with God painted in the night Sky and Heavens and Egypt saw it and understood it and lived it for thousands and thousands of years. Think on that. No wonder Egypt is the "Image of Heaven" because from it and Ancient Egyptian Religion we today find the same religious dogmas in Judaism and even some of the same intact in Christianity. But sadly Christianity does maintain the integrity of this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom as it should have. Oh how I wish Rome had not "reinterpreted" and destroyed so much of this Divine Truth because they hated the Jews, the "black-skinned" offspring of Egypt in the first centuries. It is amazing that Ancient mankind was so perceptible to these "spiritual realities" when we are conditioned today to think that these ancient peoples were intellectually and spiritually inferior to us today. Amazing the opposite is really the truth. We need seriously to rethink this and we can the more we learn of the Ancient's great wisdom. It is in this baptism on earth we are "born again" likened into the image of the "Krst/Karest/Christ" and raised to new life and the Ancient Egyptians preserved this "spiritual birth" in the Osiris-Horus myths over 12,000 years ago. This "new birth" of mankind, his second birth and his second mother, is spiritually discerned below being kept intact by the Gnostic Paul:

Rom 6:3-6 3 Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? 4 Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. 5 For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection: 6 Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you know that this whole spiritual metamorphosis of mankind, alluded to by Paul in Rom. 6, is symbolized in the Sky and Heavens above us? Did you know that the "thought", the Deific Mind of God, the very "Word of God", put this "spiritual concept" for all mankind to see and understand in the Sky above where it has shown brilliantly for millions of years? We look at the night sky never realizing that we are looking at the only Bible that is "God breathed", "infallible" and "inerrant" that exits in the world today when the ones we inherited from Rome are crude "reinterpretations" and "deviations" not only from the Sacred Hebrew Scriptures of the Jews but from what the Creator actually spoke in the Heavens and Sky above. We have spoken of this "double birth" and "two mothers" at length in earlier articles as taken from the Sky and the uranograph and we again see it here demonstrated for all to see who have "eyes" and "ears" to hear. It is so glorious; no longer does man need to fall prey to forged religious documents which teach a false way to Heaven and "another Christ". The unbelievable irony of this is that the "Christ" preached by Christianity today is this "other Christ" we were warned by Paul not to accept. But lacking knowledge and personal study we never knew the "real Krst/Karest/Christ" which is so necessary to spot all later "counterfeits". Before us now we can see how we can, without doubt, please God and how we can be assured of our salvation in spite of the many "man-made" religions who deceive mankind out of selfish motives and the lust for power and authority over mankind. Doing these so necessary studies I finally had to resign my Pastorate when I finally could not justify the good I was trying to accomplish all the while being haunted and shamed that I knew beyond any doubt that I was an ordained Pastor of an apostate faith. Somebody had to share the truths that I was learning in my scholarly studies; God's people deserved to know the truth before they die and move on to meet our Creator "face to face". Thus Bet Emet Ministries was born and this knowledge I share with those who are hungry for the truth about God and the "Krst/Karest/Christ" within them.

This intended "second birth", being "born again", is likened to mankind's Soul being immersed in the river of Heaven. Orion, the ascended Soul of Osiris in the Sky, is mankind's example to educate him concerning God's Soul Science. This "Heavenly teaching", originally taught by Ancient Egypt, is paralleled today in both Judaism and to some extent in Christianity in what we call today "being born again". Judaism teaches the correct spiritual understanding of being "born again" while Christianity does not! Some 1,800 years ago Gentile Christianity stole the spiritual concept from Judaism, stripped from it mankind's new birth in order that he obey the Laws and Commandments of God, reinterpreted it and gave it a new and erroneous meaning and deceives the world with a "false Christ" to which "only belief" is necessary. No longer are the Laws of Noah and their obedience required of Christians let alone mankind according to this "reinterpretation". Christianity teaches that if you are "born again" you are a "new creature" but totally absent from their "born again" teaching is God's requirement that man live according the 66 Laws and Commandments in the Laws of Noah. Egypt saw and understood that this "Pattern in the Mounts" was based upon the Laws of God that created, sustains, and orders the Cosmos which is to be reflected both on the Earth and in mankind as well if we truly are to be "images" of God. We use the same "terms" in Christianity that Egypt and Judaism often use but our "reinterpreted" religious dogmas from Rome are completely devoid of Divine Truth that they once held by Ancient Egypt and Judaism who gave the world these spiritual concepts in the first place. This is such a shame and is responsible today to the sad conditions we find in America who cannot build prisons fast enough for their own Christian populations. The message of the Church is wrong. But billions never come to understand this unless they study. Unknown to most Christians is the fact that being "born again" was a "Jewish spiritual concept" long before emerging Christianity "stole the words" and reinterpreted the religious concept and in so doing destroyed the Spiritual Intent of this Soulish metamorphosis. A great two-article series that I did years ago will show the reader the "Historical Meaning of Being 'Born Again'" and its Jewish origin and in so doing reveal the necessity for the "non-Jew" to receive the "Soul which comes down from Heaven" which lies at the very heart of this spiritual event in the life of a "Godfearer". At the core of this is the requirement of the "non-Jew" to live according to the 66 Laws of the Jewish Torah (the Laws of Noah).

The "Pattern in the Mount" which pictures God's will and intent for our Souls and mankind's necessity for a "second birth" was painted in the Stars long before the "theology" came to Earth when discerned by the Ancient Spiritual Masters in Ancient Egypt some 10,000 years ago. The reader needs to understand that mankind's necessity of a "second birth", being born again, is that his awakened spirit-man, the Christ within, now can empower the flesh of mankind to submit and obey the Laws imaged in the "Pattern in the Mount". Man is birthed "anew", "born again" as Judaism so rightly teaches, in order that man live the Laws of God; Laws that operate first "above" in the Cosmos and Heavens, Laws that operate in "Mother Nature" and in the Earth. Man is to be "born again" to live in harmony with Heaven and Earth and is to do so by obeying the Laws of God, the Laws which Christianity so terribly teaches in their "reinterpretation" supposed ended with Christ:

Rom 10:4 4 For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. (KJV)

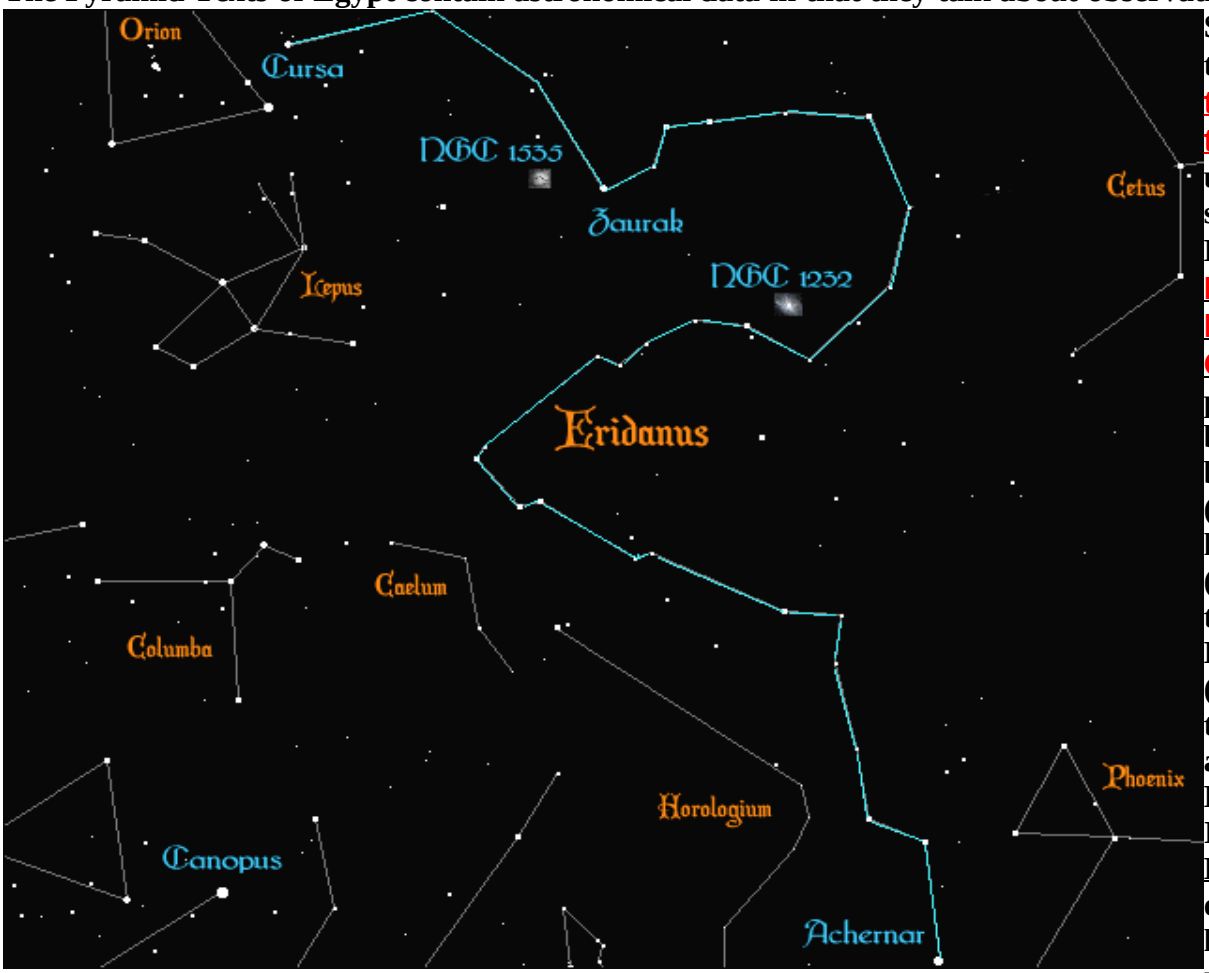
Rom 6:14 14 For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under

grace. (KJV)

The "Pattern in the Mount" teaches otherwise. Ancient Egypt taught otherwise. Judaism today teaches otherwise. Somebody is wrong and Christianity and its "antinomian" and "anti-Law" theology has missed the mark of truth in this regard and the fruit of such a hideous doctrine cries out to us day to day in our nation.

These Spiritually enlightened individuals of Ancient Egypt discerned in God's Heaven the story for mankind birth, life, death, and spiritual rebirth; a story that has only ONE theology and ONE religion for all mankind. This "faith" and "religious" belief was "once delivered" to the whole of mankind in the beginning of mankind and linked all mankind together in one brotherhood. Now we better understand the sayings from the early Jewish expression in our New Testaments which says:

Jude 1:3 3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for "THE" ("The", a definite article, meaning "ONE AND ONLY", not thousands) FAITH which was ONCE DELIVERED (IN THE SKY/HEAVENS) unto the saints. (KJV)



We have too many religions today and over 2,000 different denominations in Christianity today all of which are separated from one another because they preach another "Jesus-Osiris-Horus". Unity is lacking to say the least that is why churches split and split because man gropes in darkness of the interpretations of what he reads or desires it to say. The "original interpretation is today found and available to all who wish study in order to discern the "keys" to interpret correctly this Soul Science which is so tragically blurred in our Christian Bibles. It is like a 10,000 piece theological puzzle to which 400 parts are missing thus giving a false picture of what was intended by the "maker"; God. There is only one truth about mankind's Soul and it lies in the dark Skies overhead enlightening the way for the whole of mankind. And we never knew that the path for mankind Spiritual enlightenment and Spiritual development lays over our heads at night. The uranograph has laid silent since the persecutions started with the emergence of Orthodox Roman Christianity in the early 3rd century but by no means think that such persecutions of the Gnostic Christians started this late because actually it began with Ignatius, Justin Martyr, and Irenaeus in the late Second Century and only gained momentum from there in destroying this "One Faith" intended for the whole of mankind; this Science of the Soul. This "One Faith" and "One Way" for all mankind does not separate mankind and breed hatred and suspicion between mankind; nor is it the cause of wars and untold bloodshed seen in the likes of the Christian inquisition, crusades, progroms, etc. Don't get me wrong; Christianity is not the only world religion to be guilty of such atrocities committed in the name of religion but their persecution of Judaism, which just happens to teach this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom which they inherited by their biological parents in Ancient Egypt, is a crime of all crimes against mankind and is responsible for the Dark Ages and repression of mankind's development on this planet even today. Two thousand years down the road we, as children growing up in this Western Christian hemisphere, have not one clue about the truth behind our inherited "Jesus Story" or how to accurately interpret out Bibles; not one clue that the truth is not about some supposed man who was personified and "carnalized" and "literalized" some two thousand years ago by an emerging Gentile anti-Jewish establishment who did not want to live according to "ma'at" and the Laws of God as did Egypt and Egypt's children, the Jewish nation. This terrible Roman "reinterpretation" of Sacred Religious Knowledge of the Soul in the Egyptian religion has robbed mankind today of its righful heritage and plunged the world into the Dark Ages to which mankind has been deliberately trying to emerge in the last two hundred years. The hope for mankind is on the horizon as such knowledge is again seeing the light of day and at the same time exposing the Roman lies and their "way of salvation" which they forced upon the world at the point of a sword for over 1,800 years. Now we return back to some interesting facts about Spiritual Astronomy.

Let us investigate more deeply this "Soul Science" of Ancient Egypt which passed on down to Israel these sacred teachings. The Pyramid Texts were funerary inscriptions that were written on the walls of the early Ancient Egyptian pyramids at Sakkara. These date back to the fifth and sixth dynasties, approximately the years 2350-2175 B.C.E. However, because of extensive internal evidence, it is believed that they were composed much earlier, circa 3000 B.C.E. and the knowledge that they convey even much earlier by thousands of years which was guarded and kept safe as far back as 10,000 B.C.E. or even earlier. The Pyramid Texts are, therefore, essentially the oldest sacred texts known that we have found that teach this Soul Science. Samuel Mercer was the first to produce a complete English translation of this mysterious text, in 1952. This was also the first complete translation in any language. As you can see we have only been privileged to have the ability to know of these Ancient Spiritual truths no more than 50 years or so at this present time. These Pyramid Texts of Egypt form the basis of much of the later religious theology and literature of ancient Egypt which is later carried down through the corridors of time by Moses/Akhenaten and later Judaism. Rejecting Judaism emerging Gentile Christianity sadly, horribly, and purposefully misinterpreted, misquoted, and mistranslated these Jewish texts and Jewish theology, who in so doing, not only rejected their Jewish Roots but their Egyptian Roots where the Jewish religion ideas found their ultimate origin. Judaism is Egyptian religion all over again in more ways than not. All religions of the world come from Egypt one way or the other and today stand in various degrees of transmutation when compared with the original dogmas of Egypt. Due to the tireless efforts of archeologist and linguistics we have only been able to comprehend fully the Egyptian religion for the last 50 years. Had it not been for the Roman censorship and destruction of this Ancient Spiritual Knowledge by Rome in the the earliest centuries along with the burning of the world's libraries the world would not have been plunged under the darkness of Roman religious lies for these last 1,800 years and the tragic "religious reinterpretation" of "the Krst/Karest/Christ" that bears the fruit of blasphemy and idolatry before God.

The Pyramid Texts of Egypt contain astronomical data in that they talk about observations made of Orion, of Sirius and other stars in the region of the sky the Egyptians called the Duat. As we proceed understand that Orion is symbolic of the Soul in Heaven. In Ancient Egypt Orion was known as "The Soul of Osiris". Notice in the picture on the left the bottom star to the right bottom edge of Orion is (Orion is at the top left hand corner) is "Rigel" (Orion's foot) and it touches the the River in Heaven, the Eridanus (which flows North to the circumpolar region area). Sir Norman Lockyer, in a great book I have entitled The Dawn of Astronomy, demonstrated repeatedly how the Egyptians moved and reconstructed temples to align with certain stars. Schwaller described the "living sky," a celestial Neter (Divine Archetype) at Memphis and a metaphysical, supra-celestial Neter at Heliopolis. They did the same with their Pyramids and the "Soul Shafts" in the Great Pyramid. These books, and others like them, explain Egyptian cosmology and why the Egyptian believed that stars (small Energies of the Cosmos reflecting the larger Father Energy we call God, were symbolic and gave them characterizations as "goddesses" (the neteru) and the goddess Nut, the starry sky, was feminine (the Cosmic Womb from which all Emanated from the Primordial Water-Womb of God's thought or "Word"). Sun god variants were male and reborn at dawn, "birthed" from the womb of the sky goddess. Sun was seen to influence earthly life and the stars to be the realm of eternal life. Pyramids today stand as a reminder of the ancient Egyptian glorification of life after death, and in fact, the pyramids was built as monuments to house the tombs of the pharaohs. Death was seen as merely the beginning of a journey to the other world. In this society, each individual's eternal life was dependent on the continued existence of their king, a belief that made the pharaoh's tomb the concern of the entire kingdom. Believed to be aligned with the circumpolar stars, the king's spirit is then able to commute between heaven and earth in life after death. Symbolic in this statement is the "faith" of the Egyptians that when their righteous King/Pharaoh dies he goes "to Heaven". Earlier it was believed that the people, if they were also righteous, would be in the collective of their King/Pharaoh like the concept of being "in Osiris"; or as we say it today being "in Christ". Later it was believed that they found their standing before God alone and no longer needed to be grouped with "their Living King" in the Heavens. One more thing needs to be said about the Great Pyramid. The Great Pyramid's shafts are alignments with the "key theological stars" in the Egyptian Religion. The upper and lower north shafts pointed toward Alpha Draconis (the Pole Star), Ursa Major and Ursa Minor (circumpolar stars which are connected with Eternal Life) and the south shafts pointed toward Orion and Sirius, and the rising cycle of regeneration and eternal life (the home of the Soul in Heaven). The last "Soul Shaft " not mentioned above points to Thuban, Pole Star of Ancient Egypt. We have already seen that Magical incantations inscribed on the interior walls of some Egyptian pyramids pinpoint the destiny of the pharaohs once buried within them. These prayers are known as the Pyramid Texts, and they tell us that the final destination of a dead king's soul was the sky. In particular, the pharaoh flew to the circumpolar stars. Neither rising nor setting, these stars migrate around the north celestial pole without ever slipping into the underworld below the horizon. The marching orders of the circumpolar stars were issued by the Pole star Thuban, in Draco, the Dragon. All of these "Soul Shafts" then point to various aspects of mankind's Earthy and Heavenly Salvation; both "terrestrially" and "celestially". This is "theology" at its best saved from counterfeit, forgery, misapplication, purposeful mistranslation which no religious book in existence today since Ancient Egypt can claim.

Answer for yourself: What have we learned about these "circumpolar stars" like Ursa Major (big dipper, the big bear) and Ursa Minor (little dipper, the little bear)? These constellations and stars "never set" or descend below the horizon and constantly circle around the Norther Pole Star (today it is Polaris). Now let us look at a quote from a post to sci. archaeology by Franz Gnaedinger, Zurich: "Ursa Minor (and Ursa Major) can bestow 'Eternal Life'. According to Robert Bauval, Ursa Major and Minor resemble the adze used for the ritual opening of the mouth while according to a physician such a device was really used by the then physicians for life-saving reasons (opening the trachea when someone was bitten by a snake or stung by a scorpion). Hence we have several times the connection with aspects of giving life, and as Ursa Major and Minor never sink below the horizon, they could have meant not only life but "eternal life". Looking at the picture above the northern shaft of the so-called Queen's Chamber was aiming at the then culmination of Kochab, beta Ursae Minoris.

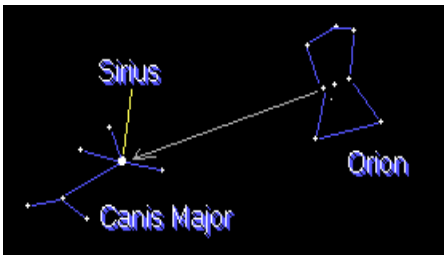
This may mean that a hypothetical statue at the upper end of the northern shaft would face the constellation of Eternal Life, while the statue behind Gantenbrink's door would face Sahu (Orion) and Sothis (/Sirius). The southern shaft of the so-called Queen's Chamber was aiming at the then culmination of Sothis/Sirius. Sirius was a very important star to the ancient Egyptians, who called it the Star of Isis or the Nile Star. About 5,000 years ago, the helical rising of Sirius occurred earlier, around June 25. It was up to the Egyptian priests, who attended to the calendar, to sight the first rising of Sirius. At the ancient temple of Isis-Hathor at Denderah, is a beautiful statue of Isis, located at the end of an aisle flanked by large columns. The statue was oriented to the rising of Sirius and priests would place a jewel in the goddess' forehead so that the light from the returning star would fall on the gem. When the Egyptian priests saw the light of Sirius upon the gem on the statue of Isis they would announce to the people that the New Year had begun.

When the Egyptians saw Sirius helically, rising just before the Sun, they knew it would soon be time for the flooding - inundation - of the Nile River, around which, all Egyptian life was woven. This flooding of the Nile which provided life to the desert lands that was their source of food for them and their families was their earthly "salvation" which only was an "archetype" for their Heavenly Salvation. And God was preparing them by the rising of Sirius before the dawning of the Sun every year that their "salvation draweth nigh". They depended upon the flooding of the Nile for the fertility of their lands and their very lives. And the Nile means life for Egypt. Hence the deified king would gain eternal life from Ursa Minor and pass it on to Egypt via the rising Nile, river of Osiris". In reality mankind's "salvation" was spoken from Heaven; both "terrestrially" with the rising of Sirius and "celestially" with the circumpolar constellations of Ursa Major, Ursa Minor, and Orion. God's promise to mankind was written in stone and has survived for thousands and thousands of years. But behind it all is the "theology in the Sky", the "Soul Science" which God spoke to mankind long before their creation and the echoes of this thunderous word go unnoticed today by all but a few. Instead we listen to perversions of this "Sacred Soul Science" which long ago lost it "light".

Now for something even more special. According to Lockyear, in 3285 B.C.E. Sirius had replaced Draconis as the star marker of the Summer Solstice and the beginning of the Egyptian New Year. The star was used as an orientation point especially at Thebes and became identified with Isis. The Temple of Isis-Hathor at Denderah constructed in 700 B.C.E. is oriented to this star through the northern opening of the central passage. On the temple wall is a zodiac square which shows the star.

The Dog Days of summer are the hottest and most sultry time of the year in the northern hemisphere. Almanac makers vary in the dating of this period, which lasts anywhere from four to six weeks ... between early July and early September.

Answer for yourself: Why do we call this the "dog days"? The term "dog days" get their name from the Dog Star, Sirius, the brightest star in the constellation Canis Major. At this time of the year Sirius disappears into the Sun's glow after dawn since it rises on the horizon just before the dawning Sun. Both heavenly bodies are in conjunction, rising and setting at around the same time our Sun will obscure Sirius after a short time. Sirius, the brightest star in our sky is twice the size of the Sun and shines some 23 time brighter than our Sun. Ancient stargazers thought that the heat from Sirius, the brightest star in the heavens, combined with the heat of the Sun produced the hottest weather of the year! Even though Sirius is hotter than our Sun it is much too far away to warm our planet.



The ancient Egyptians saw Sirius as a giver of life!

Answer for yourself: Why is this? Sirius always reappeared at dawn at the time of the annual flooding of the Nile. When the star sank in the west and disappeared from the night sky, it remained hidden for 70 days before emerging in the east in the morning once again. This time of the absence of Sirius was viewed as a time of death and rebirth. The Egyptians copied this period in their funeral ceremonies. When a king died, his body was mummified, then interred in a pyramid or other tomb. By custom, burial took place 70 days after death, when the king was "reborn" in the stars.

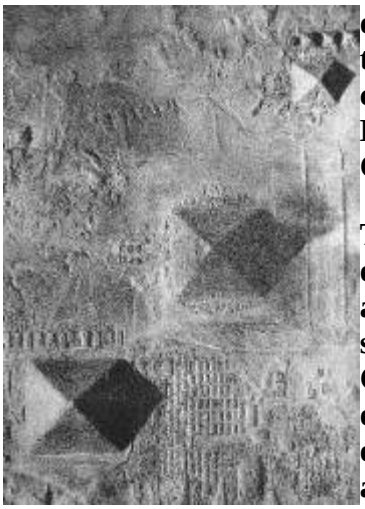
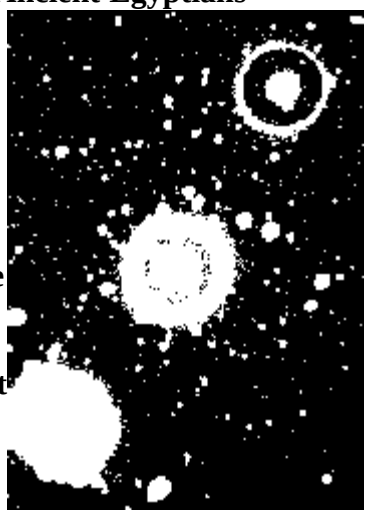
Sirius is known as our Spiritual Sun, esoterically the heart of our physical Sun. In fact Sirius is our Sun's "Sun" and our solar system circles around Sirius as does Earth around our Sun. The "Pattern in the Mount" is absolutely marvelous once you get a hang of it. In fact our Solar System experiences its "seasons" as it move around Sirius as does the Earth around Sirius. Atronomers today teach us that our Solar System is moving into its "Summer Solstice" and this explains the global warming and the disappearance of the Ice Caps as this has happened before on our planet and is detailed in ancient writings. Twice before Antarctica has been a lush green verdant continent and will be again. This explains the ice ages which have come and gone repeatedly on this planet as well. During the Dog Days when Sirius disappears into the Sun's glowing light, it was said by the Ancients that our physical Sun is embracing our Spiritual Sun! After such a celestial union a rebirth or resurrection can be expected. This is the period of time Sirius disappears from the sky - sequenced in the myth when Isis is hiding until the birth of her son, Horus. Sirius eventually reappears after Horus is born; in reality it is a resurrection Osiris as the Son. This is the foundation for all later "seen me seen the Father" verses in our New Testaments.

Answer for yourself: Is this the same star in the birth of Jesus? Yes. It is easy to see the 3 wise men and the star that led them when looking at Sirius and Orion.

One might could say that Sirius was astronomically the foundation of Egypt's) entire religious system. It was the embodiment of Isis, sister and consort of the god Osiris, who appeared in the sky as Orion.



The first time each year in which Sirius appears is called the heliacal rising of Sirius. In Egypt this would be in the month of Thoth. It would occur close to the Summer solstice and the time of the Nile's inundation. The helical rising marked the beginning of the New Year which was held to be controlled by Isis. Now what I say next is very, very, very important to grasp if you ever hope to come to thoroughly understand this "Pattern in the Mount" which was reproduced on Earth by Ancient Egypt. We must remember that the "Pattern in the Mount", true as it is, had to be adapted by Egypt on the Earth at times because of their unchanging desert environment since Egypt had undergone climatic changes over its many thousands of years existence. Once Egypt was not a desert as we see today. Archaeological evidence suggests that over 250,000 years ago roaming hunter-gatherers inhabited Egypt, which at the time was rolling grassland. During the Palaeolithic period, around 25,000 BC, climatic changes turned Egypt into a desert. Once having cyclical seasons now it does not; it is a stationary environment and the "theology" and "dates" for the "celestial cycles" had to be altered from their original cyclical and seasonal Equinoxes and Solstices like which we experience but the "Eternal Truth" behind the "theology" it teaches remains unchanged even though Egypt has no seasons to speak of.



So now our ability to understand the uranography and the "terrestrial" and "celestial" theology behind it becomes easier for us to see and understand. This knowledge should absolute astound you that the Ancients had this keen "Spiritual Sensitivity" to relate all of this "salvation of mankind" first "terrestrially" with the rising of the Nile and mankind's Earthly salvation and later "celestially" concerning man's Soul and his Eternal Life. Now we better understand how this ability of the circumpolar stars in the North of Heaven to never "die" or to "never descend below the horizon" was likened to "living forever" in Ancient Egyptian theology. Now we better understand the Heavenly Principle of "So Above, So Below" and the "Pattern in the Mount" spoken to man about the "Pattern for mankind" to be emulated in his life as well. This Heaven was the "home of the Soul" after the body's death according to Egyptian cosmology. In other words, the righteous dead "go to Heaven" in the North, the home of God. We believe the same today and it all comes from the uranograph; it all comes from the Stars.

Egypt taught that the Soul of the deceased righteous king and Pharaoh was supposed to ascend to the Heavens at its death (go to Heaven as we believe as well): "I have gone up upon the ladder with my foot on the Toe-Star" (PT 1763). Upon reflection, the fact that only one star of Orion was thought to receive the soul or spirit of the great god Osiris is only to be expected, since the ancient Egyptians believed that the stars of the sky represented the "bas" (individual souls), and the essence of a god could not very well be divided up between a number of stars. This ascent to the Heavens was seen as the interplay between between Isis and Osiris, between two stars; namely Sirius (the birth star of the "Jesus Story" and Rigel (the foot star of Orion which enter the river in Heaven, Eridanus). These are two of the brightest stars in the sky (J.A.R. Legon, 'The Orion Correlation and Air-Shaft Theories', Discussions in Egyptology Vol. 33 (1995), 45-56).

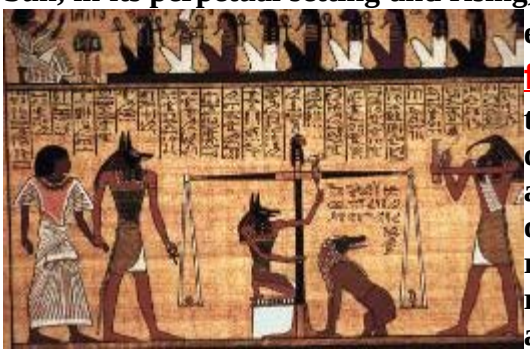
Answer for yourself: So what does this mean? The reader needs to understand that Egyptian World of the Dead was located in the Sky and Heaven, and that the placement of the pyramids represented the most important stars for them and do so because of "theological reasons" which live today in many of our Jewish and Christian dogmas. Again we see the impact of "So Above, So Below", or the uranograph upon the Pyramids, architecture, and "theology" in Egypt as the Ancient Egyptians conformed Earth and Egypt to be "the image of Heaven". Egypt actually built this "Pattern in the Mount" upon the Giza Plateau.

This is quite involved so I will give you a quick summary of one of the "key" celestial points duplicated on earth according to the uranograph. Follow if you will this sequence. At the left we give the reader an aerial view of the Giza Plateau as it stands today and notice the arrangement of the 3 Giza Pyramids and that one of the 3 is slightly out of alignment (the one at the top right). Now look to the right at the alignment of the 3 stars in Orion's belt on the right and notice this same slight misalignment in relation to the other two stars. Now below that on the left notice the superimposed prints of both photographs. There is a striking resemblance between the alignment of the 3 stars in Orion's Belt and the layout of the 3 Pyramids on the Giza Mount. Bauval and Gilbert, in their book The Orion Mystery, propose that the Pharaohs were creating a replica of the Heavens on Earth, at and around Giza. In particular, the three Pyramids at Giza - Khufu's, Khafre's and Menkaure's, are suggested as representing the three stars in Orion's Belt, with the Nile representing the Milky Way. This was intentional because of the uranograph which lies at the heart of all religious beliefs. The three stars in the middle of the Orion constellation are diagonally positioned but there is one star deviating, and when contrasted with the aerial view of the three pyramids on the Giza Mount we see the same identical positioning as we see "in Heaven" also with one Pyramid deviating from the diagonal as does the stars in Orion's belt. "So Above, So Below"; not only in geography (Nile separating Egypt, symbolic for the body, and the two natures of mankind) but in architecture as seen in the Giza Plateau. Behind it all is "theology" taken from God's Heaven. And the relative positions of stars and pyramids match each other perfectly. Now view the superimposed picture on the bottom left and see the adhering to the "Pattern in the Mount". Other star alignments are duplicated on the Giza Plateau besides these that correspond to this whole area of the sky; the area concerned with the Soul of mankind.



Answer for yourself: Is this coincidence or is this the implementation again of the "Pattern in the Mount" which we are learning about and to which we find Moses in the Old Testament instructed to reproduce on "Earth as it is in Heaven"?

The dead kings, and ordinary people later, became the god Osiris (as "in Osiris we believe "in Christ, or "the body of Christ") after their death. This god had a stellar representation, the constellation Sah which is, according to Bauval, identical to our modern Orion. Orion again is the Soul of Osiris in Heaven. Since each person had one star Soul, each dead king could become one star of Orion, thus the pyramids were placed in a way to represent the specific star the king became after his death.

Now we must speak of a new spiritual concept. The Duat is one of the ancient names for the afterworld, the dark realm of death in Egyptian mythology, situated "terrestrially" west of the Nile (connected with the setting Sun). In later times the Duat considered to be beneath the earth since it appeared that the Energy of the Cosmos, the Sun, sank into the earth at sunset. Thus our ideas of hades (hell) being in the core of the earth. The Sun, in its perpetual setting and rising, was seen to pass through this place on its return journey from west to east. This underworld is represented by the hieroglyph for a star (it figures); a star often symbolized the "Soul". It is here in the Duat that the souls are judged and the "heart weighed" and judgment determined for the dead before his ascension to Heaven or his annihilation. If you recall it was believed by the Egyptian that when we die our Soul ascends to God in the Heavens and as the Energy of God resumes its place in Heaven as a "star". Such a concept and the many religious concepts that are associated with stars became religious truths and were found represented in the Heavens and the Sky above; especially in the constellation Orion as the personified Soul of the resurrected righteous Osiris. Now we can better understand this spiritual concept "Patterned in the Mount" for the whole of mankind. It was here, pictured in the Sky, that Orion-Osiris has begun to enter the River in Heaven, the Eridanus; symbolic of "the two births" within mankind, one natural and one spiritual and that Orion-Osiris (Soul) crosses over the Jordan-Eridanus in Heaven as the body gives up the Soul at its death. It was the successful "second birth", the "awaking of the Krst/Karest/Christ" within us, this "born again experience" and our surrender to the Krst's (Christ's) "Lordship" that assures us of our Eternal Life and our ascension to Heaven as little "Energies" of God.

We need to take a second to let this all sink in and catch the reader up to speed about Osiris, Horus, and Jesus. Please pay close attention for what I share next is written in the Heavens and Stars above. But before we continue to tie in the "Jesus theology" we must break to let our minds and spirits absorb what has been given so far.

We continue in the next article in this series.

ARE YOU TRULY A "NEW CREATURE" IN CHRIST?

2 Cor 5:17

17 Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new. (KJV)

17 Therefore <5620> if any man <1536> [be] in <1722> Christ <5547>, [he is] a new <2537> creature <2937>: old things <744> are passed away <3928> (5627); behold <2400> (5628), all things <3956> are become <1096> (5754) new <2537>.

I grew up on Church being repeatedly told I was "a new creature" in Christ. That was somehow the goal to be achieved in my religious experience. Can you relate? But what does the term "new creature" really mean? Are you a "new creature" yet or will you ever be? What does it truly mean to be a "new creature" as Paul was saying? You may be surprised to learn what I did when I researched out the term for myself. Hold on for your life because I am sure you will be startled by the information you receive and the conclusions I hope to force you to see.

LET US EXAMINE THE GREEK WORD FOR "NEW" AS SEEN IN THE STRONG'S CONCORDANCE:

- a) as respects form: recently made, fresh, recent, unused, unworn
- b) as respects substance: of a new kind, unprecedented, novel, uncommon, unheard of

LETS DEE IT NOW FROM THAYER'S GREEK LEXICON:

2537 kainos-new

- a) as respects form: recently made, fresh, recent, unused, unworn
- b) as respects substance: of a new kind, unprecedented, novel, uncommon, unheard of

LET US NOW SEE THE GREEK WORD FOR "CREATURE" AS SEEN IN STRONG'S CONCORDANCE:

2937 ktisis (ktis'-is); From 2936; original formation (properly, the act; by implication, the thing, literally or figuratively): KJV-- building, creation, creature, ordinance.

ROOT WORD:

2936 ktizo (ktid'-zo); probably akin to 2932 (through the idea of proprietor-ship of the manufacturer); to fabricate, i.e. found (form originally): KJV-- create, Creator, make.

LET US NOW SEE THE GREEK WORD FOR "CREATURE" AS PRESENTED IN THAYER'S GREEK LEXICON:

2937 ktisis-

the act of founding, establishing, building, etc.

- a) the act of creating, creation
- b) creation, that is, a thing created; used of individual things, beings, a creature, a creation
 - 1) anything created
 - 2) after a rabbinical usage (by which a man converted from idolatry to Judaism was called)...."we are speaking of "Conversion to Judaism and the Torah in our own Christian Books NO LESS!...and this upon study is what was historically done until the rise of the Roman Empire and its persecution of Judaism.....this Christ is expressed through a Jewish Mind....NEVER FORGET IT!!!
 - 3) the sum or aggregate of things created
- c) an institution, an ordinance

ROOT WORD:

2936 ktizo-

- 1) to make habitable, to people, a place, region, island; to found a city, colony, state
- 2) to create
 - a) used of God creating the worlds
 - b) to form, shape, that is, to completely change or transform

NEW CREATURES: WHEN A MAN CONVERTS FROM IDOLATRY TO JUDAISM....HAVE YOU AS A FOLLOWER OF YESHUA ADOPTED HIS FAITH YET?

Surely I don't need to remind you that the Apostle Paul was sent to the non-Jews to take them God, Torah, and Israel. In so doing his purpose was to convert the heathen. Notice with me if you will that he was not converting the heathen from Passover to Easter, but the other way around. He was teaching the complete repentance from sin and obedience to the Torah along with observance of the Biblical Festivals, like Passover (Keep the feast he will tell the Corinthian believers).

So I challenge you to see if in your worship or in the doctrines of your church if they resemble Judaism and its doctrines. Most likely they do not. Then if we take the next line of reasoning we have real reason to doubt if we, who say we believe in God, are actually "new creatures" and it actually casts doubt on if we are truly "born-again" yet or not. The goal was the complete deliverance of mankind for false worship. If your church has rejected the Biblical Sabbath for Sunday, rejected the Biblical Festivals for its Roman holidays kept by the early Catholic Church when they rejected its mothers; faith, and rejected the untold numerous doctrines of Biblical Judaism for a syncretism with pagan doctrines, then you have real reason to wonder if you truly have followed the Apostle Paul and if you are in reality a new creature. This is serious stuff and something you should give great attention. Shalom.

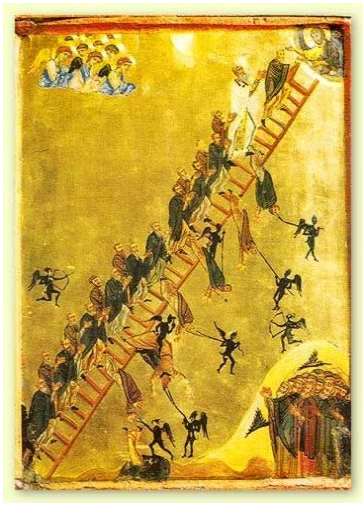
THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #11

In this last series of studies we have went rather into detail concerning the uranograph and Egyptian "Soul Science" modeled for us in the Sky, Heavens, Pyramids, and Pyramid Texts. In the previous article we looked at how the Egyptians reproduced the Deific Mind of God in Heaven in not only their geography, architecture, but their religious theology as well. We saw how they integrated the "Pattern in the Mount" into their Pyramid architecture; especially in relationship to the "Soul Shafts" in the Great Pyramid which were pointed to "key" theological stars in the Heavens. We made important correlations to how this spiritual knowledge impacts mankind and the evolution of his Soul while in these fleshy bodies of "death". We looked at the "celestial" dogmas of being "born again" as it related to the Constellation Orion and the River Eridanus in the Sky as it affects his "two natures"; one animal and one "spiritual".



Answer for yourself: What did we see was the "fruit of such a religious doctrines"? Simply said; one has the ability to inherit Eternal Life.

In earlier articles we looked at the various "Soul Shafts" in the Great Pyramid Khufu (Cheops) and drew correlations to the "religious meanings" attached to each "shaft" as they point to "key" stars and constellations in the Heaven; stars and constellations which speak of the main religious dogmas of the Ancient Egypt Religion regarding the "Afterlife" and the goal of inheriting "Eternal Life". As we have been seeing in previous articles on uranography we have seen that the Egyptian World of the Dead was located in the Sky (Heaven). We looked at the placement of the Pyramids at Giza and how their very own unique placement on the Giza Plateau represented the "Pattern in the Mount" reproduced upon the Earth. We looked at some of the most important "theological" stars in the Sky for the Egyptian Religion and how the "metaphysical understandings" behind them that gave the Egyptian's their beliefs concerning life after death. This "Soul Science" of Egypt will become the foundation for all later religions who believe in a "life after death" and "going to Heaven". This area of Heaven where one hopes to return after death was called by Egypt the "Duat".

Answer for yourself: What is the Duat? The Duat is the ancient Egyptian Underworld or Otherworld. Three different descriptions of the Underworld are provided by the three sacred texts: The Book of Caverns, The Book of Am Duat and The Book of Gates. The Duat sky region is the place through which the Pharaohs believed that their Souls would travel after death. It was the starting point of the Pharaoh's journey back to the Stars from whence he came. The Duat separates the land of the living from the land of the dead.

It is a region of the Sky, of Heaven, where there exists a "place" or a "portal" or, to use a common word a "stargate" through which the Pharaohs believed that their Souls would travel after death en-route to Heaven. In simple language Egypt believed that when the righteous die they, or their Soul-Consciousness, "goes (returns) to Heaven". This is the "Stairway to Heaven" of which we hear in many ancient nations.

This information comes to us today from the Pyramid texts. In Egypt, on the desert plateau of Saqqara 10 miles southeast of the Great Pyramid, five very similar pyramids have survived for some forty-two centuries. They are filled inside with over four thousand vertical columns of hieroglyphs, cut into their solid rock walls. These are the Pyramid Texts which appear quite suddenly in just two centuries between 2356 BC and 2152 BC. They are found mostly in the 5th Dynasty pyramid of King Unas and the 6th Dynasty pyramids of Teti, Pepi I, Merenr'a and Pepi II. These Pyramid Texts, mankind's oldest religious writings, were carved on the internal walls of one 5th Dynasty pyramid and four more from the 6th Dynasty. Frozen, like an ant in amber, these inscriptions record the definitive expression of an ancient star religion, whose beliefs included the translation of the dead king into a Star (transmuted into an Energized living state) in the Constellation of Orion. Even the Victorian Egyptologists with their Christian and solar bias agreed that the Pyramid Texts had greater antiquity than the 5th Dynasty. Gaston Maspero, their original discoverer and translator, thought that "the greater part were originally written during the pre-historic period of Egypt." That is, at least before about 3300 BC. Make no mistake about it, this Heaven, the home of the Soul, was thoroughly "astronomical" as the next text reveals:

"O King, you are this great star (Living Energy), the companion of Orion, who traverses the Sky with Orion, who navigates the Duat with Osiris; you ascend from the East of the Sky..." — Utterance 466, Pyramid Texts

G. Hancock wrote in the book Heaven's Mirror: "In fact the Duat had very specific celestial coordinates...the Duat had been conceived of by the ancient Egyptians as having been "localized in the eastern part of the Sky" ...the oldest texts... tell us: "Orion has been enveloped by the Duat while he who lives on the Horizon purifies himself...This is a true observation of nature, and it really appears as though the stars are swallowed up each morning by the increasing glow of the dawn."

Answer for yourself: Is it possible that Ancient Egypt understood that there is a "portal" in the Heavens into the "other world"; a "stairway to Heaven" and they knew where it resides? Did Egypt tell us where this "Stairway to Heaven" is? Yes they did.

Just west of where the Nile begins to widen out into the fan-shaped delta, a rough limestone steep slope rises a few hundred feet and then flattens off into a wind swept plateau. Ancient Egypt built a complex pattern of structures on the edge of the plateau, structures which have fascinated humanity throughout its history and continue to do today as well. It is here we find these Pyramid Texts on the Giza Plateau.

Answer for yourself: And where is this? I speak of the Plateau at Giza which holds the "clues" to Heaven.

As you are learning in these articles many of the great monuments of early civilizations were astronomically aligned and were done so for a reason. Behind this "unique alignment" is the "Soul Science" of Egypt; a "spiritual truth" that other nations also shared. For our purposes I want to use Egypt as the "paradigm" mainly because of its antiquity. The accurate cardinal orientation of the Great Pyramids at Giza in Egypt is an outstanding examples. Giza seems to have been designed with very strict geometrical rules laid down from the start. If we want to understand the monuments of ancient Egypt, we have to think in terms of "Heaven and Earth". "As above, so below", as the ancient hermetic texts put it, is the clue to cracking this ancient Soul

Science. The ancient Egyptians called the region of the Heavens, of which the constellation of Orion is a part, and which appears to be the pattern for the ground at Giza - the Duat. The Giza Pyramids serve one ultimate purpose, to indicate the Gateway to the Otherworld (Duat). Don't get confused because often this "Otherworld" is called the "Netherworld" or "Underworld". In reality it is "under nothing"; rather it is in the Sky above. The ancient Egyptians fascination with the night Sky is well known. Believing that the Gods lived in the Duat, that the "neteru", or "the Powers and Forces of the Cosmos that make up God, exist in the "afterworld in the Sky", the Pharaohs who were responsible for the construction of the Pyramid at Giza, would have associated the stars with eternity and afterlife. The Ancient Egyptians called the region of the Heavens of which Orion is a part, and which appears to be "the pattern" for the ground at Giza, the Duat. It was a very important place for them, and they believed that the Soul was taken to the Duat after death. But this Duat was seen not only as a region of the Sky but also as a parallel universe where the Soul had to undergo tests and judgment which we will mention later.

As mentioned earlier the Pyramids at Giza were a "mirror image", the Earthly representation of the Belt of Orion, the destination of the dead King's Soul; the Duat! The Egyptians were dualists -- everything they thought and believed was a duality. Don't misunderstand this; for the Ancient Egyptians God was a "Unity of One"; however this Godhead, the family of the "neteru", was manifested as a "duality"; a series of oppositions and balances. Everything had its counterpart, cause and effect, left and right, East and West, death and rebirth -- nothing was ever seen in isolation. We see this clearly in the "Tree of Life" or the Kabbalah; the opposition of the strand of "powers" that comprise the Sefirot. In reality the Kabbalah is but a restating of Ancient Spiritual Wisdom that find its earlier origin in Ancient Egypt. Thus in this Kabbalah or this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom there was an "Earth" and "Heaven" which were also "linked". They being so the Ancient Spiritual Egyptians constructed "Heaven on Earth" at Giza.

The ancient Egyptian civilization had constructed at Giza an exact replica of the Duat sky region according to the Uranograph. The Duat stars have provided the model for the complex of Giza pyramids, of this mysterious ancient temple. The Giza Pyramids serve one ultimate purpose, to indicate the Gateway to the Underworld, Otherworld, (Duat) by pure geometry. This explains the purpose of all ten pyramids of the Giza plateau: Four pyramids are built as model of four stars of the Duat sky region. Three small pyramids near the Pyramid of Cheops, and three small pyramids near the Pyramid of Menkaure determine lines of the horizontal coordinate system (altitude and azimuth).

"Do you not know, Asclepius, that Egypt is an image of heaven? Or so to speak more exactly, in Egypt all the operations of the powers which rule and work in heaven have been transferred down to earth below?" (from Thoth/'Hermetic Texts')

The Ancient Egyptians had constructed at Giza an exact replica of the Duat destination of the King (Heaven). Far from being a tomb, the Pyramid was the starting point of the King's journey back to the stars from whence he came, back to the First Time. Now you better understand what these "Soul Shafts" were actually saying in the previous article; they were depictions of the "afterlife" beliefs of the Ancient Egyptians with one "shaft" pointing to this "corridor to Heaven and the Duat; the home of the Soul".

We have made mention earlier that the dead kings, and ordinary people later, became unified and as if "one" with the god Osiris after their death and, like Osiris, were believed to have "ascended to Heaven" and were believed to inhabit the Heavens as pictured in the constellation Orion. We saw earlier that the Ancient Egyptians believed that their righteous king, Osiris, upon his death, his Soul "ascended to the Heavens". Likewise, their kings and Pharaohs, upon their deaths, become "Osiris upon death" and in effect "ascend" to Orion (the celestial Osiris). Many of the Pyramids have names that suggest they were intended to be places of ascension and transformation of the Soul. Khufu called his Great Pyramid "Akhet", meaning the "place of becoming a spirit".

"The concept of the king's journey (his Soul) from death to new life enshrined in Unas' Pyramid Texts parallels that of the Sun: dying in the west, uniting with Osiris in the Duat, and rising again in the East. The cosmology of this solar passage is that of night (west to east) rather than day (east to west). It is reflected not only in the texts and their layout but also in the substructure of the Pyramid itself.

Correspondingly, the southern "star Soul shaft" emanating from the same King's Chamber, in the Great Pyramid, was designed to align with Orion during the Pyramid Age - thus nicely confirming that the King's Chamber does represent the "tomb of Osiris"!

Answer for yourself: What are the coordinates connected with Orion in the Sky? Can we find them? What has it to do with the Age of Orion and the intersection of the ecliptic and the celestial equator which makes a "Cross" in the Heavens? All of this will come directly. Is this where we get our religious concepts connected with a "Cross" and "death and rebirth"? Is this all "astronomical", "celestial", before it was "terrestrial"? Yes it was and the Uranograph proves it to be.

Answer for yourself: Was Egyptian Religion, this "Soul Science", light years ahead in its knowledge of Science, Astronomy, Physics, etc.? Yes it was.

Here is where the Egyptian religious concept of the "neteru" are so important because it explains the whole of the Cosmos as levels of "Energy"; Energies which find their ultimate origin and return to the Sole Uncreated Intelligent Energy of the Cosmos we call God. Belief in the existence of a "Living Energy (Spirit)" is primeval and remains widespread. This "Living Energy" is the source of life that is often associated with Soul, Spirit, and Cosmic Mind-Conscious Energy. This "Living Energy" is the basic building blocks of the Mineral, Plant, Animal, and Human Kingdom; the basic building block being the "electron" whose various combinations are responsible for all manifestations of "matter"; be it mineral, plant, animal or Human. That means also things like Stars, Suns, Constellations, nebulas and all Heavenly manifestations (both visible and invisible) are made of these basic building blocks of "electrons" (all electrons are the same) only in different configurations that make for different visible manifestations of matter.

Knowing today that the whole of the Cosmos, even all matter, are but manifestations of "Energy" then it makes sense that Suns, Stars, Planets, Nebulas, Constellations, and all matter, like mankind, are but manifestations of this "Same Living Conscious Energy". Albert Einstein suggested early in this century that energy and matter are related to each other at the atomic level. Einstein theorized that it should be possible to convert matter into energy (think death and resurrection and continuation of Consciousness Energy and you got it). Einstein also suggested that it should be possible to transform or transmute energy into matter (think incarnation and manifested human life which is but a form of the manifested Energy of the Cosmos). Energy and matter are also associated to each other at much larger scales of nature. Solar radiation provides the energy to create the matter that makes up organisms. This of course includes mankind. We as mankind are but "small Suns"; a part of the whole of this Intelligent Cosmic Energy whom we call God. Mankind, one of many manifestations of these "organisms" then use some of this matter to power our metabolism. In other words we are, as mentioned before "a microcosm" of this Cosmos and Egypt understood this. Egypt understood that when we die our Consciousness, our Living Energy, our Soul, our "Core Energy" returns to our Father's Energy-Bank in Heaven; the God Who sustains all things. This is why Egyptian Cosmology is so important; it seems to have the answers to the "unanswerable" questions which have plagued mankind since its beginning. Science today is proving the Religion of Egypt to contain the answers sought in its laboratories as mankind reaches out to God by obtaining the secrets of the Cosmos in which he lives. My studies have shown me that Egypt knew atomic theory which we have re-discovered only in these last 100 years. At the very core of Egyptian Religion was the knowledge that all "matter" is the material that makes up all things in the Universe (both visible and invisible) and the very basis of all matter is this Living-Conscious "Energy".

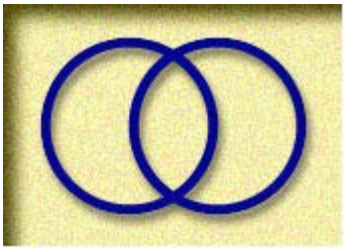
At, more germane to our present study, the very core of this "Egyptian Religion" is the Uranograph which represents on Earth the "Pattern in the Mount", this "Pattern of Cosmic Energies", which we see so clearly on the Giza Plateau represented to us as well as in other places in Egypt. In 1989 an article in the Oxford journal, Discussions in Egyptology, the engineer Robert Bauval argued that not only did the Pyramids at Giza exhibit a grand unified "pattern", but that pattern mirrored the stars in the constellation of Orion. In ancient Egypt, Orion is the "Place of Osiris," suggesting a deep connection between the constellation and the myth of death and rebirth. Bauval would go on to coauthor the best-sellers The Orion Mystery and The Message of the Sphinx and further investigation has shown that the entire Pyramid field, from Dashur to Abu Roash, mirrors the stars in the Sky above it. This is Uranography at its best.

Now please forgive the technical material that comes next but you must understand it.

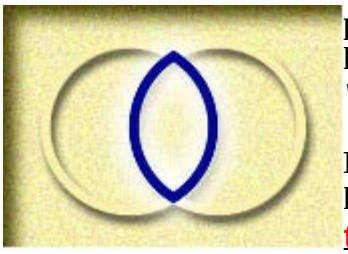
The plan of the Giza Pyramids, the picture of the Duat, the home of the Soul, also exhibits an amazing degree of geometrical and mathematical coherence. For example, the three Pyramids fit inside a rectangle formed from a "vesicia piscis", from which the generative roots (the square root of 2, 3 and 5) are derived. Hidden in this "vesicia piscis", this geometical sacred shape, is the idea of "rebirth"; hidden in the Giza Plateau in sacred geometry is the idea of the "rebirth of the dead" and the "ascension of the Soul" to Heaven. Let me show you.

The vesicia piscis also determines the angle of each face and the height of the floor of the King's chamber. R.J. Cook demonstrated that a geometrical axial system linked the smaller Pyramids with the center Pyramid. He found that this system of linkages was based on the use of 60 degree and 26.5 degree angles. Sixty degrees is the angle of an isosceles triangle; 26.5 degrees is the angle of the diagonal of a double square.



Answer for yourself: Do we find this "Vesicia piscis" in the Sky and Heavens? Yes we do. The crossing of the Galatic equator and the Ecliptic for a well known figure called a "Fish's Bladder". This geometrical construction was used in antiquity and called "vesicia piscis" and this is formed by the intersection of two circles or spheres whose centers exactly touch. This shape is incorporated in the Earthly construction of the Duat on the Giza Plateau.

The floor of the King's Chamber in the Great Pyramid is a double square and the ascending and descending passages are set at 26.5 degrees; this can hardly be accidental. It is again a part of the "Pattern in the Mount" which was reproduced on the Earth; Heaven coming to Earth (Uranography). The entire complex seems arranged to create a pointer indicating the helical rising of Orion/Osiris (just before the dawning Sun). Even more fascinating, a line drawn at 26.5 degrees north of east, the indicator point for the pre-dawn rise of Orion, runs from the second Pyramid at Giza to Bethlehem in Palestine. Given the similarity between the dying god Osiris and the resurrected Christ, this alignment suggests an ancient stellar connection between Egypt and Israel much too significant to be coincidental.



This "visicia piscis", or ichthys is a symbol made from two circles of the same radius, intersecting in such a way that the center of each circle lies on the circumference of the other. It has been the subject of mystical speculation at several periods of history, perhaps first among the Pythagoreans, who considered it a holy figure. The mathematical ratio of its width (measured to the endpoints of the "body", not including the "tail") to its height was reportedly believed by them to be 265:153. This ratio, equal to 1.73203, was thought of as a holy number, called the measure of the fish. The geometric ratio of these dimensions is actually the square root of 3, or 1.73205... (since if you draw straight lines connecting the centers of the two circles with each other, and with the two points where the circles intersect, then you get two equilateral triangles joined along an edge, as shown in light red in the diagram). The fraction 265:153 is a ratio of whole numbers under 1000 which approximates the square root of 3 (though 362:209 and 989:571 are actually closer approximations). The number 153 appears in the Gospel of John as the exact number of fish Jesus caused to be caught in a miraculous catch of fish, which is thought by some to be a coded reference to Pythagorean beliefs.

Answer for yourself: What does this "vesicai piscis" mean? Does it have anything to do with "birth", possibly representative of the birth of the Soul into matter and its return to Heaven?

The term "vesicai piscis" is first recorded in literature in 1809, but is no doubt much older. It translates from Latin literally as "fish bladder," but more likely refers to any bladder that takes the form of a fish when filled (aside from the anatomical definition, a bladder can be anything that functions similarly: a sewn skin that holds wine, for example, or the air sack of bagpipes.) The Vesicai Piscis symbol appears frequently in medieval art and architecture, and the symbol's roots go back further still. The Vesicai Piscis is made by linking two circles together, bringing the outside edge of each to the midway point of the other. The almond-shaped center of the image is called a mandorla (Latin for almond; "vesica" or "vesica piscis" is sometimes also used to describe only this almond-shaped center.) When the Vesica Piscis is displayed vertically, the mandorla forms the shape of a fish. The word "fish" translates into Greek as "ichthys", which is an acronym for "Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior." Early Christians adopted the fish symbol as their own, and used it as sort of secret code to identify themselves to one another and avoid persecution. As previously stated, the mandorla has been much used in art and architecture: as a frame for Jesus and the saints, or as the passage between heaven and earth through which Jesus ascends. When we realize that the "Jesus Story" is the "personification of the Soul" then this Vesica Piscis, especially the "mandorla" is the "passage between Heaven and Earth" through which the "Soul ascends". This is critical for your understanding. Far from a secret anymore, the ichthys has become the preeminent icon of bumper evangelism, and spawned a whole slew of angry responses: little fish with feet that say "Darwin," an ichthys with shark fins, ones that say "kosher," etc.

But it has a metaphysical meaning as well. When the Vesica Piscis is viewed horizontally, however, as on the left, the mandorla becomes a different sort of passage: the birth passage. The almond-shaped central area was known by the ancients as a representation of the female genitals, and the use of a similar (horizontally-oriented) fish symbol called the Ichthys by early Christians. The pointed oval is a universal symbol of the Divine Feminine, and in this context the Vesica Piscis is the vulva of the Goddess, surrounded by the crescents of the waxing and waning moon. The mandorla as birth passage can easily be seen on the sheila-na-gig figures found on Irish churches, and in the squatting figures of the Hindu goddess Kali.

Answer for yourself: What are "sheila-na-gig" figures? They are carved representation of a naked woman squatting with her knees apart, displaying her vulva, shown as a vesica piscis or double-pointed oval. The Sheila-na-gig is a figure from medieval stone carvings of the British Isles (mostly Ireland), of a grinning woman holding open her vulva. Sometimes the figure presented the vesica with both hands or drew it open with one. The vulva as holy symbol of birth and life is a very ancient idea that symbolizes the life-giving and regenerative powers of the Earth Mother (neteru). The image of the vulva has a long history of being carved in stone, and is found all over Europe from the Paleolithic and Neolithic Ages. Passage graves were built in the shape of the Goddess, with the passage the vagina, and the tomb chamber itself representing her uterus. "Tomb" and "womb" were equated, thus ensuring regeneration and continuity after death, in the same way that a "dead" seed is planted in the fertile earth and sprouts up to grow into a complete plant. Despite the fact that to modern eyes her pose is "obscene" the Sheila-na-gig is most predominantly found carved in the decoration of churches. Sheila-na-gig figures appeared all over old Irish churches before the 16th century. Many were still in place during the 19th century, but Victorian prudery defaced or destroyed large numbers of them. Some have been found buried near the churches they once embellished.

A medieval hymn calls Jesus "the little fish in the Virgin's fountain." The Christ child is often shown inside a mandorla, superimposed over Mary's womb. Mary herself can be equated with the goddess Aphrodite Marina, who brought forth all the fish in the oceans; Marina's blue robe and pearl necklace, like the Christian Mary's, are classic symbols of the sea. On Cyprus, Mary to this day is worshipped as "Panaghia Aphroditessa." The connections are many: the Vesica Piscis illumines the common heritage of Christianity and the Goddess traditions it absorbed, traditions it would later vilify and all but destroy. The key thing to remember is that this is the "passage way to birth" and is connected with the Giza Plateau.

But more than this is carries the idea of "birth". According to Fontana (1994), the Mandorla, the very center of these intersecting circles, symbolizes power as well as spirituality, and is often appeared around the body of Christ to represent the Ascension to Heaven (Fontana, 1994). It is this same Divine concept that is used in the Pharaoh's or King's chamber in the Great Pyramid and is connected with the Soul's ascension to Heaven as we find in the "Jesus Story".

Answer for yourself: What is this "passage way" connected to the Giza Plateau? What should this mean to us? Was the Giza Plateau built to teach about the ascension of the Soul back to Heaven at death?

Answer for yourself: Did you ponder the above questions? Is there really an "Energy portal" connected to this planet Earth to the Stars above, a "Stairway to Heaven", a pathway for our Soul's "descent" and "ascent" on a mystical and metaphysical level, a "stargate" to Heaven and God and did Egypt know about it and even located it? It is located in or connected to the Constellation Orion? Is there a star that was located in the cross point of three lines in Heaven, where the Celestial Equator of the Earth, the Ecliptic, and the Galactic equator all intersected in the ancient past and did Egypt come to understand that this " Star", close to Orion, was this "Soul portal"? Was this some type of "Ladder to Heaven" for the transference of the Soul, the Living Energy, back to the Father God of the Cosmos?

Answer for yourself: Do you remember the "Bread that comes down from Heaven", a metaphor, which Horus multiplied like we also find in the "Jesus Story"? Mankind needs "Spiritual Food" for its "two births"; born in the House of Virgo and the House of Pisces. Remember that the Early Church Fathers admitted that Jesus Christ was born both at the Vernal Equinox and the Winter Solstice; again signifying the two required births of mankind. Is there a portal in the invisible realm whereby the Divine Energies of the Cosmos intersects the Physical? Let us continue.

A number of Giza researchers, including Max Toth, Rocky McCollum and William Buehler, have noticed that the arrangement of the three major Pyramids produces a short section of a Golden Mean Spiral.

Answer for yourself: What is this "Golden Mean Spiral" and its relationship to the Giza Plateau?

The Golden Spiral is a mystical shape that is an absolute in both abstract mathematics and chaotic nature. The "SPIR-al" is the movement of Creation. The Spiral, especially the Golden Spiral, is the most profound motion in the Cosmos. At the same time, it is the most profound design in the Universe. It is built into all life-forms, from seashells to man; including the nappy hair of the African. Our blood "spirals" in our veins. Plants spiral up from the soil. Our fingertips are "spirals". Galaxies are shaped as "spirals". Flowers, nature, and even our inner cochlear in our ear is a spiral. God, the Supreme Power, spins spirals; it is "SPIR-IT-AL". This Supreme Conscious Living Energy move or "spirals" in the Universe. Our entire Universe ever dances in spiral and rotations; everything in the Cosmos reflects this "Pattern in the Mount"; every reflects this "SPIRaling, SPIRitual" essence out of which it is made. The orbit of electrons around the Atom, which are the basic building blocks of all matter, is in the shape of a spiral. The plants are round as are the Suns and stars. Everything is ALIVE with SPIRIT-Energy, everything is ALIVE with God, the Cosmic Intelligent Energy, the vital force or Energy as the animating life-force within all living beings including mankind. And all these Energies, no matter what manifestation, be it inorganic or organic, visible on invisible are related and interconnected with the main Cosmic Energy "battery" we call God. In many languages, the word for Spirit, Breath, and Air are identical. The Latin has for this the word "spiritus". For breath and life are One (Susar, Blacked Out Through Whitewash, p. 7-8).

In Sacred Geometry the spiral is derived via the golden rectangle, a unique rectangle which has the golden ratio. When squared, it leaves a smaller rectangle behind, which has the same golden ratio as the previous rectangle. The squaring can continue indefinitely with the same result. No other rectangle has this trait. When you connect a curve through the corners of these concentric rectangles, you have formed the golden spiral. The Phythagoreans, who were tutored again by Ancient Egypt, loved this shape for they found it everywhere in nature: the Nautilus Shell, Ram's horns, milk in coffee, the face of a Sunflower, your fingerprints, our DNA, and the shape of the Milky Way.

Answer for yourself: Is our DNA a microcosm of the Cosmic Macrocosm we call God? Is our DNA the Tree of Life? Could the Ancient Egypt have know that our human bodies, even our DNA, and the Cosmos, for example our Milky Way, are all "interrelated" and are but different manifestations of the "Same Conscious Living Energy" we call God? Yes, they did. The Golden Spiral is routinely manifested in nature in the spiraling bracts of a pinecone, the development of a nautilus (the sea creature as well as the exercise equipment), the path a fly follows as it approaches an object, or most anything! In man's attempt to replicate this beauty of nature, we see the Golden Spiral in the fact that the Sphinx and Pyramids of Giza (The Great Pyramids) all lie on a Golden Spiral. This is not an accident but planned construction according to the "Pattern in the Mount". Again we see the Uranograph at work again; Heaven coming down to Earth in Egyptian "Spiritual Architecture".

Answer for yourself: So what is the implication for the Duat, the home of our Souls and this "vesica piscis" and "Golden Mean Spiral" that is found upon the Giza Plateau?

A number of Giza researchers, including Max Toth, Rocky McCollum and William Buehler, have noticed that the arrangement of the three major Pyramids produces a short section of a Golden Mean spiral. The 1947 survey map of the Giza Plateau notes the existence, near the center of the spiral, of an unidentified ruin of which nothing seems to have survived to the present. Without more research, including on-site inspection, the ground level Golden Mean spiral seems to be a dead end. But we are not done.

Author and esoteric philosopher Jay Wiedner, wondered what would happen if this Golden Mean spiral on the Giza Plateau was extended into the Sky. He reasoned that if the Pyramids are a model of the stars in Orion's belt, then they should also describe a small section of the Golden Mean spiral. He found that if one was to continue the line in the Sky, following the yellow brick road of the Golden Mean, we arrive at the heart of the figure of Orion/Osiris.

Visually, this stellar region of Orion (Osiris in the Heavens) appears to be an empty region of space, but radio and x-ray astronomy reveal a seething area of collapsing stellar material below and to the left of the shoulder star, Bellatrix (in the constellation Orion, the Duat, the Celestial Home for the Soul). Stars, energies, are being born in the heart of Orion. Indeed, the general area of Orion has more stellar formation occurring than anywhere else in our local galactic neighborhood. It would then appear that the complex geometry of Giza, the Sakhbu or "Soul star place". This "Sakhbu" or "Soul Star place" was used by the ancient Egyptians to describe the entire plateau at Giza. The "soul star place," which contains the enclosure of Tehuti and its secret chambers, is the Duat on earth through which the King travels as he makes his journey toward re-birth in Re's Boat of a Million Years. The Giza Plateau was apparently designed to embed and encode certain "truths" about the star fields of Orion. Giza's monuments function as a cosmic clock, ticking off the ages through cyclical stellar alignments while establishing galactic scale resonance with the regions of energetic star birth far off in Orion. This resonating clock reminds of us who we are and where we came from on a galactic scale. It reminds us of our Divine Origins and Souls descended from Heaven into matter; into these fleshy bodies "of death". It holds our cosmic memory, that echo of self-awareness that allows us to overcome idiotic speculation that we originated from less than Divine Origins.

Simply put, the Golden Mean Spiral is a doorway that weaves the ethereal and material dimensions together. In general, because the Golden Mean Spiral has no beginning and no end, it then becomes a fairly good metaphor for Spirit-Energy in a material reality. One of the characteristics of the Golden Mean Spiral is that it continues on in ever diminishing spirals. The spiral soon becomes so infinitesimal that, theoretically, it could break the plane of one dimension and enter another dimension. Once it does this it could begin again and be born-anew inside another dimension as a comparatively large spiral, working its way down to becoming smaller yet again until it would break that dimensional plane and move into another dimension and onward into infinity. Even though this is a linear model, it will be sufficient to demonstrate the basic idea. If we view the universe in its natural, nonlinear state that encompasses all dimensions and frequencies, then when we break the plane of the 3D we enter back into the space of all frequencies or Eternal Transcendence. Many describe this as the potential whereby we experience a jump in Consciousness to become like God.

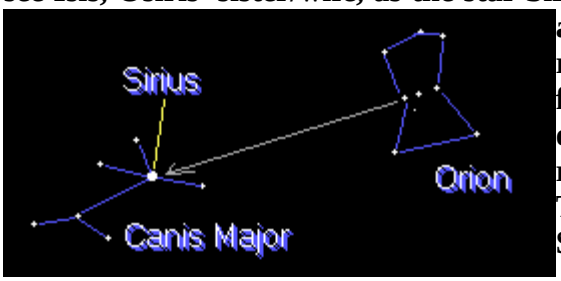
In the nonphysical dimensions all things are in eternal transcendence and occupy all frequencies – light speed and beyond. When the Golden Mean enters the third dimension from this higher state of frequencies, it enters a dimension bounded by time. When the spiral (inside the 3D) spirals infinitely smaller to break the plane of the 3D it then enters back into the dimension of higher frequencies and eternal transcendence. On the other side of this 3rd dimension are the higher frequencies and beyond. The golden mean then, can be used as a symbol or an analogy for Spirit in the material, and it also can be used as an analogy for the thread that ties the material and ethereal dimensions together.

In reference to the Giza Plateau and mathematical terms, the Golden Mean is a ratio of the irrational number .618.... : 1 or 1 : 1.618..... This means that if you constructed a rectangle (or a wall) to Golden Mean proportions, its sides would be in a ratio of 1 (foot, yard, inch whatever) to 1.618... times that. Now 1.618033988875.... is an irrational number which goes on forever and ever and ever (carrying with it the idea of "Eternality").

Answer for yourself: So what happens when you build a wall using this endless Golden Mean ratio of proportion? Well the wall is (supposedly) a finite structure. However, when it is built using this proportion, a dynamic is created, and the dynamic is this: The wall, as the physical representation of the Golden Mean ratio, is a continuum that approaches the Infinite, but never reaches it: It approaches perfect balance, the Ideal, but can never capture it. The dynamic essence of any structure using this proportion, is endless motion towards perfection. Throughout history, from ancient Egypt to Einstein, buildings incorporating the Golden Mean have been considered to be the closest we can get in form to the Ideal. This is why the Golden Mean has also been called the "divine" proportion, the Godlike proportion, the divine section etc. So we see in the Giza Plateau concepts of "Soul Birth", Star birth, Energy re-birth, endless motion or life, different dimensions, Eternal Transcendence, and approaching "perfection" as the Consciousness of God.

Professor R. T. Rundle Clark, who had a great respect for the Pyramid Texts, notes that "the rising of Orion in the southern Sky after the time of its invisibility is the sign. . . Osiris has been transformed into a 'living Soul.' " Let us not forget the ability to mark this moment in the past history of Egypt is one of the major design factors involved in the overall plan of the monuments on Giza. This line, indicated by the 26.5 degree angle north of east, points to the Summer Solstice sunrise at the time of Orion's return; it also runs to Bethlehem as mentioned earlier.

"Behold he has come as Orion, behold Osiris has come as Orion. . . O king, the Sky conceives you with Orion, the dawn-light bears you with Orion. . . you will regularly ascend with Orion from the eastern regions of the Sky, you will regularly descend with Orion in the western region of the Sky." (Pyramid Texts, line 820-2)



"O king, you are this Great Star, the Companion of Orion, who traverses the Sky with Orion, who Navigates the (Duat) Netherworld with Osiris; you ascend from the east of the Sky, being renewed in your due season, and rejuvenated in your due time. The Sky has born you with Orion. . ." (Pyramid Texts, line 882-3)

A little further along in the same passage, we find an important clue: "I am a Soul. . . I (am) a star of gold. . ." (Pyramid Texts, Line 886-9)

Thus the dead King, his "ascending Living Energy", as an "Osiris," evolved to inhabit a newly born stellar matrix in the constellation of Orion. He went to Heaven after he died. The Duat, translated as Netherworld by most Egyptologists, actually appears to be the star birth Bardo field in the heart of Orion. There the newly immortal King must "Navigate the Duat" as a companion of Orion/Osiris. Significantly, the Osiris-king announces: "The Sky is pregnant of wine (the dawn-light), Nuit has given birth to her daughter, the dawn-light, I raise myself indeed. . ." (Pyramid Texts, line 1082-3)

In several places in the Pyramid Texts, a curious statement is made: "The (dead) king's sister is Sothis, (Sirius) his offspring is the Morning Star. . ." (Pyramid Texts, lines 357, 929, 935, 1707) It is easy to see Isis, Osiris' sister/wife, as the star Sirius, which follows Orion in the Sky. But to see Horus, Osiris' offspring, as the Morning Star, Venus, takes a bit of understanding. Until we remember that Venus, rising against the zodiac of the ecliptic, creates a five pointed star through time. This symbol, a star made of five lines drawn from a common center toward the points in the Zodiac of Venus' rising, covers the ceiling of Unas' Pyramid where the earliest Pyramid Text is inscribed. And besides, the Symbol for the Duat is the 5-pointed Star within a circle.

If the Pyramid Texts are truly the operating manual for the monuments on Giza and their evolutionary resonance with the star fields of Orion, then they deserve much more study than they have received in the century or so since their discovery. Others, primarily Robert Bauval in The Orion Mystery, have drawn attention to these clues, but Egyptologists and archeologists have been slow to respond. No attempt has been made to examine other texts of comparable antiquity, such as the Builder Texts of Edfu and Dendera, for more clues.

Let continue to look at the "Pattern" in the Sky as revealed in more Pyramid Texts.

". . .I am a Soul. . . I (am) a star of gold. . ." Osiris/Pharaoh announces.

Therefore, the king is declaring that he has entered the state of being called a "Soul," a state where the flow of Spirit is self-sustaining, self-referencing and self-aware. To be a Soul is to have the possibility of immortality.

This is as far as we go for now because to do otherwise will confuse the readers with concepts we are not read to even begin to try to grasp. I yet struggle today with some of them and my studies continue.

Understand for now that when we die we do go to Heaven and this god, or "neteru" Osiris had a stellar representation, the constellation Sah which is, according to Bauval, identical to our modern Orion. Since each person had one star Soul, then Egypt taught that each dead king could become one star of Orion, thus the Pyramids of the Giza Plateau were placed in a strategic alignment in order to represent the specific star the king became. We saw how the 3 stars in the belt of Orion was duplicated on the Giza Plateau in its 3 massive Pyramids. We saw that the Great Pyramid was built in such a way that 4 "Soul Shafts" were positioned in a unique way in order to record for all time the hope of mankind; life after death.

Answer for yourself: Are these the only "patterns" of stars represented on the Giza Mount? Does the "Pattern in the Mount" extend beyond the 3 stars in Orion's Belt and these 4 "Soul Shafts"? Oh, yes, the "Pattern in the Mount" is extensive. More Pyramids in Egypt fit the picture of the Sky: the two large Pyramids at Dahshur are a match for the brightest two stars in the open cluster "Hyades". The Pyramid of Zawyat Al Aryan and the Pyramid of Abu Ruwash represent stars in the constellation of Orion, namely Bellatrix and Saiph, and that the two Pyramids of Dahshur correlated to two stars in the Taurus-Hyades constellation, namely Aldebaran and Epsilon Tauri. This is not a coincidence. This is uranography at its best. Heaven is coming to Earth and with it a "Spiritual Message" for the Soul of mankind. Egypt understood that they were the "Image of Heaven" and stove to recreate "Heaven on Earth". Amazingly the relative position of the Belt of Orion to the Milky Way also correlates to the relative position of the Giza Pyramids to the Nile. The centre of the Pyramid constellation, Giza, was chosen so that the Nile exactly represents the Milky Way at the position of Orion's belt. The uranograph is fully employed by Egypt in not only their geography, but architecture as well as their "theology".

Answer for yourself: Why is this important to take note? The Milky Way, in the Sky, represents the field of reeds in the legends which had to be crossed to reach the Netherworld, just like the Pharaoh had to cross the Nile to go from the land of the living on the eastern bank to the place of the dead on its western bank (where all the Pyramids and tombs were located).

Answer for yourself: What are the implications to the Exodus story and the crossing of the "Reed Sea"? What is the difference between the "Reed Sea" and the "Red Sea"? Which one of the two is correct? Is this an allegory or is this story to be taken "literally"? Have we got the wrong "sea" here and is it mixed up in handed-down traditions? Have we lost the "keys" to understanding what the actual "Exodus from Egypt" is all about? Could this inherited tradition not be a "literal" movement of millions of people but rather be connected to our Soul being "born again" and we not know it? Is this "Exodus" all about the Soul again and we don't have a clue as to what we are reading? Yep. More on this later.

Let us continue to focus on Egyptian "Soul Science" as taken from the stars. In the so-called Pyramid Texts (c. 2400 BC), we have seen that the dead pharaoh seeks to fly up to Heaven and join the sun-god Re on his unceasing journey across the Sky in his sun-boat, incorporated, thus, in a mode of existence beyond change and decay. A passage in the later Book of the Dead (1200 BC) represents the deceased, who has been ritually identified with Osiris, declaring that he comprehends the whole range of time in himself, thus asserting his superiority to it" [time for him stands still, he lives forever] (Encyclopedia Britannica). "The Pyramid Texts describe the ascent of the departed king to the Sky (Heaven). He joins Orion (Osiris), and Sirius is his guide. They continue together as participants in the cosmic cycle. A similar wish is expressed in other texts. The spirits of the dead hope to join the never-setting, never-dying, circumpolar stars (Living Energies in the Heavens). These two possible transfigurations, alike in which they teach the same things, in which the dead pharaoh joins Osiris-Orion or the Circumpolar stars, explain the orientation of the so-called air shafts from the King's Chamber in the Great Pyramid. They may be ramps by which the dead king makes his way to heaven." - E. C. Krupp, "Astronomers, Pyramids and Priests" in In Search of Ancient Astronomies. "

The idea that the dead had to make a journey to the Otherworld, to which they belonged, finds expression in many religions. The oldest evidence occurs on this planet in the Egyptian Pyramid Texts (c. 2375-c. 2200 BC). The journey is conceived under various images. The dead pharaoh flies up to heaven to join the sun-god Re, in his solar boat, on his unceasing voyage across the Sky, or he joins the circumpolar stars, known as the "Imperishable Ones," or he ascends a ladder to join the gods in heaven" (Encyclopedia Britannica). "The gods who are in the Sky are brought to you, the gods who are on earth assemble for you, they place their hands under you, they make a ladder for you that you may ascend on it into the Sky, the doors of the Sky are thrown open to you, the doors of the starry firmament are thrown open for you" (Pyramid Texts, Utterance 572). In this trip to Heaven the deceased had to pass through twelve gates in the land of the dead, one for each hour of the night.

Answer for yourself: Now these religious beliefs were associated with the Pharaohs, but what about the common people?

Now for a little history before we move on. The rituals of burial and passage into the afterlife were only used for the pharaohs until around the sixth dynasty. At this point, rights were extended to the pharaohs' immediate family and the aristocracy. When this dynasty fell around 2250 B.C., the same rituals of burial and passage into the afterlife was used more and more by the common people as well. Until the Osiris myth came along, there was only the sun-god myth for burial and passage. This was not suited for the common person, as they did not even have access to the inner sanctuaries of Ra's temples. The Osiris cult appealed to the common man's emotions and provided a way for him to believe that he, too, could have Eternal Life. As the cult spread, Osiris took over more and more of Ra's functions. Osiris eventually absorbed the power of Ra over the Nile, the floods, and the vegetation which "spouted to life" following the inundation of the Nile. This was Osiris in his role a symbol for resurrection. Just as he was the god, or the power personified of the afterlife, so was he thought of as the "power or energy", or god, "neteru", over the regeneration.

Osiris was not a frightening god to the people of Ancient Egypt, though they still felt a need to pacify him. He was their means to Eternal Life, and this was achieved by copying the exact forms and rituals of his embalming. From the time of death, the deceased's name was always prefaced with Osiris, much as we use the words, "the late" in modern times. The entire mummification process took about seventy days and was a very degrading one, so as to put the deceased through the same trauma as Osiris himself had to endure at the hands of Set. The body was taken away from the home to "the place of purification" for its mummification. The burial ground was usually on the western bank of the Nile; therefore, the entire procession would have to cross "the river". Stated in a different way the "Soul" had to cross the river.

Answer for yourself: Was this a picture of the Soul crossing the Nile in Heaven? Was this seen above in Osiris-Orion and Eridanus? Yes.

Dancers and musicians joined the procession at the tomb, where the mummy was raised upright and the ceremony of the "Opening of the Mouth" took place. This ceremony was symbolic of when Horus went to Osiris to announce his victory over Set, to present the symbol of that victory, the eye which Set had taken during their battles, and to open his father's mouth, thus wakening him from his unconsciousness. At this point, the resurrection of the Soul was complete. In the actual ceremony, this was considered to be the way for the rebirth of the Soul.

Heb 9:27 27 And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment: (KJV)

The tradition of the Judgment of the Dead was introduced after the collapse of the Old Kingdom, during which the king as son of Horus had been immortal. "Deification" began to depend on the moral conduct of the deceased when he was still alive. Henceforth it was possible for all just people to attain immortality in their own right - after successfully passing the examination of the gods. But before this can happen the Soul must rise from the dead. This we study in the next article.

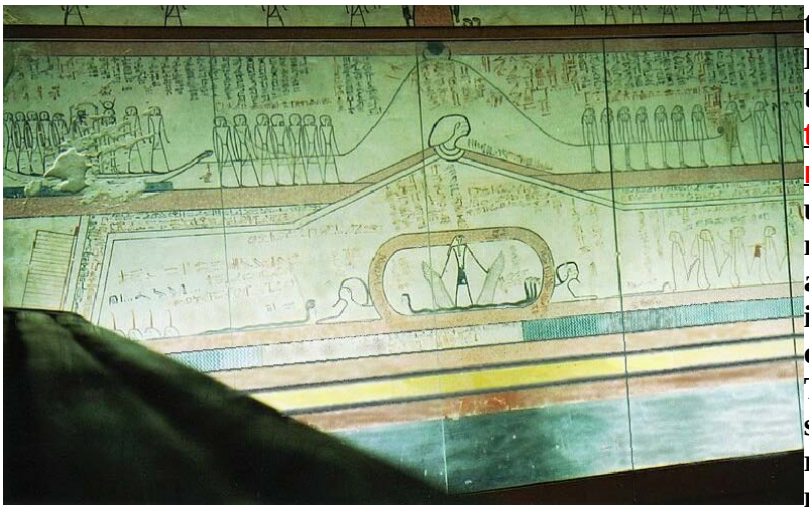
THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #12

We left off from the pervious article having studied the Giza Plateau as conforming to the Uranography, the Chart of Heavens. We looked at the Constellation Orion and made mention of the "Soul Shafts" in the Great Pyramid and the religious belief of the Ancient Egyptians that following death that the Living Conscious Energy we call the Soul of mankind ascends through a "Stairway to Heaven" or some type of Cosmic Portal to the Duat or the Constellation Orion since there appears to be a connection between this Constellation in the Heavens and the Giza Plateau. We made mention as well that following the "ascent of the Soul" then the Soul is subjected to the "judgment". We wish to look at this now.

Osiris, as mentioned earlier, was eventually considered to be the judge of the dead. Rights to the afterlife had to be earned by righteousness, and Osiris was the judge of this. Therefore we see the importance of righteous living to the Ancient Egyptians and the 42 Negative Confessions.



The following is a summary of the after death experience as understood by the Ancient Egyptian Religion.

Answer for yourself: What awaited the dead? How much did Ancient Egypt know? Where did they learn it? Who taught them? Who were the "Ancients" that reveled them the secrets of the Cosmos and this Living Energy we call God?

When a person dies, their "ba" (Soul-the Living Energy) leaves their body and is taken to the West (Duat, Underworld, Otherworld, Heaven...) by the jackal headed Anubis. The "Duat" is one of the ancient names for the afterworld, the dark realm of death in Egyptian mythology, situated West of the Nile. It was given the destination of "the West" because it was believed that the Sun, the symbolic Energy of the Cosmos, dies at sunset only to be re-manifested at dawn in the East daily. We see the perpetual cycle of "death, rebirth, life, death, rebirth" so the West is a fitting symbol for such a Cosmic Law. The Sun passes through this "Duat", the place of the dead, on its return journey from West to East. The Duat, written with the star ideogram, or sometimes a star enclosed in a circle, was what the Ancient Egyptians called the starry night sky into which the Sun descended at dusk. It was the equivalent of the Netherworld, the Otherworld, the place where the Souls of the dead reside and the region through which the Sun-god Ra, or Re travelled after His death each day in the Western horizon (the Sun again a symbol of the Cosmic Intelligent Energy of the whole Universe which symbolically died when descending into darkness of "death" each night). Ra was also associated with the Phoenix, as he rose again each night in flames from the dead. To know the path of the Sun at night was to know the journey of the Soul after death. Pyramids built after Khufu's that were inscribed with text (Pyramid texts) which describe the King's desire to unite with the Sun-God Re in death and travel in the solar bark either as Re, or as himself united with Re. It was thought that the Souls of the dead could be ferried out of the Duat by entering into the boat of Re as he passed through. They would exit the Duat with the Sun in the Eastern horizon at dawn to be reborn into a new existence. In order to pass through Duat (the underworld) each night, so that he might rise in the morning, the fiery Ra was compelled to use a boat to avoid being extinguished by the waters. It was Maat, i.e. order, the antithesis of chaos, that guided the course of the boat. At the helm of the boat stood Thoth, representative of the moon, who symbolically stood next to Horus, who, in early Egyptian myth, represented the Sky, and whose dark eye was the moon. It was Horus who steered. Many of the other gods travelled in the boat with them, and one of them defended the boat from attack by the monster of darkness, who wished to devour Ra. The classic tension between "darkness and light", death and life, was replayed daily. This was mankind's greatest battle. In early mythology, it was Set who was the hero defending the boat, and Apep (the serpent) who was the attacker, but in later myth, after Set became regarded as evil, it was Thoth who defended and Set who was the demon. Temporary failure to protect Ra was said to be the cause of solar eclipses, and mere difficulty in doing so was said to cause bad weather. The deceased looked forward to exiting the Duat as a "new-born" Living Energy with the Sun in the Eastern horizon at dawn to be reborn into a new existence. This was his hope for Eternal Life in which we inherit at Christians; the only difference is along the way the resurrection of "life from the dead" became corporeal in the form of a risen physical body which finds it origins in Greek ideas. Egypt, although they mummified the body, the previous home of the Soul, never believed in a physical bodily resurrection of the dead.

The Duat, the realm of the dead, was pictured on the ceilings of tombs (far left) and lids of sarcophagi as the star spangled body of the goddess Nut, the mother of Osiris. The body of Osiris itself is likened to the Duat on the sarcophagus of Seti I. His sarcophagus is also decorated by a life size representation of the goddess Nut. As the goddess of the Duat, she is seen swallowing the Sun in the West (on the right) and giving birth to the Sun once again in the East, her hands and feet resting on the western and eastern horizons. At Denderah this relief on the right adorns the ceiling of the Chapel of the New Year. Nut is shown swallowing the moon and giving birth to the Sun, its rays giving form to Hathor, Goddess of love and joy. Through Her mouth the Sky-boat of the Sun passes each evening, from her vulva the it re-emerges and the day is reborn each morning. On the left a more clear representation awaits your notice. During the day the Sun god passes visibly along her body, but during the night, He travels through her body back to the place where He will rise once more.

The architecture of the Egyptian tomb itself was traditionally designed to correspond with the geography of the Duat, the passages mimicking the Sun's path through that dark abyss. Again in this depiction we see the concept of Uranography. In this sense, the tomb was an instrument of rebirth, the King's body entering into the starry body of Nut in the West so that he can be resurrected or reborn like the morning Sun in the Eastern horizon. The middle of the pyramid corresponds with midnight, the belly of Nut, where the King's Soul is conceived and given new life.

Utterance 577 of the Pyramid Texts, which associates the King with Osiris reads:

"The Sky has conceived him, the dawn has borne him, and this King is conceived with him by the sky, this King is borne with him by the dawn."

Many of the Pyramids have names that suggest they were intended to be places of ascension and transformation of the Soul. Khufu called his Great Pyramid "Akhet", meaning the "place of becoming a spirit".

Before we go on we need to understand just how the Pyramids were laid out in the internal construction. The true pyramids that began to be built in the 4th Dynasty were derived from the original step shape by filling in the steps to create four smooth faces, thus being large scale representations of the more common pyramidal benben. The conical Benben stone represented the very first mound of earth and marked the point where the first rays of Sunlight fell from Re. The conical shape marked the Pharaoh's way to heaven by ascending the rays of the sun. In fact, some recently discovered tombs of officials from the same period to the south of the three Great Pyramids of Giza were surmounted by conical mounds that almost certainly served the same purpose of the monumental royal pyramids. The typical interior plan of the Old Kingdom pyramids consisted of three main elements. These elements consisted of:

- An antechamber beneath the apex of the Pyramid, connected to the outside by an entrance corridor that opens into the pyramid's north face;
- a burial chamber to the West of the antechamber; and
- a stone sarcophagus at the West end of the burial chamber.

Outside of their power to give new life to the deceased, not much is known about the role that the earliest pyramids were thought to play in the afterlife. Nevertheless, there were successive changes to these structures and new innovations in their architecture and plan that suggest an evolution in Egyptian funerary theology. However, by the 5th Dynasty, the layout of the chambers within the royal pyramid became standardized in a form that reflects a vision of the afterlife that characterized Egyptian thought from then on. At this point, the typical interior plan of these later Old Kingdom pyramids consisted of three main elements.

Initially, all three of these elements are first found in the 4th Dynasty tomb of King Shepseskaf, though his was, for the first time in 150 years, not a pyramid. He built instead a mastaba, perhaps designed to reflect those of Egypt's first kings at Abydos in Southern Egypt. Abydos was a cult center for Osiris, the Egyptian god most closely associated with the afterlife in Egyptian mythology. Like the primeval mound, Osiris represented the force of new life. At first, he was probably more of a fertility god, with power over the transmission of life from one generation to the next and in the growth of new plants out of seemingly dormant seeds. However, he came to be integral to the Egyptian understanding of the daily Solar cycle (death at dusk, rebirth at dawn) and was thus closely connected to the sun god. Each night the Sun sank, or to the ancient Egyptians, died in the West, yet in the morning it emerged again in the East anew into the world, reborn to live once more. To the ancient Egyptians, this could only be possible if there were a Universal Force or Cosmic Power that regenerated the Sun and this was recognized as a "Pattern in the Mount" that was applicable in other areas of existence like Nature and Mankind who are made in the image of God which was symbolized by this Sun.

There were actually two different myths that coexisted to explain this process:

- In one, the Sun reentered the womb of Nut, the goddess of the sky, in the evening and was born again in the morning.
- However, in the other myth the Sun sank into a Netherworld, know as the Duat, where in the middle of the night, it, the Sun, or Cosmic Energy, merged with the mummy of Osiris. From this union it received the ability to come once again to life.

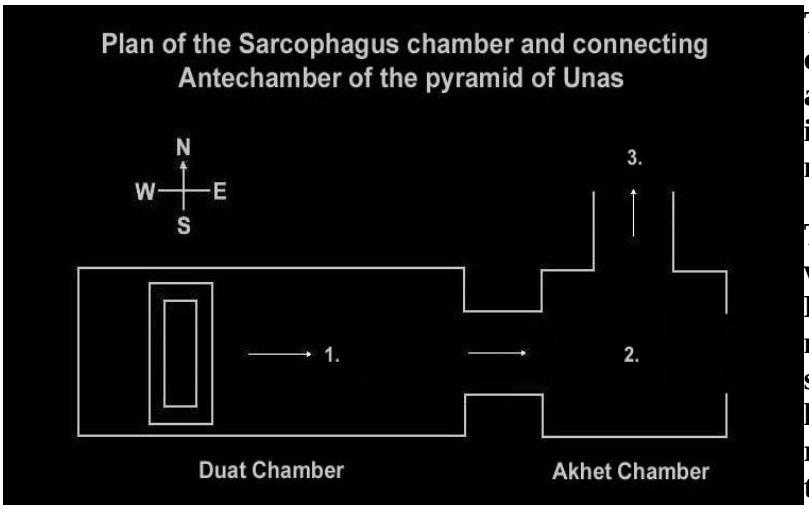
While two different myths, together they combined the symbolical role of mother and father in the production of new life. And both of these concepts are reflected in the standardized layout of the interior chambers that were introduced by King Shepseskaf and adopted in the pyramids of his successors of the 5th and 6th Dynasties.



It has recently been discovered that there exist a corresponding similarity between the layout of the Pyramid of Unas and the placement of the texts (the Pyramid texts) that adorned their walls. It was found by J.P. Allen in his paper entitled Reading a Pyramid that the texts flowed from the innermost part of the tomb to the outside, as if written for the benefit of the King's Soul as he left the body lying in the sarcophagus and moved through the tomb. It is believed the the Kings' resurrected Soul would read them and by so doing would help prepare him as he exited the Pyramid, the earthly representation of the Duat. The Pyramid Texts identify the sarcophagus chamber as the Per Duat, the "House of the Duat" and on both its the north and south walls the text runs from West to East, the direction of the Sun's path through the Duat. The room is divided by these texts into two halves on a West-East axis, with the Offering Ritual occupying the north half of the room and the Resurrection Ritual the south half. As you can see on the left today the Pyramid of Unas lies as a mount of rubble, with only part of the original encasing limestone blocks remaining. Yet it is the find of a life-time. The ceiling of the burial chamber was painted with golden stars in a dark blue Sky. Unas was thus buried in a black basalt sarcophagus, representing the (fertile) earth, in an area closely resembling his living quarters, underneath the dark nightly Sky. Even more important, however, is the decoration of the remainder of the burial chamber, the antechamber and part of the horizontal passage, which consists of vertical columns of meticulously carved hieroglyphs painted in blue. These columns contain the earliest known example of the so-called Pyramid Texts, and even more the oldest collection of religious texts known to mankind! The Pyramid of Unas contains only 283 of the more than 700 known Pyramid Texts which reveal the intricacies of the Egyptian afterlife. But even more we again see that the Uranograph is followed not only in the construction of the Pyramids and Tombs like Unas but the writings inside them follow the "Pattern in the Mount" being written corresponding to the path of the setting and rising Sun, the true "Pattern for the whole of the Cosmos" which is reproduced on Earth by man and nature.

Answer for yourself: And how is Unas' Pyramid following the Uranograph? The concept of the king's journey from death to new life enshrined in Unas' Pyramid Texts parallels that of the Sun: dying in the West, uniting with Osiris in the Duat, and rising again in the East. The cosmology of this solar passage is that of night (West to East) rather than day (East to West). It is reflected not only in the texts and their layout but also in the substructure of the Pyramid itself; Uranography again at its best. The "Pattern of Heaven" has come to Earth! The following is the reproduction of the inside or Una's Pyramid:

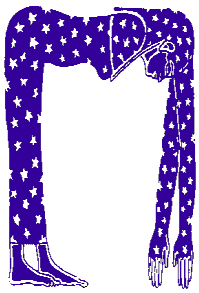
The western and innermost, room, the sarcophagus chamber, corresponds to the Duat. In the western, and innermost, part of this room the king's body lies in its sarcophagus as the body of Osiris lies in the most hidden part of the Duat.

The body of Unas is Osiris, and clearly remains within the sarcophagus as Osiris remains within the Duat. But the King's new life is not restricted to this mode of existence. Within the sarcophagus the king's spirit ("ba"-Soul) unites with his body (the "ka", the life force derived from the body...the Spirit) and receives new life from it, as the Sun is regenerated though its union with Osiris in the Duat-(Sky/Heaven). So the goal is the reunification of Spirit-Soul, the "ka" with the "ba" as Egypt described. In so doing we speak of the "resurrection"; we speak of Osiris's restriction in the Duat as the Sun is resurrected daily with "new life" as the "Pattern in the Mount" that examples the way of all life and it cyclical births in the Cosmos. The cyclical pattern of "dying-rising" Energies is the "pattern" for both to follow.

Once released from its attachment to the body, the king's "ba" (Soul) proceeds (with the Sun) through the Duat toward Sunrise (West to East). Between the Duat and the morning sky lies the "Akhet" (place of becoming a Spirit). "Akhet" means dawn, or horizon, in the Kemet (Egyptian) language. An amulet shaped like the "Akhet" represented the daily rebirth of the Sun (resurrection). The lower shape represents the sacred mountain, later represented by the pylons of solar temples. The "akhet" was guarded by the Aker, a double headed lion who insured the safe passage of the Sun-barque (boat). Though it is usually translated "horizon", the "Akhet" is in fact a region below the visible horizon, rather than a dividing line between night and day; it is the region through which the Sun passes in the hour between its emergence from the Duat at first light and it appearance in the day Sky at dawn. If you notice above in the diagram of Unas' Pyramid to the "East" is the chamber of "Akhet", the dawning chamber of "new life". The "Akhet" is more than a zone of passage. It is literally the "place of becoming an "akh" (combined life-force/Spirit and Soul)," where the deceased's "ba" (Soul) and the Sun (COSMIC ENERGY) together are transformed into a newly effective (akh-Spirit-Energy/Soul) mode of existence. In the antechamber the king "becomes an "akh" (combined life force/Spirit and Soul) in the "Akhet" (Pyr. 350c), just as the Sun "becomes 'akh' again" in the cosmic 'Akhet'".



Answer for yourself: What should this teach us according to the "Pattern"?

Again we see the concept of "microcosm/macrocosm". Rising from the "Akhet" at dawn. The New Kingdom Book of the Dead describes the Sun rising "from the mouth of the "Akhet's" door" into the day-sky at the first hour of daylight. This doorway, portal, ladder to Heaven, or stargate in each case is both the exit from the "Akhet" and the entrance to the day-sky. Architecturally it corresponds to the door from the antechamber to the corridor in the Pyramids. Like the Sun, the king's ultimate goal is to be in possession of his "akh" (Spirit-Soul) when emerging from the "Akhet", and emergent in this day in the proper form of a living "akh". This is the theme represented in the Pyramid Texts not only here but eventually canonized as the central purpose of the Egyptian Book of the Dead: namely, "to emerge in the daytime" (Sunrise, new birth). In the Pyramid Texts this goal stands at the end of the King's process of resurrection from the sarcophagus, as it does for the Sun's nightly passage through the Duat. The Pyramid Texts thus combine in one corpus the same vision of rebirth that the New Kingdom divided into the Book of the Dead on the one hand the and the "Netherworld" books on the other." Therefore we see that the same themes present in the Pyramid Texts are repeated in later texts such as the Book of the Dead.

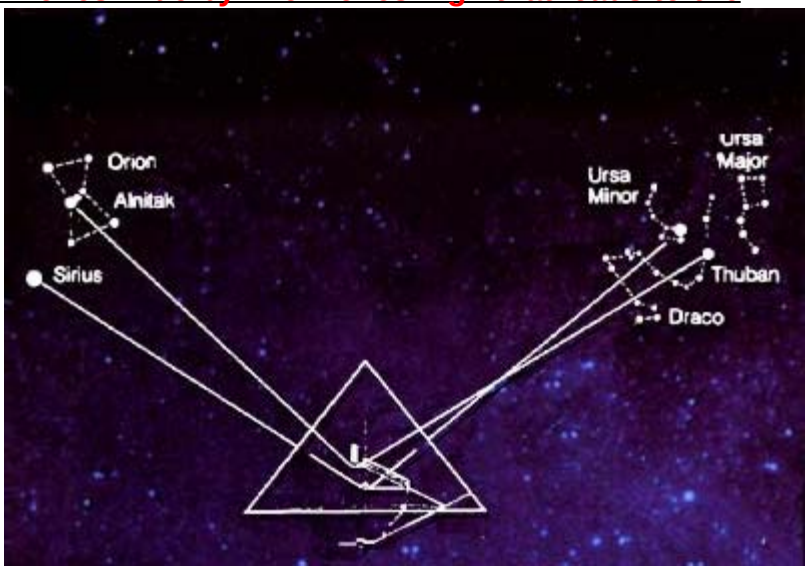
Answer for yourself: What should this teach us? Similarly, the substructure of the earlier pyramids are precursors for the design of later pyramids. The "theology" is the same.

The internal architecture of Khufu's and other earlier pyramids, being forerunners to these later inscribed pyramids, likewise reflect the cosmic geography of the Sun's nightly journey (Uranography). The same rituals that were carried out in the later pyramids would have occurred in the tombs of the previous Kings, and their pyramids designed and built accordingly to serve a similar purpose. Halfway between the West and East sides of the Pyramid would theoretically correspond with the nadir (point on the celestial sphere directly below the observer, diametrically opposite the zenith) of the Sun, the lowest point of Re's path through the Duat (divided into 12 hours), i.e., Midnight. The entire internal structure of Khufu's pyramid is offset from this midpoint to the East by almost 24 feet. There is, however, one part of the complex that reaches to the pyramid's midpoint, that is the Western end of the King's chamber, the location of the sarcophagus. The Kings body actually lies midway between the East and West sides of the pyramid, in the middle of the Duat, or the belly of Nut (the Heavens, Sky goddess as seen on the left).

Answer for yourself: Why is this so critically important? This mid-region, where the body lies in between two realms, marks a point of significant change in the journey through the Duat, as it is the place where the regeneration or resurrection of the King/Sun begins. From here, at its lowest descent into the West, death, at midnight, the Sun begins to climb and start its journey towards the Eastern horizon and it is from here that the King's "ba" (Soul) begins its journey Eastwards to the open end of the sarcophagus chamber. Situated between the Duat and the morning sky is the "Akhet", the antechamber through which the Sun must pass before emerging from the Duat in the East and into the day sky. Look again above at the architectural construction of the King's chamber in the Pyramid depicting this "stellar" location. The "Akhet" is literally the "place of becoming an "akh"", or "place of becoming a Spirit" and the pyramid's antechamber is the architectural counterpart of the cosmic "Akhet". Texts covering the walls of the "Akhet" chamber in later pyramids describe the King's ""akh"" (combined Spirit-Soul) rising in the Eastern horizon like the Sun God. In utterances of the Pyramid Texts, for example, the King is identified with the Sun (Cosmic Energy).

"Behold he has come as Orion, behold Osiris has come as Orion. . . O king, the sky conceives you with Orion, the dawn-light bears you with Orion. . . you will regularly ascend with Orion from the eastern regions of the sky, you will regularly descend with Orion in the western region of the sky." (Pyramid Texts, line 820-2)



"O king, you are this Great Star, the Companion of Orion, who traverses the sky with Orion, who Navigates the (Duat) Netherworld with Osiris; you ascend from the east of the sky, being renewed in your due season, and rejuvenated in your due time. The sky has born you with Orion. . ." (Pyramid Texts, line 882-3)

In all of the pyramids built dating from the end of the fourth dynasty to the end of the sixth dynasty, with the exception of a select few, the ""Akhet" chamber" is situated to the East of the Duat chamber (identified with the East and the rising Sun). The passage through which the dead king's ""akh"" leaves the "Akhet" chamber in route to Heaven is almost always located in the middle of the north wall. This is also usually the same passage that the King's body enters the chamber through.

But Khufu's pyramid was built before the end of the fourth dynasty. This means it was built before the addition of an "Akhet" chamber became standard practice. It would appear that in Khufu's pyramid both the Duat and the "Akhet" were incorporated into the one chamber; the Western half containing the sarcophagus being the Duat chamber, while the eastern half was intended as the "Akhet" chamber. And the King's body was to be placed straddling both in the middle of the Pyramid. This appears to be the arrangement of Senwosrert-ankh's tomb also and according to James Allen his tomb is the most complete copy of Unas' corpus of Pyramid Texts, both originally and as preserved.

Instead of a passage in the middle of the north wall of a separate but adjoining "Akhet" chamber as in the later pyramids, Khufu's body entered his combined Duat/"Akhet" chamber through a passage on the eastern most end of the north wall. But somethings is different here and the subject of much debate. There are 4 "shafts" pointing from the King's and Queen's chamber toward the outside of the Pyramid; two in each chamber. These "shafts" have been first thought to be "air ventilation shafts" but now general consensus is that they are "Soul Shafts" reflecting the theological beliefs of the Ancient Egyptian Religion and the Afterlife. However, in the middle of the north wall of Khufu's "Akhet" chamber, exactly where the "akh's" "exit passage" is located in later pyramids, is a small "Soul Shaft" about eight inches wide by five inches high that leads to the open sky above. This is the "Soul Shaft" mentioned in earlier articles. The shafts were designed to allow the dead Pharaoh's Soul to ascend to the Heavens. The main feature of the Sky at night, was the Milky Way. The stars were thought to have been the Nile in the Sky. The southern shaft from the King's Chamber points directly to where Orion's Belt would have been in the ancient sky roughly around 10,450 B.C.E. When the Pyramid Text is brought into the picture, this points to that date as being the 'first time." The "first time" is the ancient Egyptian concept of the legendary beginning of time and civilization, the time of Osiris. The southern shaft of the Queen's Chamber points to Sirius.

The northern shaft of the King's Chamber points to the circumpolar stars in Ursa minor and the Pole Star Thuban. These stars never disappear in the sky. It is thought that these shafts were to help the Spirit-Soul of the dead pharaoh find the important stars (symbolic gateways to the afterlife that were the core of their Star Religion, their Soul Science).

Such findings and references contributed to a theory proposed by Robert Bauval and Adrian Gilbert in The Orion Mystery (1994). Noting that the third and smallest pyramid at Giza is somewhat out of line with the other two, they compared the alignment with that of three stars in the Orion constellation, and found a match. Bauval and Gilbert argued that two other pyramids also from the Fourth Dynasty—the Pyramid of Nebka (north of Giza) and the Pyramid of Djedefra (south of Giza) - together with the pyramids at Giza, form a pattern of five pyramids that align with five of the seven stars of Orion. This is a good place to being you personal study of the Uranograph in the Sky and Heavens.

On the strength of this stellar orientation of the shafts, Robert Bauval postulated in the Orion Mystery that the Queen's Chamber was designed to be used for the performance of the Egyptian rebirth ritual known as "The Opening of the Mouth" ceremony. In this the mummy of the deceased was stood upright and its mouth quite literally opened using a small tool made from meteoritic iron. As it is recognized that this tool was made in the shape of the Little Bear constellation (circumpolar constellation), itself associated with the jackal god called Upuaut (whose name means "opener of the ways") it is not unreasonable to see this as a stellar ritual. Further evidence for this is that the Northern shaft of the Queen's chamber pointed at the culmination of the star Kochab, the most prominent in the Little Bear (Ursa Minor) constellation. This aligned with the shaft at the precise time that Orion's Belt would appear over the Eastern Horizon. As the Northern shaft of the King's Chamber pointed directly at the then pole star, Thuban, it is more proper to refer to the "air-shafts" as star-shafts or "Soul Shafts" as mentioned above.

The King's "akh" (combined Spirit-Energy/Soul) is often described as alighting, rising or ascending on its release from the body of the deceased. It is quite possible that these shafts were designed to allow the "akh" to exit the pyramid without having to descend through the pyramid's body, as it would have to in the case of Khufu's pyramid (built earlier), his burial chamber being positioned high in the upper part of the pyramid unlike all other pyramids. This explanation would account for the lack of any such shafts in other pyramids. So here in the "Akhet" chamber, it was believed the "ba" (Soul) of Osiris-Khufu would unite with the "ba" (Soul) of Re, and then fly up through the "Soul Shaft" to the day sky, like Re rising from the cosmic "Akhet" in the morning in his Going Forth by Day. On the North wall of the "Akhet" chamber of later pyramids, the texts describe the King flying to Heaven (§449, 463) and the Gods of the Four Directions placing the reed floats for his ascensions (§464) and a ladder is made for the King for the same purpose (§472-479). The addition of a similar shaft on the south side of the chamber is a unique addition in pyramid design. Perhaps this southern shaft was incorporated into his "Akhet" chamber to enable the "ba" of Re to enter the chamber and unite with "ba" of the King as some conjecture. Some believe a second shaft in this location could be interpreted as a second exit from the chamber offered to Khufu.

In utterance 410 of the Pyramid Texts it is written that the Djed Pillar in Djedu is in the "place where his Soul is found". This notion is later repeated in chapter 17 of the Book of the Dead, in which it describes the "ba" (Soul) of the deceased King and the "ba" (Soul) of Re meeting and embracing in Djedu - the "Place of the Djed Pillar".

"He found the Soul of Re there, and they embraced each other". - pAni, chapter 17.

The ba of Re and the ba of Osiris meet and embrace in the 'Place of the Djed Pillar' otherwise known as the 'House of Osiris'.

Flinders Petrie notes that the Sun does indeed shine down the southern shaft of Khufu's burial chamber at Midday on two particular days of the year. The bringing of the Sun into the tomb contained significantly potent symbolism of rebirth and rejuvenation. For this to occur inside Khufu's "Akhet" chamber purely by accident would be extremely fortuitous indeed! Rather, it would seem that this feature was an important aspect of his tomb and was intentionally factored into its design. It is worth repeating that the south wall of the "Akhet" chambers of inscribed pyramids speak of the King joining with the Sun-god Re and ascending on the solar barge or a Stairway to Heaven:

A stairway to the sky is set up for me that I may ascend on it to the sky. - PT, Utterance 267 - South wall of "Akhet" chamber.

"...the apertures of the sky-windows are opened for you, the movements of the Sunshine are released for you." - PT, Utterance. 456.

So we see three distinct stags in the Sun's journey are characterized in this description:

- Emerging from the Duat and transferring to the day-bark, the Sun-boat of Ra;
- Ascending to the "Akhet"; and
- Rising from the "Akhet" at dawn after the Spiritual transformation

The same three stages underlie the architecture and texts of Unas's pyramid and many others that followed.

Now, in ascent to Heaven and after death the deceased was led to the judgment but his first step is to enter the Duat, the realm of the Dead. The texts clearly state that Ra was the Soul and Osiris the body (which housed the Spirit), and that the divine combination of body (Spirit) and Soul, Ra-Osiris, would ascend into the Sky and be reborn "in the body of Nut". We are going to Heaven.

Heb 9:27 27 And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment: (KJV)

Let us continue our study in the next article as we look at the judgment of the dead.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #13

We are coming to the end of our study on Uranography and we have learned some amazing things so far about not only about who we are as humankind but our destinies as well. We have see that many of our current religious beliefs as held in both Christianity, Judaism, and Islam have been not only derived from Ancient Egypt but are derived from Ancient Spiritual interpretation of the Sky and Heavens above. Believe me that in these articles we have only scratched the surface of Uranography for it is way more extensive and worldwide than what these few articles could express. I have tried to open the mind of the readers to the Spirituality of the Ancients and the secrets of their Spirituality and the secrets written in the language of astronomy which are recorded for us today in the very foundations of their holiest sites of antiquity. My main focus has been Egypt for it is the "Pattern" that all other nations will follow but by no means is it the only example we have of this Uranography for it can be found the world over.

We left off from the pervious article having studied the Giza Plateau as conforming to the Uranography, the Chart of Heavens. We looked at the Pyramids and how they related architecturally to the Duat, the Stellar realm of the dead and Heaven. We made mention of the "Soul Shafts" in the Great Pyramid and the religious belief of the Ancient Egyptians that following death that the Living Conscious Energy we call the Soul of mankind ascends through a "Stairway to Heaven" to return to where we have come. We noted that later Pyramid construction maintained these same ideas as reflected in the Pyramid Texts although later Pyramids did not contain these "Soul Shafts" that pointed to the Duat but rather the internal design of the King's Chamber represented in itself the Duat. We saw that in the Pyramid Texts that intricate ideas were expressed concerning the resurrection of the dead and the recombination of the "ka" and "ba", the "Spirit-Soul" and how it related to the Living Intelligent Energy of the Cosmos we call God and which was symbolized by "the Osiris". All of this was symbolic of the Egyptian belief in Eternal Life and we mentioned to the reader that this was done in preparation of the judgment of the dead to which we look presently.

This judgment of the Soul was called the "Weighing of the Heart" in the Two Halls of Ma'at. It is necessary that we divert a little now to study this "Weighing of the Heart" as it occurs in the Duat after the ascension of the Soul. This is the "judgment of the Dead" which is central to the 3 major world religions: Christianity, Judaism, and Islam.

Osiris, as mentioned earlier, was eventually considered to be the judge of the dead. Rights to the afterlife had to be earned by righteousness, and Osiris was the judge of this. Therefore we see the importance of righteous living to the Ancient Egyptians and the 42 Negative Confessions.

Inheriting this Ancient Religious Tradition as it evolved we find in Christianity the similar concept:

"For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, so that each one may receive good or evil, according to what he has done in the body.

Therefore, knowing the fear of the Lord, we persuade men..." (2 Corinthians 5:10-11)

Rom 14:10-12 10 But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ (Krst/Karest/Hours/Jesus, etc.). 11 For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. 12 So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God. (KJV)

There are many "names" for this celestial event awaiting every Soul but as far back as Ancient Egypt a person's deeds in this life were believed to examined after death and are judged against a Heavenly Standard at the Judgment Seat of Osiris. Notice I said "deeds" and not "faith" for one's faith is manifested in his "deeds". Even the Christian faith, which often is contradictory, has it right in places:

Rev 20:12 12 And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. (KJV)

Since in the Ancient Egyptian Religion, which at times is complicated Osiris and Horus as "one" as we have come to understand as Christians that "Christ" and the "Father" are one.

John 10:30 30 I and my Father are one. (KJV)

So when we look at or study the "Judgment Seat of Osiris" we are actually looking at the origin for the later "Judgment Seat of Krst/Karest/Christ" since "Horus and Osiris" are "one" as the later personification of "Jesus" and the "Father God" are "one". At the end of one's earthly existence, Ancient Egypt taught that a performance evaluation will determine his/her fate. Yes, we will have to give an account of our lives. Part of this is surely answering for the sins we committed but this is to be balanced by the good works and deeds which he have done as well.

In a book of instructions, an Egyptian King advised his son, the prince, to attain the highest qualities, because upon his death, he would see his whole lifetime in a single instant, and his performance on earth would be reviewed and evaluated by the judges. Even as far back as the period of the 6th Dynasty [4300 years ago], we find the idea that heaven was reserved for those who had performed their duty to man and to the Divine Powers while on earth. No exceptions were made to a King or anyone else.

For example, the Pharaoh Unas (2323 B.C.E.), before he was ready to fly from Earth into Heaven, was not allowed to start unless the neteru (who were about to help him) were satisfied as to the reality of his moral worth. If you are not familiar with these "neteru" and their relationship to the Godhead then you need to stop right now and read the link before continuing your study. These "attributes" of God demanded that no man should have uttered a word against the deceased on Earth, and that no complaint should have been made against him in Heaven before the neteru (gods). Accordingly, in the text of Unas we read:

Unas hath not been spoken against on earth before men, he hath not been accused of sin in heaven before the neteru (gods).

Ancient Egyptians expressed their metaphysical beliefs in a story form, like a sacred drama or a mystery play. The following are the Egyptians' symbolic representations of the process of the Judgment Day Mystery Play.

When a person dies, their "ba" (Soul-the Living Energy) leaves their body and is taken to the West (Duat, Underworld, Otherworld, Heaven...) by the jackal headed Anubis. Anbu (Anubis), as opener of the way, guides the deceased to the scales and weighs the heart. Anubis leads the deceased into the Hall of the Double Truths where he or she must begin judgement as seen on the left. As an underworld god, he is considered a friend and guide to the dead. Anubis was much loved in Pharaonic Egypt and was often depicted as protector and helper. He is normally depicted in black, and the color is symbolic, it represents the color of the body after the mummification process. He was generally depicted as a black jackal-headed man, or as a black jackal. Black is also associated with the fertile Nile silt deposited on the land, called the "Black Land" and hence symbolic of rebirth in the afterlife since the "Black Land" awakened by the flooding of the Nile and "new life" erupted everywhere; salvation had come to Egypt. Black was also the color of fertility, and thus linked to death and rebirth in the afterlife. Anubis was also seen as the deity of embalming, as well as a god of the dead. To the Egyptians, Anubis was the protector of embalming and guardian of both the mummy and the necropolis. Anubis was also called the "The Royal Child". Masks of Anubis were routinely worn by the Sem-priest officiating at the funeral and the 70-day mummification process, symbolically becoming the god for the rituals. The wakening of the dead was also thought to be a function of Anubis. He would appear by the mummy, and awaken the Soul. After the deceased had been placed into the tomb and sealed up, it was thought that Anubis would lead the deceased (Soul) to the afterlife.

Answer for yourself: Why a "jackal"? Simply because dogs were often seen wandering around the tombs and places where the dead were buried. Egyptians would have noticed the jackals prowling around the graveyards, and so the link between the animal and the dead was formed in their minds. It has been noticed by Flinders Petrie that the best guides to Egyptian tombs are the jackal-trails.

Anubis, or "Yinepu originally", as Khenty-amenti or "Foremost of Westerners," was both embalmer and caretaker of the deceased, and the guardian of tomb and necropolis. Over time Osiris' popularity would absorb much of Yinepu's nature, causing Anubis-Yinepu to be written into the myths as Osiris' son by Nebt-het (alternately Set's son or Isis's son) and relegating Him to the role merely of embalmer and overseer of the funerary processes. Images of Yinepu-Anubis wrapping bandages, pouring oils or embracing the coffin are generally not actually images of the Netjer Himself ("Netjer," a Kemetic word meaning "divine powers" contained in the One Self-Created Deity which manifests in myriads of forms) but of His servants doing His work. In later times Yinepu-Anubis would be syncretized with Greek Hermes and seen as a "psychopompos" or messenger/guide of the deceased Soul; in Kemetic iconography, Yinepu-Anubis can be seen leading the deceased person into the Hall of Double Truth, where He then weighs the deceased's heart against the feather of Ma'at.

This scene depicts what occurs after a person has died, according to the ancient Egyptians. It continues as the "deceased Soul" is led before the seated Grand Ancestor, Osiris, who presides in the Hall of Justice.

Beginning with the upper left-hand corner, the deceased first appears before a panel of judges to make an accounting for his deeds during life. If a person had led a decent life, the heart balanced with the feather and the person was rendered worthy to live forever in paradise with Osiris. The ankh, the key of life, appears in the hands of some of the judges. Next, the jackal god Anubis who represents the Underworld and mummification leads the deceased before the scale. Anubis, master of ceremonies, leads the deceased by his hand to the scales in the Hall of Maat. In his hand, Anubis holds the ankh, the Symbol of Eternal Life. Anubis then weighs the heart of the deceased (left tray) against the feather of Ma'at, goddess of truth and justice (right tray). In some drawings, the full goddess Ma'at, not just her feather, is shown seated on the tray. Note that Ma'at's head, crowned by the feather, also appears atop the fulcrum of the scale. If the heart of the deceased outweighs the feather, then the deceased has a heart which has been made heavy with evil deeds. If the deceased's heart was equal to or lighter than the feather of Ma'at, they could continue. If not, their "ba", or Soul, would be eaten by the demon like monster Ammut and the deceased's consciousness would cease to exist! They would never meet Osiris and live forever in the Fields of Peace. Notice there is no "burning hell" or torment; only annihilation of existence or consciousness of the Soul if one was weighted in the balances of "Ma'at" and found wanting because he or she had not lived a righteous life. Ammut sits beneath the Scales of Justice before the throne of Osiris where she waits for the daily flow of Souls to come before Osiris for judgement. During the Judging of the Heart, if the deeds of the Soul being judged are found to be more wicked than good, Anubis feeds the Soul to Ammut. This results in the total annihilation of the person, and there is no hope of further existence.

But this was not the end. According to the Egyptian belief if one's heart were heavy with regret, unfinished Earth business, or the pull of selfish desires, then the ancient Egyptian could not enter the heavens. A beastly creature would eat his heart, and he would have to return to Earth to get a new heart, one light enough to rise into heaven (presumably by reincarnating and living a better life than before).

Ammut, the devourer of the Soul is made up of the head of a crocodile, the body of a lion, and the rear of a hippo. If the "ba" (Soul) is eaten by Ammut, the deceased then would simple cease to live a conscious existence. In that event, Ammut the god with the crocodile head and hippopotamus legs will devour the heart, condemning the deceased to oblivion for eternity. Ammut was symbolized as a combination of those animals which were considered as the most dangerous to the ancient Egyptians. Although often referred to as a demon, technically, in destroying evil she acted as a force for good.

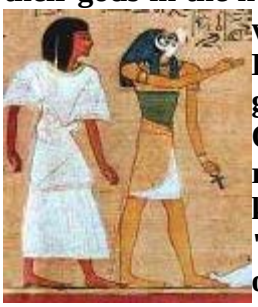
Answer for yourself: What implications does this have for the Christian "Satan" who again is but a creation of God to do his bidding of punishment? This is a whole study in itself. When you come to realize that nothing exists outside of God then within this God head is a tension between both "good" and "evil", or what man has erroneously defined as "evil"; a condition which God views differently for within God dwells the "neteru" which have attributes of both "good" and "evil" as defined by mankind. On a deeper level what is "evil" in man's eyes is often "good" in God's eyes. This is why in the Job story we find Satan not opposing God or "fighting God"; rather obedient to God and His wishes. We got it just backwards today thanks of superstition, ignorance, and the fear of mankind of the "dark".

Answer for yourself: Why is it called the "Hall of Judgment of the Double-Ma'at (truth or justice)? It is called "double" because the scale balances only when there is an equality of opposing forces.



In this judgment of the Soul if the feather outweighs the heart, if the deeds of a righteous live outweighed his sins and actions which violated the Laws of God then the deceased whom has led a righteous life was then presented before Osiris to join the afterlife. The heart, as a metaphor for conscience, is weighed against the feather of truth, to determine the fate of the deceased. Osiris presides in the Hall of Justice. The jury consists of 42 judges/assessors. Each judge has a specific jurisdiction over a specific sin or fault; each wears a feather of truth on his/her head. Thoth, the ibis-headed god of wisdom stands at the ready to record the outcome. Horus, the God with the falcon head on the right, then leads the deceased to Osiris. Note the ankh in Horus' hand in the above scene of judgment at the top. Horus represents the personification of the Pharaoh during life, and his father Osiris represents the personification of the Pharaoh after death.

Osiris was imagined sitting on a throne in the Hall of Judgment called the "Hall of the Two Truths." The throne sat at the top of a flight of steps representing the primeval hill where Ra had been born and started creation. This primeval hill over time had come to represent the resurrection in the afterlife. This is another example of how Osiris absorbed so much of the power of Ra. Osiris' wife and sister, Isis was in attendance, as well as his other sister Nephthys (the Mary and Martha of the Gospels), and his four sons, Imset, Hapy, Duamutef, and Qebehsenuf. There were forty-two judges awaiting the dead, representing the forty-two provinces of Upper and Lower Egypt, and each judge was responsible for judging a particular aspect of conscience. The spirit of the deceased denies committing each sin/fault before its assigned judge, by reciting the 42 Negative Confessions. These Negative Confessions come from Chapter CXXV of The Book of the Coming Forth by Light (commonly known as The Book of the Dead. A declaration of innocence was made by the deceased before 42 gods. Every one of the 42 gods is addressed by individually - each time a denial of wrong doing must be made by the deceased before it may continue. Of these, there were nine great judges, and Ra was among these, as was his other form, Atum, and Shu, Tefnut, Geb, Nut, Isis, Nephthys, Horus, and Hathor. In his left hand he holds the ankh, the symbol of life. The scales are topped by Maat, goddess of Justice, Truth and Order, wearing a feather on her head. Ammut, Devourer of the Dead, is ready to destroy the deceased if his heart should be full of sin and consequently too heavy. A jar containing the heart is placed on one of the pans, while the other is weighed down by the feather of Maat. Anubis does the weighing, giving the scales a nudge in the right direction with the ankh. Thoth, god of wisdom who had given mankind the hieroglyphs, writes down the decision. Just as the Egyptians in this world liked to document everything, so did their gods in the next. Horus leads the way, holding an ankh. The deceased follows him freely to meet Osiris, with whom he will be identified. He is received by the god of the Duat, the Realm of the Dead, and his two sisters, Isis and Nephthys. The four sons of Horus stand on a lotus flower growing out of the waters over which stands the throne of Osiris. When Set was destroyed Osiris departed from this world to the kingdom which the gods had given him and began to reign over the dead. He was absolute king of this realm, just as Ra the Sun-god was absolute king of the Sky. This region of the dead, or Dead-land, is called "Tat," or "Tuat" or the "Duat". This Duat was at times symbolized in both the West (Sunset and the darkness (death of light/life) after the loss of the Sun at sunset) as well as the East (the rising of new life at the new Sun, new Energy, new light).

The candidate for Eternal Life, now standing before Osiris, the judge of the dead states:

Behold, I am in thy presence, O Lord of Amentet. There is no sin in my body. I have not spoken that which is not true knowingly, nor have I done anything with a false heart. Grant thou that I may be like unto those favoured ones who are in thy following, and that I may be an Osiris greatly favoured of the beautiful god, and beloved of the Lord of the Two Lands, I who am a veritable royal scribe who loveth thee, Ani, whose word is true before the god Osiris. (The Papyrus of Ani, from the speech of Ani, as translated by Budge).

So we see the dead, the Soul, once the deceased had safely crossed over from the land of the living to that of the dead, was immediately taken to the hall of judgment. There were, it was believed, two parts to the hearing that took place next. The first was the "negative confession." As stated above, the deceased addressed the gods and proclaimed himself to be sin free. Reciting the 42 Negative Confessions begins thusly:

Hail to thee, great God, Lord of the Two Truths. I have come unto thee, my Lord, that thou mayest bring me to see thy beauty. I know thee, I know thy name, I know the names of the 42 Gods who are with thee in this broad hall of the Two Truths . . . Behold, I am come unto thee. I have brought thee truth; I have done away with sin for thee. I have not sinned against anyone. I have not mistreated people. I have not done evil instead of righteousness . . .

Then the deceased recited them before Osiris and Thoth. They read like the Torah of Judaism.

Repentance and good works and good deeds was his salvation before Osiris; living a life that typified the 42 Negative Confessions had opened the "Ladder to Heaven" to him for he had lived like the God of Harmony in whom he lived and moved and had his "being".

The statements in the confession corresponded with the desire to separate one from his sins, the ultimate goal of the judgement. What's more, the statements reflect that the confessor is not being made to answer to moral laws of the gods, but to attest to his previous social character among the living. As the confession was recited, the scales of the balance would either stay in equilibrium, indicating that his heart was not heavy and he thus told the truth, or would tip, indicating that his heart was made heavy with falsehood. Anubis would be present to verify the results and bring the scales in balance, and also to reassure the confessor, since Anubis, who presided over mummification, was presumed to have much knowledge about the dead. Thoth, the god of the written word, would record the results which would exist for all Eternity.

There seems to be a similarity between the moral codes of the ancient Egyptians and the early Israelites. The Ten Commandments given by God to Moses on the top of Mount Sinai are clearly set in an Egyptian tradition and would seem to have common roots with the Egyptian Book of the Dead. Except for the first two commandments, we find the same moral rules in the Hebrew Bible that are also found in the Egyptian hieroglyphic writings. Egyptian religion was a Monotheistic belief that incorporated symbolic representation of the various attributes of the One God; these attributes were called the "neteru". These "neteru", hundreds of symbolic representations of Cosmic Powers, Forces, and Energies within the Godhead, mistakenly called "gods" and "goddesses" were worshiped in the Nile valley as part of God Himself. These deities were believed to manifest themselves in certain images and the artists of that time captured these images in pictures and statues. This was completely forbidden by the Monotheistic God of Moses in the first two of his commandments given in Chapter 20 of the Book of Exodus: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth."

Given what I said which is true you need ask yourself what prompted Moses to restrict the worship of God in this way. Let me give you a hint; it has to do with the over-abundant worship of the "God-man" symbol of Osiris which plagues Christianity as well today with the "Jesus Story". Now is not the time or the place to devote the space needed but just know that "the Christ" is not to be worship more than God in which he resides. The Father must come first and in the 18th Dynasty Osiris Worship (the God-man) was at its highest in the history of Egypt and God, the Father, was being overlooked and took a "second seat" to Osiris. Moses was to stop this by closing down all the Temple and enforcing the worship of the Sole Invisible God of the Cosmos; the Aten. Looking at the example of Moses and the reasons for the first two Commandments in the Decalogue then this is a strong rebuke for all our "Jesus Churches" where "Jesus as the symbolic Christ" is the focus of the Church and its worship. Now let us move on.

Also, unlike the Israelites, Egyptians believed in a second life after death. They believed that every person has, other than his physical body, a dual spiritual nature, which they called the "ka" (Spirit) and the "ba" (Soul). They also regarded the name and shadow of a person as "living entities", part of the spiritual existence, not just linguistic and natural phenomena. Thus Egyptians regarded death as simply a temporary interruption rather than a complete cessation of life, and believed that after their death, they faced a trial in the underworld before the god Osiris and his forty-two judges in the Hall of Judgement as mentioned above.

The Ten Commandments represent God's orders to humans given in the imperative form; the Egyptian texts use this form:

- Thou shalt not kill.
- Thou shalt not commit adultery.
- Thou shalt not steal.
- Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

The second part of the hearing in the Two Halls of Ma'at resulted from later beliefs that the Soul really did need to be pure.

Answer for yourself: What does "Ma'at" mean? Ma'at, unlike Hathor and Nephthys, seemed to be more of a concept than an actual goddess. Her name, literally, meant 'truth' in Egyptian. She was, really, the most important deity of them all. She was truth, order, balance and justice personified. She was harmony, she was what was right, she was what things should be. It was thought that if Ma'at didn't exist, the universe would become chaos, once again! For the Egyptian believed that the universe was above everything else an ordered and rational place. It functioned with predictability and regularity; the cycles of the universe always remained constant; in the moral sphere, purity was rewarded and sin was punished. Both morally and physically, the universe was in perfect balance. Because of Ma'at, the Egyptians knew that the universe, that everything in the universe, worked on a pattern, just as, later on, the Greeks called the underlying order of the universe logos (meaning, order, pattern).

The word, Maat translates "that which is straight." it implies anything that is true, ordered, or balanced. Maat was the female counterpart of Thoth [Wisdom]. You read about her in Proverbs.

Prov 1:20-23 20 Wisdom crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets: 21 She crieth in the chief place of concourse, in the openings of the gates: in the city she uttereth her words, saying, 22 How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and the scorners delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge? 23 Turn you at my reproof: behold, I will pour out my spirit unto you, I will make known my words unto you. (KJV)

Pour out "her Spirit"! Amazing, right before your eyes in our Christian Bible and Judaism is Egyptian Religion and we never recognize it simply because we are programed "not to". All male dominated religions have seen to that and around 2000 B.C.E. when the Northern Hemisphere invaded the Southern Hemisphere did mankind lose the Divine Feminine "goddess" understanding of God and "patriarchy" replaced "matriarchy". For all practical purposes the "Divine Feminine" of God has been completely removed from Christianity except of Mary and this is subjugated to a lesser position than "the Christ" when the facts of the matter is that they are both equal "neteru" as old as the oldest recorded religious literature on this Planet. Only when you study Gnosticism and Egyptian Religion can you recover these precious Divine Truths in the world today. One only has to look at the repression of women in the world, especially in far Eastern nations and religions to see the great evil of such a loss of Divine Truth, and by that I mean Islam especially and all forms of associated religious denigration of the feminine in creation. One thing I love about Judaism is that they teach that God created "woman" last and this is the Creator's greatest and highest creation ever! Greater than all the Planets and the Stars and Suns is the Cosmos personified is the glory of God in the woman of our species and she reflects the beauty of this God like no man can. God made his greatest and wisest Creation last in woman and Egypt recognized it is Isis for Osiris found "new life" only because of the Divine Feminine in Isis. These neteru are all parts that comprise this God equally but with different functions and purposes in Creation. Thus the need to understand the "neteru" correctly if you ever hope to understand this God in whom we exist.

This recording of the judgment of the Soul was presided over by Thoth, god of wisdom and reason (a neteru); the masculine counterpart of "Ma'at" (neteru are always in balanced pairs as the attributes of God). Here, the heart of the deceased is weighed against an ostrich feather, symbol of "Ma'at", god of truth and justice. Thoth (god of writing and scribes) weighed the heart... if the deceased had been found to not have followed the concept of ma'at during his life it would go well for him and risked missing the afterlife. It is not known whether the heart of an unpure person weighed more or less than the feather, only that a pure heart weighed the same. If the heart weighed the same, the nine great judges confirmed the decision that the deceased was worthy of Eternal Life. If not, it was thought, the deceased was thrown to Ammut the devourer, and the Soul's consciousness was extinguished. Once deemed worthy, the deceased was dressed in the form of Osiris in white linen and brought before the king of the dead. Since Osiris is wrapped in white linen as a mummy then no wonder in the World to Come that the saints will be robbed in white as well.

Rev 7:13 13 And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? (KJV)

Osiris announced the verdict and invited the deceased to roam freely with the other gods (neteru-Energies) in Heaven. He went to Heaven to become unified with the Cosmic Energy whom we call God and ascended to Heaven to return to the Deific Mind, Cosmic Energy we call God from which we all have Emanated. At this point, the deceased lived in eternal happiness.

At death, each individual becomes Osiris if declared justified or "true of voice", resuscitated into new life, as Isis did when she magically revived Osiris, and like Horus, who was declared as "telling the truth" in his physical and legal battles with Set over the inheritance of the kingship from Osiris. And believe it or not we read of this very "resuscitation" or "resurrection" of the dead, symbolized by Osiris, in our New Testaments in the raising of Lazarus. We have see this in earlier articles by showing the word-play between Asar/Osiris and Lazarus. It really makes you think and wonder about everything you have ever been taught as a Christian.

The Osiris cult transformed Egyptian religion greatly. Whereas before, religion consisted of warding off evil intentions of various gods, the Osiris cult created a sort of ethic in Egyptian life. An individual had to follow a moral code to have the promise of Eternal Life. This promise was offered to every man, and this explains the rapid growth of the cult.

Answer for yourself: What should this say to me or mean to me today? Much of what we have been taught to believe in Christianity comes from the Ancient Egyptian Religion and discernment of the Heavens by Spiritually intuitive sensitive sages and Priest of antiquity. Long ago these Spiritual geniuses saw God's Divine Message of the Soul in the "Pattern in the Mount" and brought this "Divine Harmony", "Ma'at" down to Earth for all mankind to both learn and live in their lives. For me only after a comparison of traditional Christian religious beliefs as compared to the original teachings of Ancient Egypt and even Judaism, its sister faith, from which they have come will assure me of what has been "altered" and "changed" down through the corridors of history by men with sinister and selfish motives. Rome tops the list in my opinion as they corrupted almost beyond belief this original "Soul Science"; the least of such is not just the corruption of the Divine Concept of "the Christ" whom they "literalized" and "carnalized" and limited to but one person but a host of other religious alterations and distortions were accomplished primarily because they hated the Jews and the Laws of God which condemned the Roman ethic and their brutality in the world. This is of major importance as you possibly already discerned in this article for both Ancient Egypt and Judaism both taught that obedience to God's Laws and Torah, the 42 Negative Confessions as its origin, along with the Torah of Moses, all of which are critical to achieving a condition of being acceptable to God where as my birth faith, Christianity, taught me that "Christ is the end of the Law" and that the "Law kills" and that "Rom 6:14 14 ...for ye are not under the law, but under grace"(KJV).

Let us continue our studies in the last few articles in this series.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #14

We have embarked on a most important study in these past articles. We have seen in the Sky and Heavens the very foundation for all later beliefs in "life after death" and the anticipated Soul's "Eternal Life" as depicted in the orbs of Heaven and their movements as interpreted and Spiritually perceived by the Ancient Egyptians. The ancient Egyptians called the region of the Heavens of which Orion is a part the "Duat". Hidden in this Duat appears to be the "Pattern" for the Soul's existence both "before" and "after" death of the body. This "cycle" of "life and death and rebirth" is depicted not only in the Sky and the Heavens but is also architecturally reproduced both on the ground at Giza as well as in the Pyramids themselves and tombs in Egypt. The Giza Plateau reflect the "Duat". Lest we forget the ancient Egyptian word "Duat" is the place believed by the ancient Egyptians to be the place where humans live after they die. Other names used for the Duat were Netherworld, Afterworld, Underworld, Otherworld, Sky World and Land of the Gods.

Answer for yourself: Did only ancient Egypt teach the Divine Concept of the Duat? No. Every culture, race, civilization, tribe, and nation has had a version of Duat in one form or the other. The Duat, written with the star ideogram, or sometimes a star enclosed in a circle, was what the Ancient Egyptians called the starry night Sky which is the home for the Soul. It was the equivalent of the Netherworld, the Otherworld, the place where the Souls of the dead reside and the region through which the Sun-god Ra, or Re travelled after his death each day in the Western horizon. Ancient Egypt saw in the Sun and its cycles representations of deeper Cosmological and Metaphysical truths concerning all Energies of the Cosmos; a "Pattern" if you will that is reproduced on many levels. To know the path of the Sun at night was to know the journey of the Soul after death.

Lets briefly touch on these "Patterns" in a different light and their implications for mankind to see what I mean. The Ancient Egyptians were aware of a vast range of scientific knowledge associated with regular cycles of cosmic activity and their predictable effects upon the Earth and upon mankind. The Egyptian's great God Ra, the Logos, was regarded by them (as Amen-Ra) as the unseen although immediate overall-Deity of our Local Universe, our Milky Way. Understand that the Egyptian Ra is the same God we believe in today in both Judaism, Islam, and Christianity; only the names given to God today in various religions the world over are different. So Ra was the God of our Milky Way and it is this Milky Way with all its galaxies, stars, planets and suns and Living Energies, both visible and invisible, was understood to exist within this Ra (God) and His enfolding and omnipresent breath, Emanation, or radiation. Our own Sun in our Solar System was thought of as but a very partial expression of Ra's "being"; kind of like just one "cell" that makes up a Living Organism. We can liken this to the nucleus of a cell. A cell is the smallest part of any living thing. There are many parts of a cell. Each part of a cell completes a certain function for the cell. Yet a cell has many things within it:

- Nucleus - directs the activity of a cell; it contains chromosomes with the DNA
- Cell Membrane - forms the outer boundary of the cell and allows only certain materials to move into or out of the cell

- Cytoplasm - a gel-like material inside the cell; it contains water and nutrients for the cell
- Nuclear Membrane - separates the nucleus from the cytoplasm
- Endoplasmic Reticulum - moves materials around in the cell
- Ribosomes - make protein for the cell
- Golgi Bodies - are used for packaging and secreting of energy
- Mitochondria - break down food and release energy to the cell
- Lysosomes - are chemicals used to digest waste
- Vacuoles - are storage areas for the cell

In similar fashion the whole Cosmos is likened to a cell with God as the nucleus and stars, planets, asteroids, Energy fields, Black Holes, etc., being being elements which are part of the life cycle of this God, this Living Cell. Thus our Solar System, including Earth, is but a small part of Ra's Being, God's Being, and manifestation. Consequently, our planet Earth has to be viewed again as a "microcosm" of Ra's "macrocosm", fulfilling a partial role in the life of His (God's) vast organic life cycle, and being therefore also directly subject to the effects felt within it of His feelings, His emotions, and His Divine Thoughts. This Living Organism, Earth, and its attendant atmosphere were where the Ancients believed those same "feelings, emotions, and thoughts" of Ra were experienced, seen, and felt by Mankind. Again Mankind was seen to be the offspring of Ra and the product of His Divine Thought and in so being "populated the Earth". These Ancient Egyptians regarded the Earth in its entirety as an integrated and Living Organism, a part of Ra, and the Earth's atmospheric sheaths as no less a vital part of a larger living, Breathing Living Organism (intake and outflow of Cosmic Energies on both a large and small scale). Therefore all phenomenal (our 5 senses) and sensatory effects in Nature were seen as the bodily functions of Ra (God). From this viewpoint the most basic of these effects in the Solar System derives from the "Breathing of Ra," which appears to result in "Regular Fluctuating Cycles of Expansion and Contraction" of the Living System as a whole. This cycle, as well as other cycles, both larger and smaller in scope, were seen in the Sky to be "repeating endlessly" thus constituting a "Pattern in the Mount". These same "cycles" were then seen repeated in Nature which responds to this Cosmic Living Energy as well as in the bodies of humankind. Take for instance a woman's cycle of menses which parallels the phase of the Moon; both being 28 days. In time man recognized that these cycles, "inflow" and "outflow" of the breath of Ra/God, in practical terms, seem to correlate with the phenomena of the solar wind and the eleven year sunspot cycle, and thus also with volcanic, earthquake, and climatic activity on our Planet, the "body" of which itself expands and contracts in response to the Solar Stimulus, the core Energy of our Solar System and representation to man of God as an Intelligent Living Energy. Other cycles were seen in the Earth's 365-day orbital passage around the Sun where the Earth experiences 4 roughly regular seasons. Beginning with the Spring Equinox and moving through out the year through the Summer Solstice, the Autumn Equinox, and the Winter Solstice, etc., the Ancient Egyptians and other nations as well noticed a Eternal Cycle occurring in the Solar System that had effects upon the Planet Earth that was likened to "birth, life, death, and rebirth". This Eternal Cycle of "birth, life, death, and rebirth" was witnessed first in the Stars and Heavens, then it was manifested in Nature as well in the human species. God was doing in mankind what He was showing them He was doing in Nature as well in the Sky and Heavens above. Stars were birthed and died, the Sun rose and set dying each dusk, the Moon has its birth reflecting the Energy of the Sun (a picture of God) as well as its waning and death only to be reborn again anew. Mind you this was not another Sun or another Moon; it was the "SAME" Moon and Sun that was reborn from the Dead!!! This is very important that you grasp that the Divine Concept exampled "Above and Below" is that the SAME ENERGY that dies is reborn in cyclical renewals. This was an Eternal Cycle of the Heavens that impacted Earth and all of mankind as well and from where mankind began to grasp the idea of Eternal Life after death. It is in these cycles and "Patterns in the Mount" that the ancient Egyptians saw a Divine Law: "So Above, So Below". What occurred in the Heavens occurred on a smaller scale on Earth and impacted mankind and even happened inside man's bodies. In fact many of these same "Solar Cycles" were seen to occur as smaller cycles inside this Living Nun, this living body of water in human bodies, especially in the female of the species. Mankind is truly a "microcosm" of Ra's "macrocosm" and like the overall examples above him and around him he saw "rebirth" from "the dead" everywhere and came to understand that he also would be enveloped by this "Pattern in the Mount".

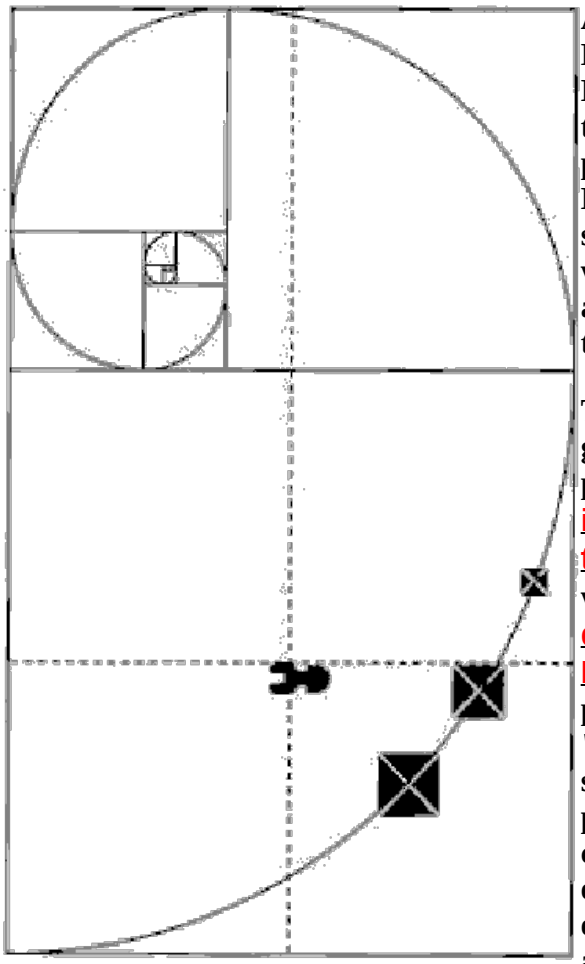
This is not the only cycle or "Pattern" by any shape of the imagination and we are not limited by "Patterns" in our Solar System only. It is far bigger than that. Not only this but our Solar System as a whole is moving in orbit within the plane of our nebuloid galaxy, the Milky Way and makes one complete revolution every 230 million years. However, different star groups within the Galaxy move at different speeds and consequently appear to describe different motions according to how far from the center of the Galaxy they are and also relative to our own constantly shifting viewing platform in space. Therefore our Solar System, located 3/4 of the way to the periphery of the Galaxy as seen on the left, is moving very fast indeed being toward the "outside" of the Galaxy as it spins. Another good view can be obtained at this link. Yet there exits levels to this "Pattern" also a secondary series of localized orbits or of Solar System within its own sector of the Galaxy, and it is this movement that we refer to when we speak of the Sun traveling around the Zodiac. In other words our Solar System "spirals" or "spins" within much larger Milky Way that also "spirals" or "spins". Again we see the "Pattern" maintained in levels of complexity.

Answer for yourself: Did notice another "Pattern" in this diagram above? There is a hint in the corners. Did you notice again this "Golden Spiral" which we mentioned in an earlier article? We see the same shape of the Milky Way as we do on Earth in the "Golden Spiral" in nature and in mankind (fingertips). The "golden ratio" that we read about in article #11. Again, we mentioned that a number of Giza researchers, including Max Toth, Rocky McCollum and William Buehler, have noticed that the arrangement of the three major Pyramids produces a short section of a Golden Mean Spiral. Again the Uranograph, the Chart of Heaven, is duplicated upon the Earth.



The Golden Spiral is a mystical shape that is an absolute in both abstract mathematics and chaotic nature. The "SPIR-al" is the movement of Creation. The Spiral, especially the Golden Spiral, is the most profound motion in the Cosmos and it lies at the very heart of the Milky Way. At the same time, it is the most profound design in the Universe. It is built into all life-forms, from seashells to man; including the nappy hair of the African. Our blood "spirals" in our veins. Plants spiral up from the soil. The fingertips of mankind are "spirals". All Galaxies are shaped as "spirals". All the orbits of Plants and Stars are circles or eclipticals. Flowers, nature, and even our inner cochlear in our ear is a spiral. God, the Supreme Power, spins spirals; it is the secret of the "SPIR-IT-AL". This Supreme Conscious Living Energy move or "spirals" in the Universe. Our entire Universe ever dances in spiral and rotations; everything in the Cosmos reflects this "Pattern in the Mount"; every reflects this "SPIRaling, SPIRitual" essence out of which it is made. The orbit of electrons around the Atom, which are the basic building blocks of all matter, is in the shape of a spiral. The plants are round as are the Suns and stars. Everything is ALIVE with SPIRIT-Energy, everything is ALIVE with God, the Cosmic Intelligent Energy, the vital force or Energy as the animating life-force within all living beings including mankind. And all these Energies, no matter what manifestation, be it inorganic or organic, visible on invisible are related and interconnected with the main Cosmic Energy "battery" we call God. In many languages, the word for Spirit, Breath, and Air are identical. The Latin has for this the word "spiritus". For breath and life are One (Susar, Blacked Out Through Whitewash, p. 7-8).

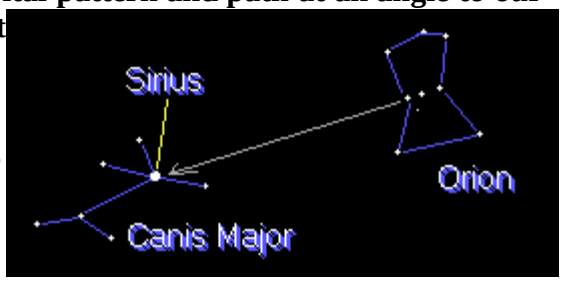
In Sacred Geometry the spiral is derived via the golden rectangle, a unique rectangle which has the golden ratio. When squared, it leaves a smaller rectangle behind, which has the same golden ratio as the previous rectangle. The squaring can continue indefinitely with the same result. No other rectangle has this trait. When you connect a curve through the corners of these concentric rectangles, you have formed the golden spiral. The Phythagoreans, who were tutored again by Ancient Egypt, loved this shape for they found it everywhere in nature: the Nautilus Shell, Ram's horns, milk in coffee, the face of a Sunflower, your fingerprints, our DNA, and the shape of the Milky Way.



Again we see the "Pattern in the Mount"; in Heaven as seen in the Milky Way, galaxies, stars and planets is also reproduced on earth in Nature and in Egypt where the Giza Plateau was built accordingly by the Ancient Egyptians. In the diagram on the left we see the Sphinx pointing due East and the arrangement of the 3 Pyramids on the Giza Mount that are built not only according to the alignment of the 3 stars in Orions' belt but they both correspond to the Golden mean. So we see that the Egyptians used the Golden Ratio for their Pyramids and the layout of the three great Pyramids of Giza use the curve of the Golden Ratio that is predominant shape of the Cosmos.

This circular path that the Sun follows, relative to adjacent star groups, is called the "ecliptic". The ecliptic plane is the geometric plane that contains the orbit of the Earth. The ecliptic is the intersection of the ecliptic plane (the path of the Earth around the Sun) and the celestial sphere. A more intuitive definition would be to say that the ecliptic is the apparent path of the Sun during a year as seen from Earth (the same as the path of the Earth round the Sun from our vantage point). The orbits of most planets in the Solar System lie very close to it; again adhering to a "Pattern". Seen from the Earth, this is a bisecting great circle, superimposed upon the celestial sphere, which contains the different points of the Sun's path, relative to the background stars, over the course of a year. The Zodiac also lies along the ecliptic plane. The ecliptic plane is inclined by -23.5°, with respect to the celestial equator; a result of axial tilt. Because there are 365.25 days in a year and 360 degrees in a circle, the Sun appears to move along the ecliptic at a rate of about 1° per day. This motion is from west to east, in opposition to the apparent east-west movement of the celestial sphere. More important for us is the fact that the ecliptic and the celestial equator intersect at two points, forming a "Cross" in the Sky, directly opposite one another. Twice a year, on the Vernal Equinox and the Autumn Equinox the Sun moves "across" this "Cross" in the Heavens. When this happened, in the Spring and the Fall, it was said that the "Son of the Sun" was "on the Cross". It is from this we get the idea that God dies that we might have life; especially at the Spring Equinox when the Earth blooms in new life from the death of Winter. More on this "Cross" at a later date and its implications for the "Jesus Story". These times of the Sun's crossing of this Celestial Cross are the Equinoxes and when the Sun appears at these points, day and night are each about 12 hours long at all locations on Earth.

During the period of a single year the Sun in its own orbital path in space appears from Earth to pass once around the Zodiac, returning to its point of origin at the Vernal Equinox. However, in every year that it does so, it arrives "very slightly late" and, as a result, is seen to cross the celestial equator marginally behind the "exact" location of the Zodiac that it crossed "exactly" a year before. The time/distance deficit resulting from this amounts to precisely one degree of arc every 72 years. Rather interestingly, this "very slightly late" amounts to just over 5 days, or 1/72 part of one degree. Thus the true orbital cycle is 360 degrees (in what would otherwise take 360 days) is extended by this short extra period as a direct result of the forward orbital movement in space of our solar system and its centrifugal effect upon the Earth's own orbit. The Egyptians recognized this fact and consequently allocated 12 equal months (30 days each) to their year, with 5 extra days, called "epagomenal days", as festive days separately dedicated to Osiris, Isis, Nephthys, Set and Horus the Elder. As a consequence of this annual loss, the Sun appears to regress through the entire Zodiac in approximately 25,920 years, thus passing through one Zodiacal sign every 2,160 years (called Ages). This overall retrograde motion is called "the Precession of the Equinoxes". Its 25,920 year cycle has been refereed to variously as "Annus Magnus," or the "Platonic Year," or "Great Sidereal Year". Know that 360 years is exactly 1/72 part of a complete Platonic Year of 25,920 years while the "epagomenal" period is 1/72 of a complete Earth year. But in all of this we see that Divine Fixed Laws operate the Cosmos precisely, a "Pattern" on a gigantic scale that affects the smallest leaf on our Planet; a "Pattern in the Mount" that has existed since the beginning of time and Egypt "recognized this" and such awareness became the very foundations for their Spiritual Beliefs and the "Patterns" for all their religious beliefs, many of which we have today as well as many sadly that we do not.

This "Pattern" goes on even further. Like our Earth that follows an orbital pattern and path at an angle to our Sun called the ecliptic, likewise our Sun follows a similar "ecliptic" orbit around its own Sun. Yes, our Sun has its own Sun. The "Pattern" continues as you see. Our Sun and Solar System revolves around a greater and more powerful Sun that is itself responsible for the motion in space of which we spoke above and it is the Christmas Star, Sirius. If you look real hard you can see it leading the 3 stars, or should I say "Wise Men", to the baby "Jesus".

Answer for yourself: Could it be that this orbit of our Sun around its own Sun, Sirius, follows exactly this same 25, 920 year path above and is itself the very reason for not only the Precession of the Equinoxes, but also the designated circumpolar stars (the undying stars)? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Could it not follow that, following a similar "Pattern", that this 25,920 year cycle also produces its "own seasons" of about 6,480 (1/4 of 25,920 years) years macrocosmically comparable with out own Earth 4 seasons of about 90 days each? Here again the ratio is 1/72.

Answer for yourself: Does our Solar System experience its own Equinoxes and Solstices as does our Planet? Is this "Divine Pattern" affecting Cosmic Energy everywhere? Are there "Celestial Seasons" as we experience on a smaller scale on Earth? Are we approaching the Sidereal equivalent of the Summer Solstice and could this be the reason why we are beginning to experience Global Warming and the vanishing of the polar ice caps? Has this happened before and are there records of it on the Planet? Yes, twice!

This was somewhat technical and I apologize but you need to see the extent of this "Pattern in the Mount". But more to the point we find these "Patterns" drawing us a picture that is truthful and we can expect God to do the same things that He has always done; especially as it affects us and our Living Energy call the Soul. Astrophysicists are already aware of the fact that the gravitational field of our Solar System extends about halfway to the nearest star. These Astrophysicists tell us that "Space" if full of "Energy fields". This is important when we consider the Soul as a form of Divine Energy emanated from Ra, God. Now important for us to know in tis study is that the angular path of the ecliptic appears to pass through the Milky Way at two very important points:

- Between Taurus and Gemini on the one side (the Norther Stargate)
- Between Scorpio and Sagittarius on the other (the Southern Stargate)

Answer for yourself: Why is this important? The Egyptian Book of the Dead, the manual of resurrection technology, identifies both the flacon and the phoenix as key icons, each of which is apparently associated with a specific directional portal or doorway in the Sky which was believed to be the "path" for the Soul (a Living Cosmic Energy). In chapter 13 in the Egyptian Book of the Dead, the afterlife journey says: "I have gone in as a falcon, I have come out as a phoenix".

Answer for yourself: What does this mean?

The former, the falcon, corresponds to the Southern Stargate of of what may be termed "ex-carnation" ("gone in" to the Otherworld at death of the body), providing a conduit for the Soul to leave the body after death. The latter bird, the phoenix, corresponds to the Northern Stargate of incarnation ("come out" to the Earth) allowing the Soul to return to a new body. Now the Northern Stargate of incarnation is located between the Constellations of Gemini and Taurus and the Southern Stargate is located at the opposite end of the Milky Way between the Constellations Sagittarius and Scorpio. This latter region of the Sky, Sagittarius and Scorpio, points to the very center of our galaxy, where scientists believe a mysterious Black Hole lies hidden. We need not forget that all "Black Holes" have "entries" and "exists" points.

Answer for yourself: Could a "Black Hole" or a "Wormhole" be a scientific name for what the Ancient Egyptians knew existed thousands of years ago? This might seen improbable for Egypt to know such things; that is until you begin a serious study of their Religious beliefs and then you will be persuaded that today mankind is in a "period of rediscovery" of what Ancient Egypt knew tens of thousands of years ago. R. A. Schwaller de Lebuicz, in the 1940s and 1950s, demonstrated conclusively that the Ancient Egyptians not only understood astronomical science so well that they recognized the 25,920 year period of the precession of the Equinoxes but they also founded every aspect of their civilization upon a star-oriented, religio-mystical culture derived from such knowledge.

Answer for yourself: More to the point are Black Holes the "Breath of Ra" where He "breaths in Souls (ex-carnation of Living Energies at the death of the body) and exhales Souls again" (incarnation of Living Souls into bodies)? Are Black Holes the "Ladder to Heaven"? Are they "Stargates" for the Soul? The "Patterns" are there and if we apply them "macrocosmically" and "microcosmically" the results are astounding.

Answer for yourself: Is it a coincidence that 4 of the mutually facing astrological symbols found in these pairs of Constellations above which are connected to these Northern and Southern "Stargates" are also the Heavenly Creatures of Ezekiel's vision, the Bull, Lion, Eagle, and Man (is the path of the Soul in the Sky)? Why is one in the image of Man? Is "incarnation" associated with one of these portals and the portal for the Soul?

What we have been teaching is the Cosmic ramifications of the cycle of "birth, life, and death" and how it might actually occur. These Religious ideas, central to the Egyptian Religion, were inscribed in the Pyramid Texts of which again were the funerary inscriptions that were written on the walls of the early Ancient Egyptian pyramids at Sakkara. These date back to the fifth and sixth dynasties, approximately the years 2350-2175 B.C.E. and possibly much older in the minds of many archeologists.

It is important to note that the Pyramids built after Khufu's that were inscribed with hieroglyphic texts that describe the King's desire to unite with the Sun-God Re in death and travel in the solar boat either as Re, or as himself united with Re. It was thought that the Souls of the dead could be ferried out of the Duat by entering into the boat of Re as he passed through and in so doing they would arise from the Duat with the Sun in the Eastern horizon at dawn to be reborn into a new existence. Then he would experience "Eternal Life". It is because of this strong Spiritual Belief that at death the very "life/conscious Living Energy" we call "the Soul" would live with God in the Heavens that the "stars" were painted on the ceilings of the various tombs and that the Pyramid texts from the fifth and sixth dynasties, approximately the years 2350-2175 B.C.E., adorn these Pyramids. However, because of extensive internal evidence, it is believed that they were composed much earlier, circa 3000 B.C.E. The Pyramid Texts are, therefore, essentially the oldest sacred texts known to man today. The Duat was pictured on the ceilings of tombs and lids of sarcophagi as the star spangled body of the goddess Nut, the mother of Osiris. This teaches us that when we die we go to "the stars", "to Heaven" and our resurrection is not to be in a physical body as we are erroneously taught today.

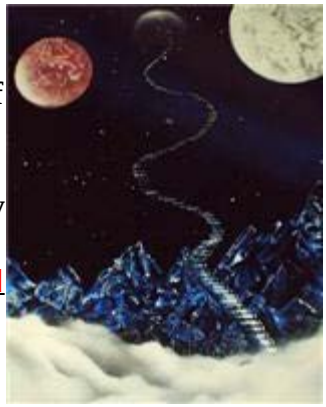
As an anthropomorphism of the Sky, Geb's (the Earth personified) wife Nut is conceptualized as arching face down over her supine husband, who is sometimes portrayed in an ithyphallic manner. Her fingers and toes form the horizon, while stars glisten like semen on her dusky belly. Both figures are positioned in the same direction, though some confusion exists about exactly which direction they are oriented. Although the couple is sometimes seen with their heads pointing toward the west, it makes more sense that the torso of Nut would represent the north-south orientation of the Milky Way/Nile as seen during the pre-dawn and post-dusk periods of the vernal and autumnal equinoxes. If we accept this positioning, her four outstretched limbs could represent the sunrise and sunset solstice points on the horizon, while her vagina could signify the Northern Stargate and her mouth the Southern Stargate. In this case, her head would be pointed south (similar to the Orion Correlation at Giza). Egyptian lore recounts that when the Milky Way hugs the northern horizon, arching from east to west during the pre-dawn winter solstice, Nut comes down to Earth to lie with her husband Geb. Heaven has come to Earth according to the "Pattern in the Mount".

Answer for yourself: What should this teach us?



Here in the Cosmos there exists Divine Laws, Cycles, and Patterns that are Eternal. This "Cosmic Living Energy", symbolized in the Sun, is, at the end of its life-cycle, only "re-channeled" again into a new existences. Thus the Sun was seen, in its never ending cycles of "death and rebirth", dusk and dawn, associated with resurrection by being swallowed by his mother Nut at evening to pass through her and be reborn each day anew. As this Living Energy as the Sun entered into this "portal" is was believed that it symbolized the same for the Living Energy called the Soul of mankind which itself is a Living Spirit-Energy. The "Pattern" applies to the Soul as its applies in the Heavens above and in Nature below. This should speak to us of "Eternal Life" and Eternal Consciousness with God. This is the core of the religious beliefs of Ancient Egypt because they witnessed this in operation in the Sky above them and in Nature around them and even in their own bodies; they then reasoned that mankind was "created in the Image of God" and the only God that they could "see" was revealing Himself "from Above and Below".

Nut, as the goddess of the Heavens and the Sky as well as the Duat, is seen swallowing the Sun (the Living Energy of God) in the West and giving birth to it in the East, her hands and feet resting on the western and eastern horizons. This was understood by the Ancient Egyptians as symbolic for a higher "Portal" that served as the "pathway" of the Soul's incarnation and ex-carnation. Nut, the personified Sky and Heavens, as she swallows the Sun with her mouth only to give birth to it at dawn with her loins, then represents resurrection of life, the cycling of all Energies and Life. This is a picture again of the Duat; a passageway in the Sky for "comings and goings. This is the "portal" and the "Stargate" and the "Stairway to Heaven" for the "Descent and re-ascent of the Soul". This was called by the Ancient Egyptians the "Breath of Ra"; in one instant "God breathed" and exhaled and the "Soul Emanated" from Ra/the Father God, and descended into matter (humankind) and when "God breathed again" and inhaled then God "took within Himself" once again that "Living Energy" (death) which had parted from Him in the creation of "life and existence". This is the "Eternal Cycle" of life, the "Pattern in the Mount" that never ends in a self-perpetuating Living Cosmos of which man is but a microcosm of the macrocosm.

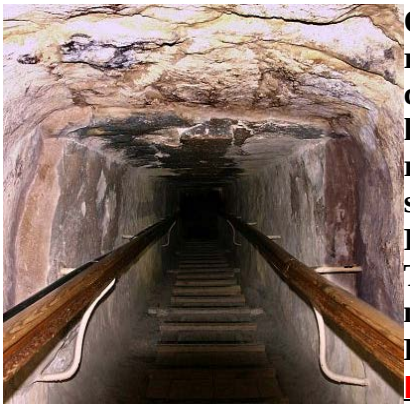
Answer for yourself: What else can we learn from this ancient Egyptian Religion? The Ancients understood that this "descent" and "re-ascent" occurs through a "portal" or a "Stargate" in the Sky; a pathway for the Soul, as one of the many "Energies" of the Father/Consciousness, where it "descends" into matter and "ascends" back to the Father Energy of All at the death of the physical body. This region in the Heavens where the Soul "ascends" and "descends" is called again the Duat. The Duat was a very important place for them, and they believed that the Soul was taken there after death. It was so important that they reproduced this Duat, this Soul Portal, on the Giza Plateau. But this Duat was seen not only as a region of the Sky but also as a parallel universe where the Soul had to undergo tests and judgment. This was discussed above.

Answer for yourself: What does science today have to say about this?

Scientists say that "Wormholes" in Space provide a quick and easy way to traverse vast expanses of space without the passage of time - something which, according to traditional Newtonian physics, should be impossible. But we are finding that it is not the more we learn of Quantum Physics. Ever since scientists realized that there are such things as Black Holes, they have wondered what would happen if you travel into one. One theory says that "Black Holes" are so dense that they actually rip the fabric of space, effectively connecting sections of space which would normally be too far apart to even communicate. A Wormhole is this idea taken one step further. A Wormhole would create a gateway through which objects, matter, or Energy could actually travel - back and forth - without getting ripped apart like they would in a Black Hole. And to make things even more fantastic, Wormholes could effectively connect not only different parts of the Universe, but even different Universes!



Black Holes suck in objects but -- according to Einstein's general theory of relativity that time reversal is possible -- objects that travel through Black Holes could theoretically be spewed out of other holes. Such holes are called White Holes. There is also a theory that Black and White Holes are connected by tunnels, which are called Wormholes. Black Holes are the final stage of a star's development. But in extraordinary times, such as the start of the Universe, Wormholes could be created. If the changing nature of space and time is considered, it's better to think that Wormholes appear and disappear. By thinking closely about Wormholes, it's possible to understand that there is a different world to the one we live on. If we consider both these worlds as being parallel, Wormholes are like a space-time tunnel that joins our world to the other whatever it might be; Heaven for example.

Answer for yourself: Could this "parallel Universe" be Heaven? Many think it is.

Life after death may be explained by the deceased's life-force moving to another "plane" (parallel universe) via a transverse Wormhole, and visits by spirits of the deceased may visit back here by the same method. Ancient Egypt was way ahead of their time as they envisioned this and expressed their dynamics of this in their Religion. If this is true, nobody truly dies. But yet we already believe this in the major world religions; we are Living Energies that just "evolve" in other manifestations as the Sefirot and Kabbalah suggest. Egypt again taught it first thousands and thousands of years ago and today mankind really is in a period of "rediscovery". In some cases, where reincarnation is shown the visiting life force may "take" with a newborn child; "descent and ascent of the Soul" in its pilgrimage to complete perfection. Egypt knew this and reproduced this Spiritual Concept according to the Uranography in the Sky upon the Giza Plateau when they constructed the Earthly representation of the Duat with it "pathways, portals, Stargates, etc..

On the left is such "corridor" or "pathway" in the Pyramids. This place was regarded as a narrow corridor that sometimes ended in a gallery. It is no coincidence that images of these corridors and galleries in the Sky and Heaven have a "terrestrial" representation in Egyptian architecture and have a certain resemblance to the corridors and Grand Gallery in the Great Pyramid at Giza as seen on the left. Many once thought that the Pyramids were tombs for the dead Pharaohs but strangely no one ever found a body of a Pharaoh in a Pyramid. The Pyramids were not their Earthy tombs. Current thinking is that the monuments at Giza, as were other Pyramids, were built not as graves for the Pharaohs but as a place to prepare for the Soul´s journey after death to the Duat. Graham Hancock and others believe that these Pyramids were like a huge three-dimensional game where the initiates submitted themselves to tests -- maybe in total darkness, maybe for many days, and with powerful alterations in mental states -- to raise and strengthen their consciousness and to prepare themselves for the challenges of death so that when death came, the individual would not become confused and get lost in the Duat, in the life after this one.

In the current development of Western civilization, there appears to exist a popular notion of the existence of some sort of Stargate or portal as a sort of cosmic corridor leading to a whole new world or a dimension radically different from ours. The cult classics movies like Stargate and Contact as well as astrophysicists' theories about Wormholes, a common household word today in the wake of the enormous success of both the television series and movie Star Trek and its sequels has sharpened man's understanding of the Cosmos in important ways. Heaven looks different to us today than ever before. Believe it or not this phenomenon is not new but accompanied human beings' first realization of their own individual mortality as far back an Ancient Egypt. Even if Near Death Experiences may not have been common in our evolutionary history, they were certainly not unknown either. NDEs could have correlated the long tunnel which takes us to brilliant white light of the afterlife and the birth canal which brings us into this life. Both may be considered as forms of Stargates-- the Soul's passageway to and from the celestial realm.

If we put all of this information together we begin to see clearly that Egypt is a multi-dimensional Stargate. It possesses a portal of high energy located on a major earth grid and because the veil between dimensions is thin the communication with the divine is heightened. The Ancient Ones depicted Egypt as a "Stairway to Heaven" by reproducing a map of the stars onto the Temples on Earth. As above so below! The more we study the more we see for certain that Ancient Egypt created a harmonious cosmology that reflected a conscious spiritual reality based on direct knowingness of the Natural Laws of the Universe. Not only that but they created physical structures that mimic the harmonic golden ratio found in nature and in so doing conformed the the Uranography in the Sky many other such structures. They aligned their pyramids and temples, or Libraries in Stone with the stars and placed them on specific Earth grids to establish sacred space (holiness). Again this is proof that they were aware of the "Pattern in the Mount" and consciously tried to reproduce "Heaven on Earth".

In the next article we will continue this study as we examine the actual transition of the Living Energy from death unto life.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #15

Now we return to ideas found in ancient Egyptian texts and the "science" and "astronomy" is over for now. "Thank goodness" I can hear readers say. We want to look at the Soul's transformation as it relates to the Duat; at it emerges from the death of the body and its later transformation and renewal into new life as understood by the Ancient Egyptians.

In the Egyptian The Book of the Dead, an Ancient Egyptian manual of resurrection technology, I made mention earlier that it identifies both the falcon and the heron/phoenix as key icons, each of which is apparently associated with a specific directional portal or doorway in the Sky and in the Duat. This is the "ladder to Heaven" of which we read in Genesis and the "Stairway to Heaven" to which Led Zeppelin sings. By the way I love that song.

In Chapter 13, in the Ritual, the Book of the Dead, the Spell for going in and out of the West (symbolic of the Underworld), the afterlife journeyer states: "I have gone in as a falcon, I have come out as a phoenix..." (The Egyptian Book of the Dead, translated by Raymond O. Faulkner (Austin: University of Texas Press), 1990, 1985, 1972), p. 37). The former bird (falcon) corresponds to the Southern Stargate of what may be termed "ex-carnation," ("..gone in..." to the Underworld/Otherword...Hades...the realm of the dead), providing a conduit for the Soul to leave the body after the death of the body). The latter bird, the (phoenix) corresponds to the Northern Stargate of incarnation ("...come out..." into the Earth, incarnation of the Soul into a new life), allowing the Soul to return to a new body.

Answer for yourself: What should we know about this "phoenix?

The Ancient Egyptians linked the myth of the phoenix with the longings for immortality that were so strong in their civilization, and from there its symbolism spread around the Mediterranean world of late antiquity. The Bennu bird was was usually depicted as a heron/phoenix. Archaeologists have found the remains of a much larger heron that lived in the Persian Gulf area 5,000 years ago. The Egyptians may have seen this large bird only as an extremely rare visitor or possibly heard tales of it from travelers who had trading expeditions to the Arabian Seas. There are Chinese, Japanese, Russian, Egyptian, and Native American counterparts of the Phoenix and all of these birds are identified with the Sun.

It had a two long feathers on the crest of it's head and was often crowned with the Atef crown of Osiris (the White Crown with two ostrich plumes on either side) or with the disk of the Sun because the Sun was seen to by a cyclical representation of a Cosmic Eternal Law that expressed the Universal truth of "birth, life, death, and rebirth".

The Bennu, the Egyptian phoenix, was the sacred bird of Heliopolis. Bennu probably derives from the word weben, meaning "rise" or "shine." The Bennu was associated with the Sun and represented the "ba" or Soul of the Sun god, Re. In the Late Period, the hieroglyph of the bird was used to represent this deity directly. As such it is a symbol of the rising and setting Sun (birth, life, death, and rebirth).

This Egyptian phoenix was also associated with the inundation of the Nile and of the creation (again the Nile was a symbol of Nature teaching these same Cosmic Laws of "birth, life, death, and rebirth" which was associated with its yearly flooding and the "salvation" of the Egyptian people). Standing alone on isolated rocks of islands of high ground during the floods the heron represented the first life to appear on the primeval mound which rose from the watery chaos at the first creation. This mound was called the ben-ben. It was the Bennu bird's cry at the creation of the world that marked the beginning of time. Therefore you can see why the Bennu or the phoenix was considered a symbolic manifestation of the cyclical nature of the Cosmos and its "Pattern" of "birth, life, death, and rebirth"; thus it represented as well the resurrected Osiris and the bird was often shown perched in his sacred willow tree.

At the close of the first century Clement of Rome became the first Christian to interpret the myth of the phoenix as an allegory of the resurrection and of life after death. The phoenix was also compared to undying Rome, and it appears on the coinage of the late Roman Empire as a symbol of the Eternal City.

Having said that then understand in in the Egyptian Book of the Dead there exists a Chapter (these chapters are also called "Spells") which deals with being transformed into a divine falcon (a bird with great sight in the Heavens...think of great sight and Spiritual perception, the ability to peer far into the Heavens, celestial sight). This is why Horus, the Egyptian Christ is depicted as having a hawk's head. In Chapter 78 the Messenger addresses Osiris: "O Lord of the Soul, greatly majestic, see, I have come, the Netherworld (ascent of the Soul at the death of the body) has been opened for me, the roads in the Sky and on earth have been opened for me, and there was none who thwarted me" (Spell 78, The Book of the Dead, op. cit., pp. 77-78). There appears to be roads and paths in the Sky that connect to Earth in the minds of the Egyptians; kind of like "Energy doorways".

In the same manner the Spell for being transformed into a phoenix (renewed life in the descent of the Soul into a new body) states:

"I am vindicated on earth, and the terror of me is in the Sky -- and vice versa; it is my strength which makes me victorious to the height of the Sky, I am held in respect to the breadth of the Sky, my strides are towards the towns of the Silent Land (the realm of the dead..the body was the realm of Soulish death as we have learned previously)" (Spell 84, Ibid., pp. 81-82).

Spell 17 proclaims: "I am that great phoenix which is in Heliopolis (in Lower Egypt to the north), the supervisor of what exists... I go on the road which I know in front of the Island of the Just. What is it? It is Rosetjau [or Rostau, the Netherworld in preparation for the Soul's descent]. The southern gate is in Naref [the necropolis at Heracleopolis, near the Faiyum, or the lake and marshy area West of the Nile in Middle Egypt], the northern gate is in the Mound of Osiris [Heliopolis]; as for the Island of the Just, it is Abydos [Upper Egypt far to the south]." (Ibid., pp. 44-45).

Answer for yourself: What does all of this mean to us? First of all Egypt is known as the Two Lands: Lower Egypt and Upper Egypt. Following the Hermetic maxim "As Above, So Below", these correspond to this Norther and Southern Stargates respectively, located along the Celestial Nile River which we have learned is the Milky Way.

The oasis of the Faiyum refers to the naturalistic origin of the concept of the Field of Rushes, or Field of Reeds, a sort of Egyptian Elysian Fields. This is the water that the Hebrews had to "allegorically" cross to "go up" and become the "people of God". This is their "born again" (ascent to Spirituality) experience that happens in our bodies of water. Israel was to experience both "terrestrially" and "celestially" this Spiritual ascent as a nation of individuals; first "physically" and then "Spiritually" and this was likened on Earth to what exists in the Sky and Heavens according to "the Pattern in the Mount". This crossing of the "Field of Reeds" is their "Second Birth". Apply what we have learned from earlier articles here and bring it together as we recall that the animal nature, represented by the first birth, Virgo, the "water-mother" must be subdued for the Pisces birth, representative of the Second Birth of the "Fish-mother" and the "Spiritual Nature" as seen in the depiction of the "two fish". Recall the important articles on "Jesus two births and two Mothers" and the other one about the Early Christian Fathers teaching that Jesus had two births; one at the Spring Equinox and the Winters Solstice; something impossible for a human literal person but no so for a "religion myth" depicting Spiritual Truths. When you master these Spiritual Concepts in these above articles then you can see a much deeper level of what is actually going on here in the texts we read; especially in light that few Egyptologists and theologians today actually believe that millions of people crossed the Red Sea when in fact it was not the direction that Israel and Akhenaten and his followers would have taken to Palestine. For some years now, a battle has raged among biblical scholars over whether or not the Old Testament record of the conquest of Canaan is accurate. Archeologist have discovered, for example, that Jericho was destroyed around 1550 B.C., and that it remained uninhabited for more than 150 years thereafter. On that basis, one can conclude that concluded that Joshua could not have conquered Jericho in 1400 B.C., since “findings” showed no city to be in existence on this site at that time. The truth is that virtually every modern archeologist who has investigated not only the Jericho problem but the story of the Exodus, with very few exceptions, agrees that the way the Bible describes the Exodus and the conquest of Canaan is not the way it happened, if it happened at all. After a century of excavations trying to prove the accounts true, archeologists say there is no conclusive evidence that the Israelites were ever in Egypt in the numbers depicted in the Bible, were ever enslaved like the Bible portrays, ever wandered in the Sinai wilderness for 40 years or ever conquered the land of Canaan under Joshua's leadership. To the contrary, the prevailing view is that most of Joshua's fabled military campaigns never occurred -- archeologists have uncovered ash layers and other signs of destruction at the relevant time at only one of the many battlegrounds mentioned in the Bible. The bottom line is that the "literal" interpretation and the historical accuracy of the Bible, therefore, was called into question. This is all the more evident when one gains the "keys" to interpret this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom in the Old and New Testaments the way it was intended; namely, allegorically and symbolically.

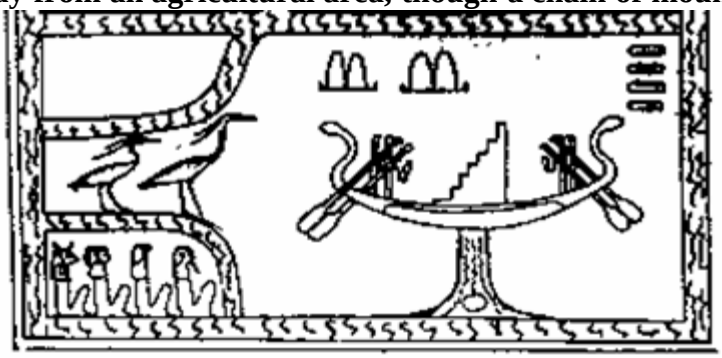
Some of the vignettes, or pictures in the Book of the Dead, for this region depict the Phoenix perched upon a small Pyramid. It is interesting to note that the hieroglyph of a Phoenix upon a Pyramid corresponds to the word "bah", meaning “to flood, to inundate Also shown in the Book of the Dead is a celestial bark containing a staircase (think Ladder to Heaven rather like half of a stepped Pyramid cut vertically), which connotes transcendence.



Answer for yourself: Was this "Ladder to Heaven" so reproduced in the "stepped Pyramid"? Yes it was; this is the Pharaoh's stairway to the Heaven. I want you to focus on the representation on the left for now. This is a simulated view looking north. The pole star is in the center of all of the rings. The pole star is part of the Circumpolar Stars that never set or dip below the horizon which meant Spiritually to Ancient Egypt that they, as Living Energies, "never die"; thus the Ladder to Heaven for Eternally Living Energies as mankind. Each band or layer of the pyramid represented five degrees of the dome of the sky (with the exception of the base layer due to other considerations). The circular pathways of the stars intersect with the pyramid as they rotate in the sky and become infused into the quadrangular tiers of the structure. So here before us is the "Ladder to Heaven" reproduced on Earth according to the Uranograph in the Sky and Heavens which again speaks to us about Ancient Egypt and their Spiritual beliefs about the Soul of mankind which the Ancient Egyptians came to recognize and understand as they both saw and studied God's Cosmic Laws of the Universe.

Let us not forget that the Pyramid Texts describe the ascent of the departed King to the Sky. He joins Orion (Osiris), and Sirius is his guide. They continue together as participants in the cosmic cycle. A similar wish is expressed in other texts. The spirits of the dead hope to join the never-setting, never-dying, Circumpolar Stars. These two possible transfigurations, in which the dead Pharaoh joins Osiris or the Circumpolar stars (in Osiris, in Horus, in Christ), explain the orientation of the so-called air shafts, in reality really "Soul Shafts" as we have seen originating from the King's Chamber in the Great Pyramid. They are ramps by which the dead King makes his way to Heaven" (E. C. Krupp, Astronomers, Pyramids and Priests in In Search of Ancient Astronomies). As well let us never forget that all the ancients, like many alive today, when they spoke of "Heaven" they meant "the Sky." The Bible even uses the same words for both, interchangeably. "The kingdom of heaven" is [literally] the same as "the kingdom of the sky."

Commenting on Egyptian funerary literature, the renowned scholar Zecharia Sitchin writes: "The pictorial depictions which accompanied the hieroglyphic texts surprisingly showed the Stream of Osiris as meandering its way from an agricultural area, though a chain of mountains, to where the stream divides into tributaries.

There, watched over by the legendary Phoenix birds, the Stairway to Heaven was situated; there, the Celestial Boat of Ra was depicted as sitting atop a mountain, or rising heavenward upon streams of fire" (Zecharia Sitchin, Stairway to Heaven: Book II of the Earth Chronicles (New York: Avon Books, 1983, 1980), p. 50). In papyrus illustrations of The Field of Rushes (the Field of Reeds and the Oasis) we also find either the falcon or a small, human-headed bird representing the ba (homonym of the "ba"), or the Soul, perched atop a pylon, which is a massive rectangular gateway to a temple or hypostyle hall (Faulkner, The Book of the Dead, op. cit., p. 105, p. 106, p. 110).

Answer for yourself: What should this say to us? The pylon is a perfect symbol for the stargate or the portal that "rises" into Heaven for our Soul to follow and return. Often the Soul, symbolized by a bird which can fly into the Heavens, is seen hovering over the the dead.

Egypt is known as the Two Lands: Lower Egypt and Upper Egypt. According to the Uranograph we have already likened this to the two natures of man; animal and Spiritual. We have already mentioned the necessity of a "second birth" and a "second mother" for the Soul's maturation in our fleshly bodies of "death". We have mentioned several times the Hermetic Maxim "As above, so below" and how Egypt was understood to be the "image of Heaven" on Earth and their efforts to recreate Heaven on Earth both geographically, architecturally, and "theologically".

'Do you not know, Asclepius, that Egypt is an of heaven? Or so to speak more exactly, in Egypt all the operations of the powers which rule and work in heaven have been transferred down to earth below?'

Now we go deeper. Egypt, as the "Two Lands" has the most incredible meaning you could ever imagine. The term "Two Land" correspond to the Northern and Southern stargates in Heaven respectively, located along the celestial Nile River, i.e., the Milky Way.

"The Milky Way will not reject me, the rebels will not have power over me, I shall not be turned away from your portals, the doors shall not be closed against me..."*(The Book of the Dead, p. 102).

In addition, Spell 109 asserts: "I know the northern gate of the Sky; its south is in the Lake of Waterfowl, its north in is the Waters of Geese..." (Spell 72, Ibid., p. 72).

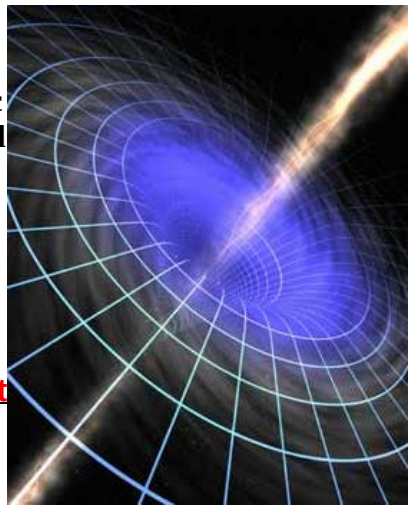
In other words, the Northern Gate's southern limit is where the Phoenix's domain begins, which is a reference to the Faiyum, while the Northern Gate's northern limit is symbolically inhabited by geese.

Answer for yourself: What does all of this mean?

The goose is frequently equated with Geb (sometimes written Seb or Keb), the god of Earth and husband of Nut, who is the personification of the Sky. Geb was the personification of the God of the earth. Even so, Geb guided the dead to Heaven and he gave them meat and drink. It is interesting to note that while in most cultures the deity associated with the earth and it's bounty is a woman ("Mother Earth", Demeter of the Greeks, etc...), the Egyptians chose a male for this role. Geb is usually represented in the form of a man who who wears either the white crown to which is added the Atef crown, or a goose.

Answer for yourself: Why a "goose"? Geb was thought to represent the Earth, he is often seen reclining beneath the sky goddess Nut. Geb was called "the Great Cackler", and as such, was represented as a goose. It was in this form that he was said to have laid the egg from which the Sun was hatched. The Goose was his sacred animal and symbol. As the God of earth, the earth formed his body and was called the "house of Geb," just as the air was called the "house of Shu," and the heaven the "house of Ra," Hence, he was also often portrayed laying on his side on the earth, and was sometimes even painted green, with plants springing from his body. Earthquakes were believed to be the laughter of Geb.

Geb's chief seat is in Heliopolis to the north where with his wife he produced the great Egg whence sprang the Sun god in the form of the phoenix (E.A. Wallis Budge, The Gods of the Egyptians, Vol. II (New York: Dover Publications, Inc. 1969, 1904), pp. 94-96). Connected with these Spiritual concepts is the idea of "birth" and "renewal" which we find characterized all of Nature in its unending cycles of "birth, life, death, and rebirth".



"The doors of the Sky are opened for me, the doors of the earth are opened for me, the door-bolts of Geb are opened for me, the shutters of the Sky windows are thrown open for me. It is he who guarded me who releases me, who binds his hand on me and thrusts his hand on to me on earth, the mouth of the Pelican is thrown open for me, the mouth of the Pelican is given to me, and I go out into the day to the place where I desire to be." (Faulkner, Spell 68, The Book of the Dead, op. cit., p. 69).

Significantly, the pelican is related to the phoenix in alchemical literature, and both are associated with the color red. Perhaps it is not coincidence, then, that the Red Crown comes from Lower Egypt, whereas the White Crown is from Upper Egypt. The two lands (i.e., Crowns) were united when King Menes of Hierakonpolis (about forty-five miles south of Thebes) conquered the Delta circa 3100 B.C.E. and we have already seen that this is symbolic of the establishment of Harmony between man's two natures; one animal, one spiritual (the Lower and Upper division of Egypt which was always symbolized as mankind).

Now you can better understand why the "falcon" and the "phoenix" were symbolic of the journey of the Afterlife and why Egypt taught that: "I have gone in (into the body of death and flesh) as a falcon, I have come out as a phoenix...(the Souls later incarnation and renewed life into a new body following the death of the former temple-body)"

Dead, translated by Raymond O. Faulkner (Austin: University of Texas Press), 1990, 1985, 1972), p. 37). And behind such Divine Allegory is the idea of a "Cosmic Portal", or "Ladder to Heaven" for the pilgrimage and later re-descent of the Soul in its Spiritual journey into full completeness and maturation. Thus the Egyptian Book of the Dead, an Ancient Egyptian manual of resurrection technology, identifies both the falcon and the phoenix as key "symbols", each of which is associated with a specific "direction" or "portal" or "stargate" or "doorway" in the Sky in which this Cosmic Conscious Energy from God whom we call "the Soul" both descends and ascends into matter (the flesh of mankind). Truly this a mystery of all mysteries but Egypt gives us a clue as to where and how it occurs. At the core of this is the idea of "reincarnation".

We have spoken a lot about the Sky and Heaven and places "up there" but it time to speak of "down here". Previously we spoke of the necessity for the Sungods to "walk on water" or to "cross over water" and the necessity of quieting the storms between our two natures that rage our bodies of water. We likened tis struggle of our Soul; both in its incarnation into matter (flesh) as well as its "second birth" where the "Krst/Karest/Christ" is being formed in mankind. This occurs within the fleshly matter of mankind. We even mentioned that this is the same teaching we find in the allusion in the Tanakh to the Israelites crossing over the "sea of Reeds" which is called mistakenly by many the "Red Sea". This "Red Sea" is an allusion again to our very blood cells and the blood is the home of the Soul within mankind's bodies. That is why blood is "holy" and the many admonitions in Scripture to "not eat" the blood and treat it as if a "non-holy" thing.

Lev 17:11 11 For the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul. (KJV)

Brown Driver Briggs Hebrew Lexicon: The Hebrew word for "life" in the above verse is "nephesh" or "Soul":

5315 nephesh- a soulself,, life, a creature, a person, an appetite, a mind, a living being, a desire, an emotion, a passion

- what breathes, the breathing substance or being, a soul, the inner being of man
- a living being
- a living being (with life in the blood)
- the man himself, aself, a person or an individual
- the seat of the appetites
- the seat of emotions and passions
- the activity of mind (uncertain)
- the activity of the will (uncertain)
- the activity of the character (uncertain)

Thus we see the "Soul", the object of the preposition "in" (not the subject of the sentence), lives within the blood system of mankind. This is why blood is "sacred" and why it is forbidden to eat or desecrate the Live Force in Creation....the very Essence of God. Heaven and Earth are linked together as fleshy matter received the Cosmic Intelligent Energy, a "Spark" from above, in the form of the Soul. And we have already seen that man is a microcosm of the macrocosm, that mankind is made in the Image of God. And to think that all of this Divine Knowledge was represented and reproduced by Ancient Egypt in brining the Uranography to Earth in their Pyramid and tomb architecture as well as their Religion.

Answer for yourself: So did salves make these great Spiritual "markers" for mankind? Did men beaten with whips and deprived of basic human rights construct such great Spiritual edifices that have hidden within them such extreme exactness and depiction of Spiritual Truths?

The question of who labored to build the Pyramids and tombs, and why, has long been part of mankind's fascination. Rooted firmly in the popular imagination is the idea that the Pyramids were built by slaves serving a merciless pharaoh. This notion of a vast slave class in Egypt originated in Judeo-Christian tradition and has been popularized by Hollywood productions like Cecil B. De Mille's The Ten Commandments, in which a captive people labor in the scorching sun beneath the whips of Pharaoh's overseers. But graffiti from inside the Giza monuments themselves have long suggested something very different. One might wonder how these wonders were built, visions of the various Hollywood versions of the constructions, with thousands of foreign slaves huddled under the whips of cruel overseers, dancing through one's brain. Such was never the case. There were slaves to be sure, throughout the Near East. Slaves acquired as prisoners of war, slaves made due to debt. But the pyramids were monuments of the Kings, monuments to their connection with God and the "neteru", to their ascent into the afterlife with the gods. The pyramids and their temples were part of the royal cult, and required the dedication and devotion of craftsmen and laborers who believed in their King and the Egyptian understanding of God. Slaves there may have been. But the pyramids were built by Egyptians, by stonemasons, artisans, artists and craftsmen. While skilled craftsmen and management staff worked year round, farmers would come from the provinces during the inundation period to do the heavy work. But the exactness of the Sacred Geometry alone speaks to the dedication of the devotes to their Pharaoh and to Ra; this is not the work of beaten and tried workers or slaves.

Another thing needs to be said. Another reason to not suspect slave labor as the main labor in building the Pyramids is the fact that it required a unified effort that was founded upon Egyptian philosophy and morals. In Egypt there was no such distinction as sacred versus secular; there is no such thing as the life of this world and the life of the other world, no such thing as religious versus political. Everything is tied intimately and inextricably together (Akbar, Light. p. 6). It is the same in Judaism but not so in Christianity for our Government separates God and State. If this is Spiritual maxim is true, that there is no difference between secular and Sacred in Ancient Egypt, then it would follow that the moral life of Ancient Egyptians would be practiced daily instead of having designated times. The Ancient Egyptian studied and expressed God in all that they did from their language, to their art, to their monuments and buildings (Akbar, Know Thyself, p. 51). It was an honor to serve their King and God and no greater way could be found than in building this "horizon" or "Path to Heaven" in the form of the Pyramid. The significance of this is to be understood within the context of Cheops Pyramid being built as a funerary monument, but its magnitude and accuracy to the glory of God.

Scholars teach us today that there is no credible evidence other than the tradition we read in the Old Testament that the Hebrews of old were slave labor in the building of the Pyramids. You will need to ask Ezra why he "rewrote" this about Egypt when it is not true and Hollywood had a field day in the Ten Commandments with this false idea. The popular image of gangs of slaves forced to carry out this enormous task is a myth; there is no evidence to suggest that millions of people were compelled to take part in this massive enterprise against their wills - indeed, if anything, it is the very opposite. Working on these Pyramids was an act of devotion to both the Pharaoh and God. It was a "Spiritual Dedication" based upon love. The sheer quality of craftsmanship in the construction of the Pyramids suggests a pride in the work, and there are subtleties of design which suggest ideals at odds with the brutal image of Ancient Egypt portrayed in biblical film epics or in the ancient texts which has been submitted repeatedly to redaction and editing. In fact, the Egyptians were highly civilized and deeply religious at a time when Europeans were still primitive, and there is much to suggest that they built Pyramids more as an affirmation of their religious convictions than to glorify dead pharaohs, however powerful. But the Egyptians were also an extremely reserved people, who kept the inner mysteries of their religion from all but a few chosen initiates. As it was these few who directed the building of the Pyramids, it is not surprising that we know so little about their motives. They also teach us that there is not credible evidence of a 40 years wandering in the Sinai as well as the crossing of the "Red Sea". This bears your own individual study.

What we find when we do these scholarly studies and get away from reading others who say the same things that others have said which also failed to do such studies is that many traditions we have heard since childhood are but that; traditions many of which are unfounded when exposed to modern scholarship and archeological research. We can have the truth today but it will cost you time and serious study. The crossing of the Reed Sea and not the Red Sea as well as the false traditions of building the Pyramids lie before us and its importance are both connected to the Soul in one way or the other; this Pyramid construction was a Holy endeavor for every worker; unlikely for a Hebrew who was not apart of the Egyptian Religion at that time anyway.

Now we move to the next study in this series.

HEAVEN..WHERE IS IT?

Answer for yourself: Does the story of Jesus Christ take place in Israel of in Heaven? You might think that a silly question until you begin to seriously study the "Jesus Story" in light of astronomy and astrology and then you will have the shock of your life! In order to get to any truth in regard to this question we need to start at the beginning.

Ask anyone and they will tell you that Heaven has always been up. Hell has always been down. We all know that Heaven and Hell are theologically opposite as well as geometrically opposite. Heaven is above and Hell is below. The ancients understood that when they ventured outside at night and gazed above their heads at the stars and the night sky they were literally looking at heaven.

Answer for yourself: What did they see? They saw stars and cluster of stars which made up all the constellations of the night sky. To them they understood that the constellations were not real but yet "alive". Let me explain.

The first thing you need to know is that Constellations are not real! The Constellations are totally imaginary things that astronomers, priests, poets, and farmers have made up over the past 10,000 years (and probably even more!). The real purpose for the Constellations is to help us tell which stars are which, nothing more. On a really dark night, you can see about 1000 to 1500 stars. Trying to tell which is which is hard. The Constellations help by breaking up the sky into more manageable bits. They are used as mnemonics, or memory aids. Around the world, farmers know that for most crops, you plant in the spring and harvest in the fall. But in some regions, like Egypt, there is not much differentiation between the seasons. Since different Constellations are visible at different times of the year, you can use them to tell what month it is. Some historians suspect that many of the myths associated with the Constellations were invented to help the farmers remember them. When they saw certain Constellations, they would know it was time to begin the planting or the reaping. This dependence on the sky became a strong part of many cultures. Perhaps there is something about the mystery of the night sky that makes people want to tell stories about the Constellations. We know one thing for sure; namely, they did tell stories about these Constellations and from these stories and "myths" we find the origin of Religion and Ritual among the ancients. For millennia, people have looked at the Heavens and seen patterns between them, seeing what looks like a bird here, a bull there, a winged horse, a mighty Hunter, a ram/lamb amongst others. These images, when mapped out in the Heavens, have helped men to navigate the seas, as their relative positions to one another have not changed. Eventually, over time, men have put stories to these patterns, and a huge variety of myths have grown of Ancient Gods, who are the founders of the world around us, and many other mystical beings and creatures. The stories especially well known are myths of three of the most influential Ancient civilizations: the Ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans.

Answer for yourself: Who gave us the New Testament? Rome. Don't' forget this for this is fundamental to our study as you will see that this Roman book is full of mythology later literalized in the person of Jesus Christ. But this you will see as we learn more but don't forget Rome.

I don't want to let the cat out of the bag so quickly but with study you will come to find that there are many tales, stories, from various religions/myths which connect their religion to the stars. The Greek names of the Constellations and stars for example. There is the use of certain gods in the astro-plane of the Temple of Denderah. Many of these stories are similar or have been compared to Bible stories by various experts in the field such as Robert Graves. In addition to the Bible tales themselves, the Jews wrote detailed explanations of these stories in later centuries known as midrashes. These details make a deeper or stronger connection between the stories of the Bible and Greek myths etc. We know where the Greek myths are in the sky, because our Constellations are named after them. If we were to (and I am actually working backwards on this) superimpose the Bible story into that slot, a strange thing occurs. We find that the ancient Arabic and Hebrew name of the stars of that constellation relate to that Bible story. What is more remarkable is that Bible story line flows in an almost continuous line from constellation to constellation and at times from star to star within the constellation. There are far too many examples for it to be a coincidence or a stretch of imagination. A great legacy has been handed down from ancient times, not carved in stone, but conveyed to future generations through the universal language of pictograph and preserved in the starry Constellations of the night sky. The spiritual doctrines and admonitions associated with each constellation were formulated by spiritual giants of the past, and later found their way into ancient mythology, the Bible and other sacred writings.

Answer for yourself: Can we expect to find once our studies progress in these areas that chronologically the "Jesus Story" and the depiction of him in this Roman New Testament (Rome was in Sun worship during the writing and production of the New Testament...don't let us forget this) and his ministry in the New Testament will flow from constellation to constellation throughout the Zodiac? Can we expect to find that the "Jesus Story" is but a personification of the Sun through the Zodiac? Why don't we wait a just a second and learn a little more then when equipped we will tackle the "Sun of God"; opps I meant to say the personified "Son of God" and see if his life is but a retelling of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac.

As we will come to see the "Jesus Story" takes place not on earth, but in the starry night sky above.

Answer for yourself: What does Paul have to say on the matter?

Philippians 3 20 For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ:

The setting for our story is in Heaven. Heaven has always been up. Hell has always been down. Heaven and Hell are not just theologically opposite, they are geometrically opposite. The Bible is an ancient book reflecting ancient ideas held by the writers which has been passed down to us today. The concept of Heaven is merely, what most modern cultures refer to as, the sky… and that the ancients all shared a similar view of the Universe, including the Hebrew people. In ancient Egypt, the sky is depicted here as a personification, the deity Nut (Noot). Notice that she looks remarkably like the "Firmament". She is hovering over her brother and husband Geb (The Earth). Geb was thought to represent the earth, he is often seen reclining beneath the sky goddess Nut.

Answer for yourself: What is the firmament?

1.) The apparent surface of the imaginary sphere on which celestial bodies appear to be projected - WordNet ® 1.6, © 1997 Princeton University.

2.) The region of the air; the sky or heavens. - Webster's Dictionary.

"And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." - Genesis 1:26

Answer for yourself: What did the Hebrews who gave us the Hebrew Scriptures and doctrines of Eternal Life mean by the word we call Heaven? Could it have referred to the air?

Now get ready. The Hebrew word for air in this passage is: Shamayim, aka Heaven.

The Strong's Concordance for the word used for "air" in the above passage:

8064 shamayim (shaw-mah'-yim); dual of an unused singular shameh (shaw-meh'); from an unused root meaning to be lofty; the sky (as aloft; the dual perhaps alluding to the visible arch in which the clouds move, as well as to the higher ether where the celestial bodies revolve): KJV-- air, X astrologer, heaven (-s).

Brown-Driver-Briggs Hebrew Lexicon for the word used for "air" in the above passage:

8064 shamayim dual of an unused singular shameh- heaven, heavens, sky

- a) visible heavens, sky
 - 1) as abode of the stars
 - 2) as the visible universe, the sky, atmosphere, etc.
- b) Heaven (as the abode of God)

The word itself literally means: Sha ("of" or "from") the waters (mayim). Heaven means literally: "From the Waters"!

Now let us examine the word for "firmament:

The Strong's Concordance for the word "firmament":

7549 raqiya` (raw-kee'-ah); from 7554; properly, an expanse, i.e. the firmament or (apparently) visible arch of the sky: KJV-- firmament. 7

Brown-Driver-Briggs Hebrew Lexicon for the word "firmament":

549 raqiya`- extended surface (solid), a firmament, an expanse, space

- a) expanse (flat as base, support)
- b) firmament (used of vault of heaven supporting waters above); considered by Hebrews as solid and supporting 'waters' above

So at first glance that the story of Jesus Christ takes place in Heaven which is by definition of the words in the sky above. But so far this is but circumstantial and we have pages and pages of our New Testaments telling stories of this human being known as Jesus Christ which we have been taught to interpret both "literally" and "historically". So we must continue to study to get to the bottom of this but never let us forget what we just learned; namely, that Heaven is not some place we go when we die but the sky above our heads as interpreted by the writers of the Hebrew Scriptures. We can reinterpret any word or concept, and we have due to Rome's influence, but it does violence to the texts to change the meanings from what the original writers of these texts intended the hearers understand from them.

The next time you go outside at night and look at the sky and the stars think to yourself that you are maybe for the first time looking at Heaven. Know as well that you are looking at the environment in which the "Jesus Story" takes place. This is the secret to the understanding of the New Testament "Jesus Story" but we have yet to convince you of this but we will as we turn our attention to this matter with haste.

Answer for yourself: How long is the "Jesus Story" in the New Testament?

A reading of the Synoptic Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke (due to only one celebration of the Passover alluded to and the fact that at no point in the earlier narratives was it hinted that even a year had gone by) tend to show that Jesus career lasted, at the utmost, a single year. In John's gospel however, we find that three Passover festivals were mentioned to have occurred during the ministry (John 2:13; 6:4; 11:55) which showed that the author thought that Jesus' career lasted three years. Since the Synoptic Gospels deal with the "human Jesus" to the exclusion of the "god-man" of the Gospel of John we will focus our attention on this record of a one year ministry for Jesus Christ. The contradictory information derived from the gospels only served to underline this insufficiency of certain knowledge about the historical ministry of Jesus.

Answer for yourself: How long does it take for the early to revolve around the Sun or for the Sun to pass through the 12 signs of the Zodiac? It takes one year. Like the planets, the Sun, too, moves around the zodiac, making one complete circuit each year. Every month it covers a different constellation of the zodiac, which is the real reason why those Constellations are 12 in number. Of course, during that month, this particular constellation is not seen, because the sky near the Sun is too bright for its stars to be seen (except, very briefly, during a total eclipse of the Sun). But again I hear some say "This is but a coincidence" so we will leave it at that and move on for now not forgetting this 2nd piece of information about Jesus Christ and a possible correlation to the path of the Sun and the "Jesus Story" in the New Testament.

Luke 3:22-23 22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased. 23 And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli, (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Is there any correlation between Jesus Christ being 30 years of age when beginning his ministry and the Zodiac? And what about this "voice" coming from Heaven and the visible arch in which the clouds move, as well as the higher ether where the celestial bodies revolve? Is this a tip-off that we miss because we have been taught that Heaven is some other place with pearly gates and streets of gold?

If we divide a circle into twelve equal parts, and place the twelve Constellations of the zodiac in order around the circle (the circuit of the sun through the Zodiac), one in each part, we see that each constellation occupies 30 degrees of the circle. The zodiac is divided into twelve equal areas, with each area containing one zodiac constellation. Each area is known as a "house". So when the Sun is in the constellation Capricorn, it may be said, "the Sun is in the house of Capricorn." If we divide a circle into twelve equal parts, one part for each of the signs of the Constellations of the Zodiac, and place the twelve Constellations of the zodiac in order around the circle, one in each part, we see that each constellation occupies 30 degrees of the circle. The Sun travels about one degree each day. It's not exact, since there are actually 365.2421934 days in a solar year instead of 360. Also the earth's orbit isn't a perfect circle, it's slightly elliptical. The earth travels slightly faster during the winter months when it's slightly closer to the Sun, and it travels slightly slower during the summer months when it's slightly farther from the Sun. In general though, one degree equals about one day. (The seasons are primarily caused by the earth's tilt, not by it's varying distance from the Sun.

If we accept the old tradition of the Ancients of having the Sun enter Capricorn on the Winter Solstice, a natural place to start the yearly cycle, then when the Sun has traveled 30 degrees the Sun exits Capricorn and enters Aquarius.

Answer for yourself: Why is this of major importance for us and the "Jesus Story" of the New Testament?

Simply because if we reproduce this "allegory" of the Sun's passage through the Zodiac as seen by the Ancients then we can chronologically lay out for the reader the "Jesus Story" of the New Testament chapter by chapter and event by event! I had known from prior study that many parallels existed between the "infancy narratives" and the "Jesus Story" but I was never so shocked to find as my studies got deeper that the whole life of the New Testament Jesus is but a personification of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac. This literally took my breath away and had me shaking my head. I wondered "Where does this end"?

Thus an allegorical story of the Sun's annual travels through the Zodiac and the Sky (Heaven) could have the Sun character visiting the Aquarius character at "Age 30". That's actually 30 degrees, or about 30 days, but an allegory could use 30 years instead and that is exactly what we should expect to find in the "Jesus Story" and we do.

All of us should know that the Sun's position changes day by day. Each day at sunset the Constellations of the Zodiac slip slowly and progressively below the horizon and returns to the opposite horizon (East) and rises in 6 months. For our example Capricorn (the goat) gets lower and lower until it is completely below the horizon. The Sun appears to travel upwards on its path along an imaginary line through Capricorn towards the next constellation in the Zodiac called Aquarius (the water bearer). This line of the path of the Sun and its travels through the sky and the Zodiac is called the ecliptic. The Sun continues its path for the rest of the year and in so doing we would observe the Sun travel through all 12 Constellations of the zodiac. These 12 Constellations are: Capricorn, Aquarius, Pisces, Aries, Taurus, Gemeni, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, and Sagittarius. At the end of the year the Sun completes its journey by arriving back at Capricorn where it started, ready to begin again its annual journey through the 12 Constellations. Note that the ecliptic is a closed circuit around the celestial sphere. By observing which constellation the Sun is in you can tell what time of year it is. This is important if you are a farmer. You need to know when to plant the crops and when to reap the harvest. You need to be familiar with the seasons of the year. For our purposes we need to begin our study with the constellation Capricorn in order to have the correct setting of the Ancients when they composed the "Jesus Story". The sun begins in Capricorn on December 22 which is correct date for "Biblical Times" around the first or second century A.D, when the Jesus Story was written. In so doing we find the Sun appears to travel through Capricorn as the days go by. On December 22 (the Winter Solstice) the Sun is just starting to go through Capricorn. By January 10 the Sun has made its way through most of Capricorn and we see that the zodiac constellation of Aquarius the water bearer is next in line.

The Sun begins it's journey at "age 30" by entering Aquarius. Jesus begins his ministry by visiting John the Baptist, who baptizes with water. Remember we have already seen that Jesus' ministry is said to have lasted one year which is the same length of time for the path of the Sun through the Zodiac.

Answer for yourself: Should we expect a correlation of the Constellation of Aquarius with John the Immerser? Well it is only beginning as you might get a hint. Let us continue our study of the path of the Sun and the correlations to the "Jesus Story" of the New Testament. If I am right and the evidence I present of the Sun's path through the Zodiac will follow the pattern of the Constellations of the Zodiac beginning with Capricorn and we should expect the Jesus Story to flow chronologically through the Constellations of Capricorn, Aquarius Pisces, Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, and Sagittarius. And it does.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #16

We have learned a lot during this series of articles. Let us do a short review his for starters.

- We saw how one of the "Soul Shafts" in the Great Pyramid of of Khufu (Cheops) pointed to Sirius which rises helically before the indunation of the Nile and the signaling of God's "physical salvation" of Egypt. We looked at this annual ten day period when Sirius the "dog star" would rise above the horizon at dawn as the signal that the "salvation of God has come to 'physical' Egypt" was about to commence as seen in the flooding of the Nile which produced the crops and food which sustained the people for another year. We made mention earlier that Egypt was always understood as a symbol for the "body" of mankind and that the Ancient Egyptians made parallels of this "physical salvation" to their "Spiritual salvation" as well.

- We looked at another "Soul Shaft" in the Great Pyramid that points to Orion-Osiris as the "ascended Soul" in Heaven which is the "Pattern" not only for the Pharaoh at his death but believed to be the same hope of all righteous Egyptians and mankind at their deaths.
- We looked at another "Soul Shaft" that pointed to the pole star Thuban which occupies the Circumpolar religion of the Sky connected with "undying stars"; stars that never set or descended below the horizon (never "died"). These Circumpolar stars circle around the pole star Thuban. Today they have a new pole star, Polaris, and circle around it as well today. Because of the Precession of the Earth, over the period of a Great Year the north Pole Star changes. This is not because the stars are changing, but because our Viewpoint of the stars changes very slowly because of Precession of the Equinoxes. I highly recommend that if you are not thoroughly familiar with the Precession of the Equinoxes that your READ THE LINK in order to catch up with much needed knowledge before you go on into advanced studies involving "Astrotheology" as this Precession of the Equinoxes lies as the very heart of the "Krst/Karest/Christ" stories which are but personifications of the path of the Sun (the symbol of the Sole Living Intelligent Energy-Father-God of the Cosmos) through the Zodiac as observed by mankind from Earth. It is God's movie for mankind to learn about his Soul.
- We looked as another "Soul Shaft" pointed to the Constellations Ursa Minor (the little dipper, the little bear) and Ursa Major (the big dipper, the big bear). These two Circumpolar Constellations are called the "imperishable ones", the "Undying Living Energies-Stars). This term personified the ever visible Circumpolar stars in the north of the Sky.

We have seen that these "designations" in the Sky which were marked by these "Soul Shafts" were "theological" markers for the Ancient Egyptians and these 4 stellar designations conveyed their very hope of the the core of their Religious Beliefs which was an unwavering belief in Eternal Life. We saw that the Uranograph was consistently teaching mankind of Eternal Life from the position and arrangement of the stars of Heaven as well as what was required of mankind to "inherit" such a continued existence with the Creator. At the core of all of this is the "theology" which teaches that God's Deific Mind came down to Earth and in its incarnation so impacted the Ancient Egyptian "Spiritual understanding", along with that of Israel, resulted in the reproduction of these Celestial Religious Truths in both Egyptian and Israelite geography, architecture, and their nations religious beliefs which were almost identical. We are growing from article to article in that it is becoming easier to see and understand "that which is above is the same as that which is below"; the macrocosm paints the same picture as found in the microcosm. If we look hard and think and obtain the "keys" to this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom we can peer into the Heavens and find deeper truths about God and our every existence along with knowledge as to what happens to us when we die and leave this physical plane of existence.

Rom 1:20 20 For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse: (KJV)

We have seen how "the" Living Intelligent Universe is the basically the same as our concept of God, that this God expresses Himself as man, that man is the tantamount as the cell, the cell is the same as the atom, the atom is the same as...and so on, ad infinitum. "The Pattern in the Mount" is duplicated in descending fashion until infinity; as its becomes smaller and smaller and smaller, but yet the "Pattern" ins the same. This is really multiplication of complexity and a more intricate creations from "the" creation. We have seen that the subject of Heaven and the true Gospel in the stars is all about the Soul of mankind and its intended Spiritual development as its manifests in this fleshly matter of mankind. Now you are beginning to see that our Bibles are actually Spiritual Astronomy books whose whole subject, from beginning to end deals with the Soul of mankind; a subject which is translated and shared through the medium of Ancient allegories, metaphors, anthropomorphic language, symbolisms, typifications, figurations, personifications, of the Cosmos itself. Sure, there is parts of our Bibles that are meant to be taken "literally" and is actual history that is filtered through both the Egyptian and Jewish nation but without these "keys" and "knowledge" to discern what is "literal" from what is "allegorical" then we read these Astronomical Bibles never knowing how to discern the difference and our conclusions are flawed and often our conduct based upon them.

With that as a summary statement of both where we have come and find ourselves now in our studies we continue. Let us remember before we begin what we have learned in these previous teachings; in particular that Osiris was identical with his Son Horus as is Jesus, the Son, is identical with his Father as well. "The Pattern in the Mount" continues and is paralleled between these two "personifications of the Soul"; Osiris/Horus and Jesus.

John 14:9 9 Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father? (KJV)

Such a statement is not a coincidnece but again it is the Mythos explained and applied to both Horus and Jesus. The Mythos as an allegory of the "Pattern in the Mount", and as you can see, was kept intact both in Egypt and in Christianity. That explains why the "Jesus Story" is identical in almost every part with both the "Osiris Story" and the "Horus Story". It was only when Osiris was dead that his Son, the Krst/Karest/Christ was "alive".

Answer for yourself: Why is "one dead" before the other "can live"?

It is only when our flesh has died (our first birth) that the "Christ" of God lives within us (the second birth).

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and

Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

Answer for yourself: And why again do we need this "new birth"?

We just read it! How can we know what it means to "walk circumspectly" when the first birth produces only lives where "...every man did that which was right in his own eyes" (Judg 21:25 25).

Only when our fleshly appetites have died only does the Christ then live "within" us. Only then can "the Christ" lead us and teach us. Only after our first birth and and its symbolic death do we live "again" in our "born again" spiritual experience (or supposed to anyway). As the child-Horus, Osiris comes down to earth (the Soul incarnates as personified as Osiris-Horus); the Soul enters matter, and becomes mortal.

Phil 2:6-8 6 Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: 7 But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: 8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What is this "cross"? Is this "allegorical" or "literal"? What is this "death on the cross"? Could it be that the whole of Christianity, following this Roman "reinterpretation" and "literalistic misinterpretation" of the Ancient Soul Science, have completely misunderstood what being "crucified on a cross" actually meant for God? Could it just be, just be, and even against all odds, that a physical nailing to an old rugged cross is not within a thousand miles of the true meaning of the above reference in Philippians? Surely not you think; well that is until:

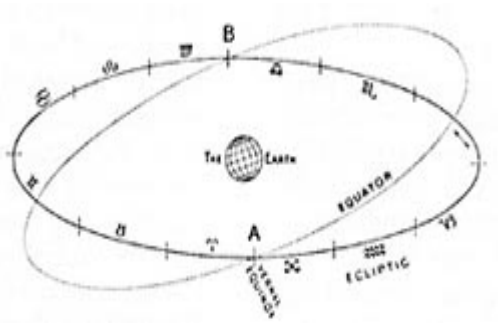
You do the studies in Comparative Manuscript evidences and trace the purposeful forgeries of the Hebrew Texts when carried over into the Greek and Latin and their subsequent continued forgery in many, many passages in our Christian Old Testaments and New Testaments,

Until you do the required studies in the falsification of Messianic Prophecies in the Christian Bibles where "key" Messianic passage after passage has been purposefully mistranslated, purposefully misquotes, purposefully taken out of context, and even invented out of thin air by the Christian redactors of the Christian Scriptures,

Until you do the necessary studies of comparing the lives of the Sungods from beginning to end with the "assumed literal and historical" life of a Jewish "Messiah-to-be" named Jesus as depicted in the New Testament and see for yourself that the "events" in his life, from beginning to end" are "EXACT" duplications of the lives of these prior allegorized and personified Sungods from thousands of years earlier;

Until you, based upon what you have already found in your studies above, set out to find any and all references for a possible historical Jesus Christ and sift through the evidence, or lack thereof, and see for yourself that all supposed "evidence" for the existence of a historical Jesus is deemed "forged" by the earliest Christians or "purposefully misinterpreted" or "misread" in one way or the other in order to try to materialize a "historical Jesus" when modern scholarship helps today to show us the truth about such deceptions,

Until you study and master Gnosticism and see how personification, allegory, and metaphor was the medium used by these ancients who possessed "supreme Spiritual Knowledge" and wrote treatises that escaped the purge of literature and world-wide library burnings of Rome to reveal to us today that the Ancient Religious Belief of mankind was not the descent of a "literal Christ" to Earth as a baby but rather express the Descent of the Soul into matter into the whole of mankind and see that they as well used anthropomorphic language in describing this Celestial Event through a human-like example whom we call "the Christ" (many nations have this same story because they believed in this same Descent of the Soul into matter),



Until you do the required study into Astro-Theology and see for yourself how the personified path of the Sun through the Zodiac (the Sun being only the symbol for the Uncreated Intelligent Energy of the Cosmos whom we call God) is the "EXACT" same story from beginning to end, from Matthew 1 through Matthew chapter 28, which we find in our "supposed historical "Jesus Story",

...then and only then will you find the courage and the wherewithal to look at the "Cross" and begin to inquire, with good reason, that something other than a "historical" or "literal" interpretation lay behind it.

Answer for yourself: So what is it, what lies behind this "death of the cross" of which we hear and are warned is necessary to believe "to be saved" and "go to Heaven"? What is this cross and is our salvation dogmas in Christianity correct or grossly in error and we not know it? Let us focus upon this passage once again:

Phil 2:8 8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Have we possibly been misled to think that this "Christ" was crucified and nailed to a rugged old piece of wood and in reality had we possessed the "keys" of the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom we would have understood what this had meant since the beginning of time? And what was this? Simply, this "cross" is in the Heavens and not on Earth. It hides again this same teaching of the Descent of the Soul into matter which was hidden in the Precession of the Equinox and this "Cross", which is in Heaven involves the Celestial Equator and its intersection with the Ecliptic or the Equinoxes. We will tackle this in-depth momentarily.

Answer for yourself: What does "being found in the fashion of a man" mean in reference to being on a cross? What is this death? Could it be that this "death" has nothing to do with a nailing upon a wooden cross? Is that possible? Can we have so much so wrong and never know it? Who is responsible for changing the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom and this Celestial Soul Science and in so doing destroyed the original intent of the Deific Mind which taught in the beginning that this "death of the cross" referred ONLY to the Descent of the Soul into matter (the body) and its confinement in matter, a body, that was susceptible to disease, evil works of the flesh, and finally death? Was it Rome again who changed the concept of "death" in the Bible and the realm of the dead? Yes; they changed almost everything; such was their hatred of the Laws of God, the Torah, and the Jews that a radical "reinterpretation of the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom" was in order and we, as mankind, have walked in the blackness of such ignorance for over 1,800 years presently.

Answer for yourself: Could it be as the Ancients taught, before the later Roman "literalization" and "reinterpretation" of the Ancient Egyptian Soul Science, that this "cross" was symbolic for the metaphysical teaching of the intersection of the Deific Mind with matter (flesh)? Is this where "God crossed-over" into "matter" and when the "Deific Mind" of the Cosmos became tabernacled "in flesh"; a flesh that would require a "Second Birth"? Is this the real "incarnation" which is not limited to one baby in a supposed manger (by the way the "manger" is in the House of Capricorn, where we find the Sun in December (X-mas) and is in the stars where it should be)? Is this "incarnation" to be understood as the experience of all of God's children and not limited to but one person? Is this Philippians reference really a reference to a physical old rugged cross made of wood of which we sing in songs that supposedly refers to Jesus, the presumed Jewish Messiah, who was surmised to have been nailed some two thousand years ago to a wooden cross? Or could this Philippians reference refer to the Divine Energy of God (as the Soul) as it descends and "falls" and crosses into the plane of physical matter in its Descent from Heaven where it takes up abode in a body of fleshly "death"? Is this why there is no concept of "original sin" to be found in either Egyptian Religion or Judaism? Was this "fall" actually something else and was never intended to be connected with "sin"?

Wow the implications for these questions are astonishing and impact the core religious beliefs of a Christianity that has so strayed from the Ancient Truths thanks to Rome's hatred of the Jews as the children of Egypt.

We need to speak right now upon the "cross" and its symbolism. You might has surmised but this "Cross" is found in the Sky and is related again to the Sun, the symbol for this Intelligent Cosmic Energy-Creator we call God. It is connected as I said earlier with the Precession of the Equinoxes. If you are not well versed in understanding the Precession of the Equinox then you need to stop right now and read both articles, one and two, if you ever hope of cracking this "Jesus Story" and understanding all the "Sungod stories" were the same and why our "Jesus Story" in the Age of Pisces had to be the same and "conform to the Pattern in the Mount" as had done all the others which had come before from Age to Age to Age as we find in recorded history. Every Age had a new understanding of "the Osiris-Horus, the Krst, the Karest/the Christ" and this new interpretation came regularly every 2.100 years or so. Had we known the Ancient symbolisms of our Bibles before we ever read them then we would have never understood such passages dealing with this "cross" and "death" as we have in the Philippians passage. Instead we would have continued the unbroken chain of our Spiritual Ancestors and understood these Ancient Spiritual Concepts the same way that the Ancients understood them and we would have understood how they were intended to be interpreted. If we had had these "keys" to interpret this Astronomy Book we call the Bible then we would have immediately recognized the Spiritual Genius of the Bible as it was intended to be understood since it, and other Sacred Books of antiquity, which carried this same Religious Concept of the Soul and its Descent into Matter which had been taught for thousands of years before a presumed historical Jesus. Failing to know the "keys" of this Ancient Soul Science and this "secret language" we are easily led astray today by our Bibles and our "literalistic" interpretations that our Preachers assure us are correct. We simply don't know the Ancient Symbols in our Bibles and few are fluent in the language of symbols as Christians today. Symbols surround us in myriad forms and form an inextricable part of our daily lives, yet unlike our spoken languages, schooling in symbolism is left to the individual initiative. That means you have to take individual responsibility to study to find these higher truths for yourself and sadly so few do. We are content to read about some Circus trick as "Jesus walking on water" when in fact it has to do with "repentance" . We are lost in a maze of confusion and convoluted theologies as Christians; we call "black" as if it is "white" and "white" as if is "black" and never have a clue to the deception to which we have fallen; that is until we die and find out the truth. But what then?

Many of the symbols we take for granted today as static signs of religious or secular life were created long ago, representations of the movements of earth and heaven, symbols of the seasons, and representations of cosmic and earthly deities. Over time, they have acquired layers of increasingly complex meaning, and this evolution of meaning continues to stray from the original truth that it once taught. These symbols are powerful because they are archetypal; even cultures that do not share language share an innate understanding of symbols. We need to consider the basic building blocks of religious symbolism that have existed since Ancient Egypt and in so doing restore their original meanings.

The Circle is the most common and universal signs, found in all cultures. Yet this circle is related to "the Cross" as I will show you momentarily. The "circle" is the symbol of the Sun in its limitless or boundless aspect. It has no beginning or end, and no divisions, making it the perfect symbol of completeness, eternity, and the Soul. The circle is also the symbol of boundary and enclosure, of completion, and returning cycles. The circle reflected represents the dyad, the introduction of duality, and represents creation and manifestation. We see this on the left and this is called vesica pisces or "Jesus fish." The symbol of the dyad is known as the "vesica pisces," or fish bladder, because it appears as a fish.

The equal armed solar cross, on the right, is another universal symbol, which can be found in every culture with a knowledge of the passage of time. The Solar cross is probably the oldest religious symbol in the world, appearing in Asian, American, European, and Indian religious art from the dawn of history. Composed of a equal armed cross within a circle, "the solar cross" represents the solar calendar- the movements of the sun, marked by the solstices. Sometimes the Equinoxes are marked as well, giving an eight armed wheel. It is the first truly theological emblem, marking not only the points of the solar calendar, but the juxtaposition or intersection of the realm of the "material" with the realm of the "divine"; two planes of existence have merged together.

Answer for yourself: Does this "intersection" of two planes, as seen in the cross above, remind you of Heaven and Earth and where they come together as well? It should. Man has always knew that he came from "Above" and desires to return there. But getting to Heaven is the goal and plaguing quest of mankind since his beginning. The Pharaohs we saw believed that they "flew" to Heaven after they died. Other nations had this same idea which derived from this original Egyptian ancient religious belief. Thus this "Cross in the Heavens", this idea of intersecting planes of existences, has been adapted by many nations and all the while carries the hidden idea of "matter/flesh" returning to Heaven.

Man came to believe he was "fly" to Heaven some way when he died. This religious concepts was captured by mankind in various art forms. Man depicted this "Crossing of existences" with wings to amplify such a concept. It is called the "Fravahar" by some. The Fravahar is the symbol of the Spirit of the human being that had existed before his/her birth and will continue to exist after his/her death. It was given wings to remind man that his goal in this Earthly life is to prepare himself so that at his death the can "fly to Heaven". It is to remind one of the purpose of life on this Earth, which is to live in such a way that the Soul progresses spiritually and attains union with God. This "God" for the Persians was called Ahura-Mazda (the Wise Lord). The Fravahar's face resembles the face of human being and therefore, indicates its connection to mankind. There are two wings which have three main feathers. These main feathers indicate three symbols of "good reflection," "good words," and "good deeds," which are at the same time the motive of flight and advancement. The lower part of the Fravahar consists of three parts, representing "bad reflection," "bad words," and "bad deed" which causes misery and misfortune for human beings. The circle in the middle of the Fravahar's trunk indicates that our Spirit is immortal, having neither a beginning nor an end. It was believed that when one lived a life full of "good words and good deeds" that at his body's demise the true "self", his Soul, will fly back to Heaven from which it came.

Every Ancient Nation had this same knowledge at one time in the history of humanity but as always such concepts had their beginning with Egypt and this original meaning we find in Ancient Egypt would change over time. The history of the Fravahar design begins in ancient Egypt, with a stylized bird pattern which is known as the spread-eagle. A spread-eagle as it is called in heraldry - features a flying bird shown from below, with its wings, tail, and legs outstretched. Such designs have been used in cultures throughout history, including American, where the seal of the U.S. Government features a spread-eagle. An Egyptian spread-eagle device is featured in the treasure of Tut-ankh-amoun which has a bird's body with a human head, and in which hieroglyphic symbols are held in the outstretched talons. These features will later re- appear, transformed, in the Fravahar. Closer still to the Fravahar are Egyptian designs which feature a Sun-disc with wings. This winged sun-disc represents Horus, the hawk-god believed by the ancient Egyptians to be incarnate in Pharaoh, the god-king.

The "winged sun-disk" is a symbol originating in Egypt and has been used by a variety of groups such as Freemasonry, Spiritists, Theosophy, the Rosicrucians and the Bible Students (Jehovah Witness). In Ancient Egypt, the immortal soul of a human being, called a "ba", is represented by a stylized bird with a human head. The "Ba-bird" is depicted in many different styles and positions, including the familiar "spread-eagle" configuration we recognize in the Fravahar.

A Masonic reference work describes it this way: ... the Winged-Disk, with the Uraei of Egypt, the original of which we find in the text summarized by Naville in the Myths of Horus, pII. xii..."Horus commanded Thoth that the Winged-Sun-Disk, with Uraei, should be brought into every sanctuary wherein he dwelt, and into every sanctuary of all the gods of the lands of the South and the North, and in Amentet, in order that they might drive away evil from therein....". As not to forget one drives away the "evil from within himself" by developing a life full of "good deeds and good words" and make this his way of life thus preparing himself to "fly to Heaven" when he dies. This is what is meant by the Winged-Disks, with the Uraei, which are seen over the entrances of the courts of the temples of all the gods and goddesses of Egypt (Churchwald, Albert, The Signs and Symbols of Primordial Man, (London: George Allen & Co., Ltd.) 1913 p. 344). A Rosicrucian reference work says this: The Winged Globe is pre-eminently a Rosicrucian symbol, although the Illuminati may lay claim to it, and it may be admitted that it is of Egyptian origin. The Winged Globe is the symbol of the perfected soul making its flight back to the source of its creation in the Elysian fields beyond (Swinburne, Clymer, The Rosicrucians Their Teachings (Quakertown, PA.: The Philosophical Pub. Co.), 1923 p. 112. Quoted by Springmeier, p. 115).

... the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His wings... Malachi 4:2 (NKJ)

We find this same Ancient Symbol in our Hebrew Old Testaments again showing prior Egyptian influence upon the Jewish people. Some view this "sun of righteousness" in the Hebrew Tanakh as alluding to the Egyptian winged-sun-disc symbol.

Answer for yourself: What should we have learned so far from this symbolism and the "Cross" in the Heavens? Righteousness, good deeds, good words, and good actions prepares one for a later "flight" to Heaven prepared for the Righteous Soul of mankind. We return home from which we came; thus the "Soul Shafts" in the Pyramids which teach these same "metaphysical truths".

Micah 6:8 8 He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Had you ever thought before now that this "Cross" of which we have heard our whole life as Christians might only be a depiction of Astronomical and Metaphysical Religious Concept long before is was reinterpreted and made to refer to a physical death of a presumed Messiah? If this "Cross" referred originally to the crossing of the Path of the Sun at the two Equinoxes then do these "Celestial 2 markers" define an "ordered existence" for all life? Is there a "Pattern" of defined "order" in the cyclical renewal of life in this cycle of Equinoxes? Are we to get this idea from the harmony exhibited at these two Equinoxes when "light and dark" is "balanced" and "equal" on this particular day? Is this a Celestial Picture that man is to bring such an "order" within himself as well? Are we to learn from this that mankind is to "order his two natures" and bring them into balance within himself? Is this "order" the same captured by the Egyptian Religious Concept of "Ma'at" which means "Justice and Truth"? Do we dare forget what we learned about Set and Horus when they established harmony and balance between themselves once again?

This "winged Solar Disc", see above, is a form that the god Horus Behudety (Horus of Edfu) takes in his battles with Seth (the personified battle of light vs dark; good vs bad; evil vs righteousness, the good nature and the evil nature in mankind). The legend says that the god Thoth used his magic to turn Horus into a Sun-disk with splendid outstretched wings. The goddesses Nekhbet and Uazet in the form of uraeus snakes joined him at his side. This battle between opposing natures within mankind, as personified by Set and Horus, and as taught in the "two births" and "two mothers" is to culminate in peace being restored between the Set and Horus inside mankind; where man learns to master his animal nature through the indwelling "Krst/Karest/Christ" living inside of himself.

As stated earlier this solar cross is probably the most ancient spiritual symbol in the world, appearing in Asian, American, European, and Indian religious art from the dawn of history. Composed of a equal armed cross within a circle, it represents the solar calendar- the movements of the sun, marked by the solstices. Sometimes the equinoxes are marked as well, giving an eight armed wheel. (The swastika is also a form of Solar cross, emphasizing movement.) The Chi-Rho emblem can be viewed as the first Christian Cross. The Chi ro became an important Christian symbol when adopted by the Roman Emperor Constantine, representing the first two letters in the name of Christ- the Chi, or 'ch,' and Rho, or 'r.' According to Church Father Eusebius, on the eve of the Battle of the Milvan Bridge, the Emperor saw the emblem in a dream, with the inscription, "By this sign, you shall conquer." According to the story, the battle was won. In return for the victory, Constantine erected Christian churches. Unfortunately, this story is very unlikely, as Constantine's conversion occurred on his deathbed, if at all. In any case, the symbol was the standard of the Emperor's army, prominently displayed on the Emperor's labarum, or battle standard. Before it became the monogram of Christ, the chi rho was the monogram of Chronos, the god of time, and an emblem of several solar deities. In Hebrew, Chi-Rho equates to Tav-Resh. The chi rho was used in alchemical texts to denote time.

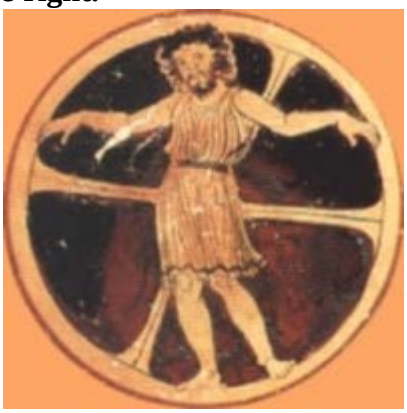
Now with that as a small background understand that this "Solar Cross" shows intersecting planes since normally reflecting only two planes. If you look at the Presbyterian Cross on the right you see "two long planes" vertically and "two short planes" horizontally. They are of different lengths because first of all they are symbolic not only of the Sun which we have shown dramatically on the Cross on the right but that this Sun is on this Cross in the Heavens. This Sun "crosses" a mark in the Heavens as seen from Earth by mankind and this "mark" is called the Equinoxes; both the Spring and Autumn Equinox. At these "Equinoxes" the amount of "light" and "darkness" are equal daily so according to "the Pattern" two planes of this "Cross" have to be equal and length and this is exactly what we find on the "horizontal beams". This is symbolic for the Spring and Autumn Equinox where the Sun "crosses over the intersection of the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptical Orbit of the Earth around the Sun" (as seen from Earth). The two longer planes, one shorter than the other, refer to the Solstices where light it longest per day on the Summer Solstice and shortest per day at the Winter Solstice. The great circle on the celestial sphere that lies in the plane of the earth's orbit is called the plane of the ecliptic. Because of the earth's yearly revolution around the sun, the sun appears to move in an annual journey through the Heavens with the ecliptic as its path. The ecliptic is the principal axis in the ecliptic coordinate system . The two points [the Cross] at which the ecliptic crosses the celestial equator of the Earth are the called the "Equinoxes" and it is at these two times that the amount of light and darkness on that particular day is "equal"; thus it is called the "Equal-nox" .



Now the other two planes are not equal in length; one being longer (symbolic for the Summer Solstice...the longest daylight of a day in a year and the others shorter which we call the Winter Solstice...the shortest daylight of a day in a year. Now you know about the "Cross in the Heavens" where the "Sun is on the Cross" or "Crucified on the Cross" as described by the Ancients. It is here, when the Sun emerges from below the Celestial Equator once a year as it moves into the Norther Hemisphere by "crossing over the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptic plane (this X in the Sky) did the ancients believe that the Sun had risen from the dead (the death of the Winter Solstice) and they were the recipients of the Sun, symbolizing of God, pouring out its life for them. This Sun was pouring out its life or its "blood" for them as seen in the "red rays" of Sunrise on the Vernal Equinox. Since the Sun was the symbol for this Invisible God who is the life-giver, then the Sun, as God's symbol, likewise was pouring out its "life" and "Energy" for them that assured them of "life and life abundantly" since the Earth was waking up from the death of winter, trees were beginning to boom, new crops were growing, animal and mankind were now receiving the bounty of Mother Earth once again. They were "saved" by God and His Sun. As this Sun poured out its "life" for them as renewed Energy that catalyzed photosynthesis likewise God had "poured out His life for them" or as they also said it "poured out His 'blood' for them". The Sun was "on the Cross" (the intersection of the Celestial Equator and the intersecting plane of the Ecliptic) pouring out His Life and "Blood" for mankind on the Vernal Equinox every year. This "crucifixion" was first "Celestial" before it was later believed to be "terrestrial". From this Astronomical event in Space we get all out later "crucified Sungod stories"; including our "Jesus Story".

Answer for yourself: Am I making this up? No. Watch this!

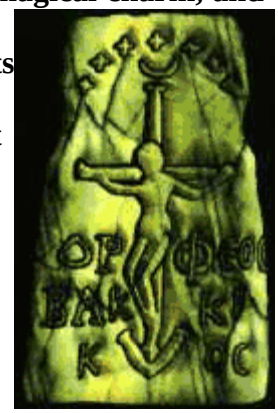
The Etruscan God Ixion was often depicted crucified on a solar wheel as seen on the right.

The Aztec solar deity Quetzalcoatl, depicted crucified on an equal armed cross is seen on the left. Here dramatically portrayed to you we find the concept of the "personified Crucifixion" in the Heavens which later became "literalized" in the story of other Solar gods like the "Jesus Story".

But these are not the only references to "gods" being "crucified" before the "Jesus Story". Another famous "god on the Cross in the Sky" is Krishna "crucified" as seen below. Now you can begin to understand the significance and importance for blood sacrifice and why this is the oldest and most universal act of piety known to mankind.

Answer for yourself: And why is that again? Simply because God, symbolized by the Sun, gave His life and "blood" for mankind at the Vernal Equinox ever year and mankind later, once understanding this concept, did likewise. The offering of animals, including the human animal, dates back at least twenty thousand years, and, depending on how you read the scanty archaeological evidence, arguably back to the earliest appearance of humanity. Many religions recount the creation of man through the bloody sacrifice of a God-man--a divinity who is torn apart to sow the seeds of humanity.

Answer for yourself: Who does this remind you of? Have you read about Osiris being dismembered and his parts distributed over the whole land of Egypt?What of Orpheus, of Baal, Dionysus? This "Pattern" continues from nation to nation.



Krishna's body, the God-man, was suspended to the branches of a tree by his murderer, being pinned by many arrows to the tree. It was Osiris again who was caught up in a tree as well. John Remsburg says in The Christ: There is a tradition, though not to be found in the Hindoo scriptures, that Krishna, like Christ, was crucified.

To wit, the legend of Krishna's death has been interpreted to mean that he was pinned to a tree, essentially representing a crucifixion. However, it is not just tradition but artifacts that have led to the conclusion that Krishna was crucified. Indeed, there have been found in India numerous images of crucified gods, one of whom apparently is Krishna, important information not to be encountered in mainstream resources such as encyclopedias. Moreover, it appears that Krishna is not the first Indian god depicted as crucified. Prior to him was another incarnation of Vishnu, the avatar named Wittoba or Vithoba, who has often been identified with Krishna.

In Bible Myths and Their Parallels in Other Religions, Doane elaborates:

It is evident that to be "hung on a cross" was anciently called "hanging on a tree", and to be "hung on a tree was called crucifixion". We may therefore conclude from this, and from what we shall now see, that Crishna was said to have been crucified.

I direct you attention to an amulet that dates from the third century AD. It is intended as a magical charm, and depicts a crucified figure of the wine god Bacchus. Above the figure is a crescent moon, and seven stars, referring to the 5 visible planets, the Sun and the Moon. It is unusual as it depicts a crucified figure other than Christ at time when similar images of Jesus were rare. But according to the "Pattern in the Mount" the Sun was "crucified and it was only a very short step to personification of the Sun and then we have the "Son of the SUN being crucified".

Answer for yourself: Are these just coincidences? Absolutely not.

Fourth century Bishop John Chrysostom writes : "On this day also the Birthday of Christ was lately fixed at Rome in order that while the heathen were busy with their profane ceremonies, the Christians might perform their sacred rites undisturbed. They call this the Birthday of the Invincible One; but who is so invincible as the Lord? They call it the Birthday of the Solar Disk, but Christ is the Sun of Righteousness." Again we have Christ connected by the early Christian Fathers with this "Astronomical Cross in the Heavens" symbolized as we saw above as the SUN of Righteousness.

Consider this- several other Gods share the December birthday, and like Mithras, they are also solar deities, who are born in the Winter Solstices, often of virgin mothers, die, and are reborn. One of these, a pre-Christian deity called Attis, was called "The lamb of God," and his crucifixion and subsequent resurrection were celebrated annually, with ritual communions of bread and wine. His virgin mother, Cybele, was worshipped as "The Queen of heaven." It gets more interesting the further back we look- Attis and Cybele's predecessors are the Babylonian Goddess Ishtar, and her consort Tammuz. It is from their legend that we get the name for the annual celebration of the resurrection of Christ- Easter, a name of the Goddess Ishtar.

This is not the only coincidence related to this ancient couple- the earliest use of the cross as a religious symbol is related to Tammuz. In fact, crosses are related to a variety of solar deities. Of course, the cross was not popular with early Christians, except in the form of an X, the Greek initial of "Christos." (Even this was borrowed symbolism- the initials belonging to the Greek Chronos.)

Hundreds of years before Jesus, there was a passion story told about a God man, born of a virgin mother, in a stable. He travels about with his followers, preaching and performing miracles, including turning water into wine. Eventually, he incurs the wrath of the religious authorities, who are appalled that he refers to himself as the son of god. He allows himself to be arrested and tried for blasphemy- a willing self-sacrifice. He is found guilty and executed, only to rise from the grave three days later, where the women weeping at his tomb do not recognize him until he assumes his divine form. This god, also one of the first depicted crucified, is the vine-God Dionysus.

Common to all of these 'mystery' religions (so called because one was required to be initiated or baptized into the faith to learn its doctrines)- including early Christianity- are themes of rebirth, redemption, and the transmission of life-changing information- spiritual salvation. So many religions in those times shared similar themes and with that usually we find that the deities became melded together. Early depictions of Jesus show him holding the Lyre of Orpheus, or driving Apollo's chariot. A talisman bearing the crucified likeness of Dionysus is inscribed Orpheus/Bacchus. The follower of Jesus, named Lazarus ('resurrected,' a derivative of the name of Osiris, the resurrected God of Egypt).

Of course, later Christians were terribly perturbed by these similarities to Pagan religions; religious by the way that they had defined as "pagan". These coincidences so disturbed one early Christian church father, Justin Martyr, that he accused the devil of sending an imitator of Christ in advance. Had he paid a little more attention to the past, he might have noted that the association of Jesus with Dionysus is not so strange- philosophers had been making connections between Jehovah and Dionysus for centuries.

Focusing on this "crucifixion" once again in the images provided by Moor in his book allow us to see for ourselves the representations of an Indian god, Wittoba/Krishna, in cruciform, with nail holes in his hands and feet like we see in our "Jesus Story". Notice if you will the image of the godman crucified is without any wood being present. This crucifixion, bathed in the rays of the Sun, occurs "in space,". This "Celestial Crucifixion" can also be found reproduced in Lundy's book, Monumental Christianity, wherein he asserts that this "Outer Space Crucifixion" is way before the emergence of Christianity and it uninfluenced by Christianity and thus represents an older tradition of a crucified god. With this transcendent cruciform of the deity and others in mind, Higgins, in his Anacalypsis, continues his intriguing detective tale:

… I cannot help suspecting, that it is from this Avatar of Cristna that the sect of Christians heretics got their Christ crucified in the clouds.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that long before Christianity we find this "crucified God" in other nations being depicted as being "Crucified In Space", in "Outer Space"? Did you look close to picture from Moor's (in his Hindu Pantheon) reproduction of ancient art and see the nail holes in the hands and feet of the "Celestially Crucified God"?

Answer for yourself: Do you mean to tell me that this "Cross of Crucifixion" is not on some hill of Golgotha in Israel but in Outer Space? No wonder we cannot find any "unforged" evidence for a historical Jesus being crucified in the world today that exists outside of this one book given us by these Roman forgers. No wonder Rome had to "purposefully misquote, mistranslate, and invent texts used in their Second New Testament in order to conceal this "Solar Crucifixion" and in so doing limit "the Christ" to but one person in their version of a religion crafted to dominate the minds of mankind through fear and ignorance.

Answer for yourself: Has this Sun on the Cross in Heaven and the Sky been personified and in so doing been brought down to Earth from Heaven to complete the mythos and the Uranograph? Yes. But sadly here what was "mystical" and "metaphysical" has been make "literal and historical" to which was attached the dogma that if you don't believe such a "literal-historical" even you are damned to Hell. Such simply is not true. Instead of a rugged cross to which a human body was supposed hanged for your sin we are to "put to death" the works of Set, the works of the flesh that lie within us:

Rom 6:6 6 Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. (KJV)

Again we need the "keys" to interpret this passage correctly. The Descent of the Soul was a "type of death" and "crucifixion" where the Soul was imprisoned in a body of death, disease, and which is capable of great evils. Man was to understand that like the "Christ imprisoned in a body of death" so likewise our Evil "Sethian" Nature is imprisoned inside us as well and that the only hope that we can rise above this animal nature within us is that we the "Krst/Karest/Christ" within us arise as the "Sun of righteousness with healing in his wings".

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

Col 1:26-27 26 Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints: 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

This is the only hope for mankind; to know who he is, from which we came, and to which he goes at the end of his life.

The "Pattern in the Mount" continues; sadly today without proper interpretation as evidenced by 2.5 billion Christian believers who will go to their graves believing in an assumed historical Messiah crucified for their sins when God only gave man repentance and good works to atone for such sins in the first place. Judaism and Egyptian religion has always known this; it is we who drink our Christian "grape kool-aid" Sunday after Sunday who have "died to the truth". Totally absent today from Christianity is the "keys" necessary to interpret the "Jesus Story" correctly and we lay this tragic condition to the efforts of Rome over the first 5 centuries to eradicate as completely as possible the righteous teachings of both Judaism and Gnosticism. In their place we are dumbed-down continually to believe a fairy tale instead of the truth about "the Christ" within us all.

We will continue in the next article investigating the Astronomy behind this Cross in the Heavens in more detail to make certain there is no doubt about the truth of the matter.

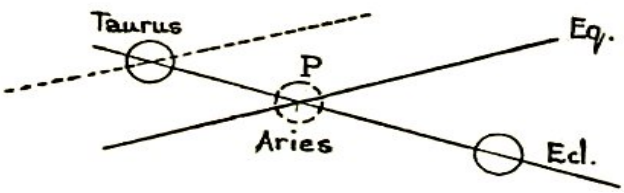
THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #17

We left off the previous article having done a short introduction to the "Crucifixion in the Sky...in Outer Space" as well as the "Astronomical Cross in the Sky". We looked at what it originally meant; the intersection of two planes of existences; one matter and one pure Spirit-Energy which has fused together. We have already seen that this refers to the Descent of the Cosmic Mind or Soul into Matter; where God become the "All in All". We saw that this was intersection of these two existences was seen "Celestially" before it was understood "terrestrially". We have seen that this intersection of these two existences was connected with the Vernal Equinox of the year as symbolized by the path of the Sun as it rose not only from the Southern Hemisphere into the Northern Hemisphere at the Vernal Equinox but as it moved over "an intersection of planes in the Heavens, the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptic". We need to spend some time to learn about this Vernal Equinox and all that is related to it and in so doing come to understand what God wants us to think about it and how it relates to mankind's existence and ultimate salvation.

The Vernal Equinox has all over the ancient world, and from the earliest times, been a period of rejoicing and of festivals in honor of the Sungod. This Sungod mind you is nothing more than the "personification of the Sun". Everyone understands and appreciates the joy of finding that the long darkness of the year associated with the Winter Solstice is gradually going away, that the Sun is growing daily in strength, light, and warmth, and that the days are winning a victory over the nights. The ancients told myths about this struggle between "light and darkness" and we find them in such stories like Set and Horus, Cain and Abel, Isaac and Ishmael, Jacob and Esau, and a host of others. The birds and flowers reappear, and the promise of Spring is in the air. But it may be worth while to give an elementary explanation of the astronomical meaning of this period, because this is not always understood, and yet it is very important in its bearing on the rites and creeds of the early religions. The priests were the early students and inquirers of the stars and had worked out this astronomical understanding of the Cosmos, and in that way were able to fix dates and to frame for the benefit of the populace myths and legends, which were in a certain sense explanations of the order of Nature, and a kind of "popular science."

The Equator, as everyone knows, is an imaginary line or circle girdling the Earth half-way between the North and South poles. If you imagine a transparent Earth with a light at its very centre, and also imagine the shadow of this equatorial line to be thrown on the vast concave of the Sky, this shadow would in astronomical parlance coincide with the Equator of the Sky--forming an imaginary circle half-way between the North and South celestial poles.



In the illustration on the left the signs of the Zodiac are represented by a belt which must be imagined at a practically infinite distance among the stars. The Sun is in the centre, and the dotted circle indicates the Earth's orbit--the numerals

1,2,3, etc., standing for the places of the Earth in the corresponding months of the year. Thus in January, to the observer at (1) the sun would appear to be in Aquarius; in February he would appear in Pisces; in March in Aries; and so forth. The diagram shows these relative positions fairly accurately as they were 3,000 years ago. Now, owing to the Precession of the Equinoxes the place of the Spring Equinox has moved to the right, and is in Pisces, and not far from Aquarius which is the next Age for mankind.

The Equator, then, may be pictured as cutting across the sky either by day or by night, and always at the same elevation--that is, as seen from any one place. But the Ecliptic (the other important great circle of the heavens) can only be thought of as a line traversing the constellations as they are seen at night. The Ecliptic is in fact the Sun's path among the fixed stars. For (really owing to the Earth's motion in its orbit) the Sun appears to move round the heavens once a year--travelling, always to the left, from Constellation to Constellation. The exact path of the sun is called the Ecliptic; and the band of sky on either side of the Ecliptic which may be supposed to include the said constellations is called the Zodiac.

Answer for yourself: How then, seeing that the Sun and the Stars can never be seen together, were the Priests able to map out the path of the former among the latter? We are not for certain but all we know is that they did it. Even with the very primitive instruments they had this ability to map the Heavens shows that their astronomical knowledge and acuteness of reasoning were unbelievable as we look at it today.

Let us suppose that the Equator and Ecliptic of the sky, at the Spring season, at the Vernal Equinox, are represented by two lines Eq. and Ecl. crossing each other at the point P. The Sun, represented by the small circle, is moving slowly and in its annual course along the Ecliptic to the left. When the Sun reaches the point P (the dotted circle) it stands on the Equator of the sky, and being neither North nor South, it shines on the two terrestrial hemispheres alike, and day and night are equal. Before that time, when the sun is low down in the heavens, night has the advantage, and the days are short; afterwards, when the Sun has travelled more to the left, the days triumph over the nights. It will be seen then that this point P where the Sun's path crosses the Equator is a very critical point.

Answer for yourself: Why is this so important? It is the astronomical location of the triumph of the Sun, or when personified of the Sungod and of the arrival of Spring. The Earth is awaking from the death of Winter and mankind can look forward to the food chain being restored.

Let's travel back for a moment to about 20,000 B.C.E. or so and try to put ourselves into the place of Ancient mankind. It's early evening, and the Sun had just set. In this time before sidewalks, street lights, headlights, and the glow of cities, the moonless night was truly dark, so dark that it was often dangerous to be outside at night. The blackness made it difficult to see the ground, and the dark gave cover to beasts and plunderers that prowled the night. At nighttime, it was very, very dark and until fire was discovered, it was man's most dangerous enemy and threatened his very survival. In the dark cold of night man realized his utter vulnerability to the elements. Each night, mankind was forced to wait for the "Rising of the Sun" to chase away the physical and mental insecurity brought on by the darkness. Therefore, the morning Sun focused man's attention on his heavenly dependence for his frail, short existence on Earth, and in doing so, you can see how the Sun became the appropriate symbol of the Creator's divine benevolence from heaven. And as Winter progressed Ancient man noticed that it became darker for longer and longer periods of time and much colder. It was inarguably, unremittingly, and unexplainably dark. Watching the Heavens primitive man saw the Sun was fading fast and receding at sunset on the horizon as it set. He feared that his source of "salvation" might stop shining altogether, and might never reappear. Ancient mankind saw the dark as his mortal enemy for it gave cover for all the bad things that could happen to him: attacks from other tribes, the capture of his family, attacks from predator animals, prey to poisonous snakes, injuries sustained by accidents that occur in the dark, etc. All the bad things seemed to happen in the dark. So until the discovery of fire which brought limited light into man's own little world of darkness, primitive man only had the "Great Fire of Day" which served the whole Earth with its heavenly presence.

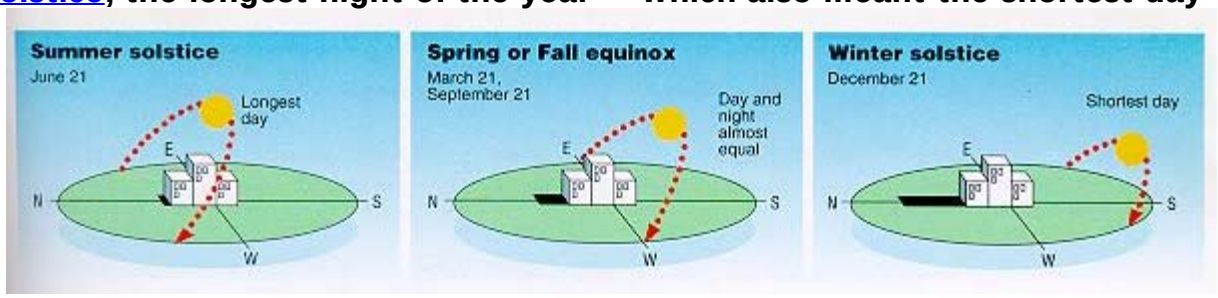
Answer for yourself: Is this the reason that several thousand years ago mankind said and believed at it says in Deut 4:24, and Heb 12:29 that the God of the Bible was a "Consuming Fire" in heaven? It sure was. Just how related is our religious concepts of God and our Sun? Now are you beginning to see how the ancients viewed God as symbolized by the life-giving Sun?

All mankind quickly came to realize that he was attached and bound to a life on Earth, but it was the sky that brought to him his "salvation" and man reasoned that this was the home of his God and Creator. The Heavens above was to the Ancients God's dwelling place. Over time as man created and reasoned his various "theologies" and personified the Sun, the symbol of his God, and its movements in the Heavens it would be a short step to personify the Sun as the "Son" of the Sun and they further reasoned that God's Son/Sun would also reside with his Father "up there in Heaven". It was assumed that God's 'Sun was but a visible representative of the unseen Creator in heaven. So it was said, "When you have seen the Sun, you have seen the Father " or "The Father is glorified in his Sun".

As you can imagine Ancient man had no problem understanding that all life on Earth depended directly on life-giving energy from the Sun because the Sun not only caused the crops to grow and produce a harvest that guaranteed his life and longevity but the light and warmth that it gave mankind was the main factor in his safety and security as explained above. Consequently, all life was lost without the Sun. It followed that God's 'Sun' was nothing less than "mankind's Saviour".



One of the things that amazed me in my study of Egypt was their unbelievable knowledge of Science, Physics, and Astronomy. You have to read it for yourself to see how they understood these disciplines in the way that they did but the ancients understood the intricacies of the atom and molecules. The Ancients understood energy and since life is energy, and energy from the Sun gave life, they then understood that their own existence was sustained by themselves taking energy into their bodies from the foods that they ate that was again sustained by the Sun. They again reasoned that Sun was giving up its life supporting energy in order that they could live. In such a way the Sun was pouring out "His life" and "His blood" that mankind might have "life" and "be saved". This is how this was described.

Answer for yourself: Is this where we get the concept that God's Sun, or God personified in the Sun, gives His life for us in order that we might live? We sure do.

As you now clearly see the Ancients reasoned that their lives came from and were sustained each day by "Their Saviour... in the form of God's Sun". But this truism only worked as long as the Sun would return each morning to pour out his life for them. Primitive mankind's hope of salvation, both present and future, would be secure only if his "Savior, in the form of the Sun was 'Risen'". This might sound complicated but it is not. The Ancients tracked the Sun, their Savior, across the sky daily and yearly for thousands of years and little escaped their scrutiny. You only have to read the extent and depth of their Astronomy and their records to be amazed and flabbergasted at what they knew and the knowledge they possessed. They knew that if their Sun, their Savior did not rise from his grave of darkness in the dead of Winter then all would be lost for mankind. To understand this you need to understand the schematic that follows.

At the dead of Winter the Sun was noticed to set progressively southward in the horizon and the days progressively possessed less light and warmth. It appeared to the Ancients that the Sun was dying. Ancient mankind reasoned that light was dying; the Sun was dying just as he had seen others of his species die. It was the most scary time for the Ancients. As what we now call mid-December came closer, the days got shorter still. Then came December 21, what we call the Winter Solstice, the longest night of the year -- which also meant the shortest day of the year, with Sunlight practically imperceptible after that harrowing dark night. Our prehistoric ancestors wondered how vegetation and animals would survive, how they would they survive without the Sun. Little wonder that in almost every nation and their recorded histories we find that traditions and ceremonies and customs evolved, some of them not so nice, to propitiate the dark and entice the Sun to come back strong.One element of this frenzy for light, once it was feasible, was bonfires. They kept the dark at bay and illuminated festivities aimed at winning back the Sun. All the world waited patiently for the Son's 'imminent return". They further reasoned that surely the Divine Father and Creator would never leave them at the mercy of this world of darkness. Over the centuries man, through his observations of the Sun and the pattern of its movement, was reassured that the Creator's Heavenly promise concerning his Sun was surely that..."He would come again"...to light their path, and save those lost in the darkness. He was reassured every morning and every year as the cycle of the Sun through the Heavens and the Zodiac seemed to repeat.

Logically, the Ancients reasoned that even if man himself died, as long as the Sun continued to dawn and set each day, life on Earth will continue forever. Therefore, it was said in the Ancient texts that "everlasting life was 'the gift' that the Father gives through his Sun.

Answer for yourself: We have mentioned that the Sun, over time, became personified as the "Son". Understanding that these Ancient and Eternal and Divine concepts were captured for all time in legend and myth by the Ancients then when we read for example:

John 3:16 16 For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him (God) should not perish, but have everlasting life. (KJV)

then is it too far of a stretch to see that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten SUN that we may have life everlasting"..on the Earth?

Early mankind not only feared the dark but the manifestations of evil and harm that lurked at every turn in the fearful dark of night. He further reasoned that all evil or harmful deeds were naturally, the..."works of darkness." Let us not forget that anthropomorphism or personification is the attribution of human characteristics to inanimate objects, animals, forces of nature, and others. Anthropomorphism in the form of personification consists of creating imaginary persons who are the embodiment of an abstraction such as Darkness, Death, Lust, or War. In our study we are concerned with the personification of Light and Darkness as man's greatest

Savior and greatest Adversary. Early man simply personified these forces because it was extremely difficult for them to picture or discuss God or these forces that came from the Creator of all without an anthropomorphic framework. Thus we see the darkness personified as the "Devil":

- With the return of the Sun each morning, man felt more secure in his world and therefore, was at peace. Therefore, God's 'Sun' was with his warm rays of life and hope...The Great "Prince of Peace".
- Conversely the dark evil of night was ruled by none other than..."Prince of Darkness"

I want to show you something having understood now the personification of forces:

- The Dark was Evil
- Primitive mankind reasoned it as "Dark"-"Evil"
- "D"-"Evil"
- the "Devil"..get it?

Not only that at the darkest time of the year, December 21st through the 24th, the Sun sank lowest in the Southern horizon and man feared that as the Sun remained motionless for 3 days that the Sun had been "killed by the Darkness". So for 3 days it was said that the Sun descended to fight against the Darkness only to rise in victory after 3 days; that day being the "birth of the light of the World" or our Christmas day of December 25th. Personify this a little and then you have the "Son of God" fighting the "dark-Evil" or the "D-Evil" for 3 days before his victory and "birth" or should I say "rebirth". All the Solar-gods and personified godmen were born on December 25th, the Winter Solstice which is the time for the "rebirth" or "birth" of the Sun anew.

You have just seen the origin of one of the biggest theologies known to man.

Answer for yourself: What is that? It is many. We have here the birth of the "Son of God" as well as the imaginary concept of "the Devil" which is nothing but darkness personified and we as Christians read our Bibles "literally" and we don't know it and we raise millions of dollars to fight an imaginary war in our Churches to fight this Devil and pray against him and fast and bind him over and over again as if he and God are in some mortal combat which they are not. Because of such ignorance of this religious concept and its origin let along the forgery of our Christian Bibles the Kingdom of Heaven goes lacking when needy people should be the recipients of such funds in our Churches instead of larger TV antennas and ministries to fight a fictitious enemy when ignorance is our foe. It seems we have learned nothing and find ourselves at the very same stages of development of primitive man thousands and thousands of years ago. God surely is not pleased at our mental stagnation let alone the famine of the truth about the Word of God. At least the Egyptians understood this whole thing as a Divine Allegory and Christians think it is real today. We should be ashamed for living and dying on this planet never coming to the knowledge of the truth behind our Bibles.

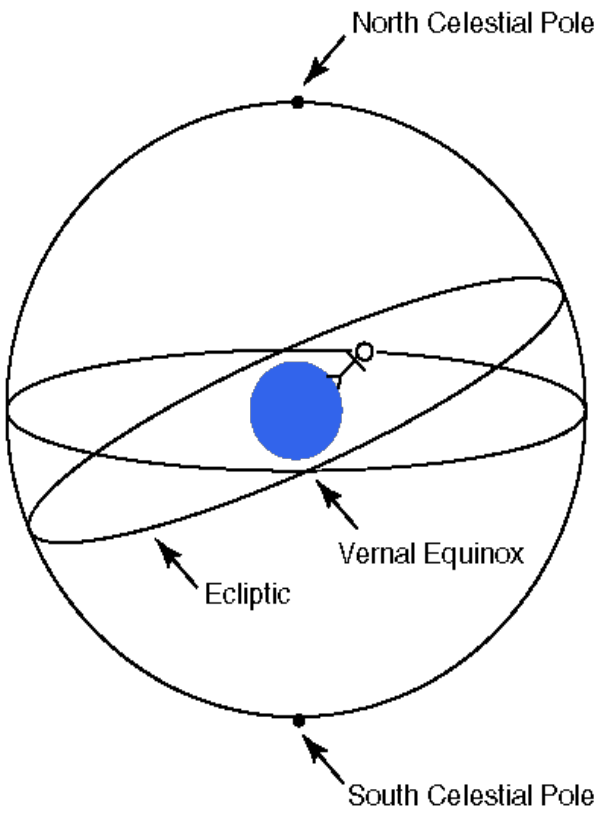
Answer for yourself: Did you know that we get our English words 'Good' and 'God' from the German word 'Goth' as in 'Gothic'? Now we see God is Good, and Devil is Evil.

Hopefully you can now see that it is only a short step to see "The Light of God's Sun" equated with the light of truth and evil equated with darkness. From then on, it was simple to understand... "Light was good and dark was bad". If you were born around the equator with more melanin in your skin and have "dark" skin you were born liable to experience the ignorance of others in the form of racism you whole life simply because then ever came to understand primitive mankind's used of darkness to personify evil.

Answer for yourself: Could this be behind all racism where people hate the darker skinned of mankind? You bet it is!

That being true, then that Great Orb of Day, God's Sun, can rightly say of itself,

John 9:5 5 As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world. (KJV)



We now have before us two cosmic forces or "brothers" - one very good, and one very evil (the prototype for Set and Horus).

Answer for yourself: Is the first story of this cosmic brotherhood and struggle found in the story of Osiris and Set and their conflict and struggle that ends with Osiris' death and resurrection (similar to the Sun being raised from the dead once a year) and Horus' victory over Set (personified darkness)? You bet it is. This conflict between light and darkness is replayed in almost every religion of the world between its saviors and its adversaries. Christianity is not immune to this pattern as well.

One of these forces brings the "truth to light" with the "light of truth". The other is the opposite, or in opposition to the light - "The Opposer"... "The Adversary"..."The Devil"..."The God of this world"..."The Prince of this World of Darkness".

So we see that it is the return of "light" and "life" that accompanies the Sun that man looked forward toward after the Winter Solstice because for him it meant the guarantee of "life" not only for himself but for his family as well. Man looked forward to God's gift of "life" that was renewed every Spring Equinox. With this as a backdrop now let us return to our study of the Vernal Equinox, the point where the Sun's path crossed the Equator and the Ecliptic; the "Cross" in the Heavens.

Answer for yourself: How was this location, this "Cross" defined? Among what stars was the Sun moving at that critical moment when it "Crossed" the intersection of the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptic? It is important to understand that the Sun was deeply influenced by the Constellation through which it was, or appeared to be, moving. It seems then that at the period when these questions were occupying men's minds--say about three thousand years ago--the point where the Ecliptic crossed the Equator was, as a matter of fact, in the region of the Constellation Aries or the "he-Lamb". The triumph of the Sungod was therefore, and quite naturally, ascribed to the influence of the particular Constellation which was the "backdrop" for the Sun which happens to be Aries in this case (3000 years ago).

Answer for yourself: Why is this important?

The lamb, the symbol for the Constellation Aries, became the symbol of the risen Sun, the risen Savior (personified for the risen Sun, the "Savior" of mankind from the Winter death at the Winter Solstice) at the Vernal Equinox at the changing of the Age from Taurus to Aries), and of his passage from the underworld into the height of Heaven (the Sun moving from the Southern Hemisphere above the Celestial Equator into the Northern Hemisphere). Mankind recognized that this was the time for the salvation of mankind.

Every years man was saved by the resurrection of the Sun "from the dead" when the Sun, or

God, fought the "Dark-Evil" of Winter (personified darkness mentioned above) and especially at the changing of the Precessional Age; from Taurus to Aries for example when God manifested to mankind Himself anew with always a new and deeper revelation of Himself to mankind accompanied with a deeper understanding of the salvation of humankind. At first such an explanation sounds unsound; but a thousand texts and references confirm it; and it is only by the accumulation of evidence in these cases that the student becomes convinced of a theory's correctness. Having done the required studies over and over again believe me these concepts above are as firm and sound as they could be. It is reproducible over and over again from many varies and infallible proofs and from all over the world and the ancient religions. It must also be remembered, and I have mentioned before, that these myths and legends were commonly adopted not only for one strict reason but because they represented in a general way the convergence of various symbols and inferences.

Let me enumerate a few points with regard to the Vernal Equinox. In the Bible the Celestial festival, the Vernal Equinox, is called the Passover, and its supposed institution by Moses is related in Exodus, ch. 12. Few are aware that Egypt observed this "Passover in the Sky" for thousands of years long before a historical Moses was ever born. This fact alone should make you set up straight and think thoughts that you never have thought before. What we uncover in such a study is that mankind, long before the Jews and since the beginning of time, understood that God put in the Heavens "signs" and "seasons". These "signs" and "season" were not just for Nature to function but behind them are the very core secrets of mankind's life and the life-cycle and "Pattern" for his Soul's Spiritual Maturation. These "Divine Truths" are captured in the Biblical Festivals which reflect the Equinoxes and Solstices or the "Pattern for the birth-life-death-rebirth" of the Soul.

Back to our point in every house the Bible stresses that for the Jews a "he-lamb" was to be slain, and its blood to be sprinkled on the doorposts of the house. Then the Lord would pass over and not smite that house. Historically this happened in Egypt long before Moses and I urge the readers to read Ralph Ellis' book Jesus: the Last of the Pharaohs to see this for yourself. That is not to discount however how these later Jews would learn of this important sacred time of God and "reinterpret" it for themselves as a "new people" who emerged from Egypt with Akhenaten-Moses in what is described as the Exodus in our Bibles and in ancient history. The Hebrew word for the "Passover" is "pasach" which means "to pass".

Answer for yourself: "Pass" what?

Of course as we saw this refers to the Sun as its "passes" over not only the division between the Southern and Northern Hemisphere yearly but "over the intersection of the Celestial Equator plane and the plane of the Ecliptic" in the Sky and Heaven (the Cross in the Heavens). So "Passover" is the correct term; it is only us today who do not understand the real meaning of the world and only look to this later "Jewish historical reinterpretation" for our only meaning of the word as if this was the origin for both the "word" and "religious concept". But it is not. It is said that pasach sometimes means not so much to pass over, as to hover over and so protect. Since "protect" and "salvation" are similar the concept is easy to understand. Possibly both meanings enter in here. If you have a second look at Isaiah 31:5. The lamb slain was called the Paschal Lamb.

Answer for yourself: But what was that lamb really? Evidently not an earthly lamb--(though certainly the earthly lambs on the hillsides were just then ready in the Spring to be killed and eaten). This lamb was first and foremost the Heavenly Lamb in the Sky and Heavens which was said by the Ancients to have been slain or sacrificed when the Lord, in the symbol of the Sun, "passed over" the Equator and obliterated the Constellation Aries.

Answer for yourself: What is meant here by the "obliteration of Aries" or the "killing of the Lamb" by the Sun?

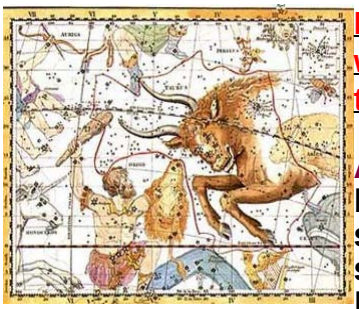
When the Sun "passed over" (Passover), or rose above the horizon on the Vernal Equinox then the Constellation Aries, lay behind the Sun much farther out in Space. This Constellation of Aries lay on the horizon just before dawn and visible to all due East at the time of the Spring or Vernal Equinox. This Constellation of Aries will spend 2,160 years dominating the Vernal Equinox and it was again observable before dawn, but as the Sun rose it the Constellation of Aries was obscured by the emerging light of the Sun. The ancients said that at Sunrise the Constellation Aries was no longer visible and that the Lamb in Heaven had been killed. The ancients said this with each symbolic representation of the Constellations or the particular House or Sign of the Zodiac that ruled during the Vernal Equinox as related to the Precession of the Equinox. For 2,160 years the Sun Sign or House of the Zodiac, if it were an animal, was either symbolically "killed" or "destroyed" by the rising Sun rising on this very important day of the Vernal Equinox and this went on year after year. Before the Age of Aries when the Constellation of Aries ruled the Vernal Equinox for 2,160 years it was the Constellation of Taurus; therefore you can expect and do find that the Bull of Taurus likewise obliterated by the rising of the Sun and it was said of him that also was "killed on the Vernal Equinox". Thus the personified symbol of Sun that was connected the Constellation behind the rising Sun on the Vernal Equinox was constantly obliterated on this day at the beginning of each Age and we get from this the idea of God "dying" that man might have new life and life abundantly each new Spring and this was confirmed as the Earth awoke from its death at the previous Winter and the Winter Solstice (the coldest times of the year when Mother Nature appeared asleep or death). Considering the Age of Aries, this was the Lamb of God which was slain each year and did so for the length of each Age; for 2,160 years, and "Slain since the foundation of the world." This period of the Passover (about the 25th March) was to be the beginning of a new year. The Hebrews followed this same "Pattern in the Mount" as we see in the Book of Exodus in the Hebrew Tanakh.

Exod 12:1-3 1 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying, 2 This month shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you. 3 Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall take to them every man a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house: (KJV)

Now we know why they used "lambs" and not "Bulls"; the Age of Aries had dawned and the Astrological Symbol for Aries was "the lamb" and not the "Bull". The "Pattern in the Mount" had to be maintained on Earth as it was in Heaven.

The sacrifice of the Lamb, the symbol for the Sun, and its "blood", which symbolized its life, were to be the promise of redemption for mankind. The sacrifice of the Sun, as it poured out its life and Energy for mankind following its death, and as associated with the Constellation of Aries at the Vernal Equinox for 2,160 years, became the recurring promise of redemption and salvation for mankind. Man recognized this and celebrated this "promise of mankind's salvation" every year at this special time. This salvation, mind you, was both "terrestrial"; occurring at the Spring Equinox each year but also "Celestial", as man came to see the same Eternal Cycles repeated in the Heavens above and in Nature below which testified to him of the unbroken "Pattern in the Mount" of "birth, life, death, and rebirth". Seeing this, then man knew that he would follow in this Eternal cycle himself; that he would live again after his death as did the Sun, the Moon, and Mother Nature. Since the "Celestial Pattern in the Mount" followed this "Pattern" of "birth, life, death, and rebirth" in unbroken fashion and as Mother Nature did the same as well then Ancient Mankind came to see that he was created in the same image of God above and that these same "Patterns in the Mount" will operate in him as well. That is why the Egyptian Religion focused on being prepared to die by living a life of righteousness and good works according to the Egyptian Laws and Commandments of God...their own Torah.

Thus we find in our Exodus story that the door-frames of the houses were to be sprinkled with



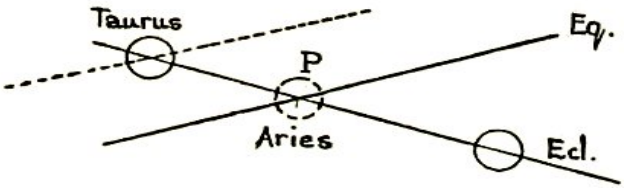
"life"; literally the blood of the Lamb which at that time was the symbol for the ruling Constellation at the Vernal Equinox. This is nothing more than a repeat of what had been done previously with the "blood of the Bull" in the previous Age of Taurus.

Answer for yourself: Why use "door-frames"? Simply because they were symbols of the entrance into a new life.

It is even said, in Frazier's The Golden Bough, vol. 3, p. 185, that the doorways of houses and temples in Peru were at the Spring festival daubed with blood of the first-born children--commuted afterwards to the blood of the sacred animal, the Llama. Here we find the exact same belief that the Sun poured out its life, its "symbolic blood" that man could live in and on a re-renewed and resurrected Mother Earth. This proves and shows that half-way around the globe we find the same "Celestial belief" concerning this "Cross in the Heavens" and how the Sun was "crucified on the Cross in the Heavens" at the Vernal Equinox and mankind was following in similar symbolic fashion the Heavenly meaning of this Celestial Event. And as to Mexico, Sahagun, the great Spanish missionary, tells us that it was a custom of the people there to "smear the outside of their houses and doors with blood drawn from their own ears and ankles, in order to propitiate the god of Harvest" (Kingsborough's Mexican Antiquities, vol. vi, p. 235). This belief is "universal" a long time before there ever was a supposed "historical Jesus" who likewise is believed to have poured out his blood for mankind as well; a similar personification of this Divine Concept.

Later, the imagery of the saving power of the blood of the Lamb became more popular, more highly colored which we see at the pens of the Early Church Fathers. And we have the expression "washed in the blood of the Lamb" adopted into the Christian Church. Few Christians are aware that this very same phrase, "washed in the blood" was used for 2,160 years prior to the Age of Aries when the Age of Taurus ruled the Vernal Equinox. During this 2,160 years it was in vogue to be "washed in the blood of the Bull" since the Constellation of Aries ruled the Vernal Equinox before Aries. This was accomplished by the initiate descending into a pit where he was bathed in the blood of a Bull, which was sacrificed above him so that the blood poured down through a grating and over the initiate. There are also references to a Criobolium, which involved the slaughter of a Ram or sheep, hence no doubt the actual, historical reality behind such metaphorical Christian hymns as "Washed in the Blood of the Lamb."

In order fully to understand this extraordinary expression and its relationship to the "Cross in the Heavens" and its origin we must turn for a moment to the worship both of Mithra, the Persian Sungod, and of Attis the Syrian god; both of which will throw a great amount of illumination upon the Christian cult and ceremonies. It must be remembered that in the early centuries of our era the Mithra-cult was spread over the whole Western world. It has left many monuments of itself as far away as Britain. At Rome the worship was extremely popular, and it may almost be said to have been a matter of chance whether Mithraism should overwhelm Christianity, or whether the younger religion by adopting many of the rites of the older one should establish itself as it did in the face of the latter.



Now we have already mentioned in many other articles on this and other websites that in the Mithra cult the slaying of a Bull by the Sungod occupies the same sort of place as the slaving of the Lamb in the Christian cult.

Answer for yourself: Any why is that? The Age in which these religious beliefs were expressed was during the Age of Taurus which has for its symbol for God the "Bull" and later Christianity picked up on the Aries symbolism of the Lamb as the Precession of the Equinoxes moved the House of Aries behind the Sun after displacing the House of Taurus.

This slaying of the Bull took place at the Vernal Equinox as will later the slaying of the Lamb as the Constellation of Taurus is likewise obliterated by the dawning Sun as it moved across this "Cross in the Heavens" and it is easy to see how the blood of the Bull (the symbol of all "life") acquired in men's minds a magic virtue.

Lev 17:11 11 For the life (SOUL) of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul. (KJV) 12 Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, No soul of you shall eat blood, neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood. (KJV)

Since the Soul lives in the blood we see the importance for "blood" and its relationship to "salvation". Mithraism was a greatly older religion than Christianity; but its genesis was similar. In fact, owing to the Precession of the Equinoxes, the crossing-place of the Ecliptic and Equator was different at the time of the establishment of Mithra-worship from what it was in the Christian period; and the Sun instead of standing in the He-lamb, or Aries, at the Vernal Equinox stood, about two thousand years earlier (as indicated by the dotted line in the diagram on the left), in this very Constellation of the Bull (around 5000 years ago). As you can see the Sun moves through the galaxy and in so doing it move through this Zodiac and the diagram show us that the Sun moves over this "Cross in the Heavens" from Sun sign to Sun sign, for House to House in the Houses of the Zodiac. The Sun was in Taurus 2,160 years before it entered into the House of Aries and 2,160 years later it moved into the House of Pisces, etc.

As we would expect the Bull therefore became the symbol of the triumphant God, and the sacrifice of the Bull a holy mystery. Nor must we overlook here the agricultural appropriateness of the Bull as the emblem of Spring-plowings and of service to man.

The sacrifice of the Bull became the image of redemption. God was pouring out not only His life but His Energy once again that man might have "life" and have "life abundantly" as again, according to the "Pattern in the Mount" the Earth was awaking from the dead once again. In a certain well-known Mithra-sculpture or group, the Sungod is represented as plunging his dagger into a Bull, while a scorpion, a serpent, and other animals are sucking the latter's blood. From one point of view this may be taken as symbolic of the Sun fertilizing the gross Earth by plunging his rays into it and so drawing forth its blood for the sustenance of all creatures; while from another more astronomical aspect it symbolizes the conquest of the Sun over Winter in the moment of "passing over" the sign of the Bull, and the depletion of the generative power of the Bull by the Scorpion--which of course is the Autumnal sign of the Zodiac and herald of Winter.

Man was being redeemed by God by Him pouring out His "life" and "Energy" upon mankind. Man was saved by God pouring out His life and Energy for the salvation of mankind; first understood "Celestially" and then "terrestrially". This Celestial Concept was recognized on a daily basis by the continual rising of the Sun but much more dramatized at the Vernal Equinox each year it was again revealed when the Sun had risen from the Dead to bring mankind new hope and new life.

This emergence from the dead by the Sun, which personified the Invisible God, was likened to God pouring out his "life" or His "blood for mankind" and well so since the rays of this "new born" Sun were "red" and this "new life" was connected with the "red-life" of man; his blood as well. Through simply symbolism it was said that God was pouring out "His Blood" for mankind's salvation; and all of this mind you was symbolized by the Sun (itself a symbol for the Invisible Living Intelligent Energy whom we call the God of the Cosmos).A brilliant Sunrise is all we need to to see to grasp this point beyond any doubt as framed in the mind of the Ancients. This crossing of the planes of the Celestial Equator and the Ecliptic by the Sun, the return of the Sun to the Norther Hemisphere as the symbol for the Invisible Ra or God of the Cosmos, at this very special day, the Spring Equinox, where the Sun was on this "Cross" in the Heavens along with it pouring out its "life and Energy" for mankind, was the basis for all later ideas and concepts of the Sun being crucified (on the Cross) in the Heavens for mankind and mankind's salvation. This idea was later again applied to the personified Sun as the Solar saviors who were likewise "crucified on Crosses"; and this "Celestial Crucifixion" was transferred to Earth (the Uranogrpah, "So Above, So Below") and we end up with crucified sungods who all fit the "Pattern in the Mount" and this explains why our "Jesus Story" is but a reproduction from start to finish of the previous live of the Sungods. This explains it; they all are personifications of the Path of the Sun through the Zodiac. Jesus Christ is the last in a long line of similar Solar personifications and this explains why all their life-stores and wisdom sayings are all alike; they all as the personified Sun followed the same path through the Sky and the Zodiac. That is why our "Jesus Story", mistaken for a "literal-historical" person, is but another in a long line of personifications of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac.

In the worship of Attis there were (as I have already indicated) many points of resemblance to the Christian cult. On the 22nd March (the Vernal Equinox) a pine-tree was cut in the woods and brought into the Temple of Cybele. It was treated almost as a divinity, was decked with violets, and the effigy of a young man tied to the stem (the Crucifixion). The 24th was called the "Day of Blood"; the High Priest first drew blood from his own arms; and then the others gashed and slashed themselves, and spattered the altar and the sacred tree with blood; while novices made themselves eunuchs "for the kingdom of heaven's sake." The effigy was afterwards laid in a tomb. But when night fell, says Dr. Frazier, sorrow was turned to joy (Adonis, Attis and Osiris, Part IV of The Golden Bough, by J. G. Frazier, p. 229). A light was brought, and the tomb was found to be empty. The next day, the 25th, was the festival of the Resurrection; and ended in carnival and license (the Hilaria). Further, says Dr. Frazer, these mysteries "seem to have included a sacramental meal and a baptism of blood."

"In the baptism the devotee, crowned with gold and wreathed with fillets, descended into a pit, the mouth of which was covered with a wooden grating. A Bull, adorned with garlands of flowers, its forehead glittering with gold leaf, was then driven on to the grating and there stabbed to death with a consecrated spear. Its hot reeking blood poured in torrents through the apertures, and was received with devout eagerness by the worshiper on every part of his person and garments, till he emerged from the pit, drenched, dripping, and scarlet from head to foot, to receive the homage, nay the adoration, of his fellows--as one who had been born again to eternal life and had washed away his sins in the blood of the Bull" (Ibid.).

And Frazer continuing says: "That the bath of blood derived from slaughter of the Bull (tauro-bolium) was believed to regenerate the devotee for eternity is proved by an inscription found at Rome, which records that a certain Sextilius Agesilaus Aedesius, who dedicated an altar to Attis and the mother of the gods (Cybele) was 'taurobolio criobolio que in aeternum renatus'" (That is, "By the slaughter of the bull and the slaughter of the ram born again into eternity")."In the procedure of the Taurobolia and Criobolia," says Mr. J. M. Robertson, Pagan Christs, p. 315, "which grew very popular in the Roman world, we have the literal and original meaning of the phrase 'washed in the blood of the lamb'; the doctrine being that resurrection and eternal life were secured by drenching or sprinkling with the actual blood of a sacrificial Bull or ram."

If you are a "thinking believer" I have to believe that you can see for yourself what I do and the conclusions we draw are basically easy. There is not any reason for supposing that the priests of Mithra or Attis regarded baptism by blood very differently from the way in which the Christian Church has generally regarded baptism by water--namely, as a symbol of some inner regeneration. There may certainly have been a little more of the magical view and a little less of the symbolic, in the older religions; but the difference was probably on the whole more one of degree than of essential disparity. But however that may be, we cannot but be struck by the extraordinary analogy between the tombstone inscriptions of that period "born again into eternity by the blood of the Bull or the Ram," and the corresponding texts in our graveyards to-day. The Bull in Heaven--the symbol of the triumphant Sungod--and the earthly Bull, sacrificed for the good of humanity were one and the same; the god, in fact, sacrificed himself or his representative. And Mithra was the hero who first won this conception of divinity for mankind--though of course it is in essence quite similar to the conception put forward by the Christian Church.

"At Rome," he further says (p. 230), "the new birth and the remission of sins by the shedding of Bull's blood appear to have been carried out above all at the sanctuary of the Phrygian Goddess (Cybele) on the Vatican Hill, at or near the spot where the great basilica of St. Peter's now stands; for many inscriptions relating to the rites were found when the church was being enlarged in 1608 or 1609. From the Vatican as a centre," he continues, "this barbarous system of superstition seems to have spread to other parts of the Roman empire. Inscriptions found in Gaul and Germany prove that provincial sanctuaries modelled their ritual on that of the Vatican."

It would appear then that at Rome in the quiet early days of the Christian Church, the rites and ceremonials of Mithra and Cybele, probably much intermingled and blended, were exceedingly popular. Both religions had been recognized by the Roman State, and the Christians, persecuted and despised as they were, found it hard to make any headway against them--the more so perhaps because the Christian doctrines appeared in many respects to be merely faint replicas and copies of the older creeds.

Now you know why many, many people and scholars (who possess this knowledge) have come to not only think but believe that the association of the Lamb-god with the Cross arose from the fact that the Constellation Aries at that time was on the Heavenly Cross (the crossways of the Ecliptic and Equator), and in the very place through which the Sungod (as the personified Sun) had to pass just before his final triumph. And it is curious to find that Justin Martyr in his Dialogue with Trypho (a Jew), chapter xl, alludes to an old Jewish practice of roasting a Lamb on spits arranged in the form of a Cross.

Answer for yourself: Coincidence? Hardly! "The lamb," he says, meaning apparently the Paschal lamb, "is roasted and dressed up in the form of a cross. For one spit is transfixed right through the lower parts up to the head, and one across the back, to which are attached the legs [forelegs] of the lamb."

So now we see that the Lamb-god and the sacrifice of the Lamb were honored by the devotees of Mithra and Cybele in the Rome of the Christian era. It is a small jump to apply this to an "assumed historical person" as did Rome. Let we forget the the sacrifice of the Bull and the baptism in Bull's blood were the salient features of the Persian and Phrygian ceremonials, some centuries earlier.

Answer for yourself: How can this be reconciled as existing to divinities belonging to such different periods, or ascribe them both to an astronomical origin?" The answer is simple enough. As I have explained before, the Precession of the Equinoxes caused the Sun, at its moment of triumph over the powers of darkness, to stand at one period in the Constellation of the Bull, and at a period some two thousand years later in the Constellation of the Ram. It was perfectly natural therefore that a change in the sacred symbols should, in the course of time, take place; yet perfectly natural also that these symbols, having once been consecrated and adopted, should continue to be honored and clung to long after the time of their astronomical appropriateness had passed, and so to be found side by side in later centuries. The devotee of Mithra or Attis on the Vatican Hill at Rome in the year 200 A.D. probably had as little notion or comprehension of the real origin of the sacred Bull or Ram which he adored, as the Christian in St. Peter's to-day has of the origin of the Lamb-god whose vice-regent on earth is the Pope.

It is indeed easy to imagine that the change from the worship of the Bull to the worship of the Lamb which undoubtedly took place among various peoples as time went on, was only a ritual change initiated by the priests in order to put on record and harmonize with the astronomical alteration. Anyhow it is curious that while Mithra in the early times was specially associated with the Bull, his association with the lamb belonged more to the Roman period. Somewhat the same happened in the case of Attis. In the Bible we read of the indignation of Moses at the setting up by the Israelites of a Golden Calf, after the sacrifice of the ram-lamb had been instituted--as if indeed the rebellious people were returning to the earlier cult of Apis which they ought to have left behind them in Egypt. In Egypt itself, too, we find the worship of Apis, as time went on, yielding place to that of the Ram-headed god Amun, or Jupiter Ammon. Tacitus (Hist. v. 4) speaks of ram-sacrifice by the Jews in honor of Jupiter Ammon. So that both from the Bible and from Egyptian history we may conclude that the worship of the Lamb or Ram succeeded to the worship of the Bull.

Finally it has been pointed out, and there may be some real connection in the coincidence, that in the quite early years of Christianity the fish came in as an accepted symbol of Jesus Christ. Considering that after the domination of Taurus and Aries, the Fish (Pisces) comes next in succession as the Zodiacal sign for the Vernal Equinox, and is now the Constellation in which the Sun stands at that period, it seems not impossible that the astronomical change has been the cause of the adoption of this new symbol.

Anyhow, and allowing for possible errors or exaggerations, it becomes clear that the travels of the Sun through the belt of Constellations which forms the Zodiac must have had, from earliest times, a profound influence on the generation of religious myths and legends. To say that it was the only influence would certainly be a mistake. Other causes undoubtedly contributed. But it was a main and important influence. The origins of the Zodiac are obscure; we do not know with any certainty the reasons why the various names were given to its component sections, nor can we measure the exact antiquity of these names; but--pre-supposing the names of the signs as once given--it is not difficult to imagine the growth of legends connected with the Sun's course among them.

The "Jesus-story", it will now be seen, has a great number of correspondences with the stories of former Sungods and with the actual career of the Sun through the heavens--so many indeed that they cannot well be attributed to mere coincidence or even to the blasphemous wiles of the Devil! Let us enumerate some of these:

- the birth from a Virgin mother;
- the birth in a stable (cave or underground chamber); and
- on the 25th December (just after the Winter Solstice).
- the Star in the East (Sirius) and
- the arrival of the Magi (the "Three Kings"); there is
- the threatened Massacre of the Innocents, and the consequent flight into a distant country (told also of Krishna and other Sungods).
- There are the Church festivals of Candlemas (2nd February), with processions of candles to symbolize the growing light;
- Lent, or the arrival of Spring; of
- Easter Day (normally on the 25th March) to celebrate the crossing of the Equator by the Sun;
- Simultaneously the outburst of lights at the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem.
- There is the Crucifixion and death of the Lamb-God, on Good Friday, three days before Easter;
- There are the nailing to a tree,
- The empty grave,
- The glad Resurrection (as in the cases of Osiris, Attis and others); there are
- The twelve disciples (the Zodiacal signs); and
- The betrayal by one of the twelve.
- Then later there is Midsummer Day, the 24th June, dedicated to the Nativity of John the Baptist, and corresponding to Christmas Day;
- There are the festivals of the Assumption of the Virgin (15th August) and of
- The Nativity of the Virgin (8th September), corresponding to the movement of the god through Virgo;
- There is the conflict of Christ and his disciples with the autumnal asterisms, the Serpent and the Scorpion; and

- Finally there is the curious fact that the Church dedicates the very day of the Winter Solstice (when any one may very naturally doubt the rebirth of the Sun) to St. Thomas, who doubted the truth of the Resurrection!

These are some of, and by no means all, the coincidences in question. But they are sufficient, I think, to prove--even allowing for possible margins of error--the truth of the general contention. To go into the parallelism of the careers of Krishna, the Indian Sungod, and Jesus would take too long (we have done this at other places on this website); because indeed the correspondence is so extraordinarily close and elaborate.

Answer for yourself: What good books can I read to show this to me?

Robertson's Christianity and Mythology, Part II, pp. 129-302; also Doane's Bible Myths, ch. xxviii, p. 278.

Answer for yourself: Having seen this small representation of the "Pattern in the Mount" and its Celestial origin and the duplication and reproduction of this "crucifixion" in the Sky and Heavens of these prior Sungods, Jesus of which is the last one, then how certain are we that our Eternal Salvation is based upon some supposed "historical person" who was crucified for me "literally"? No wonder Judaism and Egypt has always taught repentance atones for sin and not some mystical blood of a sacrificial victim. Our failure to understand completely the role of "blood" in the Sacrificial System of Judaism, has contributed to us being led astray when reading about the "blood" and its role in the Sacrificial System. You will find it most surprising if not breath-taking when you study for yourself to find out that the "blood", at the core of the Sacrificial System, NEVER brought atonement for any sin; it only served as the inert vehicle for the "life", your "life", which atones for sin. The "blood" was only a picture of your right-standing with God which allowed you, via your symbolic "blood" to be on the altar with God. It was your repentance, contrite heart, confession of sin, righteous deeds, and renewed obedience to the Torah of God which had procured your "forgiveness" and "atonement" long before you went to Temple and participated in a "sin offering"; thus demonstrating to all that "all was right with you Soul" for you had already done these actions of contrition before going. Now you understand why Isaiah chapter 1 says that these blood offerings done "without repentance" wearies God and are worthless.

Let us continue our final studies in the next article or two.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #18

We are almost at the end of our study of the Uranography so we pick up from our digression where we discussed the "Cross in the Heavens". We mentioned before a very important passage from our Bibles that hold hidden wisdom. That passage is Philippians 2:6-8:

Phil 2:6-8 6 Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: 7 But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: 8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. (KJV)

We spent a lot of time dealing with the "Cross in Heaven" and mentioned as well that the Ancients taught that when the Soul was incarnated into matter that it was considered to have "died" since being limited to a body of death, disease, and sin. We expressed the Divine Wisdom that lay behind this passage as referring to the Descent of the Deific Mind, Soul, or Krst/Karest/Christ as it incarnates in matter, in particular the flesh of humankind.

This passage from Phil. 2:6-8 is a restatement of the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom of Egypt and the Jewish Kabbalah taught at its very best. We have before us in this passage, in personified form, the Descent of the Soul into matter, humankind; the vehicle to house the Soul in its journey to Earth which was always taught as a body of "death". The Soul, in leaving Heaven, was thought of as "dead" while on Earth needing to be born "spiritually" in these bodies of carnal and animal appetites. This is why God put the remedy for our Souls in the night Sky and Heavens above in order that all mankind might see the Will of God for their lives and come to know the truth. God knowing that unscrupulous men will corrupt and forge books, and have they, put the only truth than mankind cannot destroy in the Heavens above.

We pick up with our Egyptian concepts as we finish these articles on the Uranograph or the Star Charts and their "theological" importance to us and our Souls today.

The Son of God, Son of Osiris, Horus, is born like the Logos, or "as a Word." His father is Seb, the Earth (clay), whose consort is Nu (Spirit/Energy), the Heaven, one of whose names is "MERI" (Isis-Mary), the Lady of Heaven. The "two planes" merged together in humanity. Here we have the union of "Earth and Heaven" with expected offspring and this is depicted for us in the picture on the right. Egypt personified these Divine realities in Nut and Geb and depicted such a union in visible characterizations that captures this Divine Idea.

Answer for yourself: What did we just read? Well believe it or not we just read the two prototypes of Joseph and Mary in our Christianized "Horus Story" we call the "Jesus Story". Don't forget that an ancient name for Jesus is "Jesus H. Christ".

Answer for yourself: What is the "H" for? It is his middle name, "Horus".

Osiris is said to cross the earth a substitute, and to suffer vicariously as the Saviour, Redeemer, and Justifier of men just like the later "Jesus Story" which is a later retelling of the same Mythos which is sadly "literalized" and "carnalized" which distorts is true meaning to every human being who has ever lived.

Answer for yourself: And why is Osiris spoken of as suffering vicariously as our Savior if Osiris is a Divine Myth or Divine Pattern? Simply as we saw in the last article on the "Cross in Heaven". We see Osiris, Horus, as personifications of the Sun and the Sun, if you remember, poured out His Life and Energy, symbolized by his "blood", for man that man might have life and life abundantly. Therefore the Sun was seen to "die" for mankind and thus "shed his blood" only to be "reborn anew" every day, every month, every year, and every 2,160 years at the beginning of a new age, and every 25,920 years which is called the "Platonic Year" which is the complete cycle of the Precession of the Equinoxes (the Sun being in each House 2,160 years for 12 different Houses).

In this "Osiris Story" we find also the conflict of natures which are in the whole of mankind in conflict his whole life. We find eternal conflict and opposition between Osiris and Typhon, the Evil Power, as we do with Horus and Set, the Egyptian Satan (Adversary of our Soul). This is the same conflict we see with Cain and Abel, with Isaac and Ishmael, and with Jacob and Esau. The Mythos has to be maintained and it was and in so doing teaches us the lessons so necessary for our Soul's spiritual maturation in these "bodies" of death. We find the same conflict reproduced in the Jesus vs Satan wilderness temptation depicted in the New Testament; all of which is allegorical but yet teaches an important Spiritual Principle. We find this same wilderness temptation first with Horus; in fact everything in the "Jesus Story" is found in its original form in the "Osiris-Horus Story". No wonder that our "Jesus Story" contains an exact parallel of opposition of natures that we find in the temptation between Horus and Set. Horus was taken from the desert of Amenta up a high mountain by his arch-rival Sut. Sut (a.k.a. Set) was a precursor and symbol of the later Hebrew and Christian Satan. Likewise Jesus was taken from the desert in Palestine up a high mountain by his arch-rival Satan. Here is Soul Science taught at its best. And to think that these stories have an astronomical basis and later tragically misrepresented as if "literal" and "historical" and "limited to but one person" when it fact it is a message to the whole of mankind is almost beyond belief that man could stray so far from the truth; misinterpreting Spiritual Allegory and personification for something "historical-literal" to which was attached one's only way of salvation which was reinforced by a "believe or burn in Hell" doctrine by Roman Christianity.

At the Autumn Equinox, as the Sun begins to sink in the Sky southward following its most glorious expression at the Summer Solstice, the Devil of darkness began to dominate as the days of light become shorter daily till finally the Sun will die at the Winter Solstice; this was the Egyptian Judas, who betrayed Osiris to his death at the last supper (the Egyptian Set is the Jewish Judas) as we also find the our "Jesus Story". On the day of the Great Battle at the Vernal Equinox, Osiris conquered darkness as the ascending God, the Lord of the growing light. Both of these same struggles are portrayed in the Gospels. In the one Jesus is betrayed to his death by Judas; in the other he rises superior to Satan (mankind's darkness in his animal nature). Judaism calls the evil-nature the Yetzer Ha Ra and it does battle against the Yetzer Ha Tov, the good nature. This is the Eternal Battle between "light" and "darkness" which is portrayed to us daily in the Cosmos and when we bring this to Earth, according to the "Pattern in the Mount", then when understood properly, it applies perfectly to the Soulish nature of mankind which is locked into a battle as long as we tabernacle in these fleshly bodies.

Answer for yourself: When did Osiris win the victory over Typhon (his evil nature that would guarantee his resurrection and ascension to the Stars in Heaven [go to Heaven when he dies])? When did Horus conquer Set (his evil nature and in so doing guarantee his resurrection and ascension to the Stars in Heaven where he goes to Heaven when he dies)? When did Jesus conquer Satan (his evil nature that would guarantee his resurrection and ascension to the Stars in Heaven (go to Heaven when he dies as seen in his ascension)? It is all the same story and such victory is won in the same place in each of them. Only when we conquer our animal nature and bring it into submission to the Harmony of Life that God intended when He have mankind the Laws of God, that when obeyed makes one righteous, do we assure our ascension and vindication at the Judgment Seat of Osiris/Jesus. Did you catch the parallel between these 3 examples? They are all the same.

Answer for yourself: When though this this first occur? When man was "born again" as we saw with Osiris-Orion and the River Eridanus in the Sky. This is man's second birth in the House of Pisces.

This latter conflict followed immediately after their baptisms. So Above, So Beneath! The baptism occurs first "celestially" before it can occur "terrestrially". This needs explanation.

This baptism is when the Sun, a symbol for the Energy we call God, was half-way round, from the Lion (Leo) sign, when it crossed the River of the Waterman, the Egyptian Iarutana (called the River Eridanus). It is easier to understand when we look at Orion's foot in the Eridanus and picture him stepping into the River of Heaven to be immersed whereby he receives the Soul from Heaven. This River in Heaven we saw had different names; in Hebrew is was called the Jordan, in Greek the Eridanus, and in Egyptian the Nile. We saw this before. In this water the baptism occurred, and the transformation of the child-Horus into the virile adult is accomplished; the conqueror of the evil power took place. Horus was "born again" and no more a "child" before God but now equipped to become the "awakened Christ" as God intended.

We now see that Horus becomes hawk-headed.

Answer for yourself: Why a hawk's head for the Krst/Karest/Christ?

We now see Horus changing into a being gifted with spiritual sight and able to soar and see into the Sky and the Heavens whereby he can possess Divine Truths that normal men cannot see. It is our goal to become like Horus and Jesus, our examples, to see things as God sees them and not as the carnal mind sees them; it is our opportunity to possess as Horus unlimited spiritual eyesight like a hawk, just like the dove that descended and abode on Jesus.

1 Cor 2:14 14 But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. (KJV)

Both birds represented the virile Soul that constituted the anointed one at puberty. By this added power Horus vanquished Set, and Jesus overcame Satan. Both the baptism and the contest are referred to in the Ritual as taken from the Egyptian Book of the Dead: "I am washed with the same water in which the Good Opener (Un-Nefer) washes when he disputes with Satan, that justification should be made to Un-Nefer, the Word made Truth," or the Word that is Law.

Answer for yourself: What is this to mean to us? Simply that to get to Heaven one must have a "second birth" and be "born again" like Horus' and Jesus' examples teach us; whereby like his Soul our Soul awakens to its Divine Identity and takes mastery over the animal nature in us which is accomplished solely through repentance from the acts of the flesh and is replaced by a life-long commitment to the obedience of God's Divine Laws of the Cosmos described in the Egyptian "Torah" and 42 Negative Confessions and later in Moses' Torah (613 Mitzvoth-66 of which were required for the "non-Jew" (The Laws of Noah). This is why Judaism is so important for the Christian to understand and contrast against his "anti-Law" religion. This is why the Biblical Covenants of Noah for the "non-Jews" and later the Biblical Covenant of Moses for the Jewish people are based upon obedience to the Laws of God in this human existence; Laws which when obeyed make one righteous and make one "acceptable to God" which ensures one's later Heavenly Existence.

This Spiritual Transformation was connected to being "raised anew" to a higher life while in this body, by being immersed into water which was symbolic of re-entry into the womb, re-entry into the tomb, and the subsequent re-emerging anew in a higher Spiritual Existence than before. Such a "baptism" and "resurrection" and "ascension" of mankind was seen to be modeled in the "Pattern in the Mount" in the Heavens and night Sky, later built in the Egyptian architecture and their theological writings in the Pyramid Texts and others. It is here we see why Orion, the personified, resurrected, and ascended Soul of mankind, in the Sky above; especially his association with the River in Heaven to which he is entering to "cross over"; not only from death to Eternal Life, but from the "old man" to the "new man" where the Krst/Karest/Christ is formed in him.

Gal 4:19 19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ (Krst/Karest/Horus) be formed in you, (KJV)

That is why Osiris become Horus in Egyptian Theology as well as why Osiris as Orion was "raised to Heaven" in the night Sky. We are to do likewise in our Earthly existences.

Answer for yourself: What should this mean to us? Egypt was teaching us that the natural man must "die" to his old self and be raised as Horus as was Osiris. Egypt is teaching the necessity of mankind's "two birth" and "two mothers" which we have already seen in-depth which comes from the Stars as well. The idea carries over; as Christians we are to die to the "old man" and be raised as manifestations of the "new man"; "the Krst, Karest, Christ" as this part of God is being formed in us. We are to become "the Earthly manifestation of the Heavenly Krst/Karest/Christ". We are to die like "Osiris" and be raised as "Horus, the Krst/Karest/Christ". Let us not miss that we are to be raised as "Horus-Christ" while we yet live in our Earthly bodies. This is symbolized by our baptism and our immersion into realms of death which are both symbolized by water; a watery womb and a tomb. This truth is taught by the Creator both "celestially" and "terrestrially"; of course it was written in the "Pattern in the Mount" before it was later revealed to mankind and taught both orally and later committed to writing.

Now we can better understand why the main theme in the Pyramid Texts is the king's resurrection and ascension to the Afterworld and why this is described in many different ways and with different manners of symbolism. We have already seen that in some of the texts, the King boards the Sun-boat of Re and passes through different regions in the Sky, encountering many gods. In other texts, we have seen that the King reaches the Sky by flying up as a bird, such as a falcon or a phoenix. At other times the King climbs up the ladder of the Sky; Jacob's ladder of which we have spoken before. No matter how this is depicted the result is the same; namely, the righteous ascend to Heaven above from which we have all come.

Answer for yourself: What have all these texts have in common? There is but one common theme; an emphasis on the eternal existence of the King and the location of the Sky as the realm of the Afterlife, which is dominated by the Sun-god Re. The night Sky, particularly the Imperishable Circumpolar Stars give us hints as to the future of the righteous. That is why in many of the texts the King is identified with the god Osiris, who is lord of the Otherworld and resides as Orion in the night Sky, the Underworld, the Otherworld or Heaven.

What was thrilling and suggestive was the way that the Ancient Egyptians correlated the Nile with the "celestial river" i.e., the Milky Way, and this was known even by the Greeks. From the time of Homer, the Nile was associated with the mythical Sky river called either Okeanos or Eridanus which lies at the foot of Osiris-Orion (the Soul in Heaven). The Hellenic historian, A. B. Cook, was of the opinion that Eridanus (which today is a faint constellation formed by a string of stars joining Rigel [the foot of Orion in the Sky] to Alchermar) was "at the outset none other than the Milky Way", and that in pre-Greek times, Okeanos "simply meant the Galaxy" i.e., the Milky Way. Cook also drew attention to a statement by Hyginus that the river Eridanus was identified with the Nile in Heaven (according to the uranograph as the Nile divides Egypt so does the Nile in Heaven divide the natures of mankind...natural from spiritual). The identification of the Nile with Eridanus or Okeanos seems to have been common knowledge in the classical world. Even Diodorus reported that "the Egyptians consider Okeanos to be their river Nile, on which their gods were born", and the chronicler Eusebius says "the Egyptians believe that the river Nile is the ocean from which the race of gods has taken birth". Egypt came to understand that it has its Earthly counterpart which, according to the Uranogrpah, was likened to the Nile. It is not hard to see why a Nilotic people with a Sky religion should see a correlation between their river and the Milky Way. Just as the Nile divides Egypt into two regions, so the Milky Way divides the Sky into two regions. It is quite probable that this relationship between the Nile and the Milky Way was what first gave the Nile dwellers the idea that a cosmic Egypt existed in that region of the Sky which their Souls could reach after their earthly existence. Wallis Budge explains this rather well: "The Egyptians… from the earliest days … depicted to themselves a material Heaven wherein Isles of the Blest were laved by the waters of the Nile … others again lived in imagination on the banks of the Heavenly Nile, whereon they built cities; and it seems as if the Egyptians never succeeded in conceiving a Heaven without a Nile." Reading this, I was not surprised that the Pyramid Texts also tell us of an important "Winding Waterway" in the eastern Sky which closely resembles the Nile, with its own "great flood" and "fields" of reeds or rushes:

- 'May you lift me [the dead King] and raise me to the Winding Waterway, may you set me among the gods, the imperishable stars ' [PT 1759]
- 'Be firm, O King, on the underside of the Sky with the Beautiful Star upon the Bend of the Winding Waterway. . . .' [PT 2061]
- 'I have come to my waterways which are in the bank of the Flood of the Great Inundation, to the place of contentment . . . which is in the Horizon. . ." [PT 508]
- 'The Winding Waterway is flooded, the Fields of Rushes are filled with water, and I [the dead King] am ferried over thereon to yonder eastern side of the Sky, to the Place where the gods fashioned me, where I was born new [reborn] and young… Lo, I stand up as a star which is on the underside of the Sky . . . my sister is Sothis, my offspring is the Morning Star…' [PT 343-57]

After becoming familiar with these Pyramid texts it was now looking likely that we had stumbled upon the true mystery of the Pyramids. The Duat, which stretched along the "West bank" of the Milky Way corresponded to - indeed was seen as a mirror image of - that region we now call the Memphite Necropolis. It was, of course, not a necropolis at all in the Greek or western sense of the word; rather the Elysian Fields, the earthly counterpart of the Heavenly abode of the king-gods of Egypt - the Egypt, that is, of the Pyramid Age. If you wish to pursue this further I recommend you read about in Robert Bauval and Adrian Gilbert's great book called The Orion Mystery, pp. 119-121.

Answer for yourself: What did we learn of these circumpolar stars? They never set and are "immortal"; a concept connected to Eternal Life. The boundaries of the Eridanus enclose a larger area of Sky than any other constellation. Eridanus has been imagined as a river since the earliest of times, although its physical counterpart has never been agreed upon. Eridanus' connection with Osiris in Heaven, the Soul of Osiris in Heaven which is symbolized by the constellation Orion in Heaven, as well as well as its connection with these circumpolar stars and the spiritual concept of Eternal Life is very insightful as you might assume. Among the Greeks, Hesiod associated the Constellation Eridanus with the mythical Phasis in Asia, Homer with the "Ocean Stream" that flowed round the world, and Eratosthenes with the Nile. Eridanus has been connected with the Tigris-Euphrates, the River Po in Italy, the Ebro in Spain, the German Rhine, and even the Red Sea or the River Jordan.

There is much we have never learned of this Jordan river. Thutmose I, a great Pharaoh of Egypt, refers to a river in Palestine that "flows upstream Suggestions were made that it could be the Euphrates (or the Jordan), because these rivers flow in the direction opposite to that of the Nile. But we know today that the Jordan once flowed toward the north (and quite possibly entered the Mediterranean through the valley of Jezreel). When the Dead Sea was formed in the formation of the Rift, possibly in the days of the overturning of Sodom and Gomorrah, the Jordan changed its direction. So like the Nile and Eridanus in the Sky they both "flow" north; celestially they flow North to the area of "Eternal Life in the Sky and Heavens". This is very important as I see it. It is said by Ramses III that "he Sea of Reversed Water (Ramses III) is the Dead Sea" which as we know the river Jordan, the earthly river and counterpart of the Heavenly river, flows into it. This now makes sense why baptisms of the "old man" into the "new man" are made in the river Jordan.

Answer for yourself: And why is this? Because it flows "north" into the realms of Eternal Life in the Sky (it touches Orion, the symbol of the ascended Osiris from the dead to Heaven). Now you know the secret of man's "two births and two mothers" once again connected to the river Jordan as it is in Heaven according to the uranography: So Above, So Below. God is speaking to us of our Souls and our intended spiritual development in this earthly plane all around us if we but have "ears" to hear and this is impossible as I see it if we don't possess the "keys" to this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom of Egypt.

Answer for yourself: Why do all the Sungods, messiahs and "Christs", as Energies of God, cross rivers and seas and why are these solar heroes immersed in water and baptized in the ancient mythologies that long predate Christianity? Why is Orion-Osiris-Horus baptized in the river Eridanus in the Sky and Heavens above and why is Jesus baptized in the river Jordan which is but another name for the river Eridanus in the Sky?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the word "Jordan" is the name Jewish name of a river taken from Eridanus in the Sky and Heavens as well? If Jesus was sinless, as the Christian theology attests, then does the mythos explain why he must be baptized in John's baptism of repentance in order that the "Jesus Story" conform to the "Pattern in the Mount"? This "Pattern in the Mount", the Sky above, explains why a supposed sinless sacrifice needed to be baptized in a "baptism of repentance" while having no sin supposedly. The riddle is solved and Christian writers can lay their pens to rest. This event has stumped Christian theologians for almost 2,000 years and you find the most extraordinary and amusing answers for such an event from numerous Christian theologians over the last 1,900 years. Not one has a clue to the reason why Jesus, in the story, had to submit to a "baptism of repentance" when sinless and that reason shines above their heads every night in the night Sky. The Mythos must be maintained and held to the "Pattern in the Mount" and it was done so; even if we lost the "keys" to it original interpretation over 2,000 years ago.

Answer for yourself: Where is this "Pattern" in the Mount located? Have you ever looked into the night Sky and seen the winter constellation Orion, whom Egypt believed to represent the Soul of Osiris which "ascended to Heaven"? At the feet of Orion in the Sky is the river Eridanus which was known by other nations by other nations. Egypt likened it to the Nile and Israel likened it to the Jordan. It was this water that the mankind must cross in order to realized its "second birth" and "be born again" and this water is his "body" which is 7/8 water in the first place. So Above, So Below. Man's Soul must cross over from "death" in these bodies to a new "resurrected life" while confined in these bodies of death and this is the "born again" experience where the "Krst/Karest/Christ" is awakened within him.

Answer for yourself: Why does the Christ cross over the lake of Galilee? Why did it have to be storming out that night when he took a cruise? Was this just another "nature "miracle to testify how great Jesus is or is there something behind this story that we have totally missed? Is Jesus is not a historical person, as the evidence proves, then he never took such a trip "literally" so what does it mean? What does his example teach us; that he is great and can control "nature" or is it to teach mankind that we are to "control" our own "natures" in our watery bodies with the help of the indwelling "Christ"? I think you see it finally.

Answer for yourself: Orion is a symbol for what again? The ascended Soul of Osiris (the pattern for all mankind). We spoke of this in detail in prior articles. It has long been accepted by Egyptologists that the imagined Skyward ascent of the king's Soul was either in the north of the Sky among the "Imperishable Stars" (circumpolar stars) or in the south of the Sky amongst the stars of Orion (I.E.S. Edwards, The Pyramids of Egypt, Penguin, London 1993, p. 285). The circumpolar stars (the set of stars that seemed to "orbit" the North Star through the course of the night and thus never dipped below the horizon) were called the "Imperishable Ones". Since they never "set" below the horizon and never sink into darkness (personified death) they were believed to "never die" and "live forever" as "Energies of God". This specific belief is materialized in the Great Pyramid of Giza by the so-called star-Soul shafts emanating from the King's Chamber, where one was targeted north to the circumpolar stars and the other targeted south to Orion (E.C. Krupp, Echoes of the Ancient Skies, Oxford Univ. Press, 1983, p.102). The shafts in the Great Pyramid are 4 in number:

- The southern shafts were directed to Orion's belt and Sirius;
- The northern shafts to the circumpolar Constellations of Ursa Minor and Draco.

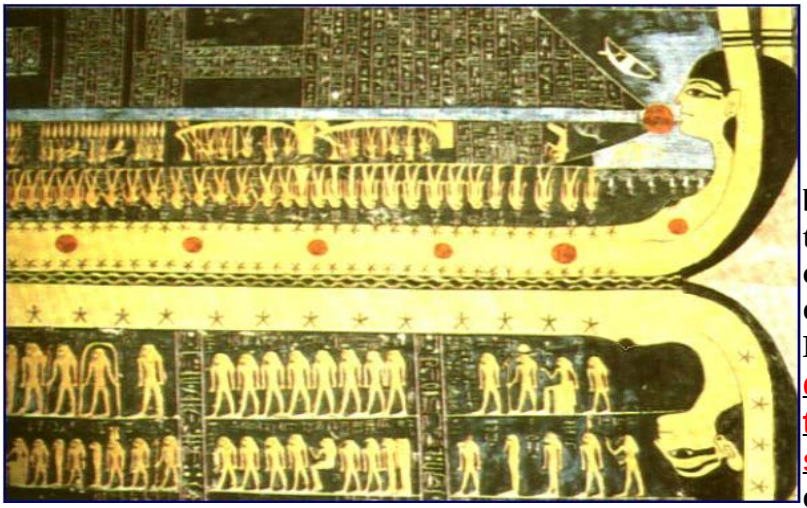
The mythological counterparts are Orion-Osiris; Sirius-Isis; Ursa Minor-Upuaut/Horus; Draco-Hippopotamus Goddess.



The Ancient Egyptian Mystics and sages taught that each person's life echoes the cycle of cosmic order we see played out in the Sky. Our Ancient ancestors saw a parallel between cosmic creation and each individual birth. Each life meant growth and the preservation of order. Each death was an intrusion of chaos. And just as our ancestors saw rebirth, renewal, and restoration of order in the Sky, they also believed in an afterlife for the Soul, a resurrection following death in that mankind will follow in order this "same Divine Pattern in the Mount". Death, the key transformation in each Soul's share of the cycle of cosmic order, initiated a transcendental journey, like the mystical ascent of the shaman, to the realm of the gods and immortality. Very often the destination of the dead was the domain of sacred order-the Sky itself. We call this today "Heaven".

For this reason, in culture after culture, we find celestial metaphor in the ceremonies of the funeral, celestial imagery in the paraphernalia of the dead, and astronomical significance in the architecture of the tomb; all of which was influenced by the Uranograph. By recognizing the relation between death and the Sky, we can understand what death meant to our ancestors and what they judged was the role of the dead.

Death meant no rest for the pharaohs of Old Kingdom Egypt. Their destiny was overhead. Prayers carved into the stone walls of chambers within Fifth and Sixth Dynasty (ca. 2494-2181 B.C.) Pyramids describe the pharaoh's "ascent to the Sky among the stars." In some of these Pyramid Texts, in the monuments at Saqqara (about 40 miles up the Nile from Cairo), he joins the circumpolar stars and governs them. They never rise and never set, and so they never die. By joining these eternal stars, the pharaoh (as the manifested Energy of God) becomes Eternal.

The pharaoh also makes another celestial journey: to Orion. This constellation is a symbol of his Soul's rebirth because Orion stood for Osiris and the great cycle of birth, life, death, and resurrection and re-incarnation if necessary.

In the company of Osiris and guided by Sirius (in roughly the same part of the Sky), the dead King, or rather his Soul, or "Ba", has become a "living star at the head of his brethren." The tomb in which he was buried was symbolic of the point of his departure for the Sky. Later Egyptian tombs are filled with astronomical imagery of the journey of the Sun, the body of the Sky, and the destinations of the stars: like the Pyramids that contain hieroglyphic texts, they confirm that the Egyptians sensed a link between death and the Sky. From his Pyramid, the pharaoh Khufu departed for the Sky. His two celestial destinies were symbolized in the "Soul shafts" that emerge from the King's Chamber which we saw above at the beginning of this article. Again, one pointed to Thuban, the "north star" of the Old Kingdom, and the other was oriented toward the belt of Orion. Orion, of course, was Osiris, who presided over the resurrection of Souls. The shafts are symbolic references to the pharaoh's celestial destinies and to the starry realms that ordered heaven and earth. They mark the Great Pyramid-the tomb of Khufu-as the site of his celestial transformation.

Now we continue with the last article in this series.

THE BIBLE AS A URANOGRAPH OF COSMIC ILLUMINATION ON THE SOUL #19

Heaven was understood by Ancient Egypt to be a "place of order" that is controlled by the Laws of God. It is this Heaven, this Solar Paradise, which was at first in early times reserved for the Pharaoh alone. This Paradise was denied to "sinners", for the idea had emerged in Egypt that "salvation" was obtained by obedience to the Laws of God. One might say that salvation was obtained by "works". Mainline Christianity refutes this in their theological beliefs but Judaism is built upon such obedience to the Laws and Commandments of God which when obeyed result in "righteous works". Even though Christianity refutes salvation by works its own religious Bible often tells otherwise.

Rev 20:12 12 And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. (KJV)

It would appear that Egyptian Religion and Judaism both agree with parts of Christian theology; namely that one's deeds and works will go a long way determining one's final resting place.

Before being admitted to that rich and beautiful Wonderland, the dead had to be "tried" and "tested" in an initiation ceremony called the "weighing of the heart". We looked at that in earlier articles where the dead recited the 42 Negative Confessions before Osiris. What was once reserved only for the Pharaoh, Heaven, was later offered to all who were "in Osiris" whereby they, at their deaths, could rise as Souls to the Sky and Heaven as was expected for the Pharaoh.

Now lets focus on the river at the feet of Orion-Osiris. It is called Eridanus, or the "River of the Judge", and come to understand that besides being associated with being "born again" it also is a symbol of the river of life, carrying Souls into incarnation, where they learn the meaning of the words, "as a man sows, so shall he reap", and where they undertake the stupendous task of working out their own salvation. Just as Orion symbolizes the spirit aspect, so Eridanus concerns itself' with the form-taking aspect and holds before its the thought of incarnation; in particular the incarnation of the Soul into humanity.

The crossing of the rivers and seas and the immersion of Solar heroes in water in olden mythologies, and the rite of baptism in theology, signified the Soul's immersion in a physical body of water-nature in its successive incarnations. Orion and Eridanus again is the perfect example of the incarnation of the Soul into humanity. The "Krst/Karest/Christ" must become flesh in all of humanity and so it goes and it come to dwell in a "watery womb" called the "body". Thus behind the incarnation stories of the Solar godmen is the reality of the incarnation of the Soul, the "Christ Mind" into humanity as well. These supposed "pagan sungods" and their "incarnations" are but examples of what happens to each child of God once the Heavenly Soul is born into this body of flesh.

Virtually all Scriptural allegories and other semantic modes of representing exalted spiritual truth have but one basic theme to them all -- the incarnation of Souls in mortal bodies here on earth. That is the universal omnipresent theme at the heart of nearly all Biblical writing; whether in our Christian Bible or other Sacred Books in the world today. This basic event, the Descent of the Soul, the Deific Mind into matter and expressed as human life itself is portrayed by a great variety of imaginative exegeses, and this is possible because all living forms manifest this basic principle from one angle or another and can be dramatized by one typology or another. It is a spiritual fact of all Sacred Books, including the Bible, that the divine seed, the Soul, a unit of God's Deific Mind-generated being, a true Son of the Father, had as its incarnational goal the escape from a bondage to the lower nature of the animal body in which it was sheltered for its trip through this mortal life. The mastery and final harmony between these two natures in mankind, the animal and the Spiritual, is the message of the Bible as told through symbolism after symbolism and allegory after allegory. This spiritual goal for our Soul was symbolized in religious myth after religious myth and legend after legend by a crossing over of various places or states or conditions of existence symbolized most often by bodies of water.

Answer for yourself: And why did these Solar heros and "Karest" have to cross a stormy sea and walk on water again? What are we to learn by reading that Jesus walked on the water?

Water, again is a symbol of the human body since it is composed mostly of water. The Soul has to "cross over from the natural plane of animal existence" within this "watery body" to a position of supremacy over our animal nature. These two natures are in conflict; the battle between Flesh and Spirit/Soul. This is what is behind the Ancient Battle of Horus and Set. This battle of dueling natures within mankind was symbolized most appropriately in Sacred Book after Sacred Book by the solar-god-man crossing over the "water" or as we read in the New Testament of Jesus crossing over or walking upon the "lake of Galilee". This speaks of the subduing of our animal natures and the "storm that exists between our natures" which is so fittingly pictured in our own Christian Scriptures. We even see this same "Spiritual Concept" in the "walking on water" allegories which are so abundant in Ancient Mythologies as well as our Bible. And what could be more fitting to depict the war between these two natures than symbolizing a "storm" on this "sea" and the rage between these two natures as they contested for supremacy within this body of water we call the "body" of mankind.

Gal 4:19 19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you, (KJV)

Truly this is a struggle of a life-time. It was first taught long before Jesus in the battle of Horus/Krst/Karest/Christ vs Set/Satan/Animal-self. The framers of Ancient Scripture were of the highest talent and masterful in the genius of analogical and allegorical representation of Divine Spiritual Truth as none others have perhaps have been since the creation of these Spiritual allegories in the beginning of time. Every image these Spiritual Masters conceived to convey in pictures and symbolism of this metaphysical reality which lays hidden within the flesh of mankind was an exposition that was intended to enlighten the reader and his responsive mind into the very heart and depths of Divine truth and in so doing impress upon him the very essence of his Spiritual nature. We have mentioned and studied this before and its supreme importance in understanding this Metaphysical reality of the Spirit and again I stress it because in the Platonic philosophy these poetic figures and symbols stood as archetypes of the Divine thought, and deep reflection upon them awakened realizations of the mighty transfiguring power of such Spiritual Truths regarding mankind's two natures and the intended path for his Soul's growth and maturation in these bodies while living on this plane of existence. No wonder from religion to religion we find Spiritual Masters of this archaic wisdom speaking of seas which all Souls must cross. The goal is not only the crossing of the Soul over these "troubled waters" but they must cross without "sinking" too deeply in the water of the animal nature and Sin and the flesh's rebellion to the Laws of God written "Above and Below" as seen in the working of the Heavens and Nature. These Laws which promote "order" and "harmony" are to brought down to Earth, they are to be brought down from the "Pattern in the Mount" and made the "Pattern" for mankind and his Soul's Spiritual pilgrimage. No wonder then we find the need for solar gods, symbols of the Christ within humanity, able to walk upon the "water" and the animal nature of these bodies which house our Soul. No wonder then the "Christ being formed within" can walk upon water which was never meant to be interpreted as if a "literal-historical" event in the supposed life of another person on the Lake of Galilee but rather as a metaphor or allegory for our own personal instruction in order that we:

Rom 12:2 2 And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God. (KJV)

Once you settle the issue of the supposed "historical-literal" Jesus then you have to come to the frank realization that this personification of the Divine was never a "literal-historical" person apart from yourself. You have to come to see that all these supposed "literal miracles" of which we read in our New Testaments accomplished by this Jesus are not "literal-historical" occurrences at all; rather they are pictures of deeper Spiritual realities that impact our Soul and its grown in our human existence. No wonder such poetic spiritual allegory, taken from the "Pattern in the Mount", and the river Eridanus where the Soul in Heaven, as Osiris-Orion, cries out to us for its very own "correct interpretation"; to do any less guarantees we will miss the Divine Message of Heaven which our Souls so desperately need in this journey to Earth. This Eridanus, again, is a long constellation that extends from the feet of Orion where it appear that Orion, as the Soul in Heaven, stand or walks upon the river or water in Heaven. The mastery of the flesh by our Soul is "Patterned" in Heaven for all to see. This Heavenly picture that shines so brilliantly in the Winter Sky around the Winters Solstice, Osiris-Orion walking upon the waters of mankind, which itself speaks of "new birth", is the origin for all later stories of the solar-gods, themselves the personifications of the Souls of mankind, that is the foundation for all later stories like Osiris-Horus walking on water; water being the symbol for the animal nature in mankind, so likewise we as the Souls of God should do the same. We have incarnated on Earth for no less a purpose.

Rom 12:1 1 I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. (KJV)

We, as Souls, all have our own personal seas to cross and we must cross without sinking too deep in its waters of fleshly sin and disobedience to the Heavenly "Ma'at" and Harmony of Heaven. We must as incarnated Souls learn to walk on our "stormy seas" without sinking, or getting our feet mired in the mud and sin of our animal natures which are housed in these bodies of "water".

Answer for yourself: What has this to do with the Exodus allegory we find in the Hebrew Scriptures?

Now we better understand the crossing of the "Red Sea", which the Ancients used for the symbol of the blood of mankind, the home of the SOUL! We cannot even today find the "Red Sea" of Exodus; but the Ancient Wisdom restored to its "keys" show us that Egypt is symbolic for the body and the "Red Sea" is nothing more than our blood which has the composition that so closely mimics "sea water" which houses our Soul.

Answer for yourself: Did Israel really have a "historical Exodus from Egypt" as we are taught by tradition? Was it millions of people as we are led to believe? Does Egypt record such a "physical" Exodus during the 18th Dynasty? Did these Hebrew cross an actual "Red Sea" or was it the "Reed Sea" of much less proportion?

The truth is slowly coming to the light of day. Many books out today will state that the Israelites did not cross the Red Sea, as is commonly believed, but rather crossed the Sea of Reeds. "Red Sea," according to many scholars today is nothing more than a mistranslation as many of our "religious traditions" are since being "devoid of the proper keys of interpretation" for their proper understanding. Confusion is only reinforced by our English translation of the Bible which refers to the Red Sea, while the Hebrew refers to "yam suf."

Answer for yourself: What does "suf" mean? Did the Israelites cross the Red Sea, the Sea of Reeds, or some other sea?

"Soof" means "reeds." The Hebrews and Egyptians, this "mixed multitude", crossed the "Yam Soof" which means the "Sea of Reeds." There are several views in the Jewish commentaries as to what the Yam Suf is. Some Jews believe it possibly refers to the Gulf of Suez, which branches up from what is today called the Red Sea. Others identify it with the large delta at the mouth of the Nile in the North of Egypt; interestingly, in Ancient Egyptian, the swampy Delta districts were called "sufi" (The Living Torah, by Rabbi A. Kaplan, Exodus 10:19, 13:18; Artscroll Chumash Stone Edition, Exodus 13:18). One of these sources of water is "salty" and one is not.

Answer for yourself: Why is this so important?

The Gulf of Suez which empties into the Red Sea is salty. The Delta tributaries carries the run off from the Nile which is fresh water.

Let us not forget that a place where reeds grow cannot be salt water so this cannot be the Gulf of Suez or the Red Sea. It has, by nature of the name, the "Reed Sea", be "fresh water" and this means it must refer to the tributaries of the Delta in "Lower Egypt" (since the Nile runs "north" then this means Northern Egypt). This view from the picture on the right shows the view from the southeast and overlooks the green expanse of the Nile delta, with the Suez Canal and portions of the Red Sea in the background. As you can see any crossing was made in the shallow areas of the Delta and not the Red Sea in the background. This problematic riddle is not solved beyond any doubt.

Now we have only to deal with the "slavery" issue and that has to wait for another article some day. Let it be said here though that such precision in building of the Pyramids and their Astronomical orientation and Sacred Geometry that defies explanation today is not the work of slaves and men under the whip. This is a life-long commitment to excellence and a devotion to God; the highest calling one can have. Cecil B Demille and others who preach a "Rea Sea" crossing should be ashamed. More study would have done them good. Let us not forget that these Hebrews lived in Goshen which is the Delta of Egypt. More than likely it is the swampy parts of the Delta area and its tributaries which were crossed by the followers of Akhenaten (Moses) as they followed him from Egypt after which his young boy son Tutankhamun rose to the Pharaoh's throne in his father's absence which was necessitated by many plots to kill the Pharaoh Akhenaten.

This fact above does not negate the reality that all of mankind have to cross our own personal "Red Sea"; a sea again whose waters must figuratively be dried up by the power of God so that we may pass over on dry land and escape our Egypt (the negative influences of our animal nature in our body), again but a symbol for the human body and the natural man and its animal nature. Like Osiris-Orion we must take mastery over the "water" as we see in the Sky as Orion (the symbolic representation of the Soul walks upon the River Eridanus which again is the symbolic representation of our bodies). Now it become clear what we are reading in our Bibles. The "keys" to correct Biblical hermeneutic are restored.

Answer for yourself: Is there a connection now with other solar gods who crossed "over" the powers of water like Jonah and Jesus and other solar gods? We can go even so far as to suggest that what we all need in order to cross our own seas in a great fish as did Jonah and in so doing we might could be transported across after a three days' journey in its "belly" to which we exit a "changed man" as did Jonah where he found victory over his animal nature, his natural man, his First Adam, and as the "Krst/Karest/Christ" was formed in him. In so doing Jonah, the "fish-man" (remember Pisces and the two mothers and two births?) emerged "born again" as the book testifies of his changed nature toward the Ninevites and his renewed obedience to the Word of God.

Answer for yourself: Why "3 days"? Was Jonah in the belly of the fish for 3 days? Why not 4 or 5 or 2 days? Why did the "Jesus Story" have the Jewish Christ remain in the grave for 3 days? Is there a connection to the "death and rebirth" of the Sun after 3 days at the Winter Solstice and can this be applied to mankind and his Spiritual birth? There sure is; this is when man is "born again" and exits the watery womb. Let us remember Nicodemus' statement that man to be "born again" has to re-enter into the belly of his mother again and this "watery belly" is likened to a water tomb (grave) only to again emerge in the status of being a "new creature"; a truly "born again" experience for man's Christ's nature who like Horus assumes mastery over the animal Set (the animal nature). This is why the Osiris Story is so important; it is the first and earliest story of the Soul and its Spiritual journey given to mankind in the beginning of recorded time.

Again the 3 days of death in the belly of the fish is symbolic of the necessity of mankind to experience his "two births, two mothers"; the necessity of being born at both the Spiring Equinox and the Winter Solstice, as was said of Jesus by the Early Church Fathers, where the Sun dies at the Winter Solstice for 3 days, and like Jonah, is raised and "born again". The necessity of the "two births, two mothers, the Spring Equinox birth along with the Winter Solstice birth" is taught by the Heavens above and the "Pattern in the Mount" and fills the pages of our Bibles from story to story; but we miss it; we mistakenly read these Spiritual Allegories as if supposed "literal-historical" narratives about someone else other than ourselves. The "Pattern in the Mount" is everywhere in our Bible; story after story teaching this ONE truth ONLY in hopes that mankind might not miss it. And we miss it because of the erroneous interpretations ingrained within us for over 1,800 years by an aberrant "Christ-Religion" of Rome which destroyed the very core beliefs of "Christ in YOU" as taught by Ancient Spiritual Masters for thousands of years before Rome rose in all the splendor and pomp and circumstance of their military might that fueled their hatred of the Laws of God and the Jewish nation which cried out to their evil on a daily basis.

Answer for yourself: Have I made all of this up? Is this some delusion that my deranged mind entertains? Is all this just light poetic fancy, or is there in truth and in fact such a sea that we must cross to escape a miserable slavery of our flesh and animal natures in order to reach a delightful land flowing with milk and honey?

Now we have seen over and over again, from many perspectives, that mankind is distinctly a creature compounded and made of two natures:

- a higher and a lower,
- a spiritual and a sensual,
- a divine and a human,
- a mortal and an immortal, and finally
- a fiery and a watery

These two natures are conjoined in a mutual relationship in the organic body of flesh. Says Heraclitus: "Man is a portion of cosmic fire, imprisoned in a body of earth and water." Speaking of mankind Plato affirms: "Through body it is an animal; through intellect it is a god." To create man God incarnated the fiery spiritual principle of His life in the watery confines of material bodies. That is the truest basic description of mankind and humanity that anthropology can ever hope to present.

In the figure on the right we see Horus and Set, symbolic of the two natures in man, join forces to tie up the symbol of Union (Sema). The Sema symbol represents two lungs attached to the trachea and is understood by the Egyptian to be the symbol of unity. It refers to the union of Upper Egypt (spiritual man) and Lower Egypt (fleshly man) under one ruler by the Spirit of God (Air-one of the 4 elements again...called Shu), but there as intimated is a more subtle level of understanding. It refers to one's Higher Self and lower Self (Horus/Set) (Muata Ashby, The Egyptian Book of the Dead, p. 42). Man is, then, a natural man and a god, in combination. Our natural body gives the Soul of man its baptism by water. This is the incarnation but we are yet "asleep" needing to awake to our Spiritual Identity as Paul states:

Eph 5:14 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. (KJV)

Our initial spiritual body is to give us the later baptism by fire in its second birth (the Second Adam)! We are born first as the natural man/woman; then according to the "Pattern in the Mount" in the Sky and Heaven we are to experience the birth of the God in us as the Spiritual man/woman. We are born first by water and then by fire. This again is what the uranograph is teaching in the Sky above. Of vital significance at this point are two statements by St. Paul:

1 Cor 15:46-47 46 Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. 47 The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. (KJV)

Again he says:

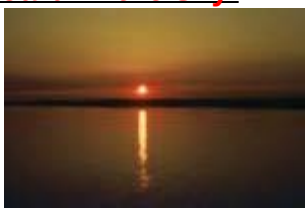
1 Cor 2:14 14 But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. (KJV)

This should hopefully make sense to all for the "natural man" is not yet in that higher kingdom of evolvement, and he must be transformed, changed, metamorphosed, transfigured, and finally lifted up into a superior world of Divine Consciousness before he can recognize spiritual things. Spiritual Evolution will thus transform him, and nothing else will.

Using astrological bases for portraying cosmic truths, since the "Pattern" for these Spiritual Realties that exist in mankind are found in the "Pattern in the Mount" in the Heavens above, the ancients localized the birth of the natural man in the Zodiacal house of Virgo and the birth of the spiritual man in the opposite house of Pisces. We saw this earlier and this cries out to us daily to look to the Heavens for the plan-o-gram for our Spiritual Existence as Souls a long way from home. Like the prodigal son we are to come home, and we begin this return in these bodies of water. We were "dead" but now we "live".

1 Cor 15:47 47 The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. (KJV)

The incarnation of man, or the descent and resurrection of the Soul is at the center of all teachings in our Bibles. It is graphically outlined in the Prodigal Son allegory. It is the whole story of religion. The old books deal with nothing beyond this story and its involvements. It is itself the key to all philosophy and religion. All meanings proceed from this one fact and return thither. It unravels the infinite complexities of the symbology that have confounded the learned scholars and theologians. That man is a god dwelling in an animal form is the central and cardinal fact of all religion.



We have, then, in Greek philosophy the "Descent of the Soul" or the advent of the gods. This is equated in the old Christian tradition by the legend of "the fall of the angels," the fall of Lucifer. The "light-bearer" has come to Earth in us as the Soul from Heaven! It is pure Spiritual Allegory from start to finish.

It is outlined in full by the Prodigal Son allegory, and hinted at in many other places. The story of Abraham is a symbol of it, for he, like the Prodigal Son, left his home and kindred, left his native land, and journeyed to a far country that the Eternal promised to show him, where he would dwell among savage beasts and eat of the grass of the earth. Paul says "we are a colony of heaven." We, these junior gods, are collectively that second Adam, who, Paul says, "is the Lord from Heaven," following the animal man who, he says, "is of the earth, earthy."

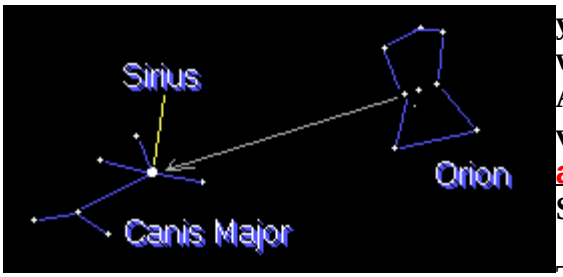
Answer for yourself: Have we been saying in these series of articles that the Deific Mind of God, itself the "template or Pattern or idea in the invisible realm and mind of God, is willed to become "visible and physical" in this Earthy existence? Yes! That is what we have been describing. Have we just said that God intends the "Pattern in the Mount" to become "realized" upon the Earth below in various forms and manifestations? Yes! We have and this is exactly what both Egypt and Israel set out to do and did to various degrees; Egypt of course has the a greater realization of the Divine Ideal than Israel but yet both are important for "theological reasons". The Uranography was central to both these nations and their Religions.

Let us not forget that these spiritual principles were conceived by the Ancient's Spiritual intuition and receptivity as they looked at the night Sky in Ancient Egypt and God's blackboard in the Sky.

And, as Egypt teaches us, mankind's first birth was depicted as taking place on the western side of the Zodiac, in the house or womb of the Virgin Mother, Virgo, because in the West the Sun sets which was understood as the universal symbol of God as spiritual fire descending into matter (humankind). The Sun was believed to be the visible representation of God's Deific Mind and Energy and its setting at dusk and its sinking below the horizon was understood to represent and symbolic of God's Spirit-Energy descending into organic matter. This was preparatory, as you might expect, for the second birth that was symbolized at the forthcoming dawning of this same Energy, the Sun at morning. The cycle and pattern speaks to us volumes if we have ears to hear and a Spiritual intuition to match.

So man is born as natural man on the Western horizon (symbolized by the constellation Virgo). Man is then, according to the Uranograph and the "Pattern in the Mount" to experience a regeneration spiritually in the East (Pisces-the two natures, the two fish) symbolized by the dawning Sun. The Sun, symbolizing God or His Spirit's descent on the West into matter makes God dwell within mankind; the Sun's resurrection on the East, like the Summer Sunrise, makes mankind "born again" into a higher spiritual reality. In reality the Christ within mankind is where mankind resumes the identity of his true Heavenly nature which is hidden from him in this body until "Krst/Karest/Christ is formed within him".

Man becomes "Christ-like" which the Scriptures, both Old and New Testament, describe as man realizing his deity once again.



This is the death and resurrection of "the god" in all religions which is the "Pattern" we find in all the Sungods as "dying and rising" gods; it was never "historical" or "literal". Neither is our "Jesus Story". It was always meant to ONLY be "spiritually" understood. This "Jesus Story", as the "Osiris-Horus Story", is nothing more than the incarnation of Divine Intelligent Energy and Spirit into matter and its return to Spirit-Awareness and Spirit-Consciousness at some time during the earthly life. The culmination of such a "Pattern" is realized at the demise of physical matter (flesh of the body) when the Spirit-Soul within mankind returns to from which it has descended; from Heaven once more. But in between the incarnation and the release of the Soul within mankind each of us is to experience the fullness of our true deity from which we came by allowing "the Christ be formed in us" while our Soul is clothed in this shadowed and spiritually darkened matter of the body. This is described by the Ancients as the described as the Descent of the Christos (the Messiah) into Egypt (symbol for the physical body) and his Exodus back to Canaan. We read this over and over in our New Testaments not knowing what is supposed to mean. This is not a historical trip south from Jerusalem as we might expect the baby Jesus to have taken; it is the Descent of the Christ into you and me "spiritually discerned".

Answer for yourself: Is this the source for the baby Jesus having to flee to Egypt in the New Testament? Is this another allegory of the incarnation of all mankind and we not know it? It sure appears so from all the studies and the theology of Egypt, Greece, and even Israel.

Each year at the Christmas season, amid the clatter and commercialism, someone will inevitably complain that the true meaning of the Christmas season is ignored. There is much confusion about this holy day, but also something universal about it that has inspired people in every land throughout the world for all of history, and for good reason. We have heard it before. The Christmas story is an eternal tale of three wise kings from the Orient who searched for a star that marked the birthplace of an infant King, a savior born of a virgin and placed in a crib, in a stable shared with animals. To understand the true meaning of Christmas, one need only look to the Heavens to observe the remarkable and dramatic events that take place as they have for countless centuries at this time of year. On December 21, the Sun reaches its lowest point on its travel across the Earth's horizon, an event we call the Winter Solstice. The Sun appears to hesitate for the next three days before beginning its six month return to zenith or its highest point on June 21, which we call the Summer Solstice. In Ancient times it was believed that the Sun began its ascent into the Heavens exactly at midnight three days after the Winter Solstice. Through there were no clocks in those days, our ancestors' method for calculating that precise moment is not quite as accurate today, due to the slight shift of the heavenly bodies. The Ancient method was as follows:

At nightfall on December 24, in the eastern Sky you will see three prominent stars. These are the belt of the constellation Orion. These stars are often called the Three Wise Magicians, or the Three Kings of the Orient. If you imagine a straight line through these stars towards the East, you will come to a point on the horizon that the Egyptians in 2000 BC called Aptah, which means "crib or cradle". It is exactly at this spot that in a very short time the brightest star in the Winter Sky, Sirius' will appear. The place of Sirius' emergence marks the exact spot where the Sun will make its appearance at dawn.

The birthplace of the newborn Sun is in the foreground of the Constellation Virgo, the Virgin. The Constellation Taurus, the Bull, and Capricorn, the Goat, are situated close by, which is why the area of the Sky was called "The Stable". So we have before us in the Winter Sky the entire nativity scene, the three Kings of the Orient pointing to a star that marks the precise birth place of the infant God King, born of a Virgin in a celestial stable.

Answer for yourself: Is it a coincidence that Horus' birth was heralded by the star Sirius (the morning star) and that Jesus had his birth heralded by the same star, Sirius, in the East (the Sun rises in the East)?

Answer for yourself: What other similarities exist around this "celestial birth" between Horus and Jesus?

- Both were conceived of a virgin.
- Both were the "only begotten son" of a god (either Osiris or Yahweh)
- Horus's mother was Meri, Jesus's mother was Mary.
- Horus's foster father was called Jo-Seph, and Jesus's foster father was Joseph.
- Both foster fathers were of royal descent.
- Both were born in a cave (although sometimes Jesus is said to have been born in a stable).
- Both had their coming announced to their mother by an angel.
- Horus; birth was heralded by the star Sirius (the morning star). Jesus had his birth heralded by a star in the East (the Sun rises in the East).
- Ancient Egyptians celebrated the birth of Horus on December 21 (the Winter Solstice). Modern Christians celebrate the birth of Jesus on December 25.
- Both births were announced by angels.
- Both had shepherds witnessing the birth.
- Horus was visited at birth by "three solar deities" and Jesus was visited by "three wise men".
- After the birth of Horus, Herut tried to have Horus murdered. After the birth of Jesus, Herod tried to have Jesus murdered.
- To hide from Herut, the god That tells Isis, "Come, thou goddess Isis, hide thyself with thy child." To hide from Herod, an angel tells Joseph to "arise and take the young child and his mother and flee into Egypt."

Answer for yourself: Is this a coincidence or evidence that the "Pattern in the Mount" is faithfully reproduced as seen in both Horus and Jesus and the Mythos is kept intact! We need not be alarmed once we obtain the "keys" to understanding behind these similarities between the "Horus Story" and the "Jesus Story". Sure, they are not "literal" or "historical"; rather they both are the "same story" and are Divine in that they portray through the medium of personification the Descent of the Soul. Without these Ancient Spiritual "keys" to these mythos of Horus and Jesus we are dismayed and distraught upon obtaining such knowledge; but when correctly viewed and interpreted there is not higher Divine Revelation and Spiritual Insight than man can obtain in this life.

The ancients charted the travel of the star Sirius as it moved westward. At the midpoint of its travels, it marks the rebirth of the night Sun at midnight of December 25, the beginning of many festivals and celebrations then, just like today. To our ancestors this meant that the Sun had won out over Old Man Winter, that all Life would be saved by its warm, life-giving rays. The Sun had experienced death for three days, but on December 25, it was resurrected, reborn on Matalis Solis Invicti, the Birth of the Unconquered Sun. But much deeper it spoke of the incarnation of the Soul in "you and me" and it was a time of rejoicing that the Divine Life of God, us, have tome to master the "Old Man Winter" of fleshy lusts in preparation for our ascent and return to Heaven from which we have come.

"Christ's Mas" really means "Sun's Mass". The title "Christ" may be traced to the Chaldean "Chris", a name of the Sun. Its Hebrew equivalent, Heres, occurs several times in the Old Testament where it is always translated as "Sun". As you have been witnessing in these and other articles Solar theology has inspired some religions to bolster their own deities by borrowing from the power of the Sun, and much confusion exists because of this practice. However, anyone can look for themselves, on a December midnight clear, the truth is revealed is there for all to see To know that the Sun will bring us warmth, green crops and renewed life is certainly grounds for rejoicing. But there is more to this "Pattern in the Mount".

Many centuries ago in the Precession of the Equinoxes, the end of the year was marked by the position of the great Dog-Star Sirius, mighty celestial symbol of the divinity in man. Precisely at midnight of December 24 it stood on the meridian line from the zenith to Egypt. It is important for the reader to know that the sign

Virgo is represented by a picture of a woman with a branch (a messianic symbol) in the right hand and ears of corn or wheat in the left hand. At the same moment when Sirius was on the meridian line in Egypt there arose (at the same time) on the eastern horizon the constellation of the Virgin (Virgo). There are two key stars in the constellation. It was believed that the star of her left are bears the Krst/Karest/Christ child and is symbol of the Christhood coming to function in mankind. This is the Descent of the Soul into mankind, into matter of which we have been speaking. In her right hand we find the great star Spica (Latin, a head, or "spike" of wheat) which is symbolic of that same divinity coming as the "bread from Heaven", the celestial food for mankind.

Answer for yourself: Is it an accident that we read that in the "Jesus Story" told to us in Christianity that we have to virtually to eat Christ's body as food, and drink Christ's blood if we would inherit eternal life? This all comes from Virgo and the two stars in the constellation and we find it as far back as Ancient Egypt. So typology represented the Christos as coming in the form of man, the babe Krst/Karest/Christ (Horus/Jesus), and as food for man, he brings with him his message from God which is the bread that comes down from Heaven; the Heavenly wheat. In Egypt we find:

I AM "I am Horus in glory...I am the Lord of Light...I am the victorious one...I am the heir of endless time...I, even I, am he that knoweth the paths of heaven." 12 "I am Horus, the Prince of Eternity." "I am Horus who stepeth onward through eternity...Eternity and everlastingness is my name." "I am the possessor of bread in Anu. I have bread in heaven with Ra."*

Later we find the same:

I AM "I am the light of the world....I am the way, the truth and the life." "Before Abraham was, I am" "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and today and forever." "I am the living bread that came down from heaven."*

And:

1058a. [Horus gives me this his bread], with which he has satisfied his subjects, 1058b. and I eat of it with them.

John speaks of the Christ principle in the words: "This is that bread which came down from heaven, that if a man eat of it he shall hunger no more." We should all be familiar with the allegory that teaches this spiritual principle when we read that Jesus broke a loaf into fragments and gave to his disciples, saying that it was his body, broken for them to which he commands them to partake and eat. And to think that these "bread" stories come from the "Pattern in the Mount" as associated with the constellation Virgo and Egypt told this same story 10,000 years B.C.E. about Horus, the Krst/Karest/Christ.

We now have Virgo established as the house of Bread and Pisces as the house of Fish. But this characterization of the two houses has even deeper meanings. The Ancients understood these two Houses of the Zodiac as referring to mankind's body as the abode of Bread and Fish.

Answer for yourself: What are these "houses," thus defined? They are, as at first, the two states of matter: inorganic and organic, natural and spiritual. But now we look deeper and see that they refer to the life of mankind on the earth. They are in the final stage of the meaning man's body itself, which consists of matter in both its invisible and its visible forms. For man has a natural body and a spiritual body. Man's body itself houses the two mothers. Mankind's body is the abode of the double house of both Bread and of Fish.

And the progression continues. The next truth is seen when it is considered that this physical body is for the Soul the house of death and in its regenerative phase, the house of rebirth. It is the house into which the Spirit descends to its partial inconspicuousness into the density and darkness of the grave of matter, into the night of death, or incarnation, out of which it is to arise in a new birth or resurrection on the opposite side of the cycle (Virgo then Pisces). Egypt symbolized this as the Tuat/Duat. G.Hancock wrote in the book Heaven's Mirror: "In fact the Duat had very specific celestial coordinates. ...the Duat had been conceived of by the Ancient Egyptians as having been 'localized in the eastern part of the Sky' ...the oldest texts... tell us: 'Orion has been enveloped by the Duat while he who lives on the Horizon purifies himself. ...This is a true observation of nature, and it really appears as though the stars are swallowed up each morning by the increasing glow of the dawn.'" A significant passage from the Book of the Dead recites: "Who cometh forth from the dusk, and whose birth is in the house of death"--referring to the incarnating Soul in physical matter which imprisons the Soul as a form of "death".

Answer for yourself: What are we to learn from this?

The Ancients taught in unison that in a spiritual sense the Soul "dies" on entering the body in its incarnation, but has the opportunity for a new birth (think of being "born again" Spiritually in the House of Pisces) while yet in it and later at the bodies demise the Soul/Spirit can resurrects from it and return to Heaven. The body is therefore the house of this death and rebirth of the Soul, or the place of his "crucifixion" and "resurrection".

Answer for yourself: Did you hear those "buzz words" reflective of the same concepts used by the Ancients thousands of years before Jesus? Did we not see this same thing in the "Cross and Crucifixion" in the Sky, where the Divine Energy of God impregnates matter as symbolized by the Vernal Equinox? You should be seeing the "same story" and "same Divine teaching" repeated over and over again in hopes that mankind will not miss it. What is the the term used by Egypt for this body where "death, rebirth, crucifixion and resurrection" occur?

The Egyptians had a name for the body as the place of these transformations, which carry the central meaning of all world theologies. This name today comes to us from the fruits of archeological research into Ancient Egypt and their religion and in so doing supplies the "keys" so necessary for us for proper Bible comprehension.

Answer for yourself: What is the name for the body where this "death" and "resurrection" occurs?

First of all this "city" if a reference to the body of mankind. This city of the body, where the Sun and Energy of God as the Soul and Deific Mind of God sank into our bodies of death on the cross of matter only to re-arise in a new birth "spiritually" was called the city of the Sun, or in Greek, Heliopolis, but in the Egyptian language it is called ANU. In closing remember that we already have seen this before. This name was given to an actual Egyptian city, where the rites of the death, burial and resurrection of Osiris were enacted each year. But it is much more important that that. This name, "ANU" bore a theological significance long before it was given to a geographical town. Again we see the importance of Uranography and its role in naming the Ancient cities of both Egypt and Israel.

The name is obviously made up of "NU", the name for the mother heaven which we find in Egypt. Nu, in Egypt, meant an empty space or an abyss of nothingness, and when combined with the alpha private, meaning, as it does in thousands of words, "not" we end up getting "A-NU". A-NU would then mean "not-nothingness," or a world of concrete reality, the world of invisible yet "potential" physical manifestation. This is what we have been teaching about this whole article. Precisely such a world exists where units of Deific Mind and Energy we call God descend to their death only to later rise again in the bodies of mankind as Consciousness equated with our Godly Souls. A-NU is then the allegorical and symbolic representation of the physical body of man on earth which is the home of the Soul. This "death" and "resurrection" occurs in "A-NU"; the "body of mankind".This is very, very important that you grasp this spiritual concept of Egypt; namely, that mankind's body is the "A-NU". The Ancients taught that the Soul descends out of the waters of the abyss of the NUN, or space in its undifferentiated unity, which is nothing more than "potential" life and energy in an undifferentiated state of existence. This Soul "falls" from Heaven as this "light-bearer" and tragically, through gross Scriptural misinterpretation, we as Christians and followers of "the Christ" believe this to be Satan. This is 180 degrees opposite from the truth .

Answer for yourself: Can you see how far we have tragically strayed from the Spiritual Truths of our ancestors and Gnostic fathers since the rise of the Mighty blasphemous Roman Empire and Christian Church powered by such antisemitism found in our Early Church Fathers who burned all the libraries of the world to cover up this Sacred Soul Science? And why again? At the core of this is obedience to the Torahs of God from nation to nation, the Laws and Commandments of God that guide our Soul's Spiritual development while in these bodies of death! Now you are beginning to see the horror of this tragedy and the impact it had on this old "Baptist boy" and why I had to reach out to untold number and resound the call: "Awake thou that sleepest and rise from the dead"!

Answer for yourself: How much of our New Testament is misinterpreted Egyptian Spiritual allegories taken from the Uranograph in the Heavenly Sky and we not know it? Is the whole of the "Jesus Story" of which we have been taught is "historical" and "literal" nothing more than misinterpreted Divine Spiritual Symbolism that lays as the core of this Ancient Soul Science? 100%

We have come a long way and the "light is beginning to dawn" upon us as to the reality of our true identities as humankind. I applaud your perseverance in these teachings and look forward to our next excursion in recovering Ancient Spiritual Truths that lie at the heart of this Ancient Soul Science.

THE TRUE ORIGINS OF THE ESSENE-CHRISTIAN RELIGIOUS DOCTRINES: ASTRO-THEOLOGY

It has been called "The Greatest Story every told." You recognize it as the story about Jesus..but in reality it is the story about Osiris. That it is; but it is not what you think. Sadly, as an ordained Pastor who "stumbled" onto the truth during his years of service to God I uncovered what many before me have found but few have heard. Idolatry and Sun-Worship lie at the core of many of the most cherished beliefs held by millions of Christians today; and they are sadly never to know it until they die and meet God face to face. Fate, I suppose, plays a role in one finding "the truth" and being able to distinguish it from error, but whatever the reason, maybe even answered prayers cried out for truth, before you I lay the results of my research in order that you be equipped with the facts in order for you to make an intelligent decision concerning your faith if you are a Christian. One thing I hope is that once acquainted with the facts presented your spirit and soul chooses repentance from the idolatrous beliefs we have inherited and turns in a more pure worship of HaShem for this is the sole motive for such endeavors undertaken by Bet Emet Ministries. Craig M. Lyons M.Div.

COMING TO THE KNOWLEDGE OF THE TRUTH...FINALLY

In the New Testament of the Christian Bible, a provocative and most serious challenge is laid on the whole of Christianity. But few recognize such a challenge because they are deficient in their understanding of "solar-theology" or "Astro-theology" which underpins most of the most cherished dogmas of Christianity. Having graduated Seminary I never learned of this; and one would thing when receiving a Master's degree in religious studies some mention somewhere would have been made of this important fact. This "fact" goes unrecognized by the vast majority of "worshippers" who call themselves "Christians" today. Pastors who know or who come to this knowledge, either by design or by accident, rarely mention this "fact" to their congregation for the fear of what would ensue if people came to this knowledge. Since it bears directly on our subject, we will quote it: "...if Christ be not risen, then our preaching is in vain, and your faith is also in vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God...And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins." (I Cor 15:14, 15, & 17)

Answer for yourself: Do you think it a serious offense to be "false witnesses of God"?

I sure do, and knowing that fact and the deficiencies of my "previous orthodox faith" I no longer can maintain or teach such "dogmas" to the unsuspecting flocks of God. I must do the opposite; warn them of the hidden errors in their religious belief system that corrupts their worship of the Creator. The sad fact is that God is aware that our worship is tainted; it is we, the unsuspecting gullible Christian flock who accepts everything "by faith" which has been deceived.

In the New Testament there is a warning given to all who would build a house. Namely, before you lay the foundation, find out what the foundation itself will rest on - solid rock, or sand? The reason is obvious...or said another way; "You need to stand under the foundation to get a true understanding!"

THE FOUNDATIONS FOR CHRISTIAN BELIEFS...WHAT ARE THEY REALLY....HISTORICAL OR ASTROLOGICAL?

Let's closely examine the original, conceptual foundations of the faith, and then decide "...if Christ be not risen. " But in order to do that, we must go back, not 2.000 years to the birth of Christ, but 8 to 10,000 years to the birth of modern man. For when one seeks to establish foundations, one must begin at the beginning.

Many thousands of years ago in what we refer to as the the "primordial world" of the ancients, human life was a far different experience to that which we enjoy today. While it is true that we have less documentation on that prehistoric world than we have on our own age, ample enough is known from the ancient writings to paint a rather clear picture of our primitive ancestry. If we have learned anything at all, it is this: The more we change, the more we stay the same. And nowhere is this more clearly demonstrated than in the history of man's quest for "God", and the ancient religion we still keep holy today.

According to the best understanding we have gleaned from the available records, life for our ancient forefathers was a mixture of wonder and fear. Each day, just finding food for one's family without becoming a meal yourself for the roaming predatory animals, was a life and death struggle (if you have ever ventured out on a cold night with insufficient clothing, and without friend or family near, you could quickly see how fearful the dark, cold primordial nights could be)... And then came winter!

It was from these meager, distressful conditions of the human race that our long history of the search for God and meaning has come. Any evolution, at it's most accelerated rate, is always agonizingly slow. But from the beginning, man's profound questions demanded answers. When no clear answers were forthcoming from the universe, man turned inward, and developed his own. Keep in mind that all the theological teachings of the Western World were developed in the Northern Hemisphere. The study of this subject is properly called "Astro-Theology" or, "The Worship of the Heavens".

ASTRO-THEOLOGY

This is the first, original, and therefore the oldest, and most respected story on Earth! It did not take ancient man very long to decide that in this world the single greatest enemy to be feared was the darkness of night, and all the unknown dangers that came with it. Simply stated, man's first enemy was darkness.

Understanding this one fact alone, people can readily see why the greatest and most trustworthy friend the human race could ever have was by far, heaven's greatest gift to the world ... that Glorious Rising Orb of Day ...the Sun

With this simple truth understood, we can begin to unravel an ancient and wonderful story. Today, as in all mankind's history, it has once again been told anew. But it is not as if this information has been lost to mankind; only misplaced. Although considering myself a rather well-educated man, it was over 15 years of intense study in varied religious subjects before I stumbled onto the wealth of information that revealed the true origins of Christianity at its roots. Once seeing the "beginning" of theology at its true origin, it was then easy to follow the evolution of this "same idea" though every succeeding Gentile nations of the world as nation conquered nation or at least influenced each other. Finally my search let me to Alexandria, Egypt, where ironically it had all begun on the same continent thousands of years earlier, where I discovered buried within the Essenes of the 3rd century B.C. the same religious tenants of "Astro-theology" of the ancients and primitive man. It was easy again to trace this "same Essene theology" into Palestine and Qumran and finally into the early Church and later to Rome as they remolded it into what we are all familiar with today as traditional Christian doctrine. If you followed such a course as mentioned one can draw a straight line from the Sun-worship of the ancients to Rome and Roman Catholicism and even to Protestantism. Within this scope the pivotal point that concerns us in this website is the influence of the Essenes on what would later be called "Christianity;" because had it not been for the Essenes and their "theological influence" upon the Messianic movement within Judaism in the two centuries before Jesus and the century following, then Christianity as we know it today would have never been infected with Sun-worship in the first place and the legacy of the Jesus Movement would not need the major correction which it needs today. With the current interest revolving around the Essenes and the Qumran Sect since the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls in 1947, the intense investigation into this desert sect has opened again the minds of the best scholars to what history had covered over by sand for thousands of years. The "religious theology" and the "religious belief system" of the Qumran sect was never "new" or "innovative;" even less Divine. Equipped with the facts one can trace the religious evolution of the Qumran sect as they departed from normative Judaism and gravitated to an "Astro-theological religious belief system" when their hopes and dreams in a renewed Judaism were never fulfilled. The time has come to set matters straight and this information of the Essene departure from normative Judaism is presented at other places on this website.

THE CHALLENGE BEFORE YOU...COMING TO TERMS WITH WHAT YOU LEARN ABOUT ASTRO-THEOLOGY

First. no people of the ancient world believed the "Sun" to be "God". That belongs in the "disinformation file".

In point of fact, every Ancient culture and nation on Earth have all used the Sun as the most logically appropriate symbol to represent the Glory of the unseen Creator of the heavens. Here it is important to remember two points.

First, with the exception of Japan, the ancient world mythologies always understood the Sun to be masculine in qualities, and the moon feminine. Second, the English language is derived from the German. In the Germanic, the word 'Sun' is spelled 'Son'ne'. The two words can (and have been) used interchangeably. Let us look as some examples from the Bible that proves this point:

Old Testament:
"The heavens are declaring the Glory of God." (PS.19: 1)

New Testament:
"Jesus is the Glory of God." (2 Cor 4:6)

Old Testament:
"The SUN of Righteousness will arise with healings in His wings." (Mal 4:2)

New Testament:
"God's Son/Sun...he is risen!" (Matt 4:16)
Saying. "How, often I wanted to gather you under my wing. "

NOW THE FACTS AND BASICS OF ASTRO-THEOLOGY

So many times we see things and really fail to realize what we see. We often fail to recognize what is before our eyes and only see superficially. The reasons are many and varied. Quite often our failure to recognize what what we see for what it really is due to our lack of knowledge concerning what we observe. Once acquiring such information then our minds explode with understanding; understanding which comes often only by dedicated study. Presented for your examination is a picture of the Statue of Liberty; an icon familiar to almost every American. Notice if you will that the wears on her head a "crown of thorns," symbolizing the rays of the Sun. Kings to this day wear the same kind of crown symbolizing the Sun.

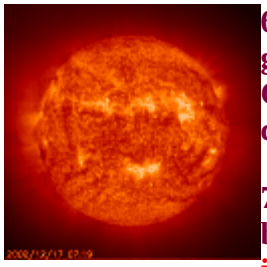
Within such a simple icon is a story dating back thousands of years.

THE "ANCIENT STORY" WENT SOMETHING LIKE THIS....

1. The ancient peoples reasoned that no one on Earth could ever lay claim of ownership to the Great Orb of Day. It must belong to the unseen Creator of the Universe. It was, figuratively speaking, not man's, but "GOD'S SUN". Truly, "God's Sun/Son was... THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD.



2. As stated before, in the dark cold of night man realized his utter vulnerability to the elements. Each night, mankind was forced to wait for the "Risen Sun" to chase away the physical and mental insecurity brought on by the darkness. Therefore, the morning Sun focused man's attention on heavenly dependents for his frail, short existence on Earth, and in doing so, it became the appropriate symbol of divine benevolence from heaven.

3. So just as small fire brought limited light into man's own little world of darkness, likewise the "Great Fire of Day" served the whole Earth with its heavenly presence.
For this reason, it was said at Deut 4:24, and Heb 12:29 that the God of the Bible was a "Consuming Fire" in heaven. And so He is!

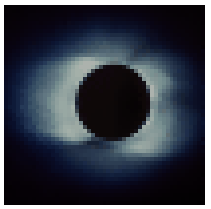
4. It was accepted by all that man was bound to a life on Earth, but the sky was God the Father's abode - His dwelling place. Naturally, God's Son/Sun would also reside with his Father " up in Heaven".

5. Ancient man saw in his male offspring his own image and likeness, and his own existence as a father was proved by the person of his son. It was assumed that God's 'Sun was but a visible representative of the unseen Creator in heaven. So it was said, "When you have seen the Sun, you have seen the Father", or "The Father is glorified in his Sun".

6. Ancient man had no problem understanding that all life on Earth depended directly on life-giving energy from the Sun. Consequently, all life was lost without the Sun. It followed that God's 'Sun' was nothing less than "Our very Saviour". If you don't think so, wait 'till it don't come up!

7. Since life is energy, and energy from the Sun gave life, and we sustained our very existence by taking energy in from our food (which came directly from God's Sun), the Sun must give up its life supporting energy so that we may continue to live. "God's Sun gives his life for us to live."

8. While it was plainly true that our life came from and was sustained each day by "Our Saviour... God's Sun", it was and would be true only as long as the Sun would return each morning. Our hope of salvation would be secure only in a "RISEN saviour". For if he did not rise from his grave of darkness, all would be lost. All the world waited patiently for His 'imminent return". The Divine Father would never leave us at the mercy of this world of darkness. His Heavenly promise concerning his Sun was surely that..."He would come again"...to light our path, and save those lost in the darkness ... And He still does...every morning about 5:30 am.



9. Logically, even if man himself died, as long as the Sun comes up each day, life on Earth will continue forever.

Therefore, it was said in the ancient texts that everlasting life was "the gift" that the Father gives through his Sun. For..."God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten SUN that we may have life everlasting"....on Earth! Not for you personally - but ON EARTH...everlasting life!

10. Since evil and harm lurked at every turn in the fearful dark of night, all evil or harmful deeds were naturally, the..."works of darkness."

11. With the return of the Sun each morning, man felt more secure in his world and therefore, was at peace. Therefore, God's 'Sun' was with his warm rays of life and hope...The Great "Prince of Peace".

12. And of course the reverse was equally true. The dark evil of night was ruled by none other than..."Prince of Darkness"... The EVIL / Dark=EVIL (Darkness=Evil)...the D-EVIL!

We call this darkness which was evil to primitive man the "Devil" today and have crafted a whole theology surrounding it.

13. Our English words 'Good' and 'God' we get from the German word 'Goth' as in 'Gothic'. Now we see God is Good, and the Devil is Evil.

14. It was only a short step to see "The Light of God's Sun" equated with the light of truth - and evil equated with darkness. From then on, it was simple to understand..."LIGHT was GOOD - DARK was BAD."

15. That being true, then the Great Orb of Day (God's Sun) could rightly say of itself, "I AM THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD, and no man comes to the Father except through me", or one comes to God Only by the Light of Truth.

16. We should all "give thanks" to the Father for sending us His "Sun". For the peace and tranquillity he brings to our life is even called 'Solace' - from "Solar"=Sun.

17. We now have before us two (2) cosmic brothers - one very good, and one very evil. One brings the "truth to light" with the "light of truth". The other is the opposite, or in opposition to the light - "The Opposer"... Prince of this World of Darkness - The "Devil".

THE ROLE OF EGYPT IN ASTRO-THEOLOGY...HOME OF THE ESSENES

18. It is at this point that we come to Egypt. More than 3,000 years before Christianity began, the early morning "Sun/ Saviour" was pictured in Egypt as the "New Born Babe". The infant saviour's name was "HORUS".

19. The early morning Sun or "New Born Babe", was pictured in two ways.
A) The Dove - Bringer of Peace
B) The Hawk - God of War- (who punishes the enemies of God!).

20. At daybreak. this wonderful, newborn child, God's 'Sun', is ... 'Born Again' Horus is Risen. Even today, when the Sun comes up, we see it on the "Horus-Risen", or "Horizon". His life was also divided into 12 parts or steps across Heaven each day: 12 HO*RU*S=12 HO*UR*S. This is the origin of the modern " 12 Step Program". Horus is the (new-born) Sun, or the Bringer of the Light. In Latin, Light Bringer is Lucis, or Lucifer, or Luke.

21. But now, what about the evil brother of God's Sun, that old rascally "Prince of Darkness" himself?

In the Egyptian, he was called "SET". We are told in the Bible that when God's Sun died, He left the world in the hands of the Evil Prince of Darkness. This evil prince took over the world at "SON-SET"...or "sunset."

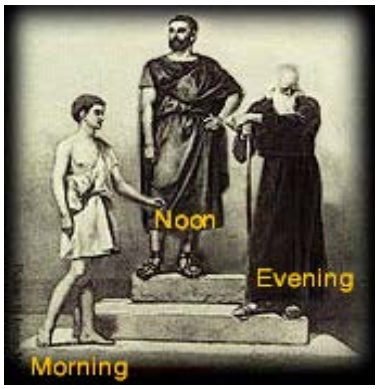
22. It was generally observed that 'God's Sun' could be depended upon to return in the same manner that he left, namely, "On a Cloud"...and that "Every eye will see Him" ... Every evening, go out and watch the Sun leave this world "on a cloud". And next morning, watch to see Him return on a cloud. And every eye will see him come again! ... Unless you're blind!

Samples of the ancient symbol of the winged-Sun flying.." Where every eye can see it"

Mal 4:2 2 But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. (KJV)

Matt 23:37 37 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! (KJV)

23. Keep in mind 'God's Sun' symbolically represented the light of truth, but was condemned by His enemies who could not endure the light of truth in their life. The ancients taught that the very act of opposing or denying the light of truth to the point of killing it, happened in one's own mind! When we are confronted with the harsh realities of life, the light of truth, which we do not wish to face, and which runs counter to our views, such truth is judged in your mind, or judged "in the temple area" of your brain, and put to death in your head! Therefore, 'God's Sun - The Truth and The Light - is put to death at "GOLGOTHA", or "PLACE OF THE SKULL ", located somewhere between your ears!



24. And of course God's 'Sun' goes to His death wearing a "corona". Remember the Statue of Liberty? To this day, Kings still wear a round crown of thorns, symbolizing the rays of the Sun!

25. God's 'Sun' brought His wonderful light to the world, and distributed it over 12 months. So it was said, God's 'Sun' had 12 companions, or helpers, that assisted His life-saving work. So it was, God's 'Sun' had 12 apostles (or months) that followed Him religiously through His life. Incidentally, now you know why the American jury system has 12 jurors who help bring the truth to light, with the "Light of Truth".

26. As far back as we can go into the ancient world, we find that all known cultures had a "Three-in-one"Triune God. The very first trinity was simply the three stages of the life of the Sun.

A) New Born Savior at dawn.

B) Mature, full-grown (The Most High) at 12 (High) noon.

C) Old and dying, at the end of day (going back to The Father).

All three were of course One Divinity - The Sun had three different phases, but one God! The Trinity is truly a mystery...Like electricity, radio, TV, and jumbo-jets are all a mystery to the un-enlightened mind!

27. The Egyptians knew that the Sun was at its highest point in the sky (at high noon). At that point, one offered prayers to the "Most High" God! To the ancients, the sky was the abode, or heavenly temple, of the "Most High". Therefore, God's 'Sun' was doing His heavenly Father's work of enlightening all in the temple at 12 ...not 12 years old, but 12 noon! God's Sun/Son trying to bring enlightenment to the dark minds of the religious leaders.

28. The world of ancient man kept track of times and seasons by the movement of the Sun daily,monthly, and yearly. For this, the sundial and sun calendars were devised. Not only the daily movement of the Sun was tracked on the round dial, but also the whole year was charted on a round Sun calendar dial. Examples: Ancient Mexican, Mayan, Inca, Aztec, Sumerian, Babylonian, Assyrian, Egyptian, Celtic, Aryan, etc. With this method, certain new concepts emerged in the mind of ancient man.

29. The number "12" is important in "Astro-theology" and we find no better example of it except in the artist's depiction of the "Last Supper of Christ" with his 12 faithful "monthly" followers.

Since the Earth experienced 4 different seasons, all the same and equal (in time) each year, the round Sun calendar was divided into 4 equal parts. This is also why we have, in the Bible, only 4 Gospels. Of this point, there can be no doubt. The 4 Gospels represent the four 4 seasons which collectively tell the entire story of the life of God's 'Sun'. Matthew, Mark, Luke, John are Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter. This is why the famous painting of "The Last Supper" pictures the 12 followers of the Sun in four groups (of three) ... the seasons!

30. On the round surface of the yearly calendar, you can draw a straight line directly across the middle, cutting the circle in half... one end being the point of the winter solstice; the other end being the point of the summer solstice. Then you can draw another straight line (crossing the first one); one end of the new line being the spring equinox; the other end being the autumn equinox. You now have the starting points for each of the 4 seasons. This is referred to by all major encyclopedias and reference works, both ancient and modern, as "The Cross of the Zodiac". Thus, the life of God's 'Sun' is on "the Cross". This is why we see the round circle of the Sun on the crosses of Christian churches. The next time you pass a Christian church, look for the circle (God's Sun) on the cross.

The Sun, since the first day of summer, has each day been moving southward, and stops when it reaches its lowest point in the Northern Hemispheric sky (December 22nd - our winter solstice).

At this lowest point, the Sun stops its journey southward. For three days, December 22nd, 23rd , and 24th, the Sun rises on the exact same latitudinal (declination) degree.

This is the only time in the year that the Sun actually stops its movement Northward or Southward in our sky. On the morning of December 25th the Sun moves one degree northward beginning its annual journey back to us in the Northern Hemisphere, ultimately bringing our spring. Anything steadily moving all year long that suddenly stops moving for three days the Sun/Son was considered to have died (the Sun/light being submitted to Darkness for 3 days/descent into Hell). Therefore, God's Sun who was dead for three days, moves one-degree Northward on December 25th beginning its annual journey back to the Northern Hemisphere. The Sun is symbolically BORN AGAIN.

And to this day, His worshippers still celebrate His BIRTHDAY!.... Merry Christmas.

31. Today we use expressions when someone dies. We say things like, "They Passed", or "They Passed On", or "They Passed Away". The ancients said "They Passed Over" (from one life to another), And so it was with the coming of spring, as God's Sun is "Resurrected" from the Death of Winter to His New Life (in spring). In the ancient world, long before the Hebrews ever existed, the celebration of spring was called " The Pass Over", The Sun, which was dead in winter, has passed over to His new life in spring. This is the origin of the modern Pass Over celebration. This is why Christians also celebrate "The Resurrection", or His return, in spring with a "Sun Rise service"... He kept His Promise, and has returned to us with the Promise of New Life... "HAPPY EASTER-PASSOVER!"

SO WHY IS THIS IMPORTANT FOR THE CONTEMPORARY CHRISTIAN TO UNDERSTAND?

Simply because much of the above "Sun-Worship" in cleverly woven into many key cherished Christian religious dogmas and beliefs; beliefs which were included into the Scriptures held sacred by Christians and to which if followed makes one simply an idolater and blasphemer of God and most never know it until they die. It is time to come to the true understanding as to how such "solar-theology" and "Sun-Worship" became part of the Christian Faith. To accomplish that one must thoroughly understand the Qumran Sect/Essenes and their history whereby one comes to understand how this overly strict Jewish movement, which at one time were devout followers of normative Judaism, would, over time, move away from normative Biblical Judaism and evolve into an apocalyptic Buddhist-Pythagorean-Zoroastrian sect that has more in common theologically with Sun-Worship than with Judaism. The legacy of the Essenes, who became some of the earliest followers of Jesus, the Nazarenes and Ebionites, has not only blinded the eyes of traditional believers to the Divine truths concerning the Messiah but substituted a false belief in a Cosmic-Angel Messiah which is no longer a Davidic Messiah but a Godman. This belief renders those who worship him and pray to him to be idolaters and those who do this, even innocently and ignorantly, continually "do evil in the sight of the LORD!" It is time to learn the truth and repent and it is to this goal we turn next as we continue to take a serious look at the Essenes in this website.

THE ESSENE/QUMRAN RELIGIOUS SYNTHESIS....SIMPLY A SYNTHESIS OF PRIOR GENTILE RELIGIOUS BELIEFS

The simplistic summary accounts of the Essenes by Josephus, Philo, and Pliny have done more harm than good. Where one reads the accounts of these three men and their accounts of the Essenes most take for granted that they are accurate "kodak moments" and complete descriptions of the Essenes. I found such an idea to be quite foolish once my study went beyond the superficial understanding fed the public by most writers today. In accepting these three accounts as all that is necessary for adequate understanding of the Essenes one is led astray from the hidden truths concerning the Essene movement which lie beneath such overly simplified summary accounts of these religious zealots. What is totally overlooked in such simplified accounts by these historians is the elaborate religious synthesis of Essene religious beliefs as they evolved over 250 years in their struggles with the religious powers in Jerusalem which usurped their rightful claim to the High Priesthood since the days of the first Hasmoneans. Overlooked is the evolution of the Holy Ones from their pristine, pre-Chasidic beginnings as a Zadokite reaction against Hellenization among the Jews, into the frozen, rigid, esoteric, and celibate-communist mystery-cult which they had become in the days of Philo and Josephus (Larson, The Essene Heritage, Philosophical Library, New York, 1967, xiii).

The religious faith of the occident, or the western world, consists substantially of a synthesis of beliefs and doctrines which had their origin in many lands and among various peoples and which were combined and proclaimed under Essene influence in what we may call the New Testament. Dispersed among the New Testament is this synthesis of religious beliefs amidst Biblical Judaism. The creeds, disciplines, and dogmas on which almost all the churches of Europe and the Americas and many of those in Asia are based, purport to derive their authority from these Gospels and Epistles; and all these multifarious communions proclaim that theirs is the religion established by Jesus, whom they revere as the Christ.

The principal concepts of the Christian Gospels, which have played so crucial a role in occidental life, can be traced to their ultimate sources. Over the last 15 years scores of old as well as modern books and hundreds of articles in encyclopedias were first read by way of orientation; but, since profound knowledge is to be had only by a minute study of the sources, this soon became an industry. More than four years were consumed in the intensive study of ancient Egyptian, Persian, Brahmana, Gaina, Buddhist, Judaistic, Essene, and Christian literature. Quotations were copied and organized for easy reference. All the major streams of thought were then carefully analyzed. Important elements from various ancient cultures were discovered to have converged, first, in the Pythagorean thiasoi and then in the Essene Order, whence the Christian Gospel emerged, which, in turn, proceeded to penetrate the emotions and to achieve dominion over the Graeco-Roman world.

THE ESSENE RELIGIOUS BELIEFS...THEY CHANGED OVER TIME

The Essenes, lately the object of so much attention, play a central role in our drama. They were an extraordinary group of Jewish communist-celibates who, in their formative stage about 170 B.C.E., absorbed the metaphysics and the eschatology of the Zoroastrians, and then, some sixty-five years later, by becoming Pythagoreans, incorporated into their system much of the discipline and soteriology of the mystery-cults of Greece and Asia Minor. Upon all this, they engrafted a Christology which combined a Persian with a Messianic Judaic concept, which, in a period of crisis, they personalized in their martyred Teacher of Righteousness, whom they expected to return upon the clouds about 35-30 B.C.E., accompanied by myriads of angels to conduct the Last Judgment. They were wrong; he did not come! If you were to invest study into these areas it would be your conclusion, based on the evidence and facts available for your inspection, that Jesus was an Essene who, convinced that he was himself the incarnate Christ destined to redeem and judge mankind, left the Order of the Essenes (strict Pharisees) for the purpose of creating a mass-movement.

The certainty finally emerges that Christianity was a highly composite doctrine which combined many of the age-old religious concepts first developed by Egyptians, Babylonians, Assyrians, Persians, Buddhists, and Greeks, as well as by Jews, Phrygians, Syrians, and other inhabitants of Asia Minor. It was congenitally related to all of these; and when any of them accepted Christianity, they were simply recovering what was, at least in part, originally their own. This explains the ease at which Gentile Christianity became a world religion, yet had its roots in a Jewish movement. In the light of worldwide anti-Semitism this is amazing to say the least.

Historically, the Essenes religious faith began in a righteous separatist movement in protest of the Hasmonean commandeering of the High Priesthood and, in typical "sour-grapes" reaction, sadly ends up in final days of the first century as a religious movement which had rejected Judaism almost totally and which had gravitated to more of a Pythagorean, Buddhist, and Zoroastrian religious synthesis. In order to understand why the Essenes would reject Judaism one must understand the intricate history of the Essene evolution. There were intense political and religious reasons for the ultimate Essene rejection of Biblical Judaism per se. These newly acquired religious beliefs of the Essenes will follow them into the Jesus Movement as the vast majority of them will make identification of Jesus with their crucified Teacher of Righteousness following Jesus similar crucifixion.

"Unquestionably," writes Millar Burrows in his More Light on the Dead Sea Scrolls (p. 42), "Christianity is the fruit of a long historical process." He is right! The small Jewish Essene cult which cradled Christianity was simply the receptacle through which various ancient cultures transmitted their most cherished religious concepts to the Graeco-Roman world; which, upon receiving it, the Essenes remade in their own image. These assimilated religious concepts, held dear by the Essene cult of the first century, found their expression in a unique synthesis which has a name; we call it the Essene-Christian faith.

The Essene religious synthesis became the back-bone of Christianity and their religious doctrine and dogma today. Knowledge of this Essene religious synthesis provides a profound challenge to world-wide Christianity and its claims of being a "unique and Divine revelation

Answer for yourself: The real question is to ask is this: How much of these "Essene religious beliefs" did Jesus really believe and teach and how can we know for sure? There is a way we can arrive at the answer for this question and in time, as you study with us, we will share it with you as we study our way through the materials on this web-site.

IN CLOSING LET ME SAY:

The Essenes of the first century absorbed their basic ideology originally from Zoroastrianism and later from Greek-mystery sources, particularly Pythagoreanism; on the outside the Essenes might have looked Jewish, but on the inside when their sectarian writings are examined they betray their theological bias and it becomes evident that they as a group rejected Judaism in toto; and except for certain Buddhist additions, and the pristine church reproduced the Essene pattern faithfully. Since, however, this form of Christianity was unacceptable in the pagan world and since it was spurned by the Jews, it was Hellenized in the Pauline epistles and the Fourth Gospel, both of which reflect Stoic influence; these eventually became an essential foundation for that reconstruction or restitution of Christianity known as the Protestant Reformation. Ancient Hellenized Christianity itself did not long survive; for the soon-to-be victorious Roman Catholic Church, in order to establish itself as a theocracy, absorbed their most prominent elements from the great pagan cults which were its competitors.

It is for us to now consider why a righteous branch of Biblical Judaism would, in the course of 250 years, depart almost wholly from Biblical Judaism and its religious doctrines, and evolve into a celibate and communist-apocalyptic sect which would, in their rejection of Judaism and the Temple, absorb religious tenants originally from Zoroastrianism and later from Greek-mystery sources, particularly Pythagoreanism.

It is to the events and forces which were exerted upon these "pious ones" which made them depart from normative Judaism that we now turn our investigation.

"OTHER VARIOUS SOURCES USED FOR THE CHRIST "MYTHS" IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

If you have been a regular reader of Bet Emet Ministries for any length of time you are acquainted with our desire to enlighten those who are followers of Jesus to the truths behind the "Christ-story" in the New Testament and the religion he is said to have founded. You have seen in varying articles the documentation and facts substantiating that Gentile Christianity is made up of composite products, made up, to a great extent, of the attributes, the doctrines, and the customs of the gods and the religions which preceded them and existed around them. "The Christian believes that Christ is coexistent with his father, Jehovah -- that he has existed from the foundations of the world. This is in a measure true. The years that have elapsed since his alleged incarnation are few compared with the years of his gestation in the intellectual womb of humanity" (John Remsburg, The Christ, Prometheus Books, 1994)."

THE CHRIST MYTH OF THE NEW TESTAMENT A COMPOSITE OF GENTILE RELIGIOUS BELIEFS

To understand the origin and nature of Christ and Christianity it is necessary to know something of the religious systems and doctrines from which they were evolved. Make no mistake about it; the Qumran/Essene community both adopted and applied many of these "myths" to their religious ideas which they later attached to their "Cosmic Redeemer" and when they later joined the Jesus Movement it was simple to apply these same beliefs to Jesus. That in a nutshell explains why the New Testament contains two quite different portraits of Jesus: The Synoptic "human" Jesus and the "supernatural" Jesus of the Gospel of John. More on that in later articles.

The following, some in a large and others in but a small degree, contributed to mold this supposed divine incarnation and inspire this supposed revelation:

- Nature or Sex Worship
- Solar Worship
- Astral Worship
- Worship of the Elements and Forces of Nature
- Worship of Animals and Plants
- Polytheism
- The Mediatorial Idea The Messianic Idea
- The Logos

NATURE OR SEX WORSHIP

The deification and worship of the procreative organs and the generative principles of life is one of the oldest and one of the most universal of religions. It has been called the foundation of all religions. In some nations the worship of the male energy, Phallic worship, predominated; in others the worship of the female energy, Yoni worship, prevailed. But in all both elements were recognized. Mrs. Besant says: "Womanhood has been worshiped in all ages of the world, and maternity has been deified by all creeds: from the savage who bowed before the female symbol of motherhood, to the philosophic Comtist who adores woman 'in the past, the present, and the future,' as mother, wife, and daughter, the worship of the female element in nature has run side by side with that of the male; the worship is one and the same in all religions, and runs in an unbroken thread from the barbarous ages to the present time."

Among the life generating gods may be named Vishnu, Osiris, Zeus, Priapus, Adonis, Bacchus, Saturn, Apollo, Baal, Moloch, and Jehovah. Among the receptive life producing goddesses were Isis, Rhea, Ceres, Venus, Istar, Astarte, Aschera, Devaki, Eve, and Mary. Where the worship of the female element largely prevailed the Virgin and Child was a favorite deity. Isis and Horus, Rhea and Quirinus, Leto and Apollo, Devaki and Krishna, Mary and Christ, all had their inception in the sex worship of primitive man.

The symbol of Phallic worship, the cross, has become the emblem of Christianity

This is rather amazing since Jesus was crucified on a stake without a cross-beam, but the "pattern" of "crucified sun-godmen had to be continued if the legend was to be readily accepted by the Gentile sun-worshipers; nothing has changed.

I quote again from our English authoress:

"We find the cross in India, Egypt, Tibet, Japan, always as the sign of life-giving power, it was worn as an amulet by girls and women, and seems to have been specially worn by the women attached to the temples [sacred prostitutes], as a symbol of what was, to them, a religious calling. The cross is, in fact, nothing but the refined phallus, and in the Christian religion is a significant emblem of its pagan origin; it was adored, carved in temples, and worn as a sacred emblem by sun and nature worshipers, long before there were any Christians to adore, carve, and wear it. The crowd kneeling before the cross in Roman Catholic and in High Anglican churches is a simple reproduction of the crowd who knelt before it in the temples of ancient days, and the girls who wear it amongst ourselves are -- in the most innocent unconsciousness of its real significance -- exactly copying the Indian and Egyptian women of an elder time."

The American Cyclopedia says: "The crux ansata, so common on Egyptian monuments, symbolizes the union of the active and passive principles of nature. In the Etruscan tombs have been found crosses of four phalli."...

The sex worship of the Semitic tribes of Western Asia had its origin, it is believed, in India, where, under the name of Sakti worship, it prevails today, three-fourth of the Hindoos, it is claimed, belonging to this sect. The worship is thus described by the Encyclopedia Britannica's chief authority on the subject, Prof. H. H. Wilson: "The ceremonies are mostly gone through in a mixed society, the Sakti being personified by a naked female, to whom meat and wine are offered and then distributed amongst the company. These eat and drink alternately with gesticulations and mantras -- and when the religious part of the business is over, the males and females rush together and indulge in a wild orgy."

The foregoing is almost an exact description of the Agapae, or Love Feasts, as they were observed for a time in the early Christian church....

The religion of Christ as it exists today is not only in its external forms, but in its very essence, largely a survival of the nature worship of old. That it is closely allied to it is admitted by Christian ministers themselves. The Rev. Frederick Robertson says: "The devotional feelings are often singularly allied to the animal nature. They conduct the unconscious victim of feelings that appear divine, into a state of life, at which the world stands aghast; fanaticism is always united with either excessive lewdness or desperate asceticism," (Essays). The Rev. S. Baring-Gould, in Freaks of Fanaticism, says: "The religious passion verges so closely on the sexual passion that a slight additional pressure given to it bursts the partition, and both are confused in a frenzy of religious debauch." The Rev. J. H. Noyes says: "Religious love is a very near neighbor to sex love, and they always get mixed in the intimacies and social excitement of [religious] revivals."

SOLAR/SUN WORSHIP

Although this website deals extensively elsewhere with "solar myths" and how they were applied to a "Cosmic godman" in detail I will for introductory purposes give a simple synopsis of solar worship in this article in order to give an overall view of all the various sources used to construct the "godman soter/savior" of the nations. Let me remind you that our purposes to not only familiarize ourselves with such information from its varied sources but to follow the "germ" of such theological thought all the way to the Essene/Qumran sect which provided the impetus to the early Christians for the adoption of the same ideas as applied to Jesus. This might be hard for you at first to believe but the testimony of scholars as well as our own Early Church Fathers admit to such a fact!

Scarcely less prevalent than sex worship was the worship of the sun. While sex worship was confined chiefly to the generation of human life, sun worship comprehended the generation of all life. The sun was recognized as the generative power of the universe. He overshadows the receptive earth from whom all life is born. I quote from M. Soury: "Amid all these forces, the mightiest is, without contradiction, the sun, the fire of heaven, father of earthly fire, unique and supreme cause of motion and life on our planet. There is no need or reason to understand that the very life, and as it were the blood of our celestial father flows in the veins of the Earth, our mother. In the time of love, when the luminous heaven embraces her, from her fertilized womb springs forth a world. It is she who quivers on the plains where the soft moist air waves gently on the grasses; it is she who climbs in the bush, who soars in the oak, who fills the solitude with the joyous twitter of birds beneath the cloudlet, or from the leaf-lined nests; it is she who in seas and in running waters, or mountains and in woods, couples the gorgeous male with the ardent female, throbs in every bosom, loves in every life. But all this terrestrial life, all this warmth and all this light are but effluents from the sun." (Religion of Israel, pp. 3, 4.)

Prof. Tyndall says: "We are no longer in a poetical but in a purely mechanical sense, the children of the sun." "The sun," said Napoleon Bonaparte, "gives all things life and fertility. It is the true God of the earth."

John Newton, M.R.C.S., of England, says: "The glorious sun, that 'god of this world' the source of life and light to our earth, was early adored, and an effigy thereof used as a symbol. Mankind watched with rapture its rays gain strength daily in the Spring until the golden, glories of Midsummer had arrived, when the earth was bathed during the longest days in his beams, which ripened the fruits that his returning course had started into life. When the sun once more began its course downwards to the winter solstice, his votaries sorrowed, for he seemed to sicken and grow paler at the advent of December, when his rays scarcely reached the earth, and all nature, benumbed and cold, sunk into a death-like sleep. Hence feasts and fasts were instituted to mark the commencement of the various phases of the solar year, which have continued from the earliest known period, under various names, to our own times" (The Assyrian Grove).

The most prominent deities in the pantheons of the gods were solar deities. Among these were Osiris, Vishnu, Mithra, Apollo, Hercules, Adonis, Bacchus, and Baal. In the worship of some of these gods sex and solar worship were united.

The early Israelites were mostly sun worshipers. And even in later times, the sun god, Baal. divided with Jehovah the worship of the Jews. Saul, Jonathan, and David named their children in honor of this god. "Saul begat Jonathan,...and Esh-baal. And the son of Jonathan was Merib-baal" (1 Chron. viii, 33, 34). David named his last son, save one, Beeliada, "Baal Knows" (1 Chron. xiv, 7). Solomon's worship included not merely the worship of Jehovah, but that of Baal and other gods. His temple was filled with Pagan ornaments and emblems pertaining to solar worship. Regarding this the Rev. Dr. Oort of Holland says: "Solomon's temple had much in common with heathen edifices, and slight modifications might have made it a suitable temple for Baal.

This need not surprise us, for the ancient religion of the Israelitish tribes was itself a form of Nature-worship just as much as the religions of the Canaanites, Phoenicians, Philistines, and other surrounding peoples were. Most of the Israelites certainly saw no harm in these ornaments, since they were not aware of any very great difference between the character of Yahweh [Jehovah] and that of Baal, Astarte, or Moloch" (Bible for Learners, Vol. II, p. 88). Long after the time of Solomon the horses and chariots of the Sun were kept in the temple (2 Kings xxiii, 11). Many of the stories concerning Moses, Joshua, Jonah, and other Bible characters are solar myths. Samson was a sun god. Dr. Oort says: "Sun-worship was by no means unknown to the Israelites.... The myths that were circulated among these people show that they were zealous worshipers of the sun. These myths are still preserved, but, as in all other cases, they are so much altered as to be hardly recognizable. The writer who has preserved them for us lived at a time when the worship of the sun had long ago died out. He transforms the sun god into an Israelite hero [Samson]" (ibid., I, p. 414). St. Augustine believed that Samson and the sun god Hercules were one.

Charles Francois Dupuis, in his Origin of Worship, one of the most elaborate and remarkable works on mythology ever penned, shows that nearly all the religions of the world, including Christianity, were derived largely from solar worship. All the solar deities, he says, have a common history. This history, summarized, is substantially as follows:

"The god is born about December 25th, without sexual intercourse, for the sun, entering the winter solstice, emerges in the sign of Virgo, the heavenly Virgin. His mother remains ever-virgin, since the rays of the sun, passing through the zodiacal sign, leave it intact. His infancy is filled with dangers, because the new-born Sun is feeble in the midst of the winter's fogs and mists, which threaten to devour him; his life is one of toil and peril, culminating at the spring equinox in a final struggle with the powers of darkness. At that period the day and night are equal, and both fight for the mastery. Though the night veil the urn and he seems dead; though he has descended out of sight, below the earth, yet he rises again triumphant, and he rises in the sign of the Lamb, and is thus the Lamb of God, carrying away the darkness and death of the winter months. Henceforth he triumphs, growing ever stronger and more brilliant. He ascends into the zenith, and there he glows, on the right hand of God, himself God, the very substance of the Father, the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, upholding all things by his lifegiving power."

Dr G. W. Brown, author of Researches in Oriental History, says:

"Strange as it may seem whilst Mithras and Osiris, Monysos and Bacchus, Apollo and Serapis, with many others [including Christ] in name, all masculine sun gods, and all interblended, a knowledge of one is generally a knowledge of the whole, wherever located or worshiped."

If Christ was not originally a solar god he wears today the very garb of one. His mother, the Virgin, was the mother of the solar gods; his birthday, Christmas, is the birthday of all the gods of the sun; his Twelve Apostles correspond to the twelve signs of the Zodiac; according to the Gospels, at his crucifixion the sun was eclipsed, he expired toward sunset, and rose again with the sun; the day appointed for his worship, the Lord's day, is the dies solis, Sunday, of the sun worshipers; while the principal feasts observed in memory of him were once observed in honor of their goals. "Every detail of the Sun myth," says the noted astronomer, Richard A. Proctor, "is worked into the record of the Galilean teacher."

The cross we have seen was a symbol of Phallic worship. The cross, and especially the crucifix, was also an emblem of solar worship. It was caned or painted on, or within, a circle representing the horizon, the head and feet and the outstretched arms of the sacrificial offering or crucified Redeemer pointing toward the four quarters of the horizon. The Lord's Supper, observed in memory of Christ, was observed in memory of Mithra, Bacchus, and other solar gods. The nimbus, or aureola, surrounding the head of Jesus in his portraits represents the rays of the sun. It was thus that the ancient adorers of the sun adorned the effigies of their god. There still exists a pillar erected by the sun worshipers of Carthage. On this pillar is caned the sun god, Baal, with a nimbus encircling his head.

The Christian doctrine of the resurrection had its origin in sun worship. As the sun, the Father, rose from the dead, so it was believed that his earthly children would also rise from the dead. "The daily disappearance and the subsequent rise of the sun," says Newton, "appeared to many of the ancients as a true resurrection; thus, while the east came to be regarded as the source of light and warmth, happiness and glory, the west was associated with darkness and chill, decay and death. This led to the custom of burying the dead so as to face the east when they rose again, and of building temples and shrines with an opening toward the east. To effect this, Vitruvius, two thousand years ago, gave precise rules, which are still followed by Christian architects."

Max Mueller in his Origin of Religion (pp. 200, 201), says: "People wonder why so much of the old mythology, the daily talk, of the Aryans was solar what else could it have been? The names of the sun are endless and so are his stories; but who he was, whence he came and whither he went, remained a mystery from beginning to end.... Man looked up to the sun, yearning for the response of a soul, and though that response never came, though his senses recoiled, dazzled and blinded by an effulgence which he could not support, yet he never doubted that the invisible was there, and that, where his senses failed him, where he could neither grasp nor comprehend, he might still shut his eyes and trust, fall down and worship."

This worship of old survives in the worship of today. A knowledge of the location, the limits and the nature of the sun has gradually convinced the world that this is not God's dwelling place; but somewhere in the infinite expanse of the blue beyond they fancy he has his throne. To this imaginary being is rendered the same adoration that was rendered to him by primitive man -- the adoration of childish ignorance.

ASTRAL WORSHIP

The worship of the planets and stars was probably a later development than sex and solar worship. It flourished for a time in nearly every part of the world, and left its impress on the religions that succeeded it.

In Chaldea/Babylon (remember the Jews were in captivity there and exposed to Babylon's religious ideas as well), one of the principal sources of Judaism and Christianity, the worship of the stars prevailed. I quote from Dr. Ridpath: "In their aspirations for communion with the higher powers, the yearning of the ancient Chaldeans turned upwards to the planets and the stars. The horizon of the Babylonian plain was uniform and boundless. It was the heaven above rather than the earth beneath, which exhibited variety and life. The Zodiac was ever new with its brilliant evolutions. Through the clear atmosphere the tracks of the shining orbs could be traced in every phase and transposition. With each dawn of morning light, with each recurrence of the evening twilight, a new panorama spread before the reverent imagination of the dreamer, and he saw in the moving spheres not only the abode but the manifested glory of his gods" (History of the World, Vol. 1, p. 138)....

After alluding to the ancient Vedic religion, which recognized in the stars the souls of our departed ancestors, Prof. John Fiske says: "The Christianised German peasant, fifty centuries later, tells his children that the stars are angels' eyes, and the English cottager impresses it on the youthful mind that it is wicked to point to the stars, though why he cannot tell" (Myths and Myth Makers, p. 76).

In the Zodiac the Sun had twelve palaces. Each palace had a star for a god, and each was subject to the Sun. Each day of the week was governed by a planet, and each hour of the day had its controlling star. Many scholars, including Jefferson, have held that Christ and his twelve Apostles relate to the zodiac and were derived from this stellar worship. The seven days of the week are still dedicated to the old planetary gods, and, with a few modifications, bear their names.

Chambers' Encyclopedia says: "The Jews, as well as the early Christians, had no special names for the single days, but counted their number from the previous Sabbath, beginning with Sunday, as the first after the Sabbath, and ending with Friday, as the sixth after the previous, or eve (Ereb) of the next Sabbath. After a very short time, however, young Christianity, which in the same manner had endeavored to count from the feria secunda, or second day after Sunday, to the Septima (or Saturday), had to fall back again upon the old heathen names" (Art "Week").

The planetary gods Nardouk (Jupiter), Adar (Saturn), Istar (Venus), Nergal (Mars), and Nebo (Mercury), were all worshiped by the ancient Israelites. Istar was called "Queen of the Stars." Moloch, the rival of Jehovah, who shared for centuries the worship of the Hebrews, had his blazing star, the emblem of his implacable cruelty. The worship of Astarte, daughter of the moon, and "Queen of Heaven," whose emblem was a star, was introduced by Solomon himself (1 Kings xi, 5; 2 Kings xxiii, 13). For more than three hundred years she had her temple in Jerusalem. And even today devout Jews address orizons to the new moon, a relic of the worship of Astarte. The rosary is a survival of astral worship. It was once a symbol of the stars.

The author of Supernatural Religion says: "The belief that sun, moon and stars were living entities possessed of souls was generally held by the Jews at the beginning of our era."

The same belief was entertained by the Christian Fathers. Origen says: "As the stars move with so much order and method that under no circumstances whatever do their course seem to be disturbed, is it not the extreme of absurdity to suppose that so much order, so much observance of discipline and method could be demanded from or fulfilled by irrational beings?"

Out of astral worship grew the so-called science of astrology. Of this Chambers' Encyclopedia says: "Astrology is one of the most ancient forms of superstition, and is found prevailing among the nations of the east at the very dawn of history. The Jews became much addicted to it after the Captivity."

One of the so-called Messianic prophecies of the Old Testament reads: "There shall come a star out of Jacob" (Num. xxiv, 17). "Note when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the King, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that is born king of the Jews? For we have seen his star in the east,...and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was" (Matt. ii, 1, 2, 9). This marvelous event at the advent of the Christian Messiah was believed by many to be a complete "fulfillment" of what had been predicted centuries before concerning the appearance of the expected Persian Messiah, the original of the expected Messiah of the Jews"....if only it had been true and not another "solar-myth."

After referring to the prevalency of astrology at the beginning of, and anterior to, the Christian era, Strauss says in his Jesus: "When such ideas were afloat, it was easy to imagine that the birth of the Messiah must be announced by a star, especially as, according to the common interpretation of Balaam's prophecy, a star was there made the symbol of the Messiah. It is certain that the Jewish mind effected this combination; for it is a rabbinical idea that at the time of the Messiah's birth a star will appear in the east and remain for a long time visible.... In the time of Jesus it was the general belief that stars were always the forerunners of great events."

Jesus in the Apocalypse declares himself to be "the bright and morning star" (xxii, 16). He "had in his right hand seven stars" (i, 16). "The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches" (20). His second coming will be heralded by "signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars" (Luke xxi, 25). Little wonder; it has been done that way since time began.

WORSHIP OF ANIMALS AND PLANTS

In the infancy of the world animals were deified and adored, and trees and plants were regarded as sentient beings and received the homage of man.

Nearly every animal has been an object of worship. This worship flourished for ages in Egypt and India In Egypt the worship of the bull (Apis) was associated with that of Osiris (Serapis). The cow is still worshiped in India. Serpent worship has existed in every part of the world.

Remnants of animal worship survived in Judaism and Christianity. Satan was a serpent; Jehovah, like Osiris, was worshiped as a bull; Christ was the lamb of God, and the Holy Ghost appeared in the form of a dove.

Closely allied to this worship, and to some extent a part of it, is the doctrine of the transmigration of souls. Some of the Jews believed in this. So did many of the early Christians, including Origen....

POLYTHEISM

Polytheism, the doctrine of a plurality of gods, has prevailed in every part of the world. The most interesting pantheons of the gods were those of India, Egypt, Greece, and Rome. The Hebrews, who were polytheists, borrowed their gods from Assyria and Babylonia The pantheon of these nations comprised twelve principal gods and nearly a thousand minor deities. The chief of these gods was El. His consort was Elath. The Hebrews worshiped El under the name of El Shaddai and various other names. Elohim of the Bible, translated God, denotes the plural and included El and the minor gods who surrounded him. Yahweh, Iahveh, Jehovah, etc., as he is variously called -- for Jews and Christians cannot spell and do not even know the name of their principal deity -- is a god of Assyro-Babylonian origin. In addition to their national god, Jehovah, many of the Jews worshiped Baal, Moloch, and Tammous, male deities, and Astarte, Aschera, and Istar, female deities.

That the writers of the Bible recognized a plurality of gods -- were polytheists -- is proved by the following "And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us" (Gen. iii, 22). "Who is like unto thee, O Lord, among the gods?" (Ex. xv, 11.) "Among the gods, there is none like unto thee, O Lord" (Ps. Ixxxvi, 8). "The Lord is a great God, and a great king above all gods" (Ps. xcv, 3). "Thou shalt not revile the gods" (Ex. xxii, 28).

Monotheism, the doctrine of one god, is not merely the worship of one god, but the belief in the existence of one god only. Many were monotheistic in worship -- worshiped one god, their national deity -- while at the same time they were polytheistic in belief -- believed in the existence of many gods (Monolatry). The Jews who worshiped Jehovah have been called monotheists. And yet, for a thousand years, they believed in the existence of Kemosh, Baal, Moloch, Tammouz, and other deities. They believed that Jehovah was their national god and that they owed allegiance to him; just as the subjects of an earthly king profess their loyalty to him without denying the existence of other kings.

Sadly, while Christians profess monotheism they are really polytheists as were the early Israelites-- worship three gods -- Father (Jehovah), Son (Christ), and Holy Ghost; and recognize a god of Evil, Satan. To these must also be added a female deity, the Virgin Mary, who is to the devout Catholic as much of a divinity as Isis and Venus were to ancient polytheists. The canonization and adoration of the saints, too, are analogous to the worship of the inferior deities of ancient times....

Regarding the deification and worship of saints Hallam says: "Every cathedral or monastery had its tutelar saint, and every saint his legend, fabricated in order to enrich the churches under his protection, by exaggerating his virtues, his miracles, and consequently his power of serving those who paid liberally for his patronage. Many of those saints were imaginary persons; sometimes a blundered inscription added a name to the calendar, and sometimes, it is said, a heathen god was surprised at the company to which he was introduced, and the rites with which he was honored" (Middle Ages, p. 603).

The church historian Mosheim admits and deplores the truth of this: "It is, at the same time, as undoubtedly certain, as it is extravagant and monstrous, that the worship of the martyrs was modeled, by degrees, according to the religious services that were said to the goals before the coming of Christ" (Ecclesiastical History, p. 98).

Bishop Newton says: "The very same temples, the very same images, which were once consecrated to Jupiter and the other demons [gods], are now consecrated to the Virgin Mary and the other saints."

Milman says that at an early period "Christianity began to approach to a polytheistic forms or at least to permit what it is difficult to call by any other name than polytheistic, habits and feelings of devotion" (History of Christianity, Vol. III, p. 424)....

THE MESSIANIC IDEA

The desire for a deliverer naturally arises in the minds of a people who are in subjection and bondage. This desire was the germ of the Messianic idea. While there are traces of this idea in the earlier writings of the Hebrews, it reached its highest development during and immediately following the Captivity, and again in the Maccabean age.

The Messiah of Judaism and the Messiah, or Christ, of Christianity, were derived from the Persian theology, the adherents of each system modifying the doctrine to suit their respective notions. In its article on Zoroaster, Chambers' Encyclopedia says: "There is an important element to be noticed, viz., the Messiah, or Sosiosh, from whom the Jewish and Christian notions of a Messiah are held by many to have been derived.... Even a superficial glance at this sketch will show our readers what very close parallels between Jewish and Christian notions on the one hand, and the Zoroastrian on the other, are to be drawn."

Christians cite numerous passages from the writings of the Old Testament, which they claim foretold the advent of Jesus. Not one of these passages, as originally penned, refers in the remotest degree to him, though many of them do refer to the office he is said to have filled. The Jews hoped for a deliverer, for a national leader who would reestablish the kingdom of Israel, and restore to it the glory of David's reign. They were loyal to the house of David and believed that this deliverer would be a descendant, a son, of David. Pietists, too, in the fervor of their religious enthusiasm dreamed of universal conversion to the Jehovistic theocracy. In the writings of their prophets and poets these hopes and dreams found expression. "I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David, my servant, thy seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations" (Ps. xxxix, 3, 4). "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him" (Dan. vii, 27).

While the Messianic idea was originally a Persian idea, the materials used in the formation of the Christian Messiah were drawn largely from purposefully mistranslated and misquoted Jewish Scriptures. This had to be done to support the religious ideas attached to Cosmic-godmen and "solar myths." There are passages in the Old Testament, as we have seen on our other websites, which predict the coming of a Messiah in the Christian Bibles and Old Testaments which read COMPLETELY DIFFERENT when compared with the true Jewish Scriptures. In others words, the Christian Old Testaments are "fixed" and fraudulent translations; done so to support such foreign "false solar/astral theologies" which were craftily placed among the Law, Prophets, and Writings to give "authority" to such ideas.Possibly "translation" is too kind of a word to use for such hideous alterations of the Jewish Bible. These furnished a portion of the materials out of which this Messianic deity, Christ, was formed. There are many more which have no reference whatever to a Messiah, which have been made to serve as Messianic prophecies. The Old Testament, as we have it, is alleged to be a Jewish work. It is, rather, a Christian work. It is a Christian version of ancient Jewish writings, every book of which has been more or less Christianized. Much of it is scarcely recognizable to a Jewish scholar. This is especially true of so-called Messianic prophecies.

The Christian Messiah was, on the one hand, modeled, to a considerable extent, after the Jewish ideal, while the Jewish materials, on the other hand, were freely altered, by both Essenes and later many in the Gentile Church, to fit the new "theological" conception. Referring to the work of the Evangelists, M. Renan says: "Sometimes they reasoned thus: 'The Messiah ought to do such a thing, now Jesus is the Messiah, therefore Jesus has done such a thing.' At other times, by an inverse process, it was said: 'Such a thing has happened to Jesus; now Jesus is the Messiah; therefore such a thing was to happen to the Messiah.'" (Jesus, p. 27).

That the so-called Messianic prophecies of the Jewish Scriptures were the immediate source of the Christ is apparent. That he was, however, merely a borrowed idea and not a historical realization of these prophecies is equally apparent. The Jews were expecting a Messiah. They were also expecting certain prophecies to be fulfilled. Had Jesus realized these expectations they would have accepted him. But he did not realize them. These prophecies were not fulfilled in him. What so many miss is the fact that the failure of the prophecies were not being fulfilled He was not a son of David if you believe in the "virgin birth;" he did not deliver his race from bondage; he did not become a king, the important events that were to attend and follow Messiah's advent form no part even of his alleged history. There are many who believe that his rejection by the Jews proves him to be either a false Messiah, or an imaginary being -- a historical myth or a pure myth -- in either case a myth. I personally do not subscribe to these views as stated above in the articles on why the prophecies were not fulfilled by Jesus; yet I concur that their failure to be fulfilled is problematic to the identification of Jesus as the Messiah but not yet impossible. Read the articles.

THE LOGOS (THE WORD)

The doctrine of the Logos, or Word: as an emanation or essence of divine wisdom is very old. It is found in the ancient religions of Egypt and India It was recognized in the Persian theology, and was incorporated into the Jewish theology by the Babylonian exiles. It constitutes an important element in the Platonic philosophy. It received its highest development and exposition in the writings of the Jewish philosopher Philo, a contemporary of Jesus....

The presentation of Jesus as an incarnation of the Logos belongs to the second century and is prominent in the Fourth Gospel. The ideas are chiefly those of Plato and Philo. Plato's trinity was Thought, Word and Deed. The Word occupies the second place in the Platonic trinity as it does in the Christian trinity. That the author of the gospel of John, written more than a century after the time of Philo, borrowed largely from that philosopher, is shown by the following parallels drawn from their writings:

Philo. -- "The Logos is the Son of God" (De Profugis).
John. -- '"This [the Word] is the Son of God" (i, 34).

Philo. -- "The Logos is considered the same as God" (De Somniis).
John. -- "The Word was God" (i, 1).

Philo. -- "He [the Logos] was before all things" (De Leg. Allegor.).
John. -- "The same [the Word] was in the beginning with God" (i, 2).

Philo. -- "The Logos is the agent by whom the world was made" (De Leg. Allegor.).
John. -- "All things were made by him [the Word]" (i, 3).

Philo. -- "The Logos is the light of the world" (De Somniis).
John. -- "The Word was the true light" (i, 9).

Philo. -- "The Logos only can see God" (De Confus. Ling.).
John. -- "No man hath seen God.... He [the Word] hath declared him" (i, 18).

CONCLUSION

I stated above that "To understand the origin and nature of Christ and Christianity it is necessary to know something of the religious systems and doctrines from which they were evolved." Let me now add to that comment: "In order to worship God in Spirit and it Truth it is mandatory to know the sources from which Christianity drew for their doctrines and dogmas they applied to Jesus. Only by knowing this and casting out the paganism inherent in the "Christ myths" of the New Testament can one approach God in worship without offending Him.

To say that Christianity and Christian doctrine is a composite of various heathen religious doctrines is a severe understatement.

For our purposes in this website we must face the rather frank conclusion, after sufficient studies have been undertaken, that the Qumran/Essene community applied many of these "myths" to their religious ideas which they adopted regarding their "Cosmic Redeemer," and when they later joined the Jesus Movement, these same religious beliefs were attached to Jesus as well. We read of this in the various doctrines surrounding Jesus in the New Testament.

These various sources for "redeemer myths" are rather loosely connected in the New Testament and applied to the life of Jesus. This explains why the New Testament contains two very contrasting and conflicting portraits of Jesus: The Synoptic Jesus and the Jesus of the Gospel of John.

The problem for the Christian is two-fold:

To become familiar with such "religious myths" as taken from the various nations that preceded the birth of Jesus in order to spot them when reading the New Testament.

Having recognized such "myths" in reading the New Testament, then filter out such "religious myths" as attached to Jesus within the pages of the New Testament. Only by doing so can we have any hope of recognizing the truth connected with this man and the real role he was to play as God's representative during his life. To that quest we continue our studies.

THE SON OF GOD IS THE SUN OF GOD!

...there is nothing new under the sun. (Ecclesiastes 1:9)

Over the ages, the ancients did not simply observe the movements of the celestial bodies but personified them and created stories about them that were recreated upon the earth. Out of this polytheistic, astrological atmosphere came the "greatest story ever told," as the gospel tale is, in many places in fact, astro-theological and non-historical, recording the mythos found around the globe for eons. Thus, the Christian religion, for the most part, created and shored up by forgery, fraud and force, is in reality astro-theological more than historical and its many stories and accounts of Jesus' life in the New Testament mythical, based on many thousands of years of observation by the ancients of the movements and interrelationships of the celestial bodies and the earth, one of the favorite of which was, understandably, the sun.

One has to understand and know of these solar myths in order to read the New Testament and discern the truth from fiction about the life of Jesus as both are intermixed!

The sun figured in the stories of virtually every culture worldwide. In many places and eras, the sun was considered the most visible proxy of the divine and the most potent bestower of Spirit. It was regarded as the first entity in "the Void" and the progenitor of all life and matter. The sun also represented the Archetypal Man, as human beings were perceived as "solar entities." In addition to being a symbol of the spirit because it rises and sinks, the sun was the "soul of the world," signifying immortality, as it is eternally resurrected after "dying" or setting. It was also considered the purifier of the soul, as noted. Hence, from at least the Egyptian age down to the Gnostic Christians, the sun, along with the moon and other celestial bodies, was viewed as a "guide" into the afterlife. By the Gnostic Zoroastrians, the sun was considered "the Archimagus, that noblest and most powerful agent of divine power, who 'steps forth as a Conqueror from the top of the terrible Alborj to rule over the world which he enlightens from the throne of Ormuzd'" (Pike, Albert, The Morals and Dogma of Scottish Free Masonry, LH Jenkins, 1928, p. 612). Long before the Christian era, the sun was known as the" Son of Ormuzd," the "Mediator," while his adversary, Ahriman, (Devil) represented the darkness, which caused the fall of man (Albert Pike, The Morals and Dogman Of The Scottish Rite Freemasonary, L.H. Jenkins, 1928, p. 613).

Understand the "Sun personified as the 'Son' was understood as the Mediator to God; therefore the 'Son' was the Mediator as well." We will get to Paul and Jesus later where Paul uses the same Mediterranean concept about Yeshua/Jesus.

The sun (or Son personified) was considered the "Savior of the World," as it rose and brought light and life to the planet. It was revered for causing seeds to burst and thus giving its life for plants to grow; hence, it was seen to sacrifice itself in order to provide fertility and vegetation.

Answer for yourself: So then since the Sun sacrificed itself to provide life for mankind then likewise when the Sun was personified then the "Son" scarified himself to provide life for mankind as well...is that true? It sure was and yet is in Christianity today which comes from this same Gentile religious beliefs!

The sun is the "tutelary genius of universal vegetation," as well as the god of cultivation and the benefactor of humankind (Albert Pike, The Morals and Dogman Of The Scottish Rite Freemasonary, L.H. Jenkins, 1928, p. 475). When the sun" dies" in winter, so does the vegetation, to be "resurrected" in the spring. The first fruits, vine and grain were considered symbols of the sun's strength and were ritualistically offered to the divine luminary. The solar heroes and gods were said to be teachers as well, because agriculture, a science developed out of astronomy, freed mankind to pursue something other than food, such as other sciences and the arts.

The various personifications of the sun thus represent the "image of fertility which perpetuates and rejuvenates the world's existence (Ibid., p. 594). In their fertility aspects, the sun was the phallus, and the moon was the vulva, the male and female generative principles, the generators of all life on Earth.

Answer for yourself: Do you know just what happened when you read the above sentence? You just saw the mixture of Solar Worship, Sun Worship, and Nature Worship mixed now with Phallic worship. The triad is now complete. As you have already seen life and salvation comes with the Sun, the personified Son, the rebirth of the Sun and it's influence upon Nature and the food supply, and now with sexual reproduction and they are now all intertwined.

In the mythos, the two pillars or columns of the Celestial Temple, the mysterious Jachin and Boaz, are the sun and moon (Ibid., p. 776). Of the relationship between the sun and moon, Hazelrigg adds:

The Sun may be likened to a wire through which the planetary messages are electrically transmitted, and of which the lunar moisture is the insulation" (Hazelrigg, John, The Sun Book, Health Research, 1971, p. 56).

In the ancient world, light was the subject of awe, and the sunlight's ability to make plants grow was considered magical and miraculous. So special is light that the writer of Ecclesiastes waxes, "Light is sweet, and it is pleasant for the eyes to behold the sun." We know that it is not pleasant for the eyes to behold the direct light of the sun; it is, however, pleasant for humanity to behold the sun as it rises in the morning, bringing light and life. Indeed, the sun itself is the "face of the divine" upon which it is impossible to look.

Thus, the sun was very important to the ancients, so much so that around the world for millennia a wide variety of peoples have built solar temples, monuments and entire religions with priestesses and priests of the Sun, along with complex rituals and accoutrements. Within these religions is contained the ubiquitous mythos, a template or archetypical story that personifies the heavens and Earth, and rolls them into a drama about their interrelationship. Rather than being an entertaining but useless "fairytale," as myths are erroneously considered to be, the mythos is designed to pass along from generation to generation information vital to life on Earth, so that humans do not have to learn it repeatedly but can progress. Without the knowledge, or gnosis, of the celestial mythos, humankind would still be in caves.

The celestial mythos is complicated because the solar myth is intertwined with the lunar, stellar and terrestrial myths. In addition, some of the various celestial players were introduced later than others, and many of them took on new functions as t he focus switched from stars to moon to sun to other planets, and back again. For example, Horus is not only the sun but also the North Pole star, and his twin brother-cum-adversary, Set, represents not only darkness but also the South Pole star.

Furthermore, as time progresses and the skies change, as with the precession of the equinoxes and the movements of the sun annually through the zodiac and daily through its "houses," as well as with cataclysm, the attributes of the planetary bodies within the mythos also change. Moreover, the incorporation of the phases of moon into the mythos adds to its complexity:

The Moon, like the Sun, changed continually the track in which she crossed the Heavens, moving ever to and fro between the upper and lower limits of the Zodiac; and her different places, phases, and aspects there, and her relations with the Sun and the constellations, have been a fruitful source of mythological fables (Pike, Albert, The Morals and Dogma of Scottish Free Masonry, LH Jenkins, 1928, p. 469).

An example of the complexity of the mythos is provided by the story of the "Queen of Heaven," the goddess Isis, mother of Horus, who is not only the moon that reflects the sun, she is the original creator, as well as the constellation of Virgo. As the moon, she is the "woman clothed with the sun, and as the Virgin, she is the sun's mother." She is also Stella Mans, the "Star of the Sea," as she regulates the tides, a fact known of the moon beginning eons ago, as were the facts of the roundness of the earth and of the heliocentricity of the solar system-again, knowledge never actually "lost" and "rediscovered," as popularly portrayed.

The sun and moon were deemed to be one being in some cultures or twins in others. When eclipses occurred, it was said that the moon and sun were uniting to create lesser gods. Thus, the pantheon kept growing.

Although it is generally now considered to be "male," the sun was also regarded as female in several places, including Alaska, Anatolia, Arabia, Australia, Canaan, England, Germany, India, Japan, North America and Siberia. The sun's feminine side was, naturally, suppressed by the patriarchy. As Walker says:

The popular European tradition usually made the sun male and the moon female, chiefly to assert that ·hisº light was stronger, and that ·sheº shone only by reflected glory, symbol of the position of women in patriarchal society. However, Oriental and pre-Christian systems frequently made the sun a Goddess (Walker, Barbara, The Woman's Encyclopedia of Myths and Secrets, Harper, p. 353).

When one factors into this complexity the fertility aspect of the gods and goddesses of the grape and grain, along with the sexual imagery found in all mythologies and religions, one can understand why it has been so difficult to sort it all out.

Let us now turn our attention to the Zodiac.

INTER-TESTAMENTAL DEVELOPMENTS THAT PRODUCED THE ESSENE/QUMRAN CULT #1

THE PREMISE OF THESE THREE ARTICLES

As stated previously in preparation of these studies, it is paramount for the reader to understand why a Zadok priesthood, once rejected from their rightful position as high priests following the Maccabeean wars by their own Jewish brothers, would eventually evolve into a Pythagorean-Buddhist-Zoroastrian sect which repudiated in toto Biblical Judaism in the first century.

Many of our readers might say: "How can that be, how could the Qumran cult reject Judaism, they were Jewish"? The answer is simple; their ethnic background is not indicative of their "theological persuasions." Until one is acquainted with the "normative religious theology" of basic Biblical Judaism in the earliest centuries, then it is impossible to differentiate those "theological religious beliefs" which lay outside it. The serious error that most make is in taking for granted the "theological religious belief system" that is contained within the Qumran writings are necessarily "basic normative Judaism." Only in a systematic comparison of the "religious beliefs" of other world religions and comparing them with normative Judaism of the earliest centuries is one capable of discerning those "Qumran religious beliefs" that lay outside of "normative Judaism."

As if that was not enough at the core of importance for the Christian is how Qumran "Messianic Concepts" were changed and altered over 250 plus years whereby they moved completely away from a "human anointed redeemer" to a Cosmic Godman as we find in both the books of Enoch and Daniel. In order to understand these momental changes we must understand the events that precipitated such a radical departure by the Essene/Qumran Sects and their religious beliefs over these 250 plus years. It is to these events that shaped their theology we turn next in these three articles. Once having read the history of the "rejection of the religious purists" then you will come to understand how they literally gave up on a political Davidic redeemer and in desperation set their sights on religious concepts of Divine Cosmic Godmen soters/saviors. At other places on this web-site I detail the "religious evolution" of these Qumran separatists in their individual documents where their theological "creationism" and continual deviation from Jewish religious beliefs can be followed both in a chronological and a religious step-wise procession. This is possibly one of the most important studies for a Christian to undertake as it provides the origin of the Jewish deviation from a human Messiah to a Cosmic Sun-Godman as the Gentile nations had previously embraced due to their Sun-Worship.

It is this "Messianic theological deviation" that Gentile Christianity would eagerly accept and what is responsible for incipient idolatry that exists in Christianity today!

The staggering consequences of this radical departure of these "disillusioned religious purists" hit us squarely in the face today as Christians and followers of Jesus because many of the religious concepts ascribed to Jesus by the "Christian tradition" which cause us to live in false beliefs and idolatry today originated with this small sect of rejected Jews and their loss of hope in their own Scriptures; to combat that they simply "wrote their own...they are the sectarian writings called the Dead Sea Scrolls today."

This apocalytpic theological perspective of the Qumran separatists can now be understood when you step into their shoes and see their lack of hope against all odds as experienced by these persecuted and rejected rightful priests and religious purists.

THE EVENTS THAT PROVIDED THE ULTIMATE SEPARATION OF THE "PIOUS ONES" FROM CONSERVATIVE JUDAISM

The antecedents of the Essene sect can be traced back through a thousand years of Jewish history. Only in the light of that history can the movement really be understood. The ancestors of the Jews were a desert people. Sometime before 1200 B.C. they came pouring into Canaan and, having conquered the country, settled down and learned the way of life of the Canaanites. The details of the story are lost to us, but the central fact of the conquest and the settlement remains.

The invading Hebrews brought with them out of the desert a profound faith in their tribal god Yahweh. At first they doubtless believed in other lesser gods and spirits, as all ancient peoples did, but Yahweh, their particular deity, early became supreme for them. Far back in their tribal history they came to look upon him as their special protector and their leader in battle. At the same time they also began to look upon themselves as his people. He was their God alone and they, correspondingly, were his only people.

Coupled with their faith in their special deity was a faith in the immutability of the moral law. This law, as they conceived it, was simple, direct and elemental. It was the code of corporate life the desert nomads had developed by which to live together. To them this law was no mere set of rules by which to get along with one another; the law was Yahweh's Law, given by him to his people through Moses, their great lawgiver.

The concept of a divine law was not original with the Hebrews. Many hundreds of years before, the Babylonians had engraved in stone a picture of their god handing their great law code to Hammurabi. Other ancient peoples in the Fertile Crescent held the same belief. The difference between the Hebrews and the others was in what they did with it. Among other nations the older idea that law came from deity gradually gave way to a belief that law is only a collection of precepts drawn up by men. Among the Hebrews, however, the belief that their law was God's Law not merely continued strong, but became a central tenet of their religious faith.

Many have thought that this single factor, a belief that their law was ultimately God's Law, explains the extraordinary vitality of the religion of the Hebrews as they emerge in the pages of human history. Credit for making the law central in Israel is frequently accorded to the religious genius of Moses, and none would discount his importance both as a lawgiver and as a leader who helped to center the faith of the people in Yahweh. Others have suggested that Israel's prophets, who, century after century, called the people back from their lax ways to the pure and undefiled worship of Yahweh, should be given the credit for making this belief central in Israel.

The one incontrovertible fact with which we begin is the intransigence of Hebrew religion in the face of the religion of Canaan. As the Children of Israel emerge out of the mists of myth and the haze of legend, we find them already imbued with a passionate devotion to their tribal god Yahweh. In other respects the Hebrew invaders took up the life of the people of Canaan whom they had conquered. They learned from them the arts of civilization and in time they became a society of farmers and artisans. As a result of the close interweaving of the two cultures, the Hebrews eventually absorbed some of the elements in the religion of the Canaanites. They began to worship Baal on the high places, as the Canaanites did.

The kings of Israel and Judah, whose task it was to maintain peace and order among the people, tended to be tolerant of the worship of the gods of Canaan, and tolerant of other lapses from the old tribal religion of Yahweh. If these rulers had been permitted to follow what undoubtedly seemed to them to be a wise and statesmanlike policy, the history of Israel would not have differed from that of half a hundred other nations that rose and perished in the two millenniums before the dawn of the Christian Era. But the kings were not permitted to do so. The special quality in Israel's religion that was hers alone produced a violent reaction to the permissive policies of the secular rulers.

The protest in favor of the ancient faith of Israel, the worship of Yahweh, was voiced by the prophets, a race of men who tower above the ages. The prophets of Israel were completely intolerant of any except the most rigorous adherence to the ancient way. The well-loved story of the contest on Mount Cannel between Elijah and the priests of Baal typifies the conflict that prevailed in that period, and the slaughter of the priests of Baal by the prophet of the Lord is probably as authentic an element as may be found in the Elijah story. The prophets claimed that the statutes of the Lord God permitted no compromise whatever.

Sometimes the prophets went so far as to foment rebellion if they found that a king was neglectful of Yahweh and could not otherwise be induced to mend his ways. It was Elisha who anointed a rebel king in Israel for the purpose of overthrowing the established monarchy. The prophets were not tender in their sentiments; they were fierce in their loyalty to the old religion. They gave no quarter and asked none. Elisha went beyond Elijah in his ferocity to root out the Canaanitic religion from Israel. He wrecked his vengeance on Jezebel and caused to be slain all who had supported the tolerant regime she and Ahab her king had fostered. Amos and Hosea rose in Israel and Isaiah and Micah in Judah continued to demand that the people hold to the ancient way. The kings were denounced for their apostasy, the priests of the Temple for their emphasis upon Temple worship, and the people for their sins.

BECOMING A “CHOSEN PEOPLE” SINCE YOU HAD THE LAWS FROM GOD & NOT FROM MAN

Sometime in the course of the long contest between the prophets of Israel and her kings, a wholly unique idea, that of the chosen people, became prominent. This idea was one of the strongest weapons in the arsenal of the prophets. At least as far back as Amos, the prophets taught that the Jews were Yahweh's elect, living under a special covenant he had made with them. This covenant required the Lord to look upon Israel as his chosen people, and it required the Children of Israel to obey the Law which he had given to them by revelation through Moses.

That concept was either the cause or the result, or both, of the prophetic demand that Israel hold to her ancient faith. Both are cause and both are effect. The two ideas grew up together. Once formulated, however, the idea that Israel was God's chosen people became controlling. Through the prophets the entire history of Israel came to be viewed in the light of it. Such good fortune as Israel enjoyed was looked upon as the blessing of Yahweh, given as a reward for keeping the covenant. In the same way the sufferings and catastrophes which came to Israel were looked upon as punishment for the failure of the people to keep the covenant.

THE PROPHETIC CYCLE

The prophets turned hindsight into foresight. Their philosophy of history became a threat. Israel had been accustomed to discover past sins in a present catastrophe, but the prophets taught the people to expect future catastrophe as a result of present sin. The prophets, measuring the actions of the people by the ancient Law, found them sinful, condemned them, and then added a warning. Unless the people changed their ways, Yahweh would punish them.

The prophets were vivid and concrete in their descriptions of future catastrophe, and all too frequently the worst of their predictions came true. Thus their philosophy of history established itself in the mind of Israel.

When Samaria, the capital of the Northern Kingdom, was captured and destroyed by Shalmaneser of Assyria, it became clear to all pious Jews that the prophecies of Amos and Hosea had been terribly true. ..The destruction of Israel's capital was God's punishment of the Northern Kingdom for her sin. Consequently, when not long afterward Assyria again threatened, Hezekiah, king of Judah, became frightened. As a result of the warning of Isaiah that Judah, too, would fall if the people did not follow the Law of Yahweh, the king instituted a great many puritanical reforms designed to restore the pure and unadulterated worship of the Lord God of Israel. And to the astonishment of everyone, Jerusalem did not fall. Miraculously, so it seemed, the city was saved. Again the ability of the prophets to speak on behalf of the Lord seemed to have been demonstrated in a startling manner, and their authority was further increased.

Jeremiah, the most outspoken of all the prophets, demanded once again that Israel return to the ways of her fathers. Josiah, the king, thoroughly alarmed, made the observance of the Law yet more central in the religion of Israel. But Jeremiah could not be satisfied. He called for yet more righteousness, and continued to predict doom for Jerusalem. Even as he had foretold, doom came to the city. It fell to Nebuchadnezzar in 597 and again in 586 B.C. The words of the Lords prophet were vindicated.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF REMNANT THEOLOGY IN ISRAEL

There was a further teaching of the prophets of which we need to take notice. It emerged among the later prophets who were confronted by an exiled people, the unhappy victims of all that the earlier prophets had predicted. God would save a remnant of the people, the prophets now said. On a great day yet to come Israel would be restored, the Temple at Jerusalem rebuilt, and Yahweh would once again be properly worshiped. While the people wept by the rivers of Babylon and asked how they could sing the Lords song in a strange land, the prophets told them how and gave them new hope. God, they said, had not deserted his people. He had only tried them in the fire. Israel, his suffering servant, would be restored to its former glory. One of these prophets was Ezekiel, who had trained as a priest at Jerusalem before its fall. He laid heavy emphasis on liturgical practices and thereby helped to keep the little group of exiles loyal to the religion of their fathers.

In 538, Cyrus of Persia issued an edict by which the Jews were permitted to return to their homeland. The record is obscure, but apparently only a few of the most zealous took advantage of it. They had no great means themselves, and they found the land desolate, and Jerusalem but a heap of debris. They erected a shrine on the site of Solomon's Temple, but attempted nothing more than that.

But again the voice of prophecy was heard, calling upon the people to keep to the ancient way. Haggai, a layman, addressed his words to the governor of Israel and the high priest. “Thus says the Lord,” he cried, “the people say the time has not come to rebuild the house of the Lord. . . . Is it a time for you yourselves to dwell in your paneled houses while this house lies in ruins? . . . Consider how you have fared. Go up to the hills and bring wood and build the house, that I may appear in my glory, says the Lord.” The work was begun at once as a result of his preaching.

Zechariah, a priest, took up the work of exhorting the people, and the newly rebuilt Temple was dedicated about 515 B.C. Still the work of the prophets continued. Still they continued to demand full allegiance to the religion of Yahweh. Worship was now centered in the Temple once more, but the priesthood grew corrupt, and Malachi arose to condemn them. When Nehemiah bad rebuilt the walls of the city, Ezra, a Babylonian scribe, made a new demand that the religion of Israel be purified by dissolving all mixed marriages. The expected reaction arose against this kind of exclusiveness. It is expressed in the books of Jonah and Ruth, both of which are designed to show that Yahweh is a God of all peoples and that his concern reaches beyond the Jews.

So the ancient “Prophetic Cycle” continued between the Prophets continual warning and rebuke of Israel when they sinned. Whenever Israel grew lax in her loyalty to the Lord God Yahweh, a prophet arose in her midst and in the name of the Lord called the people back to the beliefs and the practices of an earlier day. The prophets came from every walk of life, and they preached many and varied doctrines, but a single central theme is found in all of their messages. Israel is the Lords chosen people and a covenant exists between the two. Yahweh will keep his part of the covenant if Israel keeps hers. The task of the prophets was to call upon Israel to keep the covenant, and, when she did not, to denounce priests, kings and people, and to warn them of the wrath that will follow upon their failure. It was out of this vigorous, puritanical, censorious, yet high-minded moral and spiritual stream of thought in Israel that the Essene movement and the Dead Sea Scrolls eventually came.

THE THEOCRACY OF ISRAEL WAS SHORT LIVED

According to Jewish tradition, prophecy died out after 400 B.C. Apparently there was little in the religion of Israel after that time to which even a zealot might take exception. For more than two hundred years Israel lived at peace with herself and her neighbors under the rule of foreign overlords, Persia, Greece and Egypt. Her form of government was a theocracy, all her affairs, both civil and religious, being in the control of the Temple priesthood at Jerusalem. Her rulers were tolerant, and she was free to follow the precepts of her ancient faith as long as she remained subservient and paid the stipulated annual tribute.

When the empire of Alexander the Great broke up following his death in 323 B.C.E., the control of Palestine fell to Egypt. Again Israel became a sort of buffer state between two great rivals, as she had been in the days of the prophets. Now, however, the contending parties were Egypt in the south, ruled by the Ptolemies, and Syria in the north, ruled by the Seleucids. These two nations were political rivals, but culturally they were similar, for after Alexander, most of the civilized world sought to conform to the culture of Hellas. Greek became the international language and Greek ways and modes of thought were everywhere adopted by cultivated people. It was a period of great commercial activity and of great mobility among people, particularly the well-to-do.

During this period, the third century B.C.E., many Jews went abroad to live and trade. A large colony grew up at Alexandria, the capital city of the Ptolemies. There amidst the cosmopolitan life of a great metropolis, they, like the rest of the people, accepted Greek ways and even gave up their native Hebrew language. Many of the Jews were assimilated into the population of the city. Others, however, remained loyal to their own religion, although they adopted Greek ways, spoke and wrote Greek, and even translated their Bible into Greek and altered many of the Hebrew passages from the Masoretic text to conform with Gentile Sun-Worship. This translation, known as the Septuagint, eventually became the Old Testament of the Christians.

Thus Israel increasingly felt the impact upon her ancient faith of the sophisticated Hellenistic culture of the ancient world. As a truly international civilization spread throughout the West, cultivated Jews more and more felt the limitations imposed upon them by their exacting religious culture. Outside Palestine they adapted themselves to it in various ways. In Palestine, and in particular at Jerusalem, however, there was no adaptation and no compromise between the two ways of life. The old conflict which had called forth the wrath of the prophets faced Israel once again. And again Israel had to choose between loyalty to her ancient faith and the demands of a new cosmopolitan culture. It would be the tension between the desire to remain faithful to Yahweh and His Covenant requirements and the liberalism that came with Hellenism that would provide the stage from which the Essene movement would surface.

THE CRISIS OF HELLENISM...ANTIOCHUS EPIPHANES...& THE CORRUPTION OF THE PRIESTHOOD IN ISRAEL

The conflict reached a crisis in 175 B.C.E., when Antiochus Epiphanes came to the Syrian throne. Syria had by now wrested control of Palestine from Egypt. Antiochus was by conviction a determined Hellenizer and he believed that the forcing of Greek culture upon the various peoples of his empire would help to consolidate it. With the backing of certain elements in Jerusalem, he marched on the city and took it amid great carnage. He installed as high priest a "son of Aaron" with Hellenistic sympathies who thereupon undertook to enforce the policies of the Syrian monarch upon his own people. Israel knew that their prior captivity had occurred because they had lapsed into idolatry and abandoned the Laws of God and likewise knew that the installment of a Hellenistic high priest was ill tidings of future judgment from God.

Now the Hellenizing of Judea began in earnest. The high priest whose given name was Joshua took the Greek name Jason, began the introduction of Greek customs, built a gymnasium, introduced Greek games, Greek garb, and the Greek language. Many of the younger Jews eager to be rid of the ways of their fathers and to become like other people, were converted. Meanwhile, a deep and growing resentment was engendered among most of the Jews and particularly among those outside of Jerusalem who were unaffected by the broadening tendencies of urban life.

The true attitude of Antiochus Epiphanes became clear when he deposed Jason and put one Menelaus in his place. Menelaus had gone to the Syrian court and offered the king a higher price for the post of high priest than Jason had been willing to pay. Under Menelaus, the Hellenizing process was increased and resentment toward everything Syrian mounted to the point of controlled fury.

At this point war broke out between Egypt and Syria again. This, of course, meant civil war for Palestine once more. The pro-Egyptian Jews, fanatically loyal to the faith of their fathers, fought the pro-Syrian Jews who favored the Hellenizing of Jewish culture. The main body of the Jews were pro-Egyptian and fiercely hated their Syrian rulers. This antagonized Antiochus, who in the course of subduing his rebellious pro-Egyptian subjects, slaughtered unmercifully the people of Jerusalem and entered the Holy of Holies in the Temple, an outrage to the Jewish mind. As a final incredible offense to the Jews, he built an altar to Zeus on top of the Altar of Sacrifice in the Temple and then committed the supreme sacrilege of sacrificing a hog upon it.

The details in regard to the wars that followed need not concern us. The pattern is already familiar in the story of the times of the prophets. The old division persisted between those who favored cosmopolitan tendencies and those who demanded that Israel hold to the ways of her fathers. Again, as before, the internal religious struggle between the Jews themselves was complicated by the ambition of foreign powers to gain control of Palestine and to make her a vassal state. In the days of the ancient prophets, the contenders had been Egypt, Assyria and Babylonia. Now the struggle was between Egypt and Syria and subsequently Rome. Israel again was caught between the hostile armies. When at last the struggle was concluded, Israel had ceased to exist as a nation, the Essene sect had come and gone, and Christianity was already on the way toward the conquest of the Roman Empire.

With Antiochus Epiphanes as ruler of Syria and the master of Israel, with his Greek-minded puppet Menelaus holding the office of high priest, all Jewish practices were outlawed. It is impossible to conceive what that meant to pious Jews unless we keep in mind the long history of devout allegiance to the Law which lay behind them and the intensity of their conviction that Yahweh had made them his chosen people and that they must resolutely follow his precepts as recorded in their sacred books of the Law. Antiochus men also went into the villages around Jerusalem where, accompanied by Jews of the Syrian party, they set up pagan altars. All Judea seethed in resentment and yearned to be free of so intolerable a yoke.

THE RISE OF THE MACCABEES AND THE EMERGENCE OF THE HASIDIM

The Jews could bear no more. Under the leadership of an old priest named Mattathias, who had retired to the country, they again rose in rebellion. Before Syria had the chance to intervene, the rebellion took the form of a civil war of a truly fratricidal nature. The rebels turned upon and slaughtered every apostate Hellenized Jew whom they could lay their hands upon. No one who had cooperated with the Syrian rulers was safe from this reign of terror. When the Syrians attempted to put down the rebellion, the Jews achieved dramatic success against them. When Mattathias died, his eldest son Judas became the leader of the revolt. He struck with such force and fury that he became known as Judas Maccabaeus, that is, "the hammerer," the name by which he is known to history. The wars which he and his brothers carried on are called the Maccabean Wars.

Judas first act was to cleanse the Temple at Jerusalem. He threw down the altar to Zeus and built a new one in it place. Sacrifice in accordance with ancient Jewish custom and practice was instituted once more. The rejoicing in Israel knew no bounds. The Lord had redeemed his people. The Temple and the high altar at Jerusalem had been restored to its former place in the religion of the people. Little Israel had repulsed the great Syrian Empire. A treaty of peace was signed, granting freedom of worship to Israel once more. Thus the rebels had won back the privilege of following the religion of their fathers without the interference of Syrian overlords. They had not actually wanted political independence, nor had they in fact achieved it. They were still subject to Syria as they had previously been subject to Egypt. But now they had the same religious freedom they had enjoyed under the Ptolemies.

Apparently, the most pious of the Jews wanted nothing more than this. It was a matter of no consequence who governed them so long as they were free to worship at the Temple and to follow the Law as they believed they should. There can be no other explanation for the fact that at this point, after religious liberty had been granted to the Jews, the most devout of them, known as the Hasidim, suddenly refused to support Judas, even though they had been his staunch allies in the war with the Syrians and quite possibly had been the instigators of the rebellion in the first instance.

As the lines of cleavage between the Hellenists and their opponents deepened, this group of men had emerged in Israel. The word Hasidim means "the pious." Our sources of information in regard to them are scanty, but it is clear that they were a religious, rather than a political, group. Theologically and probably socially conservative, they tried to live in accordance with the precepts of the ancient Law of their people. Their movement was a reaction to the increasing tendency toward Hellenism that resulted both from the pressures Syria brought to bear on the Jews and also the desire on the part of some of them to adopt the ways of the Greeks. Their course, apparently, was to hold strictly to the ancient piety themselves, rather than try to force the whole populace to do so. In this sense, there was an element of hopelessness in their program. Despairing of keeping all Israel loyal to the ways of their fathers, the Hasidim proposed only that they themselves should remain loyal to Yahweh's ancient covenant.

It is difficult to believe that the Hasidim would have refused continued support of Judas had they been able to see the dire consequences of their withdrawal from the political scene. Undoubtedly, like a great many religious purists, the Hasidim were theoretical rather than practical men. Tender of sentiment, they hated bloodshed, although they had indulged in it themselves when driven to desperation by the abominations of Antiochus Epiphanes. Now that their goal was achieved and the Law had been reinstated, they wanted no more earthly conflict and fratricidal strife. The hasidim, for the reasons enumerated above, withdrew from society "politically" and "religiously" and lived unto themselves. This basically left the Maccabees to the mercy of the Syrians abroad and to the Hellenists at home. They became a "religious" entity unto themselves. Perhaps they were thinking of the theocracy under the Ptolemies. Perhaps they were harking back to the philosophy of Isaiah and Jeremiah who had counseled cooperation with, or neutrality toward, the foreign overlord.

Most probably the Hasidim withdrew their support from Judas, once he had cleansed the Temple and re-established the ancient Mosaic Law in Israel, because they were millennialists. They were thinking of a kingdom not of this world. They were looking for the coming of the Day of Yahweh, the time of divine intervention when Israel would be redeemed of the Lord because the people had kept the covenant. Now was the time for them to put away the sword and by the strictest possible observance of the Law to prepare for the coming of the end of days.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE BOOK OF DANIEL AND THE HASIDIM'S EXPECTATION OF IMMINENT DIVINE INTERVENTION & THEIR SALVATION

In order to understand the mood and temper of those times in Israel, you only need turn to the Book of Daniel. It is in that climate of opinion that the Maccabean Wars were fought and that the remarkable series of victories over the Syrian Empire were won. The Book of Daniel appeared in December, 165 B.C.E, and had undoubtedly been written just before that time. The book can be dated exactly because the history it contains, though vague at first, gains increasing clarity and accuracy of detail down through December, 165, after which time the details are simply wrong.

The Book of Daniel must have caused a sensation when it first appeared. In part it was narrative, relating the steadfastness of Daniel and his brothers in the face of persecution under Nebuchadnezzar and how the Lord intervened to protect them. The major part of the book, however, tells of a series of dreams of the future which Daniel had. In these passages are to be found veiled references to the time of the persecution of the Jews under Antiochus Epiphanes. Then it relates that at the "time of the end," when the Jewish people as a whole will be made to suffer in a similar manner, the Lord will again intervene on their behalf. The parallels to the Maccabean period, stated in allegorical fashion, are as dear to those who are familiar with the history of that period as they were to the Jews of the second century B.C.E.

There is probably no better explanation of the phenomenal success of the Jews in the Maccabean Wars than the Book of Daniel and the belief it generated among the Jews that the Lord God would intervene on their behalf if they kept the faith and the Law of God. For this to happened the people needed a high priesthood of such a holy nature that it would lead the people by example. Thus the Book of Daniel induced an apocalyptic mood among the people and made them fight with fanatical ferocity and bravery. Obviously the Hasidim accepted this philosophy, although they believed that fidelity to the Law rather than the use of the sword would bring about the promised salvation of Israel.

THE CONTINUED CORRUPTION OF THE PRIESTHOOD AND THE EXTERMINATION OF THE HASIDIM

Their withdrawal of support came at a dramatic moment. Syria, as a result of her treaty of peace with Judas, was still the nominal ruler of Judea, although Judas was the ruler in fact. An issue arose over the high priesthood. The Syrian king had appointed one Alcimus to the post vacated by Menelaus, the hated high priest "who had the fury of a cruel tyrant and the rage of a wild beast," and who had been exiled and was later executed. Judas and the Maccabees, however, opposed the appointment because Alcimus was a Hellenist and because they were not willing to grant to Syria the right to appoint the high priest, a right they held to belong to Israel alone.

In order to see that Alcimus was duly installed in office, the Syrian monarch sent an army into Judea. Judas wanted to drive the army out of his country as he had so successfully driven out every Syrian army that had entered Palestine since the time he had taken command of the nations affairs thirteen years before. Alcimus, like any political leader, attempted to undermine the position of Judas by assuring the Hasidim that he, Alcimus, would support their purist policies, even though he was by conviction a Hellenist. The Hasidim were satisfied. Dismissing as unwarranted and irrelevant the forebodings of Judas and the Maccabees, they recognized Alcimus as the legitimate high priest. All further resistance on the part of the Maccabees thus became useless, and Alcimus was installed by the Syrians.

Alcimus thereupon executed sixty of the Hasidim. The record is obscure. His motives are not clear to us. Obviously he intended to placate the Syrian monarch who had suffered so much at the bands of the revolting Jews. But what had these men done to provoke their execution by the high priest? Was the charge sedition? Alcimus doubtless made them appear as enemies of the state because of their determined opposition to all Hellenism. He presumably singled out the helpless Hasidim, who now could not and probably would not rebel, rather than the still dangerous Maccabees.

It is risky to make too much out of an event so lost in the shadows of time. But we may assume that the execution of sixty of the Hasidim by a man who had promised to support them was a terrible blow to these religious purists. It was too late now for them to join forces with Judas and the Maccabees whom they had deserted. Sixty of their beloved had been killed by the man they had trusted. Where was the Lord God whom they had expected to intervene and save sixty of his most holy? This marked the end of their movement and we never hear of them afterward.

OUT OF THE ASHES OF THE HASIDIM EMERGE THE QUMRAN SECT

During the period preceding the desecration of the Temple by Antiochus Epiphanes, apostasy to Hellenism had become rampant; and, to combat it, a group had arisen known as the Zadokites and later as the Chasidim (Hasidim, Assidaeans). Zadok had been the high priest in the time of David. We must realize that these patriots of 185-160 underwent a complex evolution and division into parties during the ensuing decades. The old name continued as a badge of honor; and therefore we find both the Essenes/Qumran sect and the antithetical Sadducees calling themselves the Sons of Zadok as late as 60 B.C. The Sadducees were the nobles, the wealthy, the educated, who composed the dominant class. They rejected the Zoroastrian-Pythagorean eschatology of the Qumran sect and were totally unaware of any social injustice. With the disappearance of the Hasidim the story of the Essenes/Qumran sect begins. The Hasidim were not Essenes, and the Essenes were not the Hasidim. Each was a distinct movement. Yet, insofar as we can judge from the scanty evidence that has come down to us, the two were so close in their purpose and their general outlook that we are justified in saying that the Hasidim were progenitors of the Essenes. The Essenes took up the attempt to maintain the ancient piety of Israel that the Hasidim had begun. They carried Hasidist piety to the ultimate extreme of withdrawal from human society in order to preserve it.

THE EMERGENCE OF THREE JEWISH PARTIES

During the early Maccabaean campaigns, the original Sons of Zadok, who were simply intensely Judaistic, split into two divisions:

- The political nationalists, or Sadducees;
- The religious enthusiasts, or the Hasidim

It would be these religious enthusiasts, the Hasidim, who would:

- Absorb the Zoroastrian eschatology
- Remade the Jewish Messiah in the image of the Saoshyant
- Engrafted the doctrines of hell, heaven, immortality, resurrection, and the last judgment upon the traditional Judaism.

It was a Chasid who wrote the last six chapters of Daniel, which became the model for Revelation. The older portions of The Book of Enoch were composed by Chasids, as were other documents ever after held sacred by the Essenes.

While discussing the reign of Jonathan, 160-143 B.C.E., who became also high priest in 152, Josephus declares that during this period (about 145 B.C.E.), the three great religious sects, which were really political parties, became established among the Jews. He declares that the Sadducees, like the Epicureans, denied the existence of providence and believed in free will; the Pharisees, like the Stoics, believed in determinism; but the Essenes, like the Pythagoreans, taught the doctrine of necessity or fate (Josephus, Antiq., XIII, v, 9).

THE HASIDIM SPLIT INTO PHARISEES AND THE QUMRAN SECT/ESSENES

What happened was this: the Sadducees became more conservative economically and politically, but less religious; the Chasidim split into two divisions, the Pharisees and the Qumran sect/Essenes. As the last two matured between 145 and l00 B.C.E., their divergence, in spite of their common Zoroastrianism, became wider and deeper. Whereas the Essenes/Qumran sect more and more abandoned the temporal, the Pharisees, becoming worldly, sought power, wealth, and popular influence. The Pharisees became the spokesmen for the people, and the Essenes the depository of extreme religious fervor.

In no other place do we find such religious disagreement among the Pharisees and the Qumran sect as found in their doctrines concerning the Messiah:

- The Pharisees envisioned a world in which the Jews would rule over a great empire to be established by their human Messiah, the son of David;
- The Essenes considered themselves the Elect Ones of the Supreme God, chosen by Him to rule over an apocalyptic kingdom of saints to be inaugurated by the supernatural Messiah (Angel-Messiah) of Moral Judgment.

The Pharisees accepted and developed the Temple worship, while the Essenes, rejecting the ritual of blood sacrifice, established a severe and all-encompassing discipline based upon faith, sacraments, and holy works. While the Pharisees externalized religion into an elaborately formalized discipline, the Essenes made it a way of life, requiring profound moral regeneration intended to govern every overt act and secret thought. That many of these characteristics already existed by the time of John Hyrcanus in 134 B.C., we can scarcely doubt. Josephus declares that the "Pharisees have delivered to the people a great many observances . . . which are not written in the laws of Moses and" which "the Sadducees reject," who "are able to persuade none but the rich," while "the Pharisees have the multitude on their side" (Josephus, Antiq., XIII, x, 6). Eventually, the latter elaborated thirty-nine classes of labor forbidden on the Sabbath, and made endless subdivisions under each. Various schools of religious quibbling arose, which debated the finest points of interpretation. For example, a woman could untie certain knots on the Sabbath, but only if she could do it with one hand. A light night be extinguished to exorcise an evil spirit, but not for the sake of thrift. And so it went.

THE REJECTION OF THE TRUE SONS OF ZADOK AND THE CONTINUED CORRUPTION & HELLENIZATION OF THE PRIESTHOOD

We are now in a period about fifty years after Alcimus treacherously slew sixty of the Hasidim. The intervening years had seen bitter fratricidal strife among the Jews and almost constant warfare with Syria and occasionally with Egypt as well. Nevertheless, the Maccabean uprising succeeded, at least to a certain degree, and as a result, Israel became an independent self-governing state.

After the installation of Alcimus as high priest all the fears of Judas Maccabaeus in regard to him proved to be justified. We have seen the bitter disillusionment of the Hasidim whose withdrawal of support from Judas enabled Syria to elevate Alcimus to the office of high priest. Most of the rest of Israel felt equally bitter. While the Syrian kings kept the pact made with Israel at that time, which provided for freedom of worship, Syria never gave up her claim to rule Palestine, and never ceased her effort to reduce the Maccabees to the status of vassals of the Syrian crown.

Consequently, a contest for power between Judas Maccabaeus and Alcimus began almost at once. Soon Alcimus appealed to the Syrian king for help. Another army was sent into Palestine, but Judas met and defeated the Syrian forces in a pitched battle during which he lost his life. Alcimus, now in full control of the civil affairs of Israel, took the opportunity to avenge himself on his enemies, the followers of Judas.

Although he was a "son of Zadok," a descendant of one of Israel's priestly families, and although on accepting the office of high priest he had agreed to support the policies of the Hasidim, Alcimus now revealed himself as a true Hellenist and he relaxed the observance of the Torah, and went so far as to throw down the walls of the inner court of the Temple at Jerusalem. But he misjudged the temper of the average Jew. While there were Hellenists enough among them to constitute a strong and warlike party, the rank and file of the Children of Israel was outraged. In their veins flowed the blood of generations of men passionately devoted to the following of the Law and they would tolerate no significant change in the old ways. When Alcimus died soon after, his death was generally regarded by the pious as the judgment of God upon him.

In the hills of Judea, meanwhile, Jonathan, another of the Maccabee brothers, had raised a new rebel force from the remnants of the army of Judas. Intermittent strife continued, the war with the Syrians went on, and the land knew no peace. Always Syrian interests were supported by the Hellenists, who were to be found largely among the priestly families of Jerusalem and who sought political power for themselves through Syrian intervention.

Jonathan, the Maccabee, profiting by the experience of his brother Judas, would permit no one to be appointed high priest. The powers and perquisites of the office were so great that his own position as civil ruler would most certainly have been jeopardized. The office of the high priest remained vacant for six years, but, because the religion of Israel required such an official, Jonathan, a non-Zadok, was persuaded to accept the position himself and he appointed himself high priest. Simon, the last of the Maccabee brothers, followed Jonathan as both high priest and ruler of the state. John Hyrcanus, his son, succeeded him in both offices, although not without some difficulty.

What you need to understand is that there were rightful "priest" ready to assume that position but were prevented from doing so by Jonathan, Simeon, and John Hyrcanus. This alienated the true Zadok priests and these disenfranchised priests will become the group of religious zealots known today as the Qumran sect/Essenes.

John Hyrcanus was the first of the so-called Hasmoneans. Like his father, Simon Maccabaeus, and his uncles, Jonathan and Judas, John Hyrcanus was a devout Jew and intensely loyal to the ancient traditions of Israel. Following the practice established by his uncle Jonathan, he took the office of high priest, and like him, he also refrained from assuming the title of king.

SEPARATION AMONG THE JEWS: EMERGENCE OF THE SADDUCEES AND THE PHARISEES

Party alignments at this time continued very strong. On the one hand there were still the pro-Syrian Hellenistic Jews, and on the other, the devout conservative pious Jews, spiritual descendants of the Hasidim, who would permit no deviation from the old way. What comes next is crucial to understand! Both parties, the Hellenistic Jews (Sadducees) and the descendants of the Hasidim (Pharisees and ultra strict Pharisees called later the Qumran sect) boasted many members who were "Sons of Zadok," who, by virtue of their descent from Zadok, high priest under David, could claim the right to the high priesthood. In the middle were the Maccabees, the war party and the patriots, the rulers of the state, who strove to maintain the political independence of the little kingdom and to preserve inviolate the ancient religion of Israel.

By this time the men of the Hellenistic party had come to be known as the "Sadducees," a name derived from "Zadok." Why they chose the name we can only guess. There were quite as many sons of Zadok in the Pharisee and Qumran sect opposing them. Since they Sadducees were the liberalizing party, they probably took a name which suggested the authority and propriety that proper descent conferred upon them.

As stated, one of the opponents of the Hellenizing Sadducees were known as the Pharisees, a name which means the "Separators It was obviously an epithet. Those who draw aside from the main body of men and strive to be holier than the common man, almost invariably elicit jeers for their efforts. Those who would not fight in support of the Maccabees and who would permit no modification in the archaic Jewish ways apparently came to be looked upon as "separators." The Pharisees were thus the party in John Hyrcanus time that strove to hold Israel to the old prophetic ideal as had the Hasidim in the time of Judas Maccabaeus. Louis Finkeistein, the leading authority on the subject, says the Pharisees were the spiritual children of the Hasidim.

By the same token they were also the spiritual children of the prophets. There was, however, one conspicuous difference between the Pharisees and the ancient prophets. The Pharisees, even in the days when the movement was young, were a party which enjoyed considerable political influence in Israel. John Hyrcanus, devout Jew that he was, threw in his lot with the Pharisees (at least for a short time), and they, therefore, had the opportunity in accordance with their own lights of enforcing the Torah. The prophets had usually been lonely figures who in the name of Yahweh denounced the priest, king and people alike. Sometimes they enjoyed royal favor, but more often they did not. During this period, when prophecy was thought long since to have ceased in Israel the circumstances were curiously reversed, for under John Hyrcanus, the Pharisees who espoused the old prophetic ideal enjoyed the approval and the backing of the ruler of the state.

THE REJECTION OF THE PHARISEES BY JOHN HYRCANUS

But John Hyrcanus was to abandon them eventually. Josephus tells us that some time during the course of his rule John Hyrcanus gave a dinner for the Pharisees. When the feasting was over he invited their suggestions and criticisms upon the godliness of his rule. All the Pharisees praised him except a single Pharisee, Eleazar, who refused to join in the commendations and demanded that Hyrcanus give up the office of high priest (remember he was a non-Zadok and the religious zealots and purists required a Zadok high priest in hopes of ensuring no future chastisement from God). "Since thou desirest to know the truth," he said, "if thou wilt be righteous in earnest, lay down the high priesthood and content thyself with the civil government of the people." The record is by no means clear, but Eleazar seems to have felt that it was wrong for a ruler whose hands were stained with the blood of battle to offer sacrifice at the high altar in the Temple. Josephus also indicates that this lone objector voiced some doubts about Hyrcanus true descent from Aaron and Zadok.

The spirit of prophecy was apparently not yet dead in Israel, for the demand of Eleazar was in the true prophetic tradition. The reaction of Hyrcanus was according to tradition also. He switched his loyalty from the Pharisees to the Sadducees, set aside the Pharisaic religious ordinances, and forbade the observance of them. We can readily understand the position of each. Eleazar would not compromise with what he regarded as the religion of Yahweh. John Hyrcanus, on the other hand, found it impossible to please such religious perfectionists as Eleazar. Nor could he give up the office of high priest, thus jeopardizing his rule in Israel. The Maccabees before him had learned that lesson.

Another consideration probably played a part in the abandoning of the Pharisees by Hyrcanus. While the Pharisees enjoyed the support of the multitude, the Sadducees were still strong. Tolerant and cosmopolitan in their outlook, they were a far more congenial group than the zealous Pharisees and their demand for the enforcement of rigid ordinances. Hyrcanus would naturally have considered switching his support to the Sadducees for a long time. Thus when Hyrcanus' dinner for the Pharisees was concluded, these religious zealots (Pharisees/ultra purists from the Hasidim), who had enjoyed political power and public favor, suddenly found themselves without either. They who were the inheritors of the exacting tradition of the Hasidim now saw their old enemies, the Hellenists, back in power.

This turn of events must have been humiliating to the Pharisees. More than that, it must have filled them with dismay. Devout believers in the Law, and accustomed to the use of political power to enforce it, they now found themselves in much the position of the Hasidim who fifty years earlier, after accepting Alcimus as high priest, were turned upon by him. Hyrcanus sudden transfer of support to the Sadducees must have aroused memories in some of the older Pharisees, who may actually have witnessed the debacle under Alcimus.

THE WAY OF WITHDRAWAL...THE REMNANT...THE ONLY ANSWER

When they had been abandoned by Hyrcanus, these "rejected separatists" must have realized that the way chosen by the Hasidim, the way of withdrawal, was now the only alternative open to them. No longer could they hope to bring all Israel to a strict following of the Law through the exercise of civil authority. Both in thought and practice, the Hellenizing process had gone too far. Consequently, in the midst of the easy urbanity of Jerusalem, there was nothing for them to do but to continue to try to follow the Law themselves, leaving others to do as they chose. They alone, if necessary, would keep Israel's ancient covenant with Yahweh. At the same time they may have wondered if Temple worship itself was any longer valid, if there was doubt about the Aaronic descent of the high priest. It was probably during this period, when they tried to separate themselves from the ceremonial uncleanness of the rest of the people, that the inheritors of the old Hasidist philosophy began to be called Pharisees, or "Separators" by their countrymen.

The Pharisees, of course, did not completely succeed in their endeavor. They were surely forced to make some concessions in spite of their best intentions. It is difficult for religious groups to continue ancient religious prescriptions in the complicated society in which they live. As time passes, such rules become more archaic. The difficulty of living in a community that does not observe them increases. Only in a separate community, where all think alike and all desire to submit to the same regulations, can such practice be continued successfully.

We may be confident then that slowly and inevitably the Pharisees were forced to make a choice. At last there came a time when it was clear to these Pharisees and proto-Hasidim that they had either to compromise their ideals and religious beliefs or to withdraw from society. Apparently there was a division on this issue, and out of this division among the Pharisees the Qumran/Essene sect seems to have come into existence.

One needs to understand the Qumran sect/Essenes were more than one ideology; they consisted of rejected Zadoks from the time of the Hasmoneans as well as staunch Pharisee separatists like those rejected by John Hyrcanus.

Those among these "religious separatists" who felt that it was possible to stay in Jerusalem and remain loyal to the Law became the real founders of the sect which still bears their name. Traditionally, the Pharisees were the party in Israel that sought to remain loyal to the ancient Law and yet by interpretation to show how it was possible to do so in an urban and changing society. The same exacting adherence to the ideal, interpreted in accordance with the practical problems of living, continued to characterize the best Pharisaic thought throughout the existence of the group.

Those who eventually withdrew to the desert to join the already existing community of "rejected Zadoks" and who are known to history as the Qumran Sect/Essenes were of the temper that tolerates no deviation from the old way. While the modifiers argued that their modifications were proper interpretations and emendations of the ancient faith, the literalists insisted that any such attempt was a compromise or an out-and-out departure, which could under no circumstances be permitted. It would be men of such temper who made up the group within the Pharisees that eventually became the Qumran Sect/Essenes.

SO WHY MOVE TO THE DESERT?

Josephus records no such division among the Pharisees after John Hyrcanus dinner. If we grant the likelihood of such a division after he switched his support to the Sadducees, we still need to explain why and how that split became so serious that the most extreme members of the Pharisaic party went to live in the desert by themselves. It seems unlikely that when the purists discovered that they could not bring all the Pharisees to their position, they would then have stomped off into the Judean wilderness. Such a decision would have come only after a long time, after they argued among themselves at length as to what course to pursue next. To explain their voluntarily undertaking the rigors of life in the desert, something more is required than the loss of political power and internal disagreement.

Again we find an answer in the history of Israel. While Josephus does not explicitly say that a new wave of Hellenization set in after John Hyrcanus threw his support to the Sadducees, he does record that the Pharisaic ordinances were repealed and that their observance was forbidden. This would mean the persecution of those who would not conform. Furthermore, old wounds heal slowly and the zeal of the Judaizers in rooting out the Hellenizers during the early Maccabean period must have left many a granulating wound among the members of the Hellenistic party that they were glad of the opportunity to avenge. We may certainly assume that enough reprisals followed to have been a source of suffering to many of the Pharisees. Persecution, together with the official repealing of the old regulations, would have made them yet more difficult to follow even by those predisposed to do so.

One must remember the time of these events (135-100 B.C.E.).

It would be under the continued persecution and rejection, along with the death of their Teacher of Righteousness that the religious purists would slowly drift away from Biblical Judaism and that explains that their religious doctrines change as found within their writings.

There was another factor. The expectation of the end of days, so clearly voiced in the Book of Daniel, increasingly dominated the thinking of the most religious of Israel's people at this time. Soon after the Book of Daniel made its appearance, the Book of Enoch appeared. Its purpose was to justify the ways of God to men and in particular to explain why God permitted so many things to happen which, by human standards of divine justice, should never have occurred. To achieve this purpose the author of Enoch, making liberal use of the Book of Daniel, confidently predicted the end of the world. At that time, he said, God will judge the world. The just shall live forever in peace and the wicked shall be destroyed.

This view was a reflection of a much more widely prevailing notion that history was cyclic rather than linear, and that the end of one of history's great cycles was at hand. A sense of impending doom was in the air. The Judgment Day seemed not to be far off. For those who believed in its coming, it was important above all else to be ready.

That this frame of mind was central with the Essenes we know from their own literature. This group of extreme purists went into the desert, among other reasons, to prepare for the coming of the Judgment Day, the Day of Yahweh, which they thought was imminent. If Israel, God's chosen people, would not prepare themselves for that awful time, these men at least, as a self-appointed latter-day remnant of Israel, determined to do so. Alone in the wilderness, they proposed to live according to the strictest possible interpretation of the ancient Law of their people.

They found in the writings of the Prophet Isaiah the suggestion that they go into the Judean desert: "In the wilderness prepared the way of the Lord." They had tried to prepared for the Lord's coming in Jersualem and they had failed. In the Scripture they found an answer. The Hebrew word, translated as "wilderness,: in this passage, means not merely a dry and desolate region, but also the kind of depression in the earth in which the Dead Sea plain lies. We must not conclude that these Qumran sect/Essene "separatists" went into the Judean desert only because of this passage in Isaiah. It probably did not acquire full prophetic meaning for them until after they had actually begun their life there. But the clear import of the words could hardly have escaped them while they were making up their minds. All the above factors must be considered in understanding why the Qumran desert was to be the new home of this apocalytpic cult.

Another factor ties into our story. John Hyrcanus was an able ruler. Israel enjoyed internal peace and prosperity under him. With such favorable conditions a religious movement would be able to develop and reach a point when at last it would be strong enough to establish itself in the desert. Conditions of war would make this development impossible.

It was a significant day for the world when the old uncompromising Pharisee Eleazar openly challenged the right of a political ruler of Israel to occupy the office of high priest. When the monarch refused to yield to his demands and withdrew all political support from the Pharisees, they were left with only such cause for continued existence as the power of their own religious convictions might call forth. From then on until the end of the reign of Alexander Jannaeus the Pharisaic party in Israel was forced to confine itself to religious and moral ambitions. After the manner of the prophets, some if not all of the Pharisees now stood apart from the organized Temple worship at Jerusalem and apart from the government of John Hyrcanus. In the name of the Lord God Yahweh, they henceforth dared to criticize both.

The reader is encouraged to understand that it was the peculiar character of Israels long history and dedication to the Laws of God that made them a "chosen people" that produced the crisis between John Hyrcanus and Eleazar. Had these two men never lived, the issue would surely have crystallized in some other way.

The Qumran Sect/Essene movement had its roots in one of the ancient and one of the high traditions of a great people. Its thought, mood and temper belonged to the greatest days Israel had known, the days of the prophets. The prophetic spirit was rekindled again in Eleazar. It burned again in the hearts of the strictest among the Pharisees, who by all human standards were already strict enough in their loyalty to the old way. They were like the prophets in the intransigence of their demand that Israel, as God's chosen people, remain loyal to their covenant with him. For this reason, when John Hyrcanus dinner was over, currents were set to flowing out of which the Qumran Sect/Essene Sect eventually emerged.

INTER-TESTAMENTAL DEVELOPMENTS THAT PRODUCED THE ESSENE/QUMRAN CULT #2

The great antagonist of the Teacher of Righteousness was the Wicked Priest. Our knowledge of him, like that of the Teacher of Righteousness, is very limited, for in the Scroll literature that has so far come to light he is mentioned only in the Habakkuk Commentary and in the Commentary on Psalm 37 in the fragment literature.

The problem in connection with the Wicked Priest is further complicated by the presence in the Scrolls of a number of apparently similar rascals who are variously designated. In the Habakkuk Commentary, for example, we find "The Preacher of the Lie" and "The Man of the Lie." In the Damascus Document we find "One who preached with lies," "The Man of Falsehood" and "The Man of Scoffing." In the Commentary on Nahum in the fragment literature there appears "The Lion of Wrath." In no case is the context clear enough to identify positively the persons referred to by these names as the Wicked Priest.

When all the references are considered, however, it appears that the Essenes had at least two quite different individuals in mind. On the one hand was the Wicked Priest and on the other was the Deceiver, a man who preached lies and falsehood and who scoffed at the Scroll sect. He seems to have led the people into backsliding and into "seeking after smooth things." The more we learn of this individual, the more it appears that he originally had the confidence of the Scroll sect but later became the leader of a group of malcontents. There is probably little chance of our identifying him with any known historical personage for the several references are too vague.

IDENTIFYING THE WICKED PRIEST

When we turn to the Wicked Priest, however, we are on more solid ground. We cannot be sure he was the Lion of Wrath. Some think he was, and others that he was not. We cans however, be confident that there was such a person who lived in Israel at one time and who persecuted the Teacher of Righteousness, although it must be acknowledged that here too a few scholars dissent. They argue that "Teacher of Righteousness" and "Wicked Priest" are to be looked upon as titles that apply to many individuals, in the manner that we use the word king or chairman. The view has little support, however, because among other reasons there are so many such terms. While we can easily think of these as epithets used to describe specific individuals, it seems quite preposterous to think of the Essenes not only designating one series of men as the Teacher of Righteousness, and another series as the Wicked Priest, but yet others as the Lion of Wrath, the Man of the Lie, and the Man of Scoffing.

Who was the Wicked Priest? If we can identify him we shall perhaps be well along the road to identifying the Teacher of Righteousness and to the dating of the origin of the Essene sect. In the unhappy period of Israels history with which we are dealing, a time when brother was almost constantly at war with brother in a bloody fratricidal strife, the identification of the Wicked Priest is not as easy as we might suppose. There are several likely candidates for the dubious honor. Each attempted identification has been shown to be faulty. Opinion, however, seems slowly to be converging on Alexander Jannaeus as the most likely person. The Commentary on Nahum fragment, which speaks of the Lion of Wrath, makes this surmise seem more likely.

ALEXANDER JANNAEUS

Certainly there is no one who fits the role better than Alexander Jannaeus. He was king and high priest in Israel from 104 to 78 B.C. His father was John Hyrcanus, who had come to rule Israel only because he had had the good fortune to escape a plot on the part of his sisters husband to murder him. In the plot Hyrcanus father, Simon Maccabaeus, and both of his brothers were murdered.

When John Hyrcanus died, he bequeathed the government of Israel to his widow, and the high priesthood to his eldest son Aristobulus. This was in the year 105 B.C.E. Alexander Jannaeus, as the second son of Hyrcanus, got nothing. But he soon learned how dangerous it is to be in line for succession to a throne in turbulent times. Aristobulus, upon being installed as high priest, immediately imprisoned his own mother, his younger brother Alexander Jannaeus and all his other brothers. This is yet another illustration of the power which always came into the hands of the man who held the office of high priest. Aristobulus then made himself king as well as high priest. Within a year, however, he "died in agony," so Josephus says. Such was Alexander Jannaeus introduction to the ways of men who desire power, and he learned his lesson at the hands of his own blood brother. How well he took these things to heart we shall presently see.

On the sudden death of Aristobulus, the control of Israels affairs came into the hands of Aristobulus widow, Alexandra, a most resourceful woman. She opened the prison doors, released the brothers of her dead husband and married the eldest of them who was Alexander Jannaeus. This made Alexander both the high priest and king of Israel. He inherited a small shaky domain that extended from the mountains of Lebanon in the north to the desert land south of Palestine and extended from somewhere east of the Mediterranean Sea coast to the region beyond the Jordan in the east. It is difficult to tell now just which of these east Jordan regions he actually ruled, but at best it was nothing more than an assembly of little principalities of subject people.

Alexander Jannaeus devoted the first nine years of his reign to campaigns in the east and south of his little empire, in an attempt to keep it in subjection and to extend its borders as far as possible. His methods were no better than those of any other warrior in those times. They could hardly have been worse. The barbarous cruelty of the victor in those days almost passes belief. But the effect of these campaigns, and the bloody manner with which they were conducted by the king of Israel, who was also high priest, outraged the sensibilities of the pious Jews. The Pharisees, in particular, who had found fault with John Hyrcanus, now looked upon Alexander Jannaeus as an utter desecration of their religion, their Temple, and the Law.

THE LEMON INCIDENT

The extent to which feeling was mounting against him in Israel is made clear through an incident recorded by Josephus. In his role as high priest, Alexander Jannaeus was celebrating the Feast of Tabernacles on one occasion during this period, when he was pelted with lemons by the people. When we consider that he was standing at the high altar, the most sacred place in all Israel except the Holy of Holies; when we remember that in offering sacrifice to Yahweh he was engaged in one of Israels most sacred acts; and when finally we remind ourselves that this happened at one of the most sacred times in the entire Jewish calendar, some notion of the pent-up feelings of the populace may be gathered. Very probably he had just previously been off at war for a long span of time, up to the elbows in the blood of those who opposed him, meanwhile neglecting his priestly duties at the Temple. No devout Jew could endure either of these patent offenses to his religion and his God.

Very possibly Jannaeus returned to Jerusalem at this particular festival for the special purpose of offering sacrifice in his role as High Priest. In any case, the pent-up fury of the people could no longer be restrained. Seeing him there, and led on by the Pharisees, the people showed their disgust and their shame in the harmless but thoroughly insulting fashion of throwing lemons at him. The act was not premeditated; it appears to have been quite spontaneous. The people had not come to the Temple having in advance armed themselves with rotten fruit. They had the lemons with them as part of their votive offerings, and flung them at him in anger rather than giving them up as offerings.

Jannaeus response was characteristic of the man who was the leading contender for the role of "Wicked Priest" in the Dead Sea Scrolls literature. Josephus says Alexander Jannaeus, the high priest, slew six thousand men by way of revenge, and to impress the importance of his dignity and authority on the people. These were not warriors fomenting rebellion that he slaughtered with the aid of his mercenaries. They were his own people, his own blood kin. Furthermore, they were the most pious of his subjects, the most high-minded and the most moral. Those whom he slew were men who opposed bloodshed and who had expressed their outraged feelings not with the sword, but with lemons!

SANCTIFICATION WITHIN JUDAISM DIFFERENT SECTS AND DEGREES EMERGE

We have observed previously that we cannot say exactly when the strictest of the Pharisees divided themselves off from the main body of the group and went out into the desert to live apart from their capital city, separated from the Temple and completely withdrawn from the body politic. We have seen that they may have done so some time after the rift with John Hyrcanus, father of Alexander Jannaeus. But in the story of the lemons, we have still another instance of the fact that, however the details are worked Out, the general outline remains the Same. If the loss of political power under John Hyrcanus did not cause the Pharisee extremists to go out into the desert, certainly the slaughter of six thousand of the most devout among them would have done so. They might have fled to the desert for safety's sake if for nothing else.

If, however, the reader still is doubtful, if he wants to hold closely to the reported facts and does not think sufficient reason for the departure to Qumran has yet been found, there is more tragedy for devout Jews still to come which will surely provide all the motivation for going out into the desert the most exacting person could desire to find. Alexander Jannaeus had even more terrible things in store for those who dared to oppose him. Supposing himself to be more firmly established in his authority than ever before, the warrior priest now began a new war of conquest, this time against one of his Arab neighbors. In the course of it, however, he and his army were ambushed and he barely escaped with his life. In terror, be fled back to Jerusalem.

Now at last the time seemed ripe to be rid of him completely. The Pharisees who loathed him utterly as a man, and who yearned to avenge the death of the six thousand of their number he had slain in cold blood, now rose in arms against him. There followed six more years of bloody fratricidal strife of which Judea had already seen so much. Jannaeus relied upon his mercenaries and such Jewish support as he could get. The rebels fought fanatically and Josephus says that before this particular civil war was over fifty thousand Jews lay dead. One wonders whence came the manpower for the slaughter to which the Jews were so continuously subject during and after the Maccabean period.

What part did the Essenes play in this conflict? Our first answer to this question is that we do not know because we are not told in any of our sources. We cannot even be positive that they existed as a separate party at this time, 94-89 B.C., although the archeological evidence for the building of the Community Center at Qumran at an earlier date seems almost conclusive. We have in the Psalms ample evidence to support this view. They are filled with references that seem to have been written by someone who barely escaped the carnage of this period.

Josephus estimate may be high when he says that fifty thousand Jews died in the course of Jannaeus attempt to regain control of Israel, but again the measure of the man is not gained from the particular number of his own countrymen who died while opposing or defending him. His qualities and the light in which he was held by his contemporaries is to be measured by the wanton manner in which he decimated his own people in the effort to keep himself in power. We may add in his defense, for he needs what defense we can muster for him, that his methods were no more vicious than those of his contemporaries who ruled the other kingdoms of the earth in the first century B.C. Treachery and slaughter marked almost all of them.

Alexander Jannaeus was a true child of his time. It is his ill fortune, however, not to be compared with his contemporaries outside Israel, but with the Maccabees who preceded him Judas, Jonathan and Simon, and John Hyrcanus. Their wars may have been as bloody, but their motivation was religious. Certainly this was true of the Maccabees. Hyrcanus marks the period of transition. Strictly speaking, he was not one of the Maccabees, but a Hasmonean. With Jannaeus and the rest of the Hasmoneans, the law of the Lord was virtually forgotten and conquest took its place.

At the end of six years of civil war, Alexander Jannaeus sued for peace with the Pharisees. They, however, feeling secure in their power, rejected the offer and demanded his death instead. Then, in order to prepare for the inevitable reprisal by Jannaeus, the Pharisees sent a delegation to their old enemy, the king of Syria, asking him to intervene on their behalf.

In this extraordinary measure the Pharisees were doing again what they and the Hasidim before them had done since the early days of the Maccabees. Apparently they were again ready to give over the control of the civil government of their land to a foreign power in exchange for the payment of tribute and the privilege of controlling their own internal affairs of both "church and state" through the high priesthood. It would be interesting to know how many of their countrymen supported the Pharisees in the decision to ask the Syrian king to intervene. What we know of the history of Israel at this time would suggest that nothing like a majority of the people desired any such move to be made.

The king of Syria (now Demetrius III) of course, welcomed an opportunity to have Palestine delivered into his hands. At the head of a great army, he invaded Palestine, sought out Jannaeus and dealt him a crushing defeat near Shechem. He then prepared to move on Jerusalem and so to complete the conquest of the realm. How few Jews had really supported the Pharisees in inviting the intervention of Syria may now be seen. Six thousand Jews deserted the Syrian army and joined the standard of Alexander Jannaeus!

No better illustration could be found of the tangled state of affairs that prevailed in Israel throughout the Maccabean and Hasmonean periods. The number of conflicting loyalties that beset every individual Jew as civil war after civil war raged up and down his unhappy land were almost impossible to resolve. We cannot be far from the truth if we say that one of the reasons why the Essene Community grew strong in this period was that it offered the devout Jew who loved the Lord the opportunity to serve him with singleness of purpose. Once at Qumran, he never had to choose sides again. There was only one side there, the worship of the Lord in the beauty of holiness. Back in Jerusalem, however, no matter what side he chose, the devout Jew found himself at one time fighting for something he abhorred, and at another, fighting against something he loved, and almost always fighting against his own blood brothers.

JEWISH INFIGHTING

The Pharisees had overplayed their hand. The six thousand who deserted to Alexander Jannaeus when the Syrians prepared to march on Jerusalem, were obviously men who valued their national freedom more than the niceties of the Law and Temple worship. On the other hand, the Jews who remained with Demetrius army were those who sought political power for the Pharisees under the rule of Syria, and who thought that in this way they could maintain the purity of Temple worship, and the strict following of the Law of the Lord. There is another curious element here. The part played by the Sadducees in this conflict is not told, but again, from what we know of them both before and after this incident, we can be confident that in the background they were fomenting the desertion to Jannaeus in a last desperate attempt to oust the Pharisees from the power which was sure to be theirs more or less permanently under the rule of Syria. At this turn of events the Syrian king gave up his campaign.

He had trouble enough elsewhere to keep him occupied. If Palestine had now to be conquered with but a handful of Jews to support the campaign, it was not worth the effort. Demetrius consequently withdrew. That left Alexander Jannaeus once more in full control of Israel and the Pharisees completely at his mercy. But mercy was never a quality he had shown and certainly he showed none of it now.

In revenge, as well as to impress his subjects with the awful fate that awaited anyone who dared to oppose him, Alexander Jannaeus rounded up eight hundred men thought to have been the leaders of the revolt against him. These he crucified en masse, in a single night. Then, as if the agony of being left to hang upon a cross until death came at last were not enough, he caused the wives and children of these men to be slaughtered before their very eyes. Meanwhile, as a final affront, as one last ghastly twist of human savagery, he openly enjoyed himself with his concubines in the full sight of all. It was a night such as the world has seldom seen. Need we look further for the Wicked Priest of the Dead Sea Scrolls!

Corroboration for the role played by the Pharisees in this series of events is to be found in the fragment of the Commentary on Nahum. The references in this writing are more precise than almost any to be found in the Scroll literature. It contains many proper names, such as Jerusalem, Demetrius and Antiochus, and it refers to crucifixion "which was never done before in Israel." If "the Lion of Wrath" is Alexander Jannaeus, the Wicked Priest of the Habakkuk Commentary and the fragment Commentary on Psalm 37, the pieces of the puzzle fit so well that it is hard to believe they do not belong together. The Pharisees, who remained in Jerusalem, who fomented the rebellion against Alexander Jannaeus and enjoyed political control during the six years of civil war and who finally called Syria to aid them when Jannaeus threatened again, then would have been the "Seekers after Smooth Things." The Nahum Commentary refers to Demetrius, king of Greece, who sought to enter Jerusalem by the counsel of the "Seekers after Smooth Things."

Thus, in the Scroll literature, the Pharisees who would not go to Qumran apparently are the backsliders and the scoffers, those who look at the fair neck and who are unwilling to give up all for the Law of the Lord. Their leader would then be the Man of the Lie, who sought to deceive the members of the Essene sect and tried to draw them into backsliding by giving up their ascetic life in the desert and returning to Jerusalem to enjoy political power there.

Josephus says that on that dreadful night in which Alexander Jannaeus wreaked vengeance upon his enemies, many Pharisees fled in terror from Jerusalem. Where would they have been more likely to go than to Qumran? Those who fled perhaps felt no little admiration for their stronger spiritual cousins who lived down by the Dead Sea. They wondered if the course pursued by the Qumran colony was not wiser, as well as better, than the one they had followed back in Jerusalem.

It would appear that the Essenes had two enemies:

- (1) Alexander Jannaeus, the Sadducees and the men of the war party and
- (2) the Pharisees with whom they were, however, really quite close.

In a sense the Pharisees were the more dangerous because of their spiritual kinship and because of the constant practical political appeal that the Pharisees were able to make.

Nevertheless the Essenes at Qumran could hardly have failed to welcome refugees so close to themselves in thought, men who had witnessed such terrible things and had hardly escaped with their own lives. Whether the order was already so strictly organized that the newcomers were forced to endure the two-year probationary period required by the Manual of Discipline, we can only guess. Probably not, for the group would not long have been in existence as a separate unit at that time. We do not know whether the Community Center was full at this time. Possibly it was as a result of this new influx of members that the caves around Qumran first began to be occupied. And possibly it was in an attempt to intergrate the large number of new members that the stern rules of admission were devised. We can assume too that when Alexander Jannaeus wrath was spent and life had become settled in Jerusalem, some of these new cave dwellers in the Judean desert looked longingly toward their former homes.

Some stayed, of course, but others returned to their old haunts and their old ways when it was safe to do so.

THE ROLE OF THE TEACHER OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

We can only guess the role that the Teacher of Righteousness played in these tragic and awesome scenes if indeed he played any. That he came into conflict with the Wicked Priest is clear. Undoubtedly, he denounced him first at Jerusalem and later at Qumran. Perhaps he did so openly in the city. He may have incited the lemon-throwing incident, which would be consistent with the character we know he possessed. Here we must leave the matter. The Teacher of Righteousness no doubt paid with his life. We cannot think that he suffered less for openly demanding that Israels high priest-king live up in some measure to the requirements of his office. But how or when or under what particular circumstances, we do not know. We know why, and we also know the lasting effect of these events on the Qumran community. Indignation toward the Wicked Priest burns in the heart of the Habakkuk commentator even as his love, reverence and pity for the Teacher of Righteousness shines through the same passages.

Events such as we have been reviewing enable us to explain the curses and the hatred we find in the Dead Sea Scrolls. They do not seem to have a place in the hearts of the men who composed the documents we possess. They descend from the shattering experiences through which the founders of the sect passed. The same explanation may be given for the emphasis on the two natures in man, and for the strange preoccupation of one of their authors in a kind of schematic war between the children of light and the children of darkness. How else could those men have explained the presence of two such children of Israel as Alexander Jannaeus and the Teacher of Righteousness? In fact, how might they be explained better by anyone?

INTER-TESTAMENTAL DEVELOPMENTS THAT PRODUCED THE ESSENE/QUMRAN CULT #3

Alexander Jannaeus lived for ten years following the night in 88 B.C. when he displayed his vengeance toward the Pharisees and other pietists in Jerusalem. During those years he was almost constantly waging war. At first he was involved in a conflict with the king of Syria and Aretas of Arabia. The remainder of his reign was given to an attempt to subdue the region just east of the Jordan. He took in succession Dion, Heshbon, Pella, Gerasa and Gamala. Returning to Jerusalem, he received a conquerors welcome. He was engaged in the siege of Ragaba, another Trans-Jordanian town, when he was killed in 78 B.C.

110-80 B.C.E.; THE FOUNDING OF THE QUMRAN DESERT COLONY

If the evidence of the archeologists is correct in indicating that the year 110 B.C., or thereabouts, was the date of the founding of the Qumran colony, thirty years separated the origin of the Essene movement and the end of the reign of Alexander Jannaeus. These years were pivotal in their history. We have no details of these thirty years, except for the scraps of information about the Teacher of Righteousness, the Wicked Priest and the Man of the Lie found in the Scroll literature. We have, however, a great body of indirect information.

As the persecution of the Pharisees increased under Alexander Jannaeus, Qumran would have become even more precious to them. Already many "pious ones," rejected Zadoks, and ultra-strict Pharisees had left Jerusalem in order to follow the Law of the Lord in the manner they thought was right. They also desired to get away from the jibes of their enemies, among whom the Pharisees were certainly included. All this they had already achieved. During the reign of Jannaeus, however, they would have begun to look anew upon their community at Qumran as a haven of refuge from far greater suffering than they themselves endured. As the most devout of all the sons of Israel, they could hardly have expected to fare better than the Pharisees, who seem to have borne the full brunt of Jannaeus fury. How precious Qumran must have seemed as they heard of the events taking place in Jerusalem in this period!

One scholar has guessed that Alexander Jannaeus actually came to Qumran, but it is a surmise only, for the evidence in support of it is very slender. Nevertheless, the increasing sense of insecurity that the Essenes felt during his reign, their anxiety that he might at any time descend upon them, would have been very real. But a few miles up the Jordan from their desert home he was engaged in subjugating the towns east of the Jordan. When might he not turn upon them?

JANNAEUS' DEATH ALLOWS PHARISEE DOMINANCE ONCE AGAIN

Then came the death of Alexander Jannaeus. His widow Alexandra succeeded him. Completely reversing her husbands policies, she opened the prison doors and freed all of Jannaeus political enemies. She appointed her eldest son as high priest, ousted the Sadducees from political control and threw her lot with the Pharisees.

Almost overnight the complexion of Jerusalem was completely changed.

Alexandra's support of the Pharisees may have been a matter of conviction or policy, or perhaps something of both. Josephus says Jannaeus advised it on his deathbed. In any case, Alexandra brought the Pharisees back into favor and authority. Her brother, Simon Ben Shetach, a member of the group and apparently her confidant, may well be the key to her action. The fact that Alexandras brother was a Pharisee shows the tangled personal relationships of the Hasmonean period when the conflicts between the Pharisees and the Sadducees constantly crossed family, party and sectarian lines. It is difficult for us to appreciate how closely the interests of one group were interwoven with the other.

Alexandra showed her sympathy for the Pharisees by increasing the authority of the Jerusalem Council which doubtless had been more Saducaic than Pharisaic. She created a new group of scholars in the Law, the scribes, of whom Israel was to hear much thereafter. The refugees who had fled in terror from the barbarity by which Jannaeus maintained himself in power now streamed back to their capital city. The Pharisees afterward were to look upon the reign of Alexandra as one of the noblest periods in Israel's history.

Alexandra reigned for nine years from 78 to 69 B.C. Not since the early days of John Hyrcanus, two generations before, had the Law been so widely respected and so thoroughly enforced, nor had the devout and pious among the Jews been so joyful. They were free to follow the covenant of the Lord and they were free to impose it upon the whole nation. They began, for the first time since the reign of John Hyrcanus, to dream of a free Israel living as the elect of God in accordance with his Law.

The Essenes at this juncture must have faced the question of whether they should remain loyal to the order and continue on in the desert or return to Jerusalem to help lead all Israel back to the covenant. Surely this represented a real crisis in their internal development. They would not only have had to think through the basic premises of their separate existence, but they would also have had to resolve the whole matter of withdrawal from, or intervention in, the political affairs of men.

When the old Torah was rigidly enforced, the Sadducees, the members of the ancient nobility and the warriors who had fought with Alexander Jannaeus, became increasingly uncomfortable, resentful and restless. Furthermore, piety and vindictiveness probably were not separated. The Pharisees enforced their Judaizing principles with a severity that was perhaps not quite all piety, although they could account for their measure by appealing to the requirements of the Mosaic Law. Their zeal served to quicken the old war party's yearning for power. It began to make plans and when Queen Alexandra died, it was ready.

JANNAEUS' SONS...HYRCANUS II & ARISTOBULUS II FIGHT FOR AUTHORITY

Alexander Jannaeus and Alexandra had two sons, Hyrcanus II, whom his mother had made high priest, and Aristobulus II, who, thirsting for power and eager to be king, became a willing tool of the Sadducees and the old war party of Alexander Jannaeus. The opposing forces, led by the two brothers, met in battle “near Jericho” in 68 B.C., and Hyrcanus II was decisively defeated.

What was the effect of this succession of events on the Essenes at Qumran? Their sympathies would certainly have been with the Pharisees and Hyrcanus II. Some of them may actually have fought with him against Aristobulus II, although Josephus says that the Essenes were pacifists, an observation which may refer to a later period when they seem to have become convinced that all fighting was useless.

Thus the struggle for power between Alexandras two sons necessitated a decision among the Essenes. When the Sadducaic nobility prepared to overthrow the Pharisaic government, the Essenes would have had to determine whether to support the Pharisees who were their kindred spirits, or whether by refusing to help to offer indirectly comfort to their old enemies. When the battle was fought “near Jericho” the Essenes may have taken an active part. In any case, they could not have been unaffected by it.

Hyrcanus II was defeated, but he was not routed. He continued the struggle for the kingship as best he could. Consequently, the civil war dragged on, a senseless internal struggle for power which was characterized by religious fanaticism. Always present was the question of the degree to which Law was to be followed. A foreign power, seeing the Jews at war with one another, now intervened. In the hope of appropriating control of Palestine for himself, Antipater the Idumean threw his weight with Hyrcanus II, perhaps at the latters urging, with the result that Aristobulus II was routed.

ROME IS ASKED TO TAKE SIDES IN THE POWER STRUGGLE

At this juncture, however, Rome stepped into the affairs of Israel and the little, though bloody, contests for power within the nation were thereafter completely inundated in her sudden rise to power. A Roman general, representing Pompey, now moved forward. Both Aristobulus II and Hyrcanus II sent delegations to curry his favor and win his support. Aristobulus plea was apparently the more effective, for Rome gave her support to him. With so impressive an ally as Rome behind him, Aristobulus now fell upon his brother Hyrcanus and dealt him a crushing defeat. This made him master of all Judea and put the Sadducees in power again.

Pompey now appeared at Damascus. Aristobulus and Hyrcanus and also a third group of Jews, we are told, made their pleas for his support. [Qumran sect]. Aristobulus and Hyrcanus wanted the crown and the high priesthood, but the third group asked that these offices be given to neither of the two contenders. The two offices should be divided, they said. It was their belief that it would be better for Israel and for Rome if Pompey were to appoint a high priest [according to the Torah...Aaronic/Zadok] for the Temple and to retain the reins of government himself.

What this third group wanted is obvious in the light of the previous hundred and fifty years of Jewish history. This Qumranic third group wanted an end of priest-kings, whose hands, stained with the blood of their own people, offered sacrifices at the high altar. They hoped for an end of internecine strife and fratricidal warfare which had decimated Israel for more than a century. They longed for a restoration of the high priesthood under it proper lineage; under a Roman governor. This, they believed, would bring peace to their unhappy land and enable Israel once more to follow the Law of the Lord. They wanted, in short, a restoration of the condition which had prevailed under the Ptolemies and Antiochus the Great nearly two hundred years before. Then the Children of Israel, under the rule of a foreign power, lived at peace with one another and kept the covenant of the Lord.

THE IDENTITY OF THE THIRD GROUP...WAS IT THE QUMRAN/ESSENE SECT?

Whence came this delegation to Pompey and who were the men that formed it? Although we do not know for certain:

- It was not Sadducees, for the Sadducees favored Aristobulus II.
- It was not Pharisees, for the Pharisees favored Hyrcanus II.

We are no less certain that the point of view they adopted and the arguments they advanced are entirely consistent with the position of the Essenes on such matters. All indications, based on what we know of the third group and their petitions to Pompey, identify the third group as men who supported the Qumran/Essene theological agenda.

Whatever we conclude as to this particular detail, we know that by the time Pompey entered Damascus and the high priesthood had changed hands between Aristobulus and Hyrcanus three times, the Essenes were insisting again that Israel must cease to look for her redemption through political power. The Qumran/Essene sect now hoped for a true and worthy high priest at the Temple in Jerusalem and an Israel dwelling under the Mosaic Law beneath the civil arm of Rome.

THE REJECTION OF THE DAVIDIC MESSIAH BY THE QUMRAN CULT

They may once more have been drawn into the internecine wars of the Jews, but because of the continual political disputes between Aristobulus II and Hyrcanus II, the Essene/Qumran cult never again looked for a Jewish king on the throne of David. Now they began to think more and more of the coming of the Lords anointed, the Messiah, and for the redemption of Israel through those who kept his covenant.

This means they rejected the concept of a Davidic Messiah [political] and pinned the whole of their redemptive hopes upon a Divine Messiah, the Messiah of Daniel, the Messiah of Enoch, a Cosmic-Godman, an Angel-Messiah.

None of the Jewish delegations that came to Pompey at Damascus was successful. Having heard all three, he took the case under advisement. This meant that things remained as they were for the moment, with Aristobulus in the office of high priest and nominally "king" while the old priestly Sadducean party continued to enjoy a supremacy at Jerusalem which they had not had since the time of Alexander Jannaeus. Aristobulus, however, foolishly concluding that he did not need the backing of Rome to keep himself in power, decided to resist. The result was inevitable. Pompey marched on Jerusalem. Hyrcanus and the Pharisees opened the gates of the city to him. Thereupon Aristobulus and his followers retreated to the Temple where they withstood the siege successfully for a time. In the end, of course, Pompey breached the walls, and according to Josephus twelve thousand Jews were massacred before the city was subdued. It was on this occasion that Pompey entered the Holy of Holies in the Temple, a prerogative of the high priest alone and his but once a year. Pompey was amazed to find it empty. His brashness may have satisfied his curiosity, but in Jewish eyes it was a desecration which both of the contending parties at Jerusalem joined in denouncing.

Pompey installed Hyrcanus II as high priest, and sent Aristobulus off to Rome as one of the exhibits in his triumphal procession, after the manner of victorious Roman generals in those days. Now the Pharisees were back in power again after an interval of only six years. The "peace party" in Jerusalem, made up of Pharisees and perhaps Essenes too, had succeeded better than they had wanted to do. They had desired political and religious power over the Jewish people under the strong arm of Rome in order that the old Mosaic Law might be held in proper honor. Few of them could have desired what they had helped to bring about, namely, the end of Jewish national independence. Yet after Pompey took Jerusalem in 63 B.C.E. the Jews were never politically independent again.

RELIGIOUS AUTONOMY...BUT AT A HIGH PRICE

There was peace among the Jews for a period of six years following Pompey's conquest. We may suppose that this, like the situation during the reign of Alexandra, was a difficult time at the Essene Community Center. With the Pharisees in power, the Law would be strictly enforced. Again, as under Alexandra, life in the desert would no longer have seemed necessary. Now again it was possible to follow the Law in all its literalness even while living in Jerusalem. Consequently, unless there are important factors at play here which we do not grasp, we are led to conclude that the first decade after Pompey took Jerusalem was another period in which serious problems were faced by the Essenes at Qumran.

The Sadducees and the old warrior nobles, however, still yearned both for the power they themselves once had had and for political independence for their nation. So doubtless did some of those who had formerly supported Hyrcanus II. In the years from 57 to 52 BC., the Jews rebelled no less than four times. On each occasion it was the old war party that led the revolt. The first rebellion was initiated by a son of Aristobulus II. Rome easily put it down but as a result Hyrcanus was deprived of what little political power had been left to him in his role of ethnarch in spite of the fact that Hyrcanus wanted no part of the uprising. Now Hyrcanus was high priest only, Palestine in effect became a part of Syria, and its government was given to the Roman governor of Syria. The remaining three revolts were also easily put down by Rome. Thereafter Palestine enjoyed another decade or more of peace. Meanwhile, the Pharisees continued in power and the old Mosaic Law held the central place in Jewish culture and religion.

Then began the great period of civil war in Rome, which involved ultimately the whole Mediterranean world. Julius Caesar crossed the Rubicon in 49 B.C.E. and for twenty years thereafter Roman fought Roman for control of the empire. Life in Palestine was for the most part unaffected by these titanic events. Caesar confirmed Hyrcanus II as hereditary high priest, granted him Roman citizenship and restored him to the office of ethnarch of Judea.

The old party divisions, loyalties and hatreds in Israel, meanwhile, continued on as intense as before. Now it was Antigonus, son of Aristobulus II, around whom the old aristocrats, the Sadducees, the war party and the nationalists rallied. Meanwhile Herod ruled Palestine while Caesar, Cassius and Mark Antony in succession represented the final authority of Rome. Finally in 41 B.C.E. Rome's leaders had become so involved with each other in the struggle for power that Anigonus and his party decided the time had come to strike. With the backing of Parthia, Rome's great rival in the east, they seized Hyrcanus II and drove out Herod. Once again the old priestly war party was back in control at Jerusalem with Antigonus installed as high priest, and claiming the title of king as well. Apparently Antigonus rebellion was at least in part a nationalist uprising, because he was able to enlist the support of religiously fanatical Jews in Galilee.

THE EMERGENCE OF HEROD

Now Herod having secured the title "King of the Jews" from Rome, returned and took up the struggle with Antigonus. He defeated the forces of Antigonus in Galilee after a strenuous campaign among the hills and caves of that region. The next year, backed by two Roman legions, Herod pushed on into Judea. In the attempt to subdue it, he too fought a battle "near Jericho." Again the coincidence is arresting. This was the year 38 B.C., about the time we know the Qumran Community Center to have been abandoned. The next year, the spring of 37 B.C.E., Herod laid siege to Jerusalem. The old priestly war party were the defenders once more. It is incredible that this should have happened yet again. As before, the defenders fought with fanaticism. There was new carnage; the streets again ran red with the blood of the Jewish people. Both the Romans and Herods forces simply cut the Jewish people down like ripened grain. Again it was the Pharisees who opened the gates of the city to the besiegers.

Herod fully realized the sacredness of the Temple to the Jews of all parties, and he was able to prevent any desecration of it. In order to avoid further trouble from the Aristobulus line he executed Antigonus. He also executed forty-five members of the old Jewish nobility who bad been supporters of Antigonus and who with him had fomented rebellion. It was the end of the political power of the Sadduccees.

Herod was a proselyte and in consequence could not occupy the office of high priest. He could not install the aged Hyrcanus II in the office, for Antigonus had cut off his ears, which under Jewish Law made him ineligible. In place of Hyrcanus, Herod appointed a Jew from Babylon as the new high priest; while retaining most of the civil power himself. This left the Pharisees still in the ascendancy, although their power was now entirely confined to religious and cultural matters.

PUTTING IT ALL TOGETHER...POLITICALLY

Trying to look upon the political scene from the relatively detached position of the Essenes, we see the Pharisees in control of the affairs of Israel almost throughout this entire period. There was a stretch of six years following the death of Alexandra when the Sadducees were in control. There was another stretch of four years from 41 to 37 B.C.E. during which the old war party again raised the standard of revolt. Apart from these two brief periods, however, both of which ended with a siege of Jerusalem by Rome and the slaughter of thousands of Jews, the Pharisees were in control the entire time.

We have assumed that differences among the Pharisees resulted in the first exodus to Qumran. These differences were minor as compared with the differences between the Pharisees and Sadducees. In the struggles between these two latter groups, the sympathies of the Essenes must always have been with the Pharisees, even if they did not actively enter into the contests for power in which these antagonists were almost constantly locked. As a result, throughout this period the Essenes were always faced with the problem of involvement versus withdrawal. They had had no problem on this score down to the death of Alexander Jannaeus. With Pharisees in power and the old Torah re-established in Jerusalem, however, they were confronted by a very real issue, particularly when the political power of the Pharisees was in jeopardy. As had been the case with the Hasidim, a hundred years before, these "pious ones" were forced constantly to decide whether to maintain their position of withdrawal or whether actively to support the policies in Jerusalem in which they deeply believed.

Again and again the Essenes must have had to decide. We are left with no clue as to what decision they reached unless the story of the third delegation that came to Pompey at Damascus is an Essene story. We can, however, be certain of their emotional if not of their political involvement. Believing as they did in Israel as the Lords chosen people, believing in his covenant with his people, and the requirement that they keep their part of it by following the Law, they must always have rejoiced to see Pharisees in power in Jerusalem, even as they had concluded in the reign of Alexander Jannaeus that the covenant was broken forever and that only they, the remnant in the desert, could ever redeem it.

PUTTING IT ALL TOGETHER...RELIGIOUSLY

Boy, that was a lot to read but so necessary if we are to understand the dynamics that underlay the Essene/Qumran Sect gradual theological shifts over two hundred-fifty years leading up to the first century. We have taken great paints to detail the political scene in Judea during these important years in which we find maturation and continual theological change within the Qumran sect. One must understand right up front that chronological theological change ran parallel with political difficulties and estrangement suffered by these rejected Hasidim, Zadok priests and ultra-strict Pharisees. Beginning with the rejection of the rightful priests, the Zadoks by John Hyrcanus I and their continual rejection by their own countrymen in the series of Hasmonean King-Priests that would follow, one can understand how such a closely knit group of men would eventually begin to doubt not only the Temple and the current fraudulent priests, but the religion that spawned them. Such were the turbulent political and religious times in which these Qumran sectarians lived. As we saw this groups of religious separatists would eventually lose all hope with the schism of Aristobulus II and Hyrcanus II and no longer would they have faith in a Davidic Messiah and would look elsewhere for their "Redeemer." Fertile ground for a non-Jewish "Redeemer" was plentiful as personified Sun-Worship found its way into Qumran doctrines and dogmas as filtered through Egyptian religion, Dionysus, Zoroastrianism, Pythagoras, and Buddhism. Understand again that these religious beliefs did not surface over night but slowly grew in parallel with constant and continual rejection of the Qumran sect's rightful claim to the priesthood and the rejection of strict obedience to the Laws of God by the "powers that be" in Jerusalem. Having lost hope in a "Political and human Messiah from the stem of Jesse" they looked to a Divine Redeemer Messiah or a Cosmic Godman as found in Enoch and Daniel's Son of Man. Again let me stress such "foreign Jewish concepts" originated with Sun-Worship and had been so since the beginning of time as primitive man, lacking Divine revelation, worshipped the Sun.

If you have not read the Qumran literature to see this "theological evolution" you need to for once you know what you are looking for the evidence jumps off the page at you. The proof, as they say, is in the pudding. Provided for you on this web-site are the documents you need to read to see this "theological evolution" for yourself.

The root of this whole problem that led to the Qumran rejection of Judaism as they knew it was two-fold:

There was the contest for the high priesthood; the legitimate and God ordained high priest and the imposter high priest which involved the Qumran sect's standing in with whomever Rome happened to designate as governor of Syria. So goes the priest so goes the nation and with a corrupt non-Zadok priest they could only expect future judgment from God. They would finally get it and along with that their extermination. Their residue would exist within the banner of Christianity.

The hope that the daily dedication to lives lived in committed to obedience to the Laws of God which was their hope for "salvation" and a guarantee of no future judgment from God. Such lives lived in obedience to the God's Laws would ensure the "salvation of Israel" as seen in the imminent appearance of the Kingdom of Heaven with her Messiah King and the quick judgment of the enemies of Israel. Their hopes would not be realized and their eschatological religious documents and predictions have been totally discredited today; sadly for us, they remain hidden in the pages of the New Testament as the hopes and dreams of the first centuries apocalyptics were "written" and these bequeated to us on the pages of the Bible. Again, such eschatological hopes and predictions have been totally discredited.

There is a simple answer for the failure of Essene Messianic theology when one views the whole picture: the Essene/Qumran Sect, in their rejection as the persecuted rightful Priesthood, along with other religious purists which would join them over the years, would evolve theologically into a religious cult which would have, in the first century, more religious tenants in common with Sun-Worship, "solar-myths," and with Godman redeemers than pre-exilic Judaism. We call it Christianity today!

Don't you think it is about time to break loose of all of the residue of Essene religious though and find the truths about Jesus of Nazareth and begin your worship of God in Spirit and in Truth?

THE SAVIOR-CONCEPT: FROM EGYPT

The Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt, as well as Palestine, adapted the "soter" or "savior" of Egypt. The original savior-god was the Great Osiris, the Egyptian deity who plays such a preponderant role in the religious history, not only of the Nile Valley, but also of the entire area which finally became the Graeco-Roman Empire. The facts, the legend, the myth, and the soteriology (doctrine of salvation) surrounding this majestic but also pathetic figure stretch back into the very roots of western culture and civilization.

A powerful force of Aryans, from Mesopotamia, conquered the much less developed Nilotics, about 4,000 or 3,500 B. C. The Sumerians superimposed their own economy, jurisprudence, architecture, agriculture, and general way of life upon the conquered, first, by intertwining their own religious concepts with those of the natives; and, second, by making their own the active and preponderant force. This was a long and complicated process, in the course of which cannibalism and other primitive poultices were outlawed and the flood waters of the Nile brought under control; and roads, temples, and cities were constructed. Scientific agriculture was instituted, an elaborate code of law established an elevated morality adopted, and a popular and powerful religious system perfected. The result was the greatest civilization yet known, which continued substantially intact for nearly forty centuries.

It is at least probable that Osiris was an historical person who had married his sister, became king of Egypt, and conquered many nations; that he was murdered by a group of conspirators headed by his brother, Set; and that he was finally transformed into the god-man savior by the priests of a great cult which became dominant in Egypt and later proliferated into all adjacent lands.

According to the Osirian myth, the sun-god Ra detected his wife Nut in the embrace of Seb, the earth-god. He therefore decreed that her offspring could not be born on any day of the year, which then consisted of 360 days. Nut, however, appealed for help to Thoth, the God of Wisdom; and, by playing at draughts with the moon, he won from her a seventy-second portion of each day. Thus, five intercalated days were added to the year, on none of which the curse of Ra was effective. Successively on these, Nut bore quintuplets: Osiris, Horus, Set, Isis, and Nephthys. Osiris, born on the 25th of December, symbolized the rebirth of the sun; in due course, he married Isis, who bore the Younger Horus, who, with his parents, made up the Egyptian Holy Family. Set married Nephthys, who became the mother of Anubis. The Elder Horus remained the celibate and intellectual Scribe. These five personalities, born of earth and heaven, were equally human and divine, mortals with a capacity for immortality. Osiris became the supreme god-man and Isis the ultimate mother-goddess, whose role and importance expanded over the centuries in the Osirian cult and who finally emerged as a supreme divinity in her own right.

After conferring a superior culture upon the Egyptians, Osiris set out at the head of his beneficent armies to do the same for other nations; he marched all the way to India and later in Europe to the Straits of Gibraltar. Finally, according to the legend, laden with the gifts of many grateful peoples, he returned home in triumph. This helps explain the spread of such religious ideas and myths as spread throughout the world.

In his absence, however, the evil Set conspired with the seventy-two displaced reactionary priests to seize the throne for himself. Having constructed a coffin, he induced his brother to lie down in it: whereupon the conspirators welded the lid shut with molten lead, so that Osiris died of suffocation. Thrown into the Nile, the coffin floated across the Mediterranean to Byblus (modern Jebeil), in Syria, where the body became encased in a tree.

Escaping the rage of Set, Isis took refuge in the Delta Swamps, where Horus was born. Leaving her child to be reared in Buto, she set out in search of her husband; finding almost all of his body except his penis, she returned with it to Egypt. The implacable Set, however, hacked this into fourteen pieces, and buried one in each of the names or provinces of the country.

Now began the incomparable passion of Isis, which ultimately made of her the supreme mother-goddess of the ancient world. Up and down Egypt she went, seeking and searching, until she found all the dismembered portions of the body and reconstituted them into its previous semblance; then, with the help of Thoth and Horus, Isis resurrected Osiris into a second and immortal life. Risen from death, he could never again be subject to its power. In due course, he entered his solar ship which transported him to the Elysian Fields, the realm of Khenti-Amenti, where he became and forever remains the judge of all who die and the ruler of the blessed.

Osiris, then, symbolized the reborn sun; as Apis, the Bull, he was the emblem of sexual virility; but, most of all, he was the god of agriculture. This, more than anything else, elevated the Egyptians from savagery and barbarism into actual civilization. Isis, meanwhile, who was identified with the moon and the cow, was the great and nurturing Mother; it would be Isis who taught mankind to transform the wheat into the bread of life, the barley into the joyous and invigorating ale as a forerunner of the Eucharist! Osiris gave men virility; Isis made motherhood possible and even delightful. Osiris gave mankind agriculture and Isis gave them civilized food. These two divinities gave humanity the more abundant life.

The sexual, astronomical, and agricultural symbolism woven into the Isis-Osiris myth reflects the deepest needs and desires of mankind. The offspring of Nut and Seb were conceived at the time when Sirius the Dog-star appeared in the East, as it did then on the first of June, when also the waters of the Nile began to rise, augmented, so the people believed, by the tears of Isis, weeping for Osiris, who was called the Morning Star who brings the waters, as well as the Great Bull, and the Reborn Sun. Deeply significant is the fact that the dismembered god was buried throughout Egypt on the very day when the grain was planted; and his resurrection occurred when the green shoots first emerged from the soil. The great rituals and festivals of Osiris were celebrated with the planting and the sprouting of the grains. In countless images of the god found in Egyptian tombs, his body lies on is bier with the tendrils of wheat growing from his body.

The ritual of Osiris consisted primarily in the celebration of a Eucharistic meal, in which the communicants ate the flesh of the god in the form of wheat-cakes and drank his blood in the form of barley-ale.

By so doing, his divinity became their own which was diffused through their members: and they became portions of him in body and spirit as well as heirs with him in his eternal kingdom. Osiris gave mankind immortality with his heavenly bread; he died that men might have life and have it more abundantly; he gave his body to eat and his blood to drink that men and women might, like himself. rise from the grave, divine into everlasting life.

This brief was the central core of the Osirian mystery and since, for millennia, the Egyptian was the principal culture of the ancient world, a reconstituted Osiris penetrated many nations and countries, especially throughout Asia Minor and the eastern Mediterranean. Perhaps as early as 2,500 B.C., the Egyptian god-man was united with the Semitic Astarte to constitute the Adonis-Aphrodite cult; later, as Attis, he became the dying and annually resurrected god of the cult of Cybele; in the 13th century, B. C., he appeared in Thrace as Dionysus or Orpheus, the savior-god of Orphism. After he migrated into Greece, he finally became the center of the great Eleusinian mystery itself, which was dedicated to the worship of Demeter, who was herself the Greek reconstitution of Isis.

In the Roman world, he was known as Father Baccus and Demeter as Ceres.

And finally, about 520 B.C., he was incorporated into the Phythagorean cult as the central element in the first great religious synthesis of the western world.

Various mysteries spread throughout the Graeco-Roman world, especially after the Trojan War; but the cult of Isis at last outstripped all others in popularity, magnificence, power, and influence, wherein Osiris, while continuing as the sacrificial savior-god, became the secondary to his sister-wife in importance. These pagan savior-cults were wonderful for their number and diversity; and by the first century A.D., they had achieved almost complete dominion over the masses. All had one element in common: the worship of the atoning, sacrificial, and immortalizing savior god, substantially the replica of the great Osiris.

This very same concept, of an Angel-Messiah as a reborn Sun, or Son of the Sun-god, was the concept of the Essenes which grafted it onto the already existing Davidic Messiah of the Jewish Scriptures.

COMMUNAL EQUALITY: FROM INDIA & THE BRAHMANISM & BUDDHISM

About 2000 B.C.E., another army of Aryans invaded India and conquered the culturally backward inhabitants. The newcomers revolutionized the social, political, and economic structure of the nation, first by commingling their own religious concepts with those of the natives; and, second, by making their own ideology predominant. A system of caste was established, in which the Brahmans (father-priests or divinities) occupied the highest rank; the Kshatriyas, or kings, nobles, and warriors, stood second; the Vaisyas, or artisans, tradesmen, peasants, etc., were third; and the Sudras, who were propertyless servants, constituted the lowest order. Only Aryans could belong to the two upper casts. However, every member of a caste occupied a definite and permanent hereditary position, and possessed certain rights in varying degrees. Below all this were multitudes who, for one reason or another, had lost their inherited social position: these were the outcasts, known as parasavas and khandalas, doomed to a life of misery in the most repulsive employments, while existing at a starvation level. Brahmans could have four wives Kshatriyas three, Vaisyas two, Sudras one, outcasts none at all. Elaborate codes were devised, which exacted the most fearful punishment for offenses against members of the higher castes, but little or no penance for the same acts when perpetrated against an outcast or a prostitute.

The hierarchy enjoyed complete control over education, morals, marriage, and the canonical codes. Theirs was a total way of life, which left nothing to any other discipline: like communist or Roman Catholic polities, it embraced every aspect of existence. The civil government existed only to enforce the decrees of the priests. The Brahmans were immune from all taxation, social obligations, or criminal prosecution. A more privileged or powerful bureaucracy, secular or religious, has never existed. The Brahmans made laws for all others, but were themselves exempt from punishment. They received tribute from everyone, but gave nothing tangible in return. They were the lords of life; and their regimen resented perhaps the most complete union of church and state ever known.

Since no one could rise in the social scale, the doctrines of karma and renunciation were devised to provide moral sanctions for caste. During this earthly life, every human being enters his good and evil deeds, as it were, in a book of credits and debits; and for these he is rewarded or punished, not in this life, but in the next. At death, each person who has lived good, or, rather, an obedient and subservient life, goes to paradise for a certain period, and will in due course be reborn in a higher caste; but if he had done evil, he will be unsigned to the twenty-three hells for a millennium, and then be reborn in a lower caste, or in the form of an animal, a reptile, a fish, a bird, or even an insect. Since every living feature is animated by a once-human soul, no one may kill even a louse, since it might be his own mother. Human misery, therefore, continues through endless aeons on a do dolorous Wheel of Life. Only through sainthood may Nirvana at last be attained; and this state of total unconsciousness or personal extinction was the Brahmanic substitute for the Egyptian Elysium and the Zoroastrian heavens.

In this system, there was no relief for outcasts and Sudras. It continued substantially unchanged for centuries; however, since the spirit of man will not endure such indignities forever without bitter resentment, certain safety-valves for social unrest were provided. Under the Brahmanic system, men were permitted to become students: but, when so doing, were required to take the vows of chastity, obedience, and poverty. Others, more advanced in years, were permitted to seek Nirvana by becoming hermits or ascetics, (just like the Essenes later) begging their food; however, all had to undergo a course in Vedic study and submit forever to the authority of the Brahmans. Even under these restrictions, vast numbers chose renunciation to escape the Wheel of Life and thus commingle at last with the Universal Soul—the Brahma or the Atman.

By the 6th century, B. C., various movements had arisen in opposition to the Brahmanic authority. The most important of these were Gainaism, or Jainism, founded by Mahavira, and Buddhism, established by Prince Gautama, said to have been a pre-existing divinity, who entered his mother's body at conception and was, therefore, born of a true virgin birth. Not to be outdone, Mahavira had a double virgin birth; for during gestation, he transferred himself from a Brahmani to Kshatriya mother so that, in addition to be being divine, he partook also of the nature of both upper castes. Actually, both movements, but particularly the Buddhist, represented a coalition of the nobles and the middle classes against the entrenched power of the priesthood. These new religions absorbed from Brahmanism such elements as transmigration, karma, heaven and hell, the Wheel of Life, renunciation, and Nirvana. Nevertheless, Buddhism was one of the most profoundly revolutionary movements in all history. It sought, not only freedom from upper-class tyranny, but also permanent release for its communicants from all labor and every kind of social obligation. Perhaps the most far-reaching of all Buddhist objectives was the substantial separation of the religious from the civil authority (church from state). No man was ever again to be called Brahmana, or Father, which signified priest-god (Matt. 23:9).

Buddhism denounced and outlawed a society based on caste, and proclaimed the utter wickedness of employing labor or accumulating private wealth. Persuaded that the duty to support parents, wife, and children is not only an integral element in the whole system of social exploitation but also a burden under which most toilers die unrequited, Buddhism declared that the family, based on sex and procreation, is an infamous evil; that the sexual relationship is the crime and corruption for which there can be no forgiveness; and that the highest conceivable virtue consists in renouncing and abandoning father, mother, sister, brother, wife, children, lands, and houses. Dressed in their yellow robes and with begging bowls in hand, the Buddhist saints sallied forth to obtain their food from the children of Mara And since Vedic study was the chief means by which the Brahmans consolidated their authority, the new ascetics declared knowledge so obtained to be utterly worthless or actually harmful.

The Buddhists made good use of several Brahmanic doctrines: hell was transformed into a place of torture for all who, in this world, had contracted matrimony, reared families, cared for their parents, and taught, or submitted to Brahmanic doctrines. Nirvana became the reward for a life of renunciatiion; a good karma was as now to be attained by the children of this world only by giving generous alms to the Buddhist saints, who were by no means intent upon suffering material hardship: the greatest rewards in paradise were therefore reserved for the wealthy who donated their palaces as rest homes for the delectation of the holy ones. Communal orders of male and female celibates sprang up everywhere, into which the indigent thronged, where they could live idly in security, although under the strictest discipline. It was Buddhist dogma that, while personal property contaminates and destroys the character of the owner, the same wealth, when owned collectively and shared equally by the redeemed, is righteous and holy. You should immediately see the similarity in the communism of the early church as depicted in the Book of Acts as well as the Essenic celibacy; this is no coincidence but rather an example of strong influence that was exerted on the Essenes. I find this rather amazing that these Essene, knowing full-well that the first commandment in the Torah is to be fruitful and multiply, would violate this by enforcing celibacy on their adherents.

Under King Asoka, Buddhism became the national religion of India in 256 B. C. In his and subsequent generations, it proselytized throughout the whole known world; and its principal elements penetrated the stream of culture almost everywhere. Since western religion has its roots in oriental sources, Buddhist influence upon it has been immense.

In fact, long before Buddhism became the national religion of India, its basic concepts had appeared in the Graeco-Roman world. As early as the sixth century, B. C., it had already become a central element in the synthesis of Pythagoras.

The concept of the truly religious life as one of renunciation, celibacy, and communism was therefore deeply embedded in human consciousness; it became a major element in most important subsequent religious movements; and one phase of this philosophy emerged in the 19th century as Marxism. In this secular form, it has achieved its greatest conquests; and approximately one-third of the human race is now attempting to achieve a better life through communal organization and discipline, not in private communities, but through the control of great nations by the machinery of the state.

It should, however, be noted that after several centuries, Buddhism was expelled from India, which was reconquered by a reconstituted form of Brahmanism, known as Hinduism, which retains most of the central speculative doctrines of its ancient progenitor, such as the caste system, karma, and transmigration. The overwhelming force of religious ideology is apparent to any westerner who travels in India: useless cows and monkeys have been sacred, eating the scarce food, for want of which untold thousands of infants died of malnutrition. The killing of a vulture could cause a greater public disturbance than the sight of millions of starving indigents lying unhoused in the streets.

The religion of Gautama has undergone many revisions and divisions during the last thousand years; it exists today principally on the fringes of the greater cultures or as important minorities in Japan and elsewhere; however, it still commands the adherence of about 225 million communicants find exercises no small influence, not only in the Orient, but in the western world as well. Modern existentialism is in reality an offshoot of Buddhism, as are the doctrines of Zen. Various spin-offs like the Hare Krishna cult are today virulent in the United States; and it should be noted that since there are more than 515 million Hindus in the world-in 1979-80, these two cults originating in India, almost rival in numbers the 975 million credited to all existing divisions of Christianity. If you have any familiarity with the Essenes the parallels are striking as well with the communism and equality of good as stressed by the Book of Acts and the later celibacy as well which was later enforced upon the priesthood in the Catholic Church.

DOCTRINES OF THE AFTER-LIFE: FROM PERSIA & ZOROASTRIANISM

Although there are many elements in the religions of India and Egypt dealing with the after-life, the concepts of heaven, hell, and purgatory were developed to the highest degree by the Persians. The Jews were introduced to this in the Babylonian and Persian captivity and some of the Jews brought these religious concepts home to Israel with them.

In the 6th century, B.C., the prophet Zoroaster, by reconstructing the Mazdean Persian-Aryan religion, made it into a powerful nationalist instrument by which to unite his people as masters of a great empire. Three basic elements characterize this creed:

- Dualism
- Doctrines concerning the after-life
- Messianic expectations

Zoroastrian dualism predicated two cosmic, untreated powers or forces, of which the first, known as Ahura-Mazda or Ormazd, was the Lord of Spirits, the God of Warmth, Light, and Order, the source of life and immortality, the ruler of the celestial spheres, the creator of all things good or spiritual; and the second was Ahriman, known also as Angra Mainyu, the Evil One, the source of cold, darkness, matter, and chaos, the power of death and destruction, and the Prince of the Air in this world. These two powers were seen as essentially equal; but, since Ahura-Mazda possessed prescience, of which his cosmic foe was devoid, he was, from the beginning, able to devise a long-term strategy which would ultimately result in the triumph of Good and Light. These antagonists were said to be engaged in a universal conflict, which extended to every living creature, especially all humanity, who are therefore pilloried throughout life on the horns of this dreadful dilemma and enmity. The spirit or soul is from the God of Light, the King of Heaven; but the body is of Ahriman, the Lord of Darkness. In the heart of every human being a fierce battle therefore rages between the spirit and the flesh: those who are redeemed are the Elect, the Children Light and Heaven; those who reject the pure religion of Zoroaster are reprobates, the Children of Hell and Darkness. This concept is reflected in Shakespeare's 146th sonnet, which begins: "Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth . . ." and constitutes the basis of the Pauline anthropology set forth in our New Testament. It is also the basis of the Augustinian, Lutheran. and Calvinist doctrines of predestination and moral depravity.

The second great element in the Zoroastrian system was its a eschatology, according to which every human being has an immortal soul; and, since this appears only once on earth, its eternal destiny is determined by its activities here. The human race was divided into three general categories: first, those whose deeds are preponderantly good and who, therefore, emerge as Children of Light—at death, these go directly to one of the seven heavens (reproduced in the Divina Commedia of Dante); second, those whose careers have been dedicated to wickedness—these must be plunged into hell, there to suffer terrible and long-drawn-out tortures; and, third, those in whom good and evil so nearly balance as to render them unfit for immediate entry into the celestial kingdoms, yet not deserving of hell-fire—these are consigned to purgatory, whence, after a Period of discipline purification, they are permitted to enter one of the lower celestial spheres.

THE SECOND COMING: AN ESSENE CONTRIBUTION

Every important new religious system draws heavily upon its predecessors as the basis for its novel synthesis; and almost always it adds at least one or two significant origins elements of its own.

During their maturity and a later evolution of Essene theology, we find that the Essenes eliminated from their system the doctrine of purgatory (which they had previously embraced) as well as the possibility of post-mortem redemption. In Essene-Christian doctrine there is no second chance.

However, the most important specific ideological creation of the Essenes was the promulgation of the Second Conning known among Christian theologians as the Parousia. Paul teaches this doctrine along with Jesus in the New Testament. The Essene's last Teacher of Righteousness was expected, before the conclusion of the then-existing generation, to send a representative who would be endowed with power to conduct the Last Judgment and to set up the kingdom of the saints on earth. With the formulation of this doctrine, all the principal elements comprising the Synoptic synthesis had been incorporated into the Essene canonical system. The religion of the western world was thereby substantially completed and today Jesus is the one most look toward for the fulfillment of this religious synthesis.

Answer for yourself: But do you know that there exists one very large problem with this whole thing?

Let us not forget that these Dead Sea Scrolls were completed and none written any later than 70 B.C.E. and any "second coming" COULD NOT REFER to the New Testament Jesus which is depicted in a "first coming" by the writers of the New Testament. What we find upon examination of these Essene scrolls that this expected "return" of there previously slain Teacher of Righteousness, their Messiah, is taken from Egypt and the death of a Hebrew Pharaoh named Tutankhamun, the son of the Biblical Moses.

As we have seen previously following the death of John the Baptist whom was believed to be the Essene's returning "anointed one" that these Essenes began to teach that their previously slain Teacher of Righteousness, their historical "Joshua-Jesus" (the historical Tutankhamun) had returned and had been killed and resurrected as was believed Tutankhamun had long ago. These Essenes looked not for the "First Coming of their Messiah" for he had come and died centuries earlier in the form of the Hebrew Pharaoh Tutankhamun but rather for the "Second Coming of their Messiah" at the beginning of the New Age (the age of Pisces that was replacing the Age of Aries) whom they had hoped would be the historical John the Baptist. As we showed in earlier articles this was the "second coming" of their expected Redeemer who was killed and hung on a tree on the eve of the Passover in Egypt in the 14th century B.C.E. and not the first coming. If Christians knew the truth then their belief in a "Second Coming" of this "Joshua-Jesus" is laughingly really a "Third-Coming"! There were still those in that day who never gave up hope that the Hebrew prophecies would yet be fulfilled and held out hope for a return of their expected "Messiah" even long after the destruction of their Temple. This to me is amazing and shows not only the lack of understanding of the Hebrew Scriptures but the deception that reigns supreme in Christianity due to their forging of the Hebrew Scriptures down through the centuries. It also shows the strength of faith in light of the fact that Rabbinical exegesis of their own Hebrew Scriptures had understood that according to the prophets Jeremiah and Daniel that the 70 Weeks of Daniel chapter 9 would conclude in 70 C.E. Either there would come the glorification of Israel and the revealing of their Messiah who would come from the family of David whom we already have proved was Tuthmose III, the great warrior Pharaoh of Egypt, or either Israel's judgment by God for their sins. Well history tells us what happened. This belief in a returning Christ/Karast remains today among many not wanting to realize that the time period set by Daniel had come and gone. Unknown by Christians is the truth held by many in that day that this "Christ/Karat" was not so much just one person who would come and save the world (Israel) but the awaking of mankind to "the Christ/Divine" within himself so that salvation would come to the world through personal acts of righteousness and charity and obedience to God's Laws and Commandments outlined in both the Egyptian and Jewish Torah. In other words the awakening of man to the mystical interpretation of the "Christ within" held by "Chrestians" and followers of the Divine within man's souls. This is the real "second coming of Christ" when we awaken that there is no atonement by the death of another and that this "crucifixion" for a sin debt is but a gross misunderstanding of a celestial phenomena which meant only "a new beginning for mankind". These are the the real "Chrestian/Christian" message of the first century which was obliterated by Rome in their persecution of the Jewish nation and the destruction of their writings. By Rome forging a "Second New Testament" and destroying these Gnostic Chrestians and their writings and burning the worlds libraries for centuries this knowledge has been hidden to all but those with the most discerning eye. Sadly the vast majority of "Christians" are still asleep to this knowledge unaware that it is "their coming" and "awareness that they are Divine" and "begin to act like it" is the coming of their "CHRIST TO THEM". So Rome created preposterous prophecies and various textual alterations in "key places" to further elongate this time period for this expected "god-man" to come when in fact we are the "godman" who has lost his way and more often than not is obsessed by sin instead of repentance and obedience to the Torah of God and His Law and Commandments. Simply said without a lot of study we will never awaken to this truth and receive the lost "gnosis " held by the Spiritual Giants of antiquity let alone the truth behind the "Joshua-Jesus Story". I suggest if this is new knowledge to you and you are unaware of this dating for the Jewish Messiah in the Hebrew texts and the later Christian forgeries of the Daniel texts in our Christian Bibles to keep the door open for a return of this "Joshua-Jesus" long past the time declared by the Hebrew prophets let alone the true identity of the real "historical Joshua-Jesus" then you need to study our websites very closely in order to get the truth that has craftily been kept from you.

THE ESSENE ANGEL-MESSIAH FROM ZOROASTRIAN-INDIA AND SUN-WORSHIP

The third basic Zoroastrian doctrine was that, following 660 B.C., would appear a great virgin-born savior, prophet, or Angel-Messiah, at the close of three consecutive millenniums. These concepts were taken directly from astrology and astronomy and later personified as if were a real person. Every Aryan nation had their own adaptation from the stars but Zoraster's influence made his the most prolific. On this web-site I have documented countless examples with more than sufficient bibliographies and references to prove the point beyond any reasonable doubt.

According to such Zoroastrian eschatology in 341 A.D., the great Hushedar was due; in 1341, the greater Hushedar-Mah would come; and in 2341, the greatest of all, the Soshans, would, after defeating all enemies at the final Armageddon, conduct the Last Judgment, and inaugurate the Kingdom of Saints, which would consist of a New Heaven and a New Earth, after the old had passed away in a cosmic holocaust.

We should note that Zoroastrianism was a universalist religion; for even the most wicked of men, after fearful refinement in a river of molten metal, would finally emerge as saints into an eternity of peace and glory.

Zoroastrianism included other important tenets; but these constitute its basic contributions to world-religion. By 510 B.C., Darius the Great Hystaspes, the son-in-law of Cyrus, ruled which stretched from Libya and Greece to the center of India, a territory comprising two million square miles and twenty-three nations. Throughout this vast complex, theology of Zoroaster exercised a potent and pervasive influence, and some of its elements became integral in Grecian Stoicism, in the creeds of the mystery cults, the tenets of the Jewish Chasids, and the speculative synthesis of the Orphic-Pythagorean brotherhoods. As you can see both the Pharisees as well as the Essenes were influenced by such a system and "borrowed" extensively from it in their writings. In the trappings of noisy and pagan solemnity, it is set forth in splendor in the Sixth Book of Virgil's Aeneid, composed in the first century, B.C., and in Dante's Purgatorio and Paradiso, composed in the fourteenth century, A.D. These concepts became the common heritage of the western world.

THE HUMAN MESSIAH OF PRE-EXILIC JUDAISM

We should not discount entirely the influence upon Essene ideology of the Messiah-concept as found in orthodox Judaism, which may or may not have been directly altered by Zoroastrian influence. The belief that a powerful personality, a human agent, would one day emerge who, either by force of Jewish arms or by supernatural intervention by God and with God's support, would defeat all enemies and establish at least an independent nation, or, more probably, a great empire, had been a basic element in Jewish expectations for centuries before the time of Alexander. This Messiah, however, was quite different from the Angel-Messiah of Zoroastrian-Essene theology: his purposes were entirely temporal and terrestrial and were restricted to the ethnic interests of the Jews. He was not a moral judge; there was no Last Judgment; and his projected kingdom was not one of saints or of' righteousness. The Essene Angel- Messiah, in contrast, was the overwhelming Zoroastrian Soshans engrafted upon the age-old political and economic protagonists of Judaic visions.

PYTHAGORAS: THE FIRST GREAT RELIGIOUS SYNTHESIS ...PUTTING IT ALL TOGETHER

In the 6th century, B.C., Pythagoras organized the first great religious synthesis of the western world where all of the above concepts, and more, were combined into one religious ideology or philosophy. About 105 B.C., the Essenes incorporated the doctrines and practices of the Phythagoreans into their own system and superimposed these upon the Zoroastrianism which they had already adopted about seventy years earlier. By so doing, they became the transmission belt by which the principal elements Egyptian, Persian, Indian, and Greek-mystery religions became integral portions of western faith which today is called Christianity.

CONCLUSION

The broad appeal of Christianity stems from the fact that it is a synthesis of the most important doctrines which had already been developed in the great pre-Christian pagan cultures during thousands of years.

Had this not been so, it would simply have been a narrow creed and would, like many others, soon have vanished from the stage of history. The central elements in the Synoptic Gospels (Matthew, Mark, and Luke) are:

- The divine, atoning, and sacrificial savior, who gives his own life to redeem that of mankind and who, by rising from the grave, is empowered to confer divinity and immortality upon them also
- An ethical system which makes everyone economically and politically equal in a social order where want and injustice are forever abolished
- A doctrine concerning the after-life according to which the redeemed will enjoy everlasting happiness in communion with each other in a kingdom of righteousness
- The promise of an imminent Second Coming, when the Savior as the Great Messiah will reappear in power to conduct the Last Judgment and institute the kingdom of heaven, which will then belong to the saints forever.
- The redeemed would be healed of all physical and spiritual maladies in time for all eternity.

What will be most shocking to you as a typical Gentile Christian is that the immediate source of these concepts was the Essene society; but their ultimate origins must be traced to the mystery-cults and the major religions of the pre-Christian-world.

I know this is a shock to many of our readers. Let me only say that we have in reality no recourse but to reevaluate the Christian faith in light of this information and re-examine Yeshua the Jew to see if we be in the faith of Torah and Tanakh. One must realize that the early church, Essenic in character, has put much into the mouth of Jesus on the pages of the New Testament. As you can see Yeshua was not a Christian but a Jew and it would serve us well to investigate Biblical Judaism as the faith once given to the saints. If those doctrines as espoused by the Essenes can be found in the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings, so be it and this is good. If not however, and if these Essenic religious beliefs which can be found not only in their sectarian writings as well as the New Testament can be shown to contradict Moses and the Prophets, then they must be cast aside as leaven. Shalom.

THE QUEST FOR THE PROMISED LAND

Take just a minute to think with me about the "promised land."

Answer for yourself: What is it about this land that has spawned war after war? What is it about this land that energizes other nations to seek it for their own?

In reality the "promised land" is a hard and inhospitable place - both physically and politically. This is all the more intriguing since it has been chosen as the cradle for three of the world's great religions. It is a small strip of land, no bigger than Wales, that seemed to mimic in miniature the topography of the great Nile valley to the south west. That in itself is our first clue. Palestine is an arid land crossed by a valuable source of water for irrigation, in this case, the River Jordan. It is hardly prime real estate, yet this is a strip of land that has rarely seen peace over the last 3,500 years. It has been fought over by armies from all possible points of the compass: Egypt, Persia, Rome, Arabia, France, Germany and Britain. Some had conquered, others had been vanquished, but always there was conflict. It is curious why this should be so because it would appear that there is so little to be gained in the conquest of Palestine.

Answer for yourself: What did the invading armies really want, besides a barren conduit that ran between the great empires of Egypt and Persia?

As is often the case, the answer to this question is not always the most obvious one. Perhaps it is not the physical land that is the problem here, perhaps the fact that Palestine is the renowned center for both Western and Middle Eastern religions is the cause of this strife. These continual clashes do not seem to be just the usual conflicts caused by disputes over which religion is the more authoritative, they appear to be more like crusades in the pursuit of knowledge. Josephus Flavius, the first-century Jewish historian, seems to have agree with this when he described his religion thus:

a scheme, under which religion is the end aim of the training of the entire community, and the priests are entrusted with the special charge of it, and the whole administration of the state resembles some sacred ceremony. Practices which, under the name of mysteries and rites of initiation, other nations are unable to observe for but a few days, we maintain with delight and unflinching determination all our lives"* (Against Apion, Josephus, 2:189).

Quite obviously, the Jewish nation considered themselves to be the holders of a great and ancient tradition; there was sacred knowledge to be found in Palestine. This was the knowledge that, according to Josephus, Solomon traded with King Hirom in return for raw materials with which to build his great temple and that the crusader knights, like the Knights Templars, also fought for many centuries later (Against Apion, Josephus, 1:109).

This tradition of a sacred knowledge being held in this area has attracted kings and potentates from around the globe and it has caused the region much strife. Yet the root source of this knowledge would appear to be religious.

Answer for yourself: What could there possibly be in a religion to attract a neighboring civilization in such a manner? It is an interesting question and the answer to all these conundrums has to lie in the sacred books. The question before us is stated: "Which ones?"

THE RELIGIOUS CREED OPPOSES THE RELIGIOUS TEXTS

Religion is a curious subject. It is probably one of the first subjects we learn in the western world, yet it is probably one of the worst-taught and least understood subjects of all. These deficiencies and glaring gaps in our religious education exist because the texts do not agree with the creed and tradition which we are taught and in order to bridge these great theological chasms, the more contentious sections of the text are glossed over.

Bet Emet Ministry aims to provoke thoughts and discussions about the concepts of the four western religions, to reveal the dark corners of the Bible where the professionals dare not tread, the explosive secrets that they dare not mention. In addition I have on our other Websites, and continue in this Website, to explore how these religious texts evolved, what they are for and, indeed, in what way are they relevant to the modern world.

Answer for yourself: Is it possible for us to unearth the real history of religion, to uncover why it become such a central theme in the human psyche? Why, for instance, did a particular nation think that it was uniquely called upon to keep this tradition?

In fact the origins of western religions are more focused than just a particular nation, the history of Judaism revolves around the patriarchal family, that of Abraham, Joseph and Moses, but these figures are also central to the Christian, Islamic and Masonic faiths.

Answer for yourself: Why has this particular family line been picked out from among the countless millions of families as being so special in the history of mankind?

Out studies at Bet Emet Ministries has shown us beyond any doubt that there was a secret tradition wrapped up somewhere within the upper echelons of society in the ancient world. Jesus teaches us this same truth.

Matt 13:11 11 He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given. (KJV)

Matt 11:15 15 He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. (KJV)

There has always been a teaching for the laity and a deeper teaching for the "initiates."

Out studies over time narrowed down the origin of this "secret tradition" and we soon discovered that the obvious place to begin looking for that ancient tradition was Egypt, the mother of all civilizations. The subject matter was, therefore, to be the pharaohs of Egypt and the religion that was the foundation of that ancient and majestic empire.

Answer for yourself: Could any links be found within that sphere that pointed towards a secret tradition?

The answer is "yes." Let us begin an astounding study into recovering Divine Truth by taking note of the fact that in the book Act of God by Graham Phillips, on page 194, mention is made of the sixteenth-dynasty Hyksos pharaohs named "Yacobaam." If you take a minute to reflect upon this Egyptian name you might superficially see a striking similarity to the Hebrew name Jacob.

Answer for yourself: Could this possibly be the "Jacob" of the Old Testament?

Graham Phillips continued in his book to elaborate upon the Amarna Dynasty and unless one was especially perceptive one might pass by that name never recognizing the similarity to the name "Jacob." Like so many scholars before, including Josephus, Graham Phillips had probably thought this association was an impossibility and he sped onto other topics and in so doing the "secret tradition" remained just so.

But the links are so obvious that I cannot believe that these traditions have not been seen before. Perhaps one or two historians in the past have seen the link, but maybe looked again and, not liking the consequences of such a discovery, they moved onto less controversial topics. But there is much here that calls to be investigated and investigated we did and we found the "motherload."

I guess the hardest thing to do when undertaking such a study is to cleanse our minds of the baggage of orthodox history and to question the veracity of every last snippet of information we are given. It never hurts to ask questions; especially concerning religious beliefs taken at face value without any scrutiny on our parts. This is sound policy in light of the fact we all most likely grew up believing in the "tooth fairy" and "Santa Claus" only to one day have our bubble burst by finding out that these staunch beliefs on our part were pure fantasy. I can remember it well; the day that I discovered that Santa Claus was not real. It is not pretty but the bottom line is that I had been lied to by the people I trusted most - my parents.

Answer for yourself: Could we have been lied to about much of our Western Religious Beliefs and not know it as well? "Impossible" you say; well then this website is for you because you will find without a doubt that we have.

The Purpose Of Life Is The Quest For Truth (Daniel L. Thrapp: The Choice Of Truth)

Since beginning my religious studies that included a heavy emphasis upon recovering the Jewish Roots of Christianity, I have been forced, by what I have learned in those early years of study, to question everything I have been taught ever since. The inference was clear: those in positions of power and influence were able to fabricate history to suit their own personal goals. Father Christmas may be a lie of no consequence, but if this had been done on one occasion, it was likely to be repeated.

Answer for yourself: How many more cherished beliefs like Santa Claus can we find in our religious tradition, beliefs, and history of the Christian Church?

You are about to embark on the most startling and important study of your whole life. What you will learn from this Website will answer more questions than you could ever ask about religion, the Old Testament, and the New Testament.

IN PREPARATION FOR OUR STUDY....THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

The Biblical patriarchs. Abraham, Isaac. Jacob and Joseph are among the most famous ancient personalities in the world. The story of their family has been translated into Every known language on this planet and the number of books on their lives run into billions - yet in the historical record, these people are not to be found.

Answer for yourself: Is that not slightly odd?

We are taught that these famous Biblical characters were merely shepherds, poor Bedouin herdsman who had visions of God and a profound insight into the ways of man. Yet the both the Bible and the ancient historians like Josephus declare that Abraham was a king.

Answer for yourself: Who are we to believe?

Jesus represents another Biblical conundrum. He is perhaps better known than the Old Testament patriarchs, he is supposed to be a god incarnate, yet once more not a single explicit word outside the Bible has been written about him. Any and all vague references to what might be thought to be him are recognized by scholars today to be forgeries by overzealous Christians down through the ages.

Answer for yourself: Don't you find this fact not only alarming but almost simply unbelievable?

Jesus, like the patriarchs, is portrayed as being a simple artisan, a manual labourer. However, the Bible gives us plenty of evidence that he was both wealthy and influential, with access to the old royal court of Herod.

Answer for yourself: Why does the church perpetuate these as well as other myths in their traditions that are easily contradicted by existing religious texts?

The teachings of Jesus were quite different from those promulgated today by Christianity: the latter were derived from the letters of a Jewish rabbi called Saul. Saul was one of the most influential people in the world in the last 2,000 years, yet once more we do not know who he was in the historical record.

Answer for yourself: What is going on here?

This Biblical story that has circulated around the globe is simply a history of one family, Abraham and his descendants. His family has achieved this supreme fame and notoriety because they were very famous and extremely important in their own era. In fact, during his lifetime, Abraham was the most powerful man on Earth. The reason for this is simple once you do sufficient study, for you see, Abraham, himself a Gentile, was a pharaoh of Egypt!

This is why his story has been told and retold down the millennia. It is the story of a royal bloodline, the oldest family tree in the world. These kings were born of the Elohim: they were not only royal. but they were also semi-divine. They were supremely wealthy and they were ultimately powerful.

All of the major Biblical characters from the Old Testament up to the great Exodus were pharaohs of Egypt and the correlations that can be found between the Bible and the Egyptological record are simply overwhelming. We will examine these in forthcoming articles where you can see the conclusive proof of such a statement.

We inherited from Ezra today a thoroughly reworked Tanakh that has obscured and concealed almost totally the Egyptian connection with both Judaism, Christianity, and Islam and true origin for the Jewish people. The story is involved and one article cannot attempt to give all the facts necessary to explain these happenings in detail. Thus the need for a new website that will tackle this problem. What we will learn along the way will be short of breathtaking and you will quickly see how our religious texts, both Old and New Testament, have been adjusted in places to ensure that the reader comes away oblivious and unmindful of the Egyptian roots of both the Jewish, Christian, and Islamic faiths and the debt that these three world religions own to it. It is to this cover-up and presentation of these facts to which we turn at present. Let us keep in mind throughout our study of this site not only the genesis and origin of the earliest Divine Revelations given to Egypt but how these would be later altered and changed respectfully by each of these three world religions down through history. I don't know about you but I was always taught in Seminary that the earlier we look into the origin of a religious doctrine and doctrine the more truthful and accurate it really is. I will leave you with that thought as we proceed in our studies. You can determine if this axiom is correct as you study and see for yourself the adulterations and alterations of God's earliest Divine Revelations given Egypt and their Ethical Monotheism which is sadly portrayed today to the world as polytheism by Christianity and others who fail to understand correctly the beauty of the Egyptian faith in God. Such is the lie and it goes on and on.

EZRA AND HIS INFLUENCE UPON THE REWRITING OF THE HEBREW SCRIPTURES AND JEWISH HISTORY

Scholars will tell you today that Judaism was created by the Persians in the fifth century.

Answer for yourself: Then what was the religious roots of the Jewish people before the influence of Ezra and Persia upon the Jewish nation and this creation of Judaism in the fifth century? Well get ready for the shock of your life.

TIME FOR SOME BACKGROUND INFORMATION

Colonistswere deported into Palestine under the influence of Ezra and Nehemiah; both members of Cyrus court. Their reward was to have control of a temple state which collected taxes for Persia and served as a buffer state between Persia and Egypt who often were at war. Only priests of the temple state were Jews—a nation of priests. The history of the Jews was reinterpreted and even "invented" by Ezra from Assyrian records and imagination in order to energize a people who were taught that they were former apostates who had to obey God diligently to atone for their past failings.

The Persian religion, founded by Zoroaster (or Zarathrustra) and whose priests came to be called the Magi, has had an influence on the world which today is unrecognized.

- The Neo-Pythagoreans owed much to Persian religious belief. Indeed Pythagoras himself was said to have learnt from both the Magi of Babylon as well as the Priests of Egypt.
- The apocryphal Book of Tobit seems to contain a lot of Persian religious teaching.
- There seem to be links between the Jewish philosopher, Philo of Alexandria, and Zoroastrianism (Persian religious beliefs).
- The Neo-Platonist leader, Appolonius, came from Tyana, a Cappadocian city where Persian influence was strong.
- Gnosticism was also indebted to Persian religion.
- Plainly the Dead Sea Scrolls of the Qumran Community had an astonishing flavor of Persian religion, and
- so does Christianity.

The appearance of the Wise Men of the East, considered to be Magi, in the gospel of Matthew offering gifts to the infant god seems to be a symbolic assertion that this new Christian god was superior to those of the Persian religion. This account mentioning the Persian Magi certainly implies that the writer of the Gospel of Matthew was aware of this Persian link with the Persian religious belief and needed to demonstrate to others who might notice it that his "Jesus" story was not indebted to Persian religion but rose above it.

Zoroaster was the driving force behind the Persian Religion and a real person but when he lived is unsure, not because there is doubt that he did but, because the evidence of the date is contradictory. It could have been any time between 1400 and 700 BC. Thus Zoroaster either preceded or was a contemporary of the prophets of Israel, Buddha, Confucius and Lao-Tse. Probably about 1000 BC is the best guess because the Gathas of Zoroaster (eighteen hymns composed by the great poet-prophet Zarathustra around 1200 B.C.) have certain things in common with the Vedas of India which are dated about then.

Before anyone other than the Pharaoh Akhenaton (the Biblical Moses), Zoroaster introduced monotheism; but understand that Monotheism began with Egypt and not Persia. We need to understand right from the beginning that Ormuzd was one of the highest gods in Egyptian belief, he being the personification of spiritual goodness, and the deadly enemy of Ahriman (the adversary). The closest that Egyptian mythology comes to the Devil, Ahriman was regarded as the antithesis of the gods of Egypt, the personification of darkness and evil, and the eternal enemy of the highest and most exalted Egyptian god, Ormuzd. These two are, in fact, not so much considered as gods, but as pure spiritual beings, perhaps the fathers of the Egyptian gods that followed. In Persian mythology, too, Ahriman is seen as the personification of evil, he leading the dark forces against the hosts of Spenta Mainya, the holy spirit, who assisted Ahura Mazdah, the wise lord, and final victor of the cosmic conflict (dualism).

Understand as well that all world religions were influenced one way or the other by Egyptian religion. Some nations kept these original Divine ideas concerning God intact as taught by Egypt; others however made changes. Over time mankind fell away from this simple understanding of God which Egypt understood and left recorded for us in the oldest religious documents known to mankind. The various tribes of Persia worshipped a pantheon of lesser gods and spirits, called Ahuras, but Zoroaster declared Ormuzd or Ahura Mazda, the Lord of Light, to be the single true God above all others as Moses (Akhenaton) had done previously in Egypt in declaring Aten the Supreme God over all others. Ormuzd is the same as Varuna of the Vedas. Like Varuna, he has a surrounding court of ministering spirits. Ormuzd was "Lord", "The Wise Lord", "The First and the Last", "The Father of the Good Thought". He created Right. He promised eternal life to good people:

In eternity shall the souls of the righteous be joyful.

To follow goodness or evil was one's personal choice. In the later development of the Persian Religion, Ahriman, the Devil, becomes identified with the Evil Spirit, but in the Gathas of Zoroaster the Evil Spirit is actually one of the two aspects of Ormuzd himself, the other being the Holy Spirit. We have nothing new here when you stop to consider that the concept of evil and the origin of evil has perplexed mankind's greatest thinkers since time immemorial. Attempts have been made to explain the origin of evil by attributing this origin of evil to a secondary entity at war with God and in so doing protecting the integrity and picture of an all-loving God. Even the Jewish sages were perplexed with this problem as seen in laying the blame of the census taken by David which resulted in God's punishment of Israel upon Satan when the other corresponding passage records that it was God Himself which moved David to take the census. Persian Religions was no different than the Judaism influenced by it in coming up with an alternate way of explaining how good and evil both come from the God of all things. When Ahriman became identified with the Evil Spirit, Ormuzd became a purely Holy Spirit. But man had free will to refuse evil in both stages of the religion. Thus we have the underpinnings of the development of an Ethical Monotheism.

Bliss shall flee from them that despise Righteousness. In such wise do you destroy for yourselves the spiritual life.

Either Zoroaster was a High Priest or "Zoroaster" later became a title meaning High Priest for he is sometimes referred to as the best or highest "Zoroaster" suggesting a hierarchy of priests or possibly a group of them at community level led by a "pontifex maximus". Later the Persian priestly caste were called the Magi (like the Brahmins of India) whose leader was considered a direct successor to Zoroaster. They introduced new elements into the Persian religion and revived some old ones.

Zoroaster, like Christians, wanted to convert everyone: he sent missionaries as far as Hindustan. It has been said that Zoroaster taught nothing about God which a Christian would not endorse and much that a Christian should add:

- He was threatened with death by a king as a baby
- Started his ministry at 30
- Underwent a period of temptation
- Had a healing ministry
- Had a teaching ministry
- He championed the oppressed
- Lived an ascetic life
- He was murdered.

Alexander's conquests (330 BC) led to the destruction of many Egyptian and Zoroastrian texts. According to Diodorus, the historian, the Persian archives were held at Persepolis yet Alexander burnt the city and murdered many of Persia's leading scholars. In the second century BC a king called Valkash collected the remaining scattered manuscripts and the oral tradition and tried to reconstruct the holy works. Fortunately Zoroaster's Gathas, seventeen hymns composed by the great poet-prophet Zarathrustra around 1200 BC., being particularly sacred, seem to have survived essentially unaltered.

Other than Pharaoh Akhenaton (the Biblical Moses) whose efforts were primary in the influence upon the Hebrews toward monotheism we need look to Zoroaster who many scholars see as also influencing the introduction of monotheism to the Jewish people after their exile in Babylon and Persia. It has been said that the concept of Ormuzd is closer to that of the Jewish God than that of any other eastern religion. Yet prior to exile the Jewish god was a tribal god—one of many Semitic tribal gods and few Christians are aware of this fact.

WHY DID ISRAEL NEED TO BE TAUGHT MONOTHEISM?

The Israelites were not monotheists. At this time the Jewish nation captive in Persia worshipped primarily a tribal god. This, of necessity, implies polytheism since there are other tribes. The idea of the covenant with one tribe, the Israelites, implies polytheism. In it God commands:

Thou shalt have no other gods before me (Exodus 20:3), admitting there were other gods which these people worshipped when previously in Egypt. Monotheism for Israel came later (Isaiah 43:10-13, Jer 10:1-16).

Isa 40:10-13 10 Behold, the Lord GOD will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him. 11 He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young. 12 Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance? 13 Who hath directed the Spirit of the LORD, or being his counsellor hath taught him? (KJV)

Jer 10:1-10 1 Hear ye the word which the LORD speaketh unto you, O house of Israel: 2 Thus saith the LORD, Learn not the way of the heathen, and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed at them. 3 For the customs of the people are vain: for one cutteth a tree out of the forest, the work of the hands of the workman, with the axe. 4 They deck it with silver and with gold; they fasten it with nails and with hammers, that it move not. 5 They are upright as the palm tree, but speak not: they must needs be borne, because they cannot go. Be not afraid of them; for they cannot do evil, neither also is it in them to do good. 6 Forasmuch as there is none like unto thee, O LORD; thou art great, and thy name is great in might. 7 Who would not fear thee, O King of nations? for to thee doth it appertain: forasmuch as among all the wise men of the nations, and in all their kingdoms, there is none like unto thee. 8 But they are altogether brutish and foolish: the stock is a doctrine of vanities. 9 Silver spread into plates is brought from Tarshish, and gold from Uphaz, the work of the workman, and of the hands of the founder: blue and purple is their clothing: they are all the work of cunning men. 10 But the LORD is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlasting king: at his wrath the earth shall tremble, and the nations shall not be able to abide his indignation. (KJV)

After the return from the exile (following Persia's conquering of Babylon), when the sages wrote down the holy books, they introduced ideas from Zoroastrianism. The Jew's tribal god became a universal God but one which still favored his Chosen People. Deutero-Isaiah contains the first monotheistic declarations in the Bible; the first expression of universalism which has no antecedent in the Bible. In ancient Persia, Ahura ("Lord") is the title of gods, and the name for gods and spirits. The name was used to make a clear distinction between the Ahuras and the Daevas, who originally belonged to the same classification of godlike entities. The Daevas were in later religion degraded to the lesser beings, demons or devils, they are now.

At the time of the Jewish exile in Babylonia, much Zoroastrian thought had the chance to enter Judaism and surely did. Scholars once took this for granted. Thus, in Jeremiah, Rab-Mag was the chief of the Magi. 2 Chronicles, Ezra and Deutero-Isaiah show how close Persian and Jewish thought was. Darius Hystaspes, the Persian King of about 550 BC, worshipped Ormuzd. He was probably a Zoroastrian, as was his father Cyrus. Jewish history is dated from the reign of Persian kings and the Persian king Cyrus is seen as a Deliverer. He rebuilt the Jerusalem Temple as we know from inscriptions as well as the Old Testament and was much admired by the prophet, Isaiah. Herodotus confirms that he was a noble king.

The Jews, as well as Christianity today, derive most of their modern doctrines from Persian religion, the religion founded by Zoroaster. Persia gave Judaism its angelology, the immortality of the soul, the doctrine of the millennia , the heavenly book in which human actions are inscribed, a Last Judgment, rewards or punishments after death, paradise on earth or in heaven, hell, the final transformation of the earth and resurrection. Satan first appeared in Judaism as God's servant, His prosecutor, but with Persian influence he evolved into a Jewish Ahriman, God's enemy. The Messiah, conceived as a human warrior King who would save his people from oppression like king David of old, evolved into a cosmic saviour very similar to the Persian Saoshyant.

Ancient Judaism knew of no Last Judgement but they did in Egypt where the Hebrews once lived. This is just one example where the earliest Divine Revelations of mankind as held by the Egyptians were later altered by later nations. Before the exile the Jewish concept of death was Sheol, a dark and dismal place with no memory of God. After it the concepts of Heaven and Hell had emerged and the Jews had a doctrine of resurrection and Judgement for all. Ironically Persian religion restored this religious belief to the Jewish people which they had encountered before in Egypt. The "dry bones" of Ezekiel seems to be based on the Persian custom of leaving the dead to be picked by birds in towers, so that they do not defile the earth, after which they could be resurrected. The Persians, like the post-exilic Jews, believed the soul remained with the body for three days—a dead person was not really dead until the fourth day when the soul had departed. This explains why Jesus was to rise on the third day. It also shows that the raising of Lazarus was an afterthought. The greatness of the miracle of raising Lazarus in the fourth gospel is that he had been dead for four days. His soul had departed and he was beyond recall. Such is the influence of Persian Religious beliefs upon the Jewish nation.

Before the exile, the Jews conceived of their anthropomorphic tribal God as a vengeful, bloodthirsty and jealous God of fear. The priests returning from captivity had seen an image of a much nicer god. They wanted a good, perfect, remote and universal God of love—just like Ormuzd, the Persian Most High God. But they had to persuade the men of the land, the ordinary untaught and unskilled Jews who had never been in captivity, that the change was what they wanted. This would not be easy as the Old Testament testifies.

WHO WERE NEHEMIAH AND EZRA? WERE THEY JEWS?

By the order of Artaxerxes I (Ardeshir I) (465-424 B.C.) the walls of Jerusalem were built, and two of the royal court officials, Nehemiah and Ezra were commissioned to compile the Judaic dispensation (445-393 B.C.). Most Jews in Palestine did not want to change their religion and their concepts of God and resisted the Persian influence brought to them in the return of the captive Jewish nation from Persia. Nehemiah and Ezra came from Persia to make the Jews adopt this new image of god molded in this Persian way.

Because of the Persian protection and favorable attitude of the Achaemenid Kings, the Jews entertained warm feelings thereafter for the Persians and this made them more receptive to their influence. The vast difference between the preexilic and postexilic Judaic scriptures is so discernible that even Sigmund Freud contended that there could have been two Moses. We shall see upon study that innovative teachings of Zarathrustra-Zoroaster had been intermingled with the concepts of the Jew's earlier faith and some of his doctrinal views had been expanded and even altered beyond their originality as we find in Judeo-Christianity today.

- The new Zoroastrianism at this era, believed in one universal God, Ahura Mazda. But the six divine attributes were often envisioned as separate entities, perhaps in the form of archangels that with Ahura Mazda at the center, at times illogically were called seven Amesha Spenta.
- There was battle between the forces of good and evil, with the ultimate victory of good over evil. Those who sided with the forces of good, were supporting the Divine cause. The evil forces were regarded as anger, envy, lies and environmental pollution, etc. In effect the Zoroastrian followers had developed a form of angelology and demonology.
- The Persians believed in liberty and freedom of choice, as reflected in the Gathas and the texts of later Avesta.
- Another Zoroastrian concept was The Kingdom of God or chosen government, wherein all the virtuous men and women reside freely and choose leaders for their righteousness, and the oppressed will be rehabilitated. The goal was for everyone to work toward establishing the "chosen government" where good overcomes the evil.
- They believed in immortality of soul, life after death, that the souls of the dead will be judged for their deeds of the past on the bridge of judgement (Chinovat), where they were guided by their conscience and judged by three angels (Mithra, Rashn, Sraosha), who were to differentiate them and determine the eternal dwellings of the two groups in heaven or hell.
- Resurrection (Rastakhiz) or the end of the world, when the dead revive and the new world will have a fresh life and new beginning (Farsho Kerat or fresh act).
- In the Gathas, Saoshyant is a general term and means benefactor. There are benefactors of the past, present and future, but no reference is made to any promised person who shall advent. The concept of future benefactors however at this time had been transformed into the savior of future who will perform the task of resurrection.
- The Israelites on the other hand, based on the preexilic writings had not developed eschatology. They rather believed in Sheol or an underground and desolate world where the good and bad after death will equally end up. Therefore the notions of judgement after death and reward of heaven and retribution of hell, were nonexistent in their tenets.
- Yahweh was the covenant god of Israelites and did not have a universal status, the dualistic forces of good and evil, angelology and demonology were absent in their beliefs as reflected in the books of preexilic Judaism.

Now we come to Ezra and his influence in the creation of Judaism (pseudo-Persian religion). In 397 BC Ezra was sent from Babylon by Artaxerxes, the Persian king, to teach in Israel statutes and ordinances (Ezra 7:10)

Ezra 7:10 10 For Ezra had prepared his heart to seek the law of the LORD, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments. (KJV) and to see if the people of Judaea were agreeable to the law of God. They were not teaching any religion that the people of Judaea could understand. Ezra is described in Nehemiah 8, reading from a book of law which neither Hebrew speakers nor Aramaic speakers could understand—the words had to be translated by the then Persian priests.

Neh 8:1-12 1 And all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before the water gate; and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded to Israel. 2 And Ezra the priest brought the law before the congregation both of men and women, and all that could hear with understanding, upon the first day of the seventh month. 3 And he read therein before the street that was before the water gate from the morning until midday, before the men and the women, and those that could understand; and the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law....7 Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law: and the people stood in their place. 8 So they read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the people did not understand what Ezra was saying and had to be instructed by men sent among the crowds as Ezra taught? What language was this? What book of law was it? Why were these people not familiar with what Ezra was teaching if this was their faith? And how come that they did not know anything about the festival which Ezra proclaims?

Neh 8:10-11 So the Levites stilled all the people, saying, Hold your peace, for the day is holy; neither be ye grieved. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the people had to be "stilled" [told to be silent] since they were in an uproar about what was being taught to them? If this was their prior faith then what could have been the problem? Or was this their prior faith as taught and understood by Moses? Was their faith being changed? (THINK).

The books of Ezra and Nehemiah indicate that they were successful in achieving widespread religious conversion in Ezra 6:19-21 and Nehemiah 10:28-29.

Answer for yourself: What were these people converting to? Simply a new Persian spin on their existing religious faith or a great divergence from Mosaic faith?

THE INFLUENCE OF EZRA...THE COVERUP OF THE EGYPTIAN ROOTS OF THE JEWISH PEOPLE

Zoroasterhad subjected the Aryan tribal gods to the one Most High God, Ormuzd. It is plain that Ezra, at the behest of the Persian king, was trying to do the same.

What I will say next will be hard for many to accept and I can only say you need to study. Much happened with the history of the Jewish people since leaving Egypt under Moses. Much happened to the earlier concepts of God which the Jewish people were exposed to while in Egypt. Some they retained and some they did not. Since leaving Egypt the influence of monotheism under Akhenaton had not taken hold as hoped as much of the Old Testament records; the oscillation between polytheism and monotheism by the Jewish nation continued and we see the result of this in the repeated judgments of God upon them because of such idolatry. This pattern of oscillation continued up until about 400 BC when Jerusalem comes under the power of the Persians. It is at this time that Ezra and Nehemiah formulated the Jewish scriptures as we have them today. In so doing however much of the tradition and history of the Jewish people were changed at the whim of Ezra; especially the links and legacy of Egypt owing to the fact that Persian and Egypt were often at war. In so doing Ezra changed the identities of the heroes of the Jewish people from Pharaohs to Patriarchs. Likewise anything concerning Egypt was portrayed in a negative light and the true reasons for the Exodus were obscured in order to cloud or conceal the Egyptian roots of these Jewish people. Ezra wrote out much of the Jewish mythology and altered many of the identities of the "Patriarchs;" incorporating a multitude of laws intended to make the Jewish gods into a single monotheistic god akin to Ormuzd, and the Jews into a civilized people. Let us understand that much of what Ezra did accomplished much good for the Jewish nation as it instilled an Ethical Monotheism into this people who had failed to adopt such an understanding of God when first introduced to it by Egypt and Akhenaton (Moses). Yet in so doing many of the earlier understandings of God, uniquely from an Egyptian viewpoint, were lost along with important information that comes from the Jewish Nation being influenced by Egypt. Where any Persian concepts appear in the Jewish scriptures at a time before the captivity, they have been written anachronistically into the account by the post-exilic priesthood. The writing of these religious documents by Ezra from the Persian religious persuasion was necessary if the Jewish people were to be sent back to their land and become a "buffer" nation separating Persia and Egypt with the hope of maintaining pro-Persian allegiances. In order for that to happen the Jewish people and their religion had to become Persian in many aspects and so it would.

One of Ezra's major reform was the prohibition of foreign wives. Marrying foreign wives had been Hebrew practice. The land of Canaan had not so much been conquered as the legend of Joshua makes out, as infiltrated by marriage of Hebrew men to Canaanite women. But inter-racial marriages were disapproved in Zoroastrian law. The distinction between clean and unclean animals in Leviticus and Ezekiel was from the Vendidad, a Zoroastrian holy book, which explains it. The purification rituals are identical in the Pentateuch and the older Vendidad. Ezra also introduced the new festival of booths in the seventh month, the Zoroastrian holiday of Ayathrem.

The Jews resisted the imposition of Zoroastrianism as Judaism. They opposed the building of a new temple with a vast treasure given by Cyrus. The native Israelites built their own temple on Mount Gerizim and wrote Jerusalem out of their Pentateuch. The Persian governors and priests in Jerusalem caused a great schism in the name of Judaism. The Sadducees, stood by the older traditions and believed in no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit (Acts 23:8)—no Persian innovations for them. The Pharisees or Persian faction—Pharisee, Parsee, Farsi—never numbered very high, not more than 6,000, although only Pharisaism survived the fall of Jerusalem in 70 AD.

THE ESSENES AND PERSIA

Zoroastrian parallels with the Qumran and Essene documents are huge. The Damascus Document condemns those who enter the New Covenant but then leave to join the Liar. The Habakkuk Commentary enlarges on the theme of the Liar, telling of trouble within the community when the Liar secedes from the order and comes into conflict with the Teacher of Righteousness. In 2 Corinthians 11:31, Paul is insistent that he "does not lie" apparently answering an unpleasant criticism of him. The choice of language in these instances stems from Zoroaster. For Zoroaster the enemy was within, the Druj or the Lie.

The Qumran Community was an apocalyptic sect. They were expecting the end of the world. The apocalyptic movement arose with the death of classical Jewish prophecy when the Israelites were carried off to Babylon which soon became absorbed into the empire of the Persians. The Enoch-Essene Literature is Persian of about the fourth century BC. Apocalypticism seems to owe a great deal to Persia and the influence of Persian religion on Judaism stems partly from the apocalyptic writers. The Qumran library proves that Apocalypticism was a considerable movement in Judaism not merely a fringe interest. Christian theologians used to believe that the anticipation of God's kingdom to come was uniquely Jesus's message. Now we see it was hundreds of years old, had come out of Persia with the exiles and had been perpetuated by the Essenes.

THE MESSIAH AND PERSIA

In the preexilic period, Messiah was only a title of honor granted to important people, and generally the holder of the title was regarded as a person close to Yahweh. During the postexilic era however, it became an especial title for the Lord's Messiah. Fohrer (Fohrer G., Geschichte der Israel) after a careful analysis concludes that all the sections relevant to the advent of Messiah have entered the holy book during the postexilic era, and 2nd Isaiah is the prophet who in particular refers to the end of the world and coming of the Messiah (Ashtiyani J., A Research in Judaism, p. 366, in Persian). It is generally accepted that the prophets of Israel after liberation from the Babylonian captivity, in order to generate hope and confidence among the demoralized Jews, introduced the Persian concepts of future hopes such as victory of good over evil, resurgence of Israel, resurrection, future life, heaven and hell and the Kingdom of God. Particularly as the Israelites in this era longed for the reestablishment of Kingdom of David, they developed the notion of Messiah and in effect envisioned the Kingdom of Yahweh in the form of the promised Messiah that was different from the earthly Kingdoms (Ashtiyani J., A Research in Judaism, p. 465-366, in Persian). In other words the political hope of restored Jewish Kingdom headed by a "Meshiach Yahweh" came to be associated with the prophetic and apocalyptic vision of a Kingdom of God in the End of Days (Encyclopedia of Religion, Edited by Vergilius Ferm, Philosophical Library, 1981, p. 485). The prophets Haggai and Zechariah saw in Zerubbabel the possible fulfillment of this hope (Encyclopedia of Religion, Edited by Vergilius Ferm, Philosophical Library, 1981, p. 485). Thus, the concept of Kingdom of God, originally professed by Zarathrustra as "the chosen government", was eventually transferred through Judaism to Christianity and transformed into the "Kingdom of God". In Isaiah 42: 1-4, "the savior has the spirit of God and will not rest until he has established justice all over the world". Isaiah 11:6 after discussing the above adds after the coming of the Savior "world will live in peace, wolves will live in peace with lambs, and leopards will lie down to rest with goats". This notion is also reflected in Isaiah 62:25. Zechariah 4:14 even speaks of two saviors who are standing before Yahweh. Von Gall suggests that the writers of the book should have had the knowledge of two Zoroastrian saviors, of the later Avesta. Hoshidar and Hoshidar-mah (Von Gall A., quoted from A Research in Judaism, p. 367 in Persian by J. Ashtiyani). Some Authors contend that the three Magi who visited Jesus Christ at birth, were following the call for the future Saoshyant. The Jewish messianic ideal of a Deliverer as you can see came from Persia.

Another new development in the postexilic Judaism is belief in angels. Mills mentions that "the angelology of the oldest scriptures which was nearly as dim as their Sheol, became occupied with such figures as Michael and Gabriel (Michael (Daniel 10:21), Gabriel (David 9:21) while the number seven attached to them is as conspicuous as is significant" (Mills L. H.: Zarathrustra, Philo, The Achaemenids and Israel, A.M.S. Press, New York, 1977, p. 436). The seven postexilic angels (Gabriel, Michael, Raphael, Israfil, Israel, Uhiel and Uriel) are vividly reminiscent of the seven Amesha Spenta of the later Avesta. Another striking finding is "the person of devil as Satan ceased to remain a general term and became a proper names" (Mills L. H.: Zarathrustra, Philo, The Achaemenids and Israel, A.M.S. Press, New York, 1977, p. 436) and demonology began to develop. The struggle between the forces of good and evil, or light and darkness as reflected in the scrolls of Dead Sea reflects the Persian influence.

In Persian religion Ahriman (Satan) and his angels rose out of the Abyss to attack the Good spirit and the Angels of Light. Neither good nor evil was victorious but eventually Ahriman will be defeated by a Deliverer sent by god, the Saoshyant (Messiah). The Saoshyant, of the line of Zoroaster or perhaps the prophet himself reincarnated, heralds the beginning of a new age. There follows a "Day of the Lord" and trial by ordeal for mankind when the earth will be flooded with molten metal which burns up the wicked but allows the righteous to bathe in it as in warm milk. The earth would be levelled into a great plain just as it is in Isaiah 40. Finally Ahriman will be cast back into the Abyss and mankind will ascend to the realm of light to dwell with Ormuzd. There will be no repentance or pardon—in life, evil deeds can only be cancelled out by good deeds, and judgement is on this balance.

THE ESSENES AND THE SCROLLS OF QUMRAN...MORE PERSIAN RELIGION

Such a dualistic doctrine was unknown to the ancient Hebrews. But the Qumran documents speak of Good and Evil; Light and Dark, the Way of Darkness and the Way of Light, the Spirit of Darkness and the Spirit of Light, The Children of Darkness and the Children of Light, Truth is Light, Falsehood is Darkness. The Teacher of Righteousness is opposed by Belial, the Demon of Evil. The Way of Good leads to salvation, the Way of Evil leads to torment. Of the four gospels, John reflects this terminology most accurately showing its Essene links. In 2 Corinthians 11:12-15, Paul criticizes the Archapostles as disguising themselves as "Servants of Righteousness" and uses the sentence "Satan disguises himself as an Angel of Light" both betraying Qumran influence and apparently deliberately used against the upholders of the Community tradition.

The discovery of Khirbet Qumran-Essene scrolls in the caves of Dead Sea in 1947, shed light on the Essenes' tenets and practices. A French author, named Dupont Sommer, after reviewing the text of the scrolls, found many evidences of Zoroastrian influence. The common beliefs of the Essenes and Zoroastrians have been analyzed by different authors and reported (Ashtiyani J., A Research in Christianity, in Persian. p. 124-126) as:

- Prohibition of sacrifices in the rituals: In the sect's chapter of worship, one finds that they had substituted the ritual of dedicating meat and fat to the fire, with the expression of devotion to God by genuine prayers of the lips, to tread the path of justice and perfection to receive the divine blessings.
- The appealing Zoroastrian doctrine that light stood for goodness and darkness for evil, had apparently spread to Palestine before the age of Qumran texts and had been accepted by all the sects (Golb N., Who Wrote the Dead Sea Scrolls?, Simon and Schuster, 1995, p. 81). The review of the Qumran Scrolls also reveals that the Essenes believed in a constant struggle between the forces of good and evil. One of the texts is conspicuously close to the teachings of Zarathrustra: "God created man to rule the world and granted him two spirits of evil and righteousness that are with him to the moment of judgement. From the fountain of light the righteous generation, and from the source of darkness the malicious and wicked men will come to existence. The ruler of the light is in control of the realm of righteous sons who proceed in the illumined path, and the other Kingdom is governed by the angel of darkness, where the sons of evil tread the dim path. All men originate from these two spirits and tread their paths. But God in His wisdom has determined the day when the followers of untruth are destroyed and righteousness prevails in the world". The above passage is reminiscent of Yasna 30, and in particular, the last two sentences that reflect the "freedom of choice" and "hope for the victory of righteousness" have striking resemblance to the pristine teachings of Zarathrustra in the Gathas.
- Belief in righteousness, justice and order and prohibition of lies which form the foundation of the Zoroastrian doctrine.
- The Essenes believed in freedom of choice as Zoroastrians did, and they professed everyone should choose his path freely. This concept reflects the Zoroastrian influence, as in the original Judaism, it was Yahweh who would choose his people and grant them the blessing of being the chosen.
- In contrast to a common belief that wisdom belongs to God, they believed in wisdom of man as well, and expressed interest in philosophy. In the Zoroastrian doctrine, wisdom is the source of all good deeds and only the wise will choose aright.
- Contrary to the original Judaism, the scrolls do not superscribe vengeance, instead they emphasize love, good deeds and justice. The Essenes believed in three principles of love of beneficence, love of mankind and love of justice.
- Particular attention was given to cleanness and general sanitation. The Essenes took a daily bath in cold water and like the Zoroastrians wore a clean white attire.

The Judeans did not believe in the immortality of soul and the concepts of eschatology generally were not accepted by them even after Christianity. But the Essenes believed in the immortality of body and soul and they regarded the body as the prison house where the soul was confined temporarily, and finally when departed would ascend high. The sect of Qumran also held as an opinion that the souls of righteous will have eternal life, likewise in the new Zoroastrianism Fravashi (the Divine essence) of all men belonged to God and after death returned to the Source.

- The Essenes also believed in the final day of Judgement, rewards and retributions.
- Their belief in the advent of Messiah resembles the concept of Saoshyant in the new Zoroastrianism.
- In the morning prayer, the Qumran sect revered the dawn, sun and light which illustrates the Persian influence. Josephus even goes further by suggesting that the Essenes engaged in some form of sun worship (Golb N., Who Wrote the Dead Sea Scrolls?, Simon and Schuster, 1995, p. 81).

CONTRIBUTIONS TO CHRISTIANITY

Let us never underestimate the enormous role played by Ezra in reformulating the Jewish Scriptures which laid the foundation for the latter influence of Judaism upon other world religions; especially Christianity. The permanent contribution of Zoroastrianism to European life and culture has come to us through its enormous influence upon the New Testament via the Essenes.

During the five centuries contact, interaction between the two traditions took place. The Jews under the Persian influence developed eschatology, angelology and demonology, and renewed hope for future in terms of victory of good over evil, advent of Messiah and establishing the Kingdom of Yahweh. Many of these doctrinal concepts, later were transferred to Christianity and Islam and were actually expanded them.

Essentially immortality of the soul, judgement and rewards and punishments after death were not recognized by the preexilic Judeans. Zaehner notes that the preexilic view of Sheol, a shadowy and depersonalized existence that is the lot of men regardless of their actions during life, was suddenly abandoned and replaced by the notions of heaven and hell, rewards and punishments when the exiled Jews came in contact with the Persians which later entered Christianity.

The Zoroastrians believed that the soul rises from the dead body and for three nights after death resides in the material world and then proceeds to the other world. This may be termed individual resurrection. Jesus Christ is also said to have risen from his sepulcher three days after crucifixion. The later Zoroastrianism also predicates a collective resurrection (Rastakhiz) when all the dead will rise. The concept of resurrection that was imbedded in parts of the early Hebrew scriptures as Exodus and Deuteronomy became vivid in writings of the postexilic prophets. Daniel 12:2-13 refers to rising after death and receiving rewards. In Isaiah 26:19, the dead will rise again from the graves, the ground will give birth to the dead.

Among the basic elements which the Synoptics obtained from Zoroastrianism we may mention the following: the intensely personal and vivid concepts of hell and heaven; the use of water for baptism and spiritual purification; the savior born of a true virgin-mother; the belief in demons who make human beings impure and who must be exorcised; the Messiah of moral justice; the universal judgment, based upon good and evil works; the personal immortality and the single life of every human soul; the apocalyptic vision and prophecy; and the final tribulation before the Parousia.

In addition, Paul, Revelation, and the Fourth Gospel drew heavily upon Zoroastrianism for elements which are absent from the Synoptics:

- the doctrine of absolute metaphysical dualism,
- the Logos concept,
- transformation into celestial spirits,

- the millennial kingdom, Armageddon,
- the final conflagration,
- the defeat of Satan,
- the renovation of the universe,
- and the celestial city to be lowered from the Supreme Heaven to the earth.

In Revelation, as in Zoroastrianism, seven is a holy and mystical number. Furthermore, we may note that until the middle of the third century, the Catholic Church shared with the Zoroastrians their horror for all idols, images, and altars. In the fifth century, the Church began accepting the doctrine of purgatory and early in the seventh this became established dogma.

And there were at least three other elements which Catholic Christianity drew from or shared with Zoroastrianism:

- first, an utter intolerance toward all other religions and the conviction that these were devil-cults;
- second, the demand on the part of the priesthood to be civil lawgivers as well as the masters of religious ritual and ceremonial; and,
- third, adoption of the Zoroastrian Ahriman and his creatures as the Christian devil and his imps, wizards, witches, and werewolves.

The Church took this infernal character to its heart and made of him the cornerstone of its speculative system.

CONCLUSION

Needless to say not all of the above contributions to Judeo-Christianity have proven good nor are they correct when compared to the earliest understanding of God and Ethical Monotheism on this planet as held by those who coined these concepts in the beginning; the Egyptians. I find without a doubt that after study of this Persian faith as it evolved into Judeo-Christianity that if one wants to get to the original concepts held by the earliest civilization concerning much of the religious beliefs that Persia adopted and later changed then one must begin his study with Egypt and their understanding of this Ethical Monotheism in its earliest form. Only then as one notes these beliefs in their inception and follows them in their transmutation over time can one come to understand for himself how the earliest and simplest messages of God were altered beyond recognition by successive conquering nations. I will leave that up to you...the reader.

THE ORTHODOX TRADITION VS THE TRUTH

If you were like me you more than likely never knew that Abraham was a King.

Answer for yourself: You mean that you never knew this about Abraham before?

We are so used to the orthodox ecclesiastical creed and traditions that we have forgotten, or never knew, that the biblical Abraham was, in fact, a King-Pharaoh of Egypt. That is right; a King-Pharaoh. All I ever was taught about Abraham was that he received promises from God that never were realized and lived in a tent as a pilgrim of sorts his whole life and had sheep; never receiving in this life but waiting for the world to come to inherit from God. But such is really not the case when you consult not only what archeology has to teach us but Egyptian and even Jewish history as well where we get a completely different picture of Abraham. Understand that this knowledge exists but it is buried deep and you really have to study hard to find it. This new image of King Abraham and his grandson Jacob is one we all need to inspect in minute detail, for if we do then we will see that it holds within it not only the key to the fundamentals of modern theology today but also shadows another image that is actually far removed from the traditional Christian, Jewish, and Muslim characterizations of the traditional Abraham as held by these respective faiths with which we are so familiar.

Answer for yourself: Is this quest for the truth about Abraham and Jacob which lies beneath tradition and the Bible of any relevance today?

Oh yes! Indeed, some may even be tempted to say that none of religion has any relevance in the modern world; it is something that society has largely outgrown. But look around the world, see the fervor with which it is followed in some quarters and observe the consequences of the conflicts that occur in its name. One only has to look at one's television or newspaper to see the constant quarreling and killing of Abraham's children by different divisions of his own family. Religion is still very important to us all, it is a subject that we must look to, learn from and, most importantly, learn about. A religious person has to be in command of all the facts in order to make an informed decision on his or her beliefs. Sadly such facts escape the sight of most students of the Bible; even most of its teachers today. We fail to look or even know we need to examine such areas of our faith. Even an atheist or an agnostic must know religion just as intimately, for how can you reject what you do not understand?

Our first task, as a student of this Website, therefore, is to lay bare the true foundations of our religious world here in the West. For the clergy, whom we entrust to educate us on religious matters, often tell the biblical stories to us without highlighting their ramifications. It is called "orthodoxy." We, in our ignorance, listen to their sermons but more often than not do not understand their meaning or spend the time later to inquire of such matters we fail to understand. The most fundamental thing to underline from the beginning is a little truth seems to always get forgotten about in ecclesiastic and clerical circles. What the priests forget to tell their flocks is that the Bible, the Koran and the Torah are all based on the same events; they all tell the same tale about the family history of Abraham, his forefathers and his descendants. Sadly the tale is not accurate in many respects.

Answer for yourself: So why is there so much disagreement? Is it remotely possible that neither camp, the Jews, the Christians, and the Muslims don't have the real truth about Abraham and his children? Could this truth, once recovered, lead the all three sects putting down their weapons and quit screaming at the top of their voice "we are right, you are wrong?" It sure would!

Many people, even today, may be tempted to look at one of these "other" religions and think that it is quite alien to their own and that its followers are somehow misguided. "We" are somehow quite civilized to have a particular religion, on the other hand, "they" are barbarians. It is a common failing to attach such labels and it is caused by a failure in our education. We are not taught in our religious instruction that Muslims, Christians, Jews and even Freemasons are all religious cousins. Indeed, the relationship is closer even than that; they are religious brothers, born from the same rootstock. But each has forgotten this secret; ironically all but the Freemasons (but who listens to them?).

THE STORY OF A BLOODLINE

The Jewish Torah, the older sections of the Islamic Koran and the Christian Old Testament are all based upon the same story, that of Abraham and his family. The five books of Moses, as these texts are sometimes known, are simply the story of a royal bloodline, but it is a story that has branched off in different eras and into slightly different sects. This most ancient of stories first divided in Babylon in about the 6th century B.C.E. with Ezra and the rewriting of the Jewish Scriptures from a pro-Persian viewpoint. At this time under the influence of Ezra and Nehemiah, both of whom came from the Persia Court of Cyrus, the Jewish Torah was founded. The story divided again in the first century AD, forming the Bible, and it branched off once more in the sixth century AD and the Koran evolved. Nevertheless the basic message remains the same, no matter how it is delivered.

One other religion has held the traditions of this sacred family, Freemasonry. I know that the following statement will not be popular, but in many respects, Freemasonry appears to have preserved an even older version and more accurate rendering of the history of this holy family than that even in the Torah, but much of this is still held in an oral tradition. In support of this notion, it is apparent that Masonry appears to keep many of the original cosmological and mathematical tenets that this biblical family was teaching. I will later in this Website, when your reading and study advances, present such evidence that will prove beyond any doubt to the reader that Masonry has preserved more faithfully the Divine Revelation of the Ancients than these other three world religions. The truth of this is seen in the fact that other religions tend now to regard astrology as merely a heresy, but yet Josephus and others teach us that Abraham was responsible for teaching such sciences to the world nations. But until Masonry becomes more open, we cannot tell how close to the original teachings of Abraham Masonry's "theology" really is or, indeed, how much it has been corrupted down the years. It would be interesting to compare the two and it is a shame we are denied the opportunity of further research in this field. Yet today books are being published that are bringing this information to light along with their links to Egypt from which the Jewish nation finds their birth.

Nevertheless the basic story remains the same in each of these religions. With some additions and some deletions, it is just the history of the family of Abraham and their descendents.

Answer for yourself: Why was this family so special that millions of books have been written about it and billions of people have believed in it and often laid down their lives for it?

Answer for yourself: Just what was it about this particular family that made it so important in the world? Clearly, something momentous must have happened in the distant past that led a particular family to believe that it was somehow very special and blessed by the gods, something that convinced their followers likewise.

This event, if we can trace any evidence of it, may be the basis for much of our religious beliefs.

In order to understand these religious texts, though, it is necessary to adjust our general perceptions of our theology. The first adjustment is to our time scale. Many people take history to be something very distant, with no connection and no influence on the present. They are wrong. History is relevant and the major upheavals that happened some 3,000 years ago still rumble on and are affecting our lives to this day, even if we do not realize it. Just look around and read the newspaper and you will see evidence galore that testifies to the importance of Abraham and his children and their misconceptions of their heritage. The bloodshed does not stop and has not for over two thousand years.

Ancient Egypt, however, was quite adept at thinking in vast time spans and it will be shown why this is important later. Manetho (Syncellus quoting Manetho), the Egyptian priest and historian, points to traditions that record the "flood" in the year 5500 BC. The Egyptians also appear to have recorded the precession of the axis of the Earth, the wobbling motion of the Earth, with records (extrapolations) going back some 36,000 years (Manetho, LCL, p. 233). Manetho quotes the precessional cycle of the Earth's axis as being some 36,000 years long, a vast span of time, and he is nearly right too, for the real cycle is about 25,700 years long.

This is a long tradition indeed, but the Egyptians were not so bold as to say that this marked the beginning of the world; it was just the beginning of Egyptian recorded history. Even if the Egyptians managed to conceptualize the aeons with ease, it is still difficult, perhaps, for us to make these readjustments to our time frame.

Understand that Egyptians like Manetho and others have preserved precious parts of history long forgotten by the common man. This information goes a long way in helping to recover the truth about men like Abraham and the other Patriarchs which orthodox traditions about them in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam have either forgotten or purposely covered it up. It is to this Egyptian link we must turn to see if what was understood about these great men and family has been faithfully transmitted to the world down through history.

It is to such a quest we now turn.

IS THERE HIDDEN MESSAGES IN THE BIBLE THAT WERE INTENDED ONLY FOR THE FEW?

We ended the prior articles by looking at Abraham, Jacob, and Joseph and making note that there is a lot of information concerning these men that lay outside the Bible that reveals their true identities to be Egyptian Pharaohs. This new found knowledge should leads us to question the Bible as the most reliable source of information as we once thought. It would seem that the Bible can be better understood when it is filtered through various historical sources along with the findings of archeology.

Answer for yourself: Could the Bible be only part of the story and we need need to look elsewhere in order to find the real truth behind the stories of the Bible?

Barbara Thiering in her two books on the same topic proposes a possible solution to the problem. She says that the biblical texts were really meant for two or more audiences and were composed in a form of Judaic writing known as the Pesher technique (Jesus the Man, Barbara Thiering). Ordinary people would see and hear only the simple pastoral tales and believe in a picture postcard life of farmers, families and the ways of leading a moral life. Yet the inner circle of initiates, those who had "ears to hear", could read between the lines in the text and follow the real agenda.

Answer for yourself: This is a logical deduction, but why the two classes of follower?

Barbara Thiering, in her book, reveals to us, through the example of Rome, that the religious texts of that time held the secrets of the Jewish freedom fighters who were pursuing a campaign against the Roman occupation of Israel. It is true that, at the turn of the first century, there were many fundamentalist Jewish factions who were fighting tooth and nail for independence from Rome. This was a course of action which eventually resulted in the sacking of Jerusalem by the Romans, the total loss of the Jewish homeland and the exile of much of the Jewish population. This was the fourth great exodus of the Jews, the one that most heavily reinforced the foundations of the Diaspora, the modern day expatriate Jewish population. It is quite reasonable to expect that any freedom fighters in that era, whose lives must have been in constant danger, would have wanted to keep their intentions secret. It is quite possible, therefore, that the religious texts they were writing may have held within them two layers of information, one for the laity and one for the rebels.

Answer for yourself: Was this literary technique used before by Ezra and other writers of the Old Testament?

Abraham's demotion in these religious texts from great military leader to lowly shepherd occurred well before any problems with Rome. The circumstances of Abraham's life in Egypt were very different from the later struggle with Rome for a homeland. The Jewish nation was not even supposed to have a homeland during Abraham's time, yet even in the Old Testament there is much deliberate obfuscation of the historical facts.

Answer for yourself: So why did the story of Abraham have to be altered so radically?

Answer for yourself: As we saw and wondered about in the prior article, why should any nation wish to say that one of its greatest military leaders was a mere "shepherd"?

It was not as if Abraham had fallen from grace among his people, for he is still revered as the patriarch. He is the founding father of the Jewish nation and ultimately the founder of Christianity and Islam too; he is a pivotal figure in all three of these religions. We can start to get closer to the truth by looking deeper into the texts, without trying to see so much that it obscures our vision.

THERE SEEMS TO BE TWO STORIES BEHIND MANY OF THESE RELIGIOUS TEXTS

I have found upon much study that there are two parallel stories in man of our Judeo-Christian religious texts. One is story for the common man and one for the initiate; one plain and one more subtle and more ancient. There are double meanings of many of our religious texts of the Bible that go unnoticed by the common man who has not studied and acquired such knowledge in order to recognize them. In fact I stumbled onto this reality almost by accident through my copious reading over the years. It was not until tracing the origin of many of Judeo-Christian religious beliefs backwards through time that I uncovered this fact when studying Egypt in detail and the role of the metaphysical in their religious beliefs. There it was....almost everywhere behind the religious texts that I had read my whole life; never realizing the "story behind the story." This I found to be absolutely fascinating and I could not put it down. I had discoverd the key of the Bible that many men had put much effort behind in order to hide from the common man.

JESUS TEACHES US THAT THERE ARE HIDDEN MEANINGS TO MANY BIBLICAL STORIES

This process of double meanings can be demonstrated by a rather nice example from the New Testament. Jesus himself confirmed that there are two meanings in the biblical stories. His disciples asked him why he always spoke to the common people in parables and the answer to this simple qciistion is quite peculiar:

Because it is given unto you lihe disciples] to know the secrets of the kingdom of heaven, but unto them [the people] it is not given (Matt. 13:11)

The sum and substance of this comment is startling: religion and those who control it withholds secrets from the people. The Priesthoods have always had secret knowledge that was kept from the common man in order to ensure their control over the masses. Usually this knowledge involed the stellar and solar aspects of creation and its influence upon nature and mankind. When this knowledge was mixed with fear it was easy to control nations.

Rome in the last two thousand years has mastered this technique and we fall prey to it every Sunday never realizing the reality of what entraps us. This line of reasoning is made even clearer in the Gospel of Philip from the Nag Hammadi scrolls. These scrolls comprise 52 manuscripts in Coptic script, found in Nag Hammadi in east central Egypt. Let us notice again our link with Egypt and secret knowledge. These Nag Hammadi scrolls are thought to be fourth-century copies of texts written in the first and second century. In these, Jesus said:

Now [the farmer] was a sensible fellow, and he knew what the food of each of them was. He served the children bread, he served the servants meal, barley and grass to the cattle, bones to the dogs and slops to the pigs. Compare the disciple of God, if he is a sensible fellow, the bodily forms will not deceive him ... There are many animals in the world which are in human form ... to the swine he will throw slops, to the cattle grass and barley, to the dogs he will throw bones, to the slaves he will give elementary lessons, and to the children he will give the complete instruction (Nag Hammadi Scrolls, Gospel of Philip).

Many may wish to dispute these gnostic gospels because it is not from the central cannon of the Western Roman Church. However, few stop to realize that Western Christianity won the theological wars over the Eastern Christian Church and in so doing these gnostic gospels and their understanding of the Christ would no longer be considerd to the valid depictions of the Christ. Ironically it is these Gnostic Scriptures that are the more faithful to the historical Christ and the beliefs of his followers than the Western version which is accepted today. It is in these Gnostic accounts concerning the Christ that we find these twin streams of religious though: one for the common man and one for the initiate. What Christians fail to realize is that Jesus taught the same things as recorded even in the Roman New Testament which opposed such Gnosticism. Roman censorship failed to purge truth completely from the New Tesament.

Let us look at what Jesus has to say on this issue of "secret knowledge" whom only a few were to possess.

Let us compare the sentiments given in the following paragraph with the way Jesus treated the Greek woman in the Gospels of Matthew and Mark. The two paragraphs dovetail exactly:

But Jesus said unto her, Let the children first be filled, for it is not [right] to take the children's bread and cast it unto the dogs. And she answered him and said unto him, Yes Lord, yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs (Matt. 15:26, Mark 7:27)

Above we see that Jesus teaches the exact same doctrine as the Gnostics in the Gospel of Philip and other Nag Hamamdi Scrolls. There can be no doubt that the paragraph from the Gospel of Philip is taken from the teachings of Jesus and, at the same time, it is a further verification that the Nag Hammadi scrolls are as authoritative in these matters as are the texts that were chosen to go into the Bible.

Answer for yourself: How does the depiction of Jesus in the Nag Hamamdi Scrolls agree and disagree with the depiction of Jesus in the Roman Bible?

Let us return to the passage about the Greek woman above. The more complete text from these valuable Nag Hammadi scrolls, now makes it perfectly clear why Jesus was calling this woman a dog. It was not a simple racist rebuke just because she was a Greek or a Gentile. It was more because she was not of his religion and she certainly was not an initiate into the secrets of his faith. Therefore, she was not entitled to the bread (the secrets) that was given to the children (the disciples).

Answer for yourself: What does that say about us as Christians today who practice a completely different faith from Jesus the Jew?

Such is the double talk and the double meanings that can be found in the Bible behind many stories that we have only taken at face value our whole lives. Truth is out there and I want it. I want to know as Jesus knew. That means we will never learn this information about God from our Roman Churches who went to great efforts to remove such knowledge from the world by burning the great Alexandian Library and millions of books down through history in order to make sure that such knowledge never made it into the hands of the common people. Thank God today that Rome did not burn and destroy it all and that archeology in the last 150 years has brought such knowlege to light once again.

A RELIGION FOR THE PRIESTS; ONE FOR THE PEOPLE

In Egypt, the core of religion was always somewhat separate from the laity; it was not something that they were deeply involved with. Certainly, they would have had a shrine in their houses and would have joined in the annual celebrations and festivals, but the heart of the Egyptian religion was always separate from the main population. The temples of Egypt may have been great meeting places for the people, but only the outer courts were available for the common man. Only important people would have been admitted to the courtyard inside the great pylons that flanked the entrance. It was in this inner courtyard that a great square rock crystal altar was placed, its upper surface unwroght and untouched, by any tool, just as cm be seeñ in the Great Crystal Altar at Kamak in ancient IThebes. In mirror fashion, the Bible describes how altars should be fabricated:

And thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift thy tool upon it, thou has polluted it (Exodus 20:25)

Answer for yourself: Is this a coincidence?

Again we see the link between Egypt and Israel. According to the plan laid down in the scriptures, the altar in the inner court of the temple at Jerusalem was constructed in just the same fashion as the one at Karnak in Egypt:

Within this enclosure is a square altar, built of heaped stones, unhewn and unwrought (Against Apion, Josephus, 1:198).

But, of course, the Bible is following the ancient Egyptian tradition, not the other way round. Further inside the Egyptian temples lie the great hypostyle halls (from the Greek, meaning resting on pillars). These form a fantastic forest of pillars, a sacred grove carved in stone. Only the priesthood and the nobles would be admitted this far into the complex and, even then, only after ritual cleansing. Yet further on through the length of the temple, we finally come to the Shrine, the Holy of Holies. Officiating here would be only the chief priests and the pharaoh himself, as is depicted on the walls of the Shrine itself. The Holy of Holies was both sacred and secret, a place where the priests and the pharaohs kept the order of the cosmos intact by making offerings to the gods. It is a Shrine that is littered with cosmological rather than orthodox theological connotations.

Egyptologists may call the figures inside these Shrines "gods" and perhaps the people thought so too, but these characters, such as Osiris and Thoth, were more like administrators than "gods". The real deity was always the deep workings of the cosmos, the wheels of which had to be greased with offerings and ceremonies to ensure that the stars continued their annual foxtrot and their millennial waltz. I know this does not make any sense at present but I assue you it will in time as our study increases.

The laity in Egypt would, therefore, have no concept of the inner working of the temple. They were happy that the gods had been appeased, the harvest for next year would be propitious and, perhaps if they had a minor ailment or two, they would pray at their personal shrine to a minor god. What is important is the separation of the functions of the priesthood and the general population, a process seen equally in the Temple of Solomon at Jerusalem, the Temple of the Jews. There will be a fuller exploration of this temple in later chapters, for as the description above and in later chapters indicates, the temples in Egypt and Jerusalem wer~ very much the same.

That the upper echelons of the priesthood and the royalty were separated from the laity is often the way, but in this case, we can also speculate that their religion was separate as well, for this was part of the source of the religious divide that resulted in the biblical exodus, a subject I will address later. The laity believed in Osiris and Seth, Isis and Nephthys, Sekhmet, Nut and Horus; there were any number of gods depending on your town, social position and predicament. The priesthoods, however, had a different agenda. These priests held the Secrets of the Universe and they were not about to let these slip out of btheir reach, for this knowledge was the source of both their secular and theological power over the people.

With this ancient tradition of dual meanings to their religion, it was quite easy for the Jewish authorities to cover up the true history of their peoples. History is quickly lost through wars and the absence of history teachers and, as the history of various nations have shown us, it is easy to twist and bend the history of a nation by its victors in war until it fits the story-line that you wish tell. This has been done to Egypt. It all depends on what the history teachers are allowed to say.

THE BIBLE...RELIGIOUS TEXTS THAT MAKE TRUTH OFTEN ELUSIVE

It must be pointed out that using the Bible for reference and quoting from it is not entirely straightforward, as there are any number of different "Bibles" in circulation. The Jewish Bible, known to Christians as the Old Testament, consists of 39 books, mostly written in Hebrew, although a few were written in Aramaic, between about 1000 BC and AD 100. The Christian Bible includes these Jewish books of the Old Testament, plus the 27 books of the New Testament, the latter written mostly in Greek.

The world Bible is derived, via Latin, from the Greek biblia, meaning books. This is an appropriate designation, as the Old Testament is not a book as such, in terms of authorship or date of composition. Rather, it is a kind of library, including an extensive range of literary styles - narrative, law, history, prophecy and poetry - put together over period of more than a thousand years. The process of writing the Old Testament could more accurately be described as editing. Older material, both oral and written) an from different sources, was collected, interpreted and collated over a prolonged period by a sizeable number of people with varying abilities) and viewpoints. Stories are often duplicated, even within one narrative, with changes, modifications and with many contradictions.

Tradition ascribes authorship of the Torah or Pentateuch - from Genesis to the end of Deuteronomy - to Moses, although no such claim is made in the text. Not only is there such variation in style, detail and approach that composite authorship is the only explanation, but also Deuteronomy ends with the death of Moses, something he would have found quite hard to write about after the event. There is, therefore, really no such thing as a definitive Old Testament and to make the processes of scholarship and research more complicated, there is no extant version of the original Hebrew canon.

Early copies of some individual books of the Old Testament, in Hebrew and dating from the sixth century AD, were discovered stored in the Cairo synagogue during the late nineteenth century. The earliest complete Hebrew manuscript still in existence, the Aleppo Codex, dates from the first half of the tenth century AD, more than a thousand years after the last books of the Old Testament were written and perhaps two thousand years after the earliest. The standard Hebrew Bible today is based on a manuscript dating from AD 1088 that is now in the St. Petersburg Library. Both manuscripts are in codex or book form rather than the traditional scroll form and are known as Massoretic texts (Encarta Encyclopedia 96).

Matters are no easier for scholars and researchers when they are tackling the New Testament, although the problems here are rather different. To begin with, early Christian writers did not expect their work to carry the same Scriptural authority as the Jewish Bible. Rather, it was intended as instruction to the newly emerging Christian congregations. It was not until the second century that the idea of a Christian canon equal to the Jewish Bible began to emerge.

The first "New Testament", consisting only of Luke's Gospel and heavily edited versions of ten of Saul's (Paul's) Epistles, was collated in the second century by Marcion. Subsequently, the mainstream Christian Church asserted the authority of all four Gospels and 13 Pauline Epistles in their entirety. This established the framework of what ultimately became the Christian canon. It was not until AD 325 at the council of Nicaea, convened by the Roman emperor Constantine I, that a consensus as to the content of the Bible began to emerge. This was ratified in AD 367, and the 27 books of the New Testament were eventually canonized by Athanasius of Alexandria. Acceptance of this Christian Scripture followed in the Western Churches (Illustrated Guide To The Bible, J. Porter).

The final difficulty with both Old and New Testaments is that most people read them translated into their own language, which adds a further level of interpretation. In some instances, they will be reading a translation of a translation and a text written in an old-fashioned format. For example, the Authorized or 'King James' Bible, first published in 1611, remains much loved for its beautiful language and is widely known in the English-speaking world. Yet the meanings of some English words have changed since the seventeenth century and others have become archaic and obsolete or, at least, are not exactly easy for the modern reader to understand.

Because of this, many of the Bibles available to this day still disagree on important sections of their text. In addition some modern Bibles have attempted to interpret the meanings of these texts in modern terms and in the process they have lost much of the original import.

These are some of the many and varied problems that scholars have to deal with when interpreting these religious texts, but perhaps the largest of them all is the deliberate changing of the texts many centuries ago to suit the creed and religious views and beliefs that were current at those times. It is quite apparent from the duplicated stories, which we will examine in a moment, that some of the scribes were happy to change the texts in order to portray their heroes in a more favorable light. This was also done in order to change more ancient beliefs and practices into more acceptable 'modern' formats.

Because of these reasons the task before us of uncovering and discerning this hidden secret knowledge in these religious texts becomes progressively more difficult. The only answer to this problem is to study hard and long and in time your efforts are rewarded as you finally cover enough ground to uncover this knowledge.

THE SOURCES FOR THE OLD TESTAMENT AND ITS IMPACT ON THE EXODUS STORY

For two thousand years, there has been, and still is, an on-going debate over the sources of the Old Testament. When one undertakes such a study he is immediately besieged by a host of questions from his reading into such a topic:

- How many different sources are used in the composition of the Old Testament?
- When was each of these different sources written?
- Who were the actual authors of such varying sources?
- How many evidences of editing and tampering can be found in these sources?
- Does the Bible describe actual historical events?

The questions are almost endless to one who considers himself a seeker of truth. What you find when you begin to do some reading in archeology is that the Biblical dates and ages depicted in the texts are so badly off from the archeological record that no rational person can take many of these Biblical dates seriously. God created the world, according to the Bible chronology, in 4004 B.C.E. However, we know from other evidence that the earth was already inhabited in 4004 B.C.E.; in fact the Sphinx has recently been dated to having existed at least 13,000 B.C.E. The ages of many biblical characters are unbelievable and many novel explanations have come forth trying to explain them. The explanation that they may have attached a different meaning than we do to the word "year", does not explain errors in biblical chronology. For example, we are told that Terah, Joseph's great-great-grandfather, was seventy when his son, Abram, was born. Terah, we are later told, died at the age of two hundred and five. Astonishingly, a few biblical verses later we learn that Abram was seventy-five when his father died, when according to biblical calculations, Abram should have been one hundred and twenty-five years old and not seventy-five. I always hated math! Something is wrong here and we so often read over such passages never taking the time to see if there are mistakes and this one only highlights the fact that there are other "mistakes" in this revelation we have received which is called the Old Testament that escapes the eyes of most.

But it is not just the "math" that is so often wrong. Because of its long oral tradition, biblical narration often confuses the names of places and people as well as the chronology of events. Scholars teach us, if you read them, that when one give a careful examination to many Old Testament texts, a rational conclusion could be drawn that many of these events took place chronologically in a different order to that described in the biblical account. In other words we have a very confused chronology and that is nowhere demonstrated more graphically than when we get to the Patriarchs which we find upon study are often Egyptian Pharaohs "made to be Jews" by the writers of the Biblical texts. I direct you to our articles onKing David and King Solomon for evidence to prove this point.

Answer for yourself: How could this be? How could the identities of such great men be covered to such a degree that they are not even mentioned in the context of the nation in which they really lived? How could a Pharaoh be made out to be a "Jew" when in fact he was not? Is there an agenda at work here by the writers of the Old Testament texts?

There can be several reasons for the above confused chronology and mistaken identities. In reading the Old Testament and particularly the five books of the Pentateuch, one should consider the following facts:

- These stories were transferred by word of mouth over several centuries, before they were written down. It is inevitable to end up with distorted stories as a result of this long oral tradition.
- Upon writing the stories, the priests and the editors made their own "contribution" to the text that we have now.
- Translators have altered portions of the texts so as to comply with their *"standard of morality".
- Translation is difficult. One Hebrew word may need a dozen English words to explain its exact meaning.

Of course we are all aware that ancient tradition ascribed the authorship of the Pentateuch to Moses. There are about two dozen verses in the Hebrew Scriptures and one dozen in the Christian Scriptures which state or strongly imply that Moses was the author.

- Exodus 17:14 "Then the Lord instructed Moses, 'Write this down as a permanent record...'"
- Exodus 24:4 "Then Moses carefully wrote down all the Lord's instructions."
- Exodus 34:27 "And the Lord said to Moses, 'Write down all these instructions, for they represents the terms of my covenant with you and with Israel.'"
- Leviticus 1:1 "The Lord called to Moses from the Tabernacle and said to him, 'Give the following instructions to the Israelites...'"
- Leviticus 6:8 "Then the Lord said to Moses, 'Give Aaron and his sons the following instructions...'"
- Deuteronomy 31:9 "So Moses wrote down this law and gave it to the priests."
- Deuteronomy 31:24-26 "When Moses had finished writing down this entire body of law in a book..."
- Joshua 1:7-8 "...Obey all the laws Moses gave you."
- Joshua 8:31-34 "He followed the instructions that Moses the Lord's servant had written in the Book of the Law..."
- Joshua 22:5 "...obey all the commands and the laws that Moses gave to you."
- 2 Chronicles 34:14 "...Hilkiah the high priest...found the book of the Law of the Lord as it had been given through Moses."

But nowhere in the Bible is it specifically stated that Moses wrote the entire Pentateuch. Even if one believes in the inerrancy of the Bible, a case can be made that he authored only parts of the Torah, and that other writers added sections of their own and/or edited the resultant text.

BELIEF OF MAINLINE AND LIBERAL THEOLOGIANS

The view that Moses composed the Pentateuch - the first five books of the Old Testament - from composite sources, which had been transmitted over several centuries, is no longer a valid opinion among the biblical scholars.

The Pentateuch includes the account of Moses' death. it is naturally impossible that Moses could have written about his own death. Therefore, it is logical to conclude that the writing of the Pentateuch took place long after Moses' death. Moses is described as going to the Tabernacle in a passage where the Tabernacle had not yet been built. There are many verses in the Torah that state that something has lasted "to this day". That appears to have been written by a writer who composed the passages at a much later date. Deuteronomy 34:10 states "There has never been another prophet like Moses..." (NLT) This sounds like a passage written long after Moses' death.

Answer for yourself: What does these few examples above mean? Simply it means that the Pentateuch is essentially composed from the following five sources:

- A Jehovistic source, dating from the 9th century BCE. [J: a writer who used JHWH as the "unpronounceable name of God." It is often translated as Jehovah]
- An Elohistic document, dating from the 8th century BCE. [E: a writer who used Elohim as the divine name]
- The book of Deuteronomy, to be considered as a separate source, dating from the 7th century BCE. [D: the author of the book of Deuteronomy]
- A priestly source, dating from about the 5th century BCE. [P: a writer who added material of major interest to the priesthood].
- The work of an editor who revised and edited the entire collection around the 2nd century BCE. [R: a redactor who shaped the contributions of J, E, P and D together into the present Pentateuch]

The above is the accepted understanding prevalent today as to how we received the Old Testament texts and explains this convoluted chronology and concealing of the real identities of the Partriarchs of which I spoke above.

THE HEBREW & GREEK TEXTS OF THE BIBLE

Our standard translations of the Old Testament are based on the Massoretic Hebrew text, which came into existence in the 9th or 10th centuries C.E. This text was originated in the 2nd century C.E. after a council had been assembled at Jamnia, a small town near Jaffa, in 70 CE. At Jamnia the council agreed to the form and content of the Old Testament.

Hebrew, like hieroglyphics and other Semitic languages, does not have any written vowels. The true pronunciation and interpretation of the texts were accomplished by a body of Jewish scholars, who formulated a standard pronunciation of the Massorah (tradition of measure), between the 7th and 10th centuries CE.

The Hebrew Massoretic text is not the only Canon we have for the Old Testament. The Greek text of Alexandria is even older.

In a letter written by an unknown author about 100 BCE, Ptolemy II, the King of Egypt (285-247 BCE), ordered a Greek translation of the Bible. As the legend goes the High Priest of Jerusalem sent seventy-two elders to Alexandria, six scholars from each of the twelve tribes of Israel, together with an official copy of the Pentateuch. They worked for 72 days to produce the final copy of the Pentateuch in Greek. Later, the other books of the Old Testament were also translated into Greek by other scholars and the whole work became known as the Septuagint, which means "The Seventy". This story is but a fantasy as the historical record attests today but you get the point. Not only that this Greek translation, often called "the world's worst translated book" disagrees dramatically in "key" places with the prior Hebrew. So we end up with a mess of conflicting garbled accounts which are at best a "shadow" of the real that these texts profess to reveal; texts in both the Hebrew and Greek who are unreliable in many regards. It is now that the "thinking" believer must consult "extra-Biblical" records to help sort out this tangled web of confused accounts which are often jumbled in the history of this "holy book". This Greek text was adopted as the Bible of the early Church, but was abandoned later in favor of the Hebrew Massoretic text which ironically does not agree with the Massoretic texts of the Jewish people. The confusion is endless and for me and others we find that other disciplines like "extra-Biblical" historical records and archeology must be consulted to both "confirm" and "correct" the good book if we are ever to make sense of it and get to the truth behind the stories we have inherited.

THE BIBLICAL AND ANCIENT ENCOUNTERS BETWEEN EGYPT AND ISRAEL

There is no doubt that there are serious problems with the chronology of many events in the Bible. We have touched on some of the reasons for this above but it is time we focus on some others. Problem in Old Testament chronology, for example, came about as a result of the many narrators and editors working along the span of centuries, as well as the bad blood between the Jews and Egypt, after the Exodus. When you get to the truth behind the Exodus and see that the real reason for the Exodus was different understandings of God among Egyptians (Priesthoods and reigning Pharaohs...in particular a Hebrew Pharaoh names Akhenaten) then this becomes crystal clear. The encounters between the Israelites and ancient Egypt can be divided into three eras:

Pre Sojourn in Egypt

As we all know Abram and Sarai came down into Egypt for a period of time. Upon Abram and Sarai's return from Egypt to Canaan (present-day Israeli Lebanon), major changes began to occur to their small tribe. The Bible tells us that the Lord told Abram,

Gen 15:13 13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years; (KJV)

But...the Bible also says:

Gen 15:16 16 But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: So what is it? Is it 400 years or 4 generations?

One cannot underestimate the importance of determining the correct time for the sojourn of Israel (400 years or 4 generations) and determining the true identities of the characters we read about in the Old Testament.

God also made a covenant with Abram, saying,

Gen 15:18 18 In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates: (KJV)

Sarah gave birth to Isaac who was not allowed to go to Egypt.

Isaac begat Jacob in Canaan.

Jacob begat Joseph.

Answer for yourself: When in history did the "seed" of Abram and Sarah inherit this land from the Nile to the Euphrates? And what is this land? It is Egypt.

What we find when we get into this study and examination of the evidence from the ancient Egyptian history is that:

Tuthmose III was the Pharaoh in the Abraham and Sarah story and that Tuthmose III and the biblical King David are one and the same.

Israelites' Sojourn in Egypt

Joseph's half brothers sold him as a slave, in Egypt. He later became the second in command to the Pharaoh. The Pharaoh allowed Joseph to bring his family to Egypt. Jacob (Joseph's father) who was also known as Israel, took his tribal family of seventy to settle in Goshen, east of the tile delta.

Answer for yourself: When did the Israelites enter Egypt and how long did they remain there before the Exodus?

It is generally accepted that they were in Egypt at the end of the 18th Dynasty, and into the Nineteenth (c. 1308 BCE). Scholars will disagree on when they arrived and when they departed. The Old Testament does not provide any dates, or the name of the Pharaoh's capital city at the time, or the name of the Pharaoh, referring to him only as "Pharaoh", "King" or "Pharaoh, King of Egypt!"

So what we find involved with the above events is that the Old Testament gives two contradictory accounts about the length of time the Israelites spent in Egypt:

Duration of 430 years:

Exod 12:40 40 Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years. (KJV)

Duration of four generations:

The warning to Abraham

Gen 15:13 13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years; (KJV)

Gen 15:16 16 But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: So what is it? Is it 430 years or 4 generations? The duration of four generations, and not 430 years, is the correct duration for the following reasons:

The Hebrew says: "wa dor rabi'i yashwbw hena"

That being so then the exact translation of this Hebrew verse is: "And the fourth (dor) return they here." Grammatically "the fourth dor" is the subject of the verb. Therefore, 'dor' can only mean "generation". The word "dor" was never used to mean a hundred-year cycle in Hebrew or Assyrian. or Ugaritic texts.

What confirms the biblical word "dor" to mean "a generation" is the fact that the Pentateuch names only four generations between the time of the Descent into Egypt and the Exodus.

THE RECORD OF THE TALMUD

The Talmud does not agree with 430 years either as the length of the Israelites' sojourn in Egypt; "And the children of Israel journeyed from Raamses to Succoth. two hundred and ten years after their entrance into Egypt, the Israelites departed therefrom, six hundred thousand men, with wives and children."

The evidence from the ancient Egyptian history show us:

- Joseph entered Egypt and became the vizier (second in command) to Pharaoh Tuthmose IV (1413-1405 BCE.) and was the vizier for the succeeding Pharaoh, Amenhotep III (1405-1367 BCE).
- Joseph's daughter, Tiye, was married to Amenhotep III. Tiye gave birth to Akhenaton (the Biblical Moses) and Semenkhkare.
- Akhenaton begat Tutankhamen.

Answer for yourself: So when we put all this together what do we get once we know the truth of the matter is "four generations" and not "4 hundred years"?

- The four generations of the Sojourn are actually
 - Joseph
 - Tiye
 - Akhenaton (to be identified later as the biblical Moses)
 - Tutankhamen (the crucified savior...the prototype for the later "historical Joshua/Jesus"...more on that later)
- Amenhotep III and the biblical King Solomon are one and the same.

THE EXODUS AND THE PROMISED LAND....EGYPT SPEAKS

A short summary for later study is needed now as we close. Egyptian history show us that Moses (Akhenaton) would later live in exile in Sinai for several years and went back to Egypt to challenge the authority of the self-appointed Pharaoh. He was allowed to leave with the Israelites (his followers, followers of the Aten) from Egypt in what is known as the Exodus. After wandering in the desert, Moses died and the Israelites settled in their promised land. This land had been previously ruled by King David (Tuthmose III) whose empire extended from the Nile to the Euphrates. This King David (Tuthmose III) begat Solomon (Amenhotep III), who sat on his father's throne after his death. The new Israelite Kingdom vanished after Solomon's death as quickly as it was created by King David.

The historical evidence from ancient Egypt reveals:

The biblical Moses was killed by King Seti I (1333-1304 BCE) and the Israelites wandered the desert for forty years before settling in Canaan. The occupation of Canaan was a gradual process, as also confirmed in the Book of Judges. Amazingly King David's war accounts match precisely with those of King Tuthmose III (1490-1436 BCE). King Solomon's life and lack of wars match precisely with those of King Amenhotep III (1436-1413 BCE). Interesting for our study however is the fact that the time of the Israelite Sojourn if "4 generations" and not 400 years.

Answer for yourself: Why is this so very important? Simply because the Bible mentions both "4 generations" and "400 years" as the time of the Sojourn of Israel in Egypt. This is a blatant contradiction and one of these time periods simply cannot be correct; one figure is right and one figure is wrong. If we take the "400 year" figure then we are looking for the events and characters of the Bible to overlap with the archeological and historical record of Egypt and that cannot be done. If we have the wrong time period no wonder we cannot find any historical evidence for the Exodus and no wonder why some people say ignorantly that the Exodus never happened when in fact Egyptian history records this very same Exodus. However, as shown elsewhere, if we take the "4 generations" as the time of the Sojourn of Israel in Egypt then we not only find the events of the Exodus recorded in Egyptian history but equally important we can find the true identities of the characters involved in the Exodus; both "Egyptian" and "Israelite". Only then can we read the Bible "intelligently" and see just whom these men and women truly are and the "hidden story" behind the simple stories we have inherited. It is this information which is so astounding and to think it has been right before our faces for thousands of years. All that remains for us is to understand "why" the Exodus happened in the first place and we get to that shortly.

WHAT YOU CAN EXPECT TO LEARN FROM THE STUDY OF THE HEBREW PHARAOHS OF EGYPT

Well let me begin by telling you that you can expect to learn "the truth" about many Bible stories that you have heard your whole life where up to now they have been but "fiction" purposely crafted in such a way as to hide the truth.

This is be an very enlightening stroll down the corridors of truth and as you study this website you will begin to see things that will take your breath away. For example you will see that there exists evidence from the New Testament, the Old Testament and the Talmud that proves that "Jesus" and Moses were of the same era. But we won't stop there. The Bible as we all know tells us the story of Moses' birth and life in Egypt; the only problem is that it is not the truth.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the Bible is notorious for stating names of persons, sites, and water wells which in many cases have no impact on the story whatsoever but it surprisingly NEVER names a pharaoh or the city of his residence? Why is that when it appear that Egypt and Israel were so intricately linked in the Old Testament? Is something being hidden here?

We will come to find that there were several pharaohs in the "Moses Story". All we get is the statement "the Pharaoh who knew not Joseph" or "the Pharaoh of the Oppression"; again never naming one of these Pharaohs.

Answer for yourself: Does it not seem to you that it would have been just as easy to name one of these "Pharaohs" for certainly should we not expect that the writer of these stories certainly knew whom they were? But why not mention them? Wouldn't it have been easier and more logical to use the name of these pharaohs? Why did they leave their names out? Were these names of these Pharaohs left out intentionally?

Answer for yourself: Was "the Exodus" and what really happened here the reason for this "cover-up"? Could the writers of the Old Testament in the 6th century B.C.E. hidden the names of these Pharaohs to hide the real events of the Exodus which show just how closely the Israelites and Egyptian religions really were? Could they want to hide and bury any connection of the Israelites's God, YHWH, being but a "remodified" God of Egypt known as "the Aten"?

History teaches us that Ancient Egypt and the Israelites had generally a good relationship until Moses arrived on the scene. Moses and his religious revolution in Egypt resulted in the Exodus which is correctly viewed today as a bitter divorce between the Egyptians and the Israelites over religion. Just like any bitter divorce, there were misunderstandings and false charges and counter charges and the results of this Exodus are yet seen today in the Crisis of the Middle East where we find Israel claiming the land for themselves as God's Chosen People when in fact the religious revolt in Egypt was in reality "making a mountain out of a molehill" as you will come to see. It was all about "interpretation" of the Nature of this God and the two opposite sides which emphasized different aspects of this "same" God.

As a result of this bitter divorce, ancient Egypt became the permanent casualty of the "chosen people" as they wrote "their side of the story" which we have come familiar in the Hebrew Bible today. The Jewish scribes reflected the political and religious disputes of those ancient times by mixing history and fiction in their writing of the Bible to cover up their dependance upon Egypt and that they were the "biological seed" of Egypt. In so doing we find the writers of the Hebrew Scriptures changed the names and the chronology of events in order to cover-up their "links" to Egyptian religion and has made the world for some 2,600 years believe it is they, the Jewish people, who gave the world " monotheism" when in fact it was Egypt and not the Jews which had this "religious concepts" thousands of years earlier than the Jews as we will come to see. scheme. As a result of this confused chronology and alteration of names the majority of scholars over these many years could not, cannot and have not been able to provide a single piece of evidence to confirm the biblical accounts of these men we read in the Bible because they are looking at the wrong time in their efforts to identify them; men like the Biblical David, Solomon, Moses, Joshua, and even Jesus as we shall see.

On this website we will look at all the available information from the ancient Egyptian historical records, the Bible, the Talmud and the Dead Sea Scrolls. In so doing I will PROVE many things to the reader; namely:

- Pharaoh Tuthmose III is the Biblical King David
- Pharaoh Amenhotep III is the Biblical King Solomon
- Pharaoh Akhenaton, Amenhotep IV, is the Biblical Moses
- Pharaoh Tut-Ankh-Amen is the prototype for all later "historical Jesus Stories"

Without study into these areas the above might seem impossible but I assure you once you have seen the evidence that you will have to "seriously" re-think such identifications. This evidence will explain to you why many scholars have never been able to find any explicit "unforged" evidence for a New Testament Jesus existing anywhere these last 2000 years. Many reject the notion that such virtuous men could be pharaohs, because of the biblically distorted image of the pharaoh as a harsh tyrant. This is absolutely not historically true and it just another "lie" to sever ties between Israel and Egypt.

The comparison between the biblical and the historical characters, in the following webpages, will make the various evidence, individually and collectively, so overwhelming that you will not be able to doubt these above identities. I ask only of the reader that you don't quit reading and find the courage to "study to show yourself" approved.

EGYPT AND THE SEARCH FOR THE HISTORICAL JESUS

Over the last two thousand years, people have been searching for the historical existence/evidence of Jesus and other major biblical characters (Moses, David, Solomon, ...etc.).

Answer for yourself: What do all of these searches for the historical evidence for the existence for Jesus, Moses, David, and Solomon have in common? All these efforts at finding demonstrable and reliable historical evidence for the existence of these Biblical personalities have been fruitless because most people have accepted the biblical stories as historical events and went out searching for the evidence to support their pre-determined conclusions.

There is a need for a new approach and thankfully in our day, especially in light of the findings of the Dead Sea Scrolls and the Nag Hammadi Library, new efforts have been made to look in other areas and other places and other "times" for the existence of these important spiritual men whom Judeo-Christianity cannot prove ever existed in the time periods recorded in their "writings" handed down to the masses of people who desire to follow the teachings and tenants of these "spiritual examples".

A group of scholars have in our day relied on this new approach using simple common sense, especially in the wake of the unsuccessful attempts made to substantiate the existence of these men over the last centuries, and this common sense suggests the exact opposite direction to our approach in finding and searching out the the historical Jesus and other biblical characters like Moses, David, and Solomon. Contrary to what these "Judeo-Religious" institutions desire to say there exists in the world today abundant historical evidence that attests to the existence of these men but the problem is that this evidence lays waste to the "infalliblity and inerrancy" of the religious texts that acquaint us with these men.

Most scholars of today, enlightened by the results of the findings of archeology in these last two hundred years, have now been forced to accept the fact that the Bible is a blend of history and fiction, shaped by the political and religious disputes of ancient times.

Answer for yourself: Do you know what is the most important dispute in the Bible?

The pivotal dispute in the Bible is the Exodus. As a result of the Exodus, the Bible and its writers purposefully tarnished and muddied the history of ancient Egypt and set in motion the ongoing blood feud in the Middle East.

This website hopes to bring light to the historical events which have been ignored by many Egyptologists, both past and present, because of the risk of contradicting popular religions and especially the true identification of Jesus of the received religious traditions (both Islamic, Judaic, and Christian). It is the intention of this website to present the overlooked Egyptian historical evidence which will finally identify the long sought after "historical Christ Jesus". On other other websites we have devoted much time and research to revealing the "Mystical" and "Mythical" Christ. Now it is time to identify the real

"historical Jesus" but to do that honestly and with definable evidence one must start at the beginning and as I have found over all the years of my studies all roads lead to Egypt and not Rome

WHAT WILL WE FIND IF WE STUDY THIS WEBSITE?

King Tutankhamun's birth name was Tut-Ankh-Aten, which translated means The Living Image of the Lord.

King Tut, like all Egyptian pharaohs, was the spiritual Son of God and was called the Messiah/Christ, meaning the anointed one, who is the King.

It is time we continue are hard-nosed study of the evidence that goes overlooked by all but the most intense students and those who desire the truth at all costs. So I invite the read to examine the powerful evidence from archaeology, the Dead Sea Scrolls, the Talmud and the Bible itself as we come to the answers as to the identities of these Biblical characters like Moses, David, Solomon, and oh yes, the New Testament Jesus. The result of such study is not only enlightening but challenging to the very core for a Christian. Let us discover the history's greatest conspiracy and cover-up that had led the Roman Church to re-create the character of the "original Karast/Christ", otherwise known as "Joshua/Jesus" living in another place and time.

After seeing and acquainting yourself with all the evidence that exists concerning the "cover-up" of the true identities of the Biblical Moses, the Biblical David, the Biblical Solomon, and the Biblical Ephraim, then it is only a short jump to see how in the same spirit of deception that we find the "historical Jesus" in Egypt as well. All the evidence points to the identification of Tut-Ankh-Amen as the historical "Joshua/Jesus" and it is from this "historical Karast" that all later traditions came and were applied down through history finally culminating in the New Testament's depiction of another "historical Jesus" out of its proper setting, time and place. This will be, for many people, a troubling statement. But let me say up front that you have not studied and seen the evidence that I and many others have seen that is available in our day and time which nails this down concisely and without a "hitch". The evidence, as you will see if you continue to study, will lead the reader as it has done me and other "thinking believers" directly to this logical conclusion.

Establishing the historical identity of Jesus should strengthen rather than weaken people's faith in him and the God that he taught, exampled, and promoted his whole life. The "image of this God" has sadly and grossly been purposefully corrupted by Rome and if you are a Christian today then you have been infected with a "counterfeit" replacement of the God of the Cosmos as known by those who first came to understand him and gave the world the religious dogmas and doctrines we inherited today; albeit in "blurred" image.

Love and respect for the Egyptian "Joshua/Jesus" as a man who gave his life in the spreading the teachings of His God should not change because of his nationality. As you study I hope you engender and respect his message and achievements and let them help "correct" the muddled view of this same God given us by Rome.

Let us open our minds and review the available evidence. For the truth is a composite of different and complementary pieces of a puzzle. Let us put the pieces in the right location, time and order and that cannot be done without a through understanding of Egypt and their understanding of the God of the Cosmos. It is to this we now turn.

LITTLE KNOWN FACTS SURROUNDING JESUS

The Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, written several generations after the time of the events they describe, state that Jesus was born in Judaea (which lies between the Mediterranean and the Jordan - Dead Sea - Arab depression) during the time of Herod the Great (37-4 B.C.), and that his condemnation to death, suffering and crucifixion occurred when Judaea had become a Roman province with Pontius Pilate as its procurator (26-36 A.D.)

Answer for yourself: Is this description "historically accurate and true"?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that there exists other writings today that bring such a description into dispute?

Despite the existence of many Gospels of Christ in the early history of the Church the Council of Trent in 1546 C.E. rejected over one hundred other "gospels" and only accepted the four included in the New Testament of today: those of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John.

It is the accepted tradition in most of Christianity today that Mark, who is named in the New Testament's Book of Acts and in four Epistles as a companion of Peter and Paul, is presumed to have been the author of the earliest of the four canonical Gospels. The other three (Matthew, Luke and John) relied on the writings attributed to Mark, plus other sources, for their writings. Mark was not an eyewitness to the events that he described in the Bible. Neither were Matthew, Luke or John, who followed him later. Mark may have had the benefit of second-hand information from Peter and third-hand from Paul. The Gospel of Mark, however, includes information which is not mentioned in the writings of Peter and Paul!

Answer for yourself: Where did Mark get this information from? Mark must have used the following available sources, to compile the stories, to place the life of Jesus in Galilee at this period of history:

- Israelite traditions
- The Old Testament
- The practices of the Jewish Sect of Essenes (the owners of the Dead Sea Scrolls)
- The life and death of John the Baptist
- The political upheavals of the first century A.D.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the "common" story, offered by the Gospels, of the life and death of Jesus has NO, absolutely NO corroborative "unforged" evidence existing in the world today to support it?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that it is only its continuous repetition to us that it has made it appear as an established fact.

Adolf Hitler said, "Tell a Lie big enough and long enough and the masses will accept this lie as truth." This is exactly what The Churches have done through the aid of their "forged" and

"adulterated" Bible and we have accepted it.

THE EVIDENCE OF THE DEAD SEA SCROLLS

The world was excited in 1947 and the following years, when the Dead Sea Scrolls were discovered. The Dead Sea Scrolls were found in a series of caves at Qumran, west of the north end of the Dead Sea. They consist of the remains of the Library of a Jewish sect called the Essenes and are dated between 200 B.C. and 50 A.D.

The Essenes is a secret Jewish sect which separated from the Jewish community at large. They regard the beliefs and teachings of the Jerusalem priesthood to be untrue.

The Scrolls include biblical and sectarian texts, Jewish literature and other documents. The Scrolls don't include information about the biblical Jesus but they provide information of a Christ and a Christian church that predates the supposed start of the Christian era by several centuries.

About 80% of these scrolls remained unpublished and the results of their findings were kept secret from the world. Because of their sensitive nature in relationship to both Judaism and Christianity the contents of the majority of these scrolls were kept from the eyes of Judeo-Christianity; that is until they were stolen and make public in the last few years. The results of such a theft are "earth-shattering" in relationship to their challenge to the accepted "Roman" interpretation of the Christ and their historical Jesus as we know now the earliest followers of "the Christ" understood him as allegorical and not "literal-historical" in their day. These are the earliest Gnostic followers of "the Christ" who penned such writings that Rome tried their best to keep from the light of day for two thousands of years. The few released scrolls, which pre-date the Gospels provide the following:

- An account of the Annunciation which reads almost exactly like Luke (1:28-35); which by the way can be found inscribed on the walls of the Temple of Luxor in Egypt thousands of years prior to the time period allotted for the New Testament Jesus
- A clear statement that the Essenes believed that the Messiah had already lived and was later killed by the Wicked Priest (who is identified in the Talmud as Pinhas/Phinehas, the priest who killed the biblical Jesus).
- The Essenes, in 200 B.C., were awaiting Essa's return; Essa being their Messiah: thus they were awaiting the Messiah's Second Coming, not the first.

Answer for yourself: Did I say these Essenes were awaiting the return of their Messiah in 200 B.C.E.? I sure did.

Since the book of Acts relates that it was these "Essene Priests" that converted in mass to "the faith" then we need to awaken from our slumber and again read the above 3 points that challenge the traditional inherited interpretation of "the Christ Jesus" given us by Rome.

Acts 6:7 7 And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith. (KJV)

The very name of the Essenes indicate that they were followers of this "Jesus" since they were followers of "Essa".

Answer for yourself: How can these Essenes be followers of this "Jesus" in 200 B.C.E. when this Jesus is supposed to have lived in the first century A.D. according to Rome and their New Testament?

As alluded to above the word "Essenes" means Followers of Essa.

Answer for yourself: What does "Essa" mean? "Essa" is the Arabic name for Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that "Essa" is the only name of Jesus to be mentioned in the Koran and was the name used by the early Egyptian Christians in the Coptic Egyptian language, in the first century A.D.?

The Dead Sea Scrolls, which date to 200 B.C., contain some accounts of the Gospel accounts of the birth, life and death of Jesus.

Answer for yourself: What should that teach us? It should and does teach us that according to this sect of Priest who in the Book of Acts that "became obedient unto the faith" both believed and taught in their scrolls that their belief in this "Jesus" stemmed from a prior "historical Jesus" that lived several centuries earlier than the common belief that Rome imposed on the world by their selection of just "4" slanted and adulterated Gospels crafted in such a way to present the Roman Jesus and not the Essene Jesus.

MOSES AND JESUS LIVED IN THE SAME ERA? HOLD ON NOW!

Contrary to common beliefs, there are several accounts in the New Testament, the Old Testament and the Talmud, that show that the biblical Jesus and Moses were of the same era.

Answer for yourself: Does the New Testament teach this?

Escaping the hand of the Bible editors the Bible itself confirms that Jesus lived fourteen centuries earlier than had been thought. Note the event described in the Gospels of Matthew, Mark and Luke, about the meeting of Jesus and Moses, at the time of what is known as his Transfiguration:

Mark 9:2-5 2 And after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themselves: and he was transfigured before them. 3 And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them. 4 And there appeared unto them Elias with Moses: and they were talking with Jesus. 5 And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias. (KJV)

The biblical text is a straight forward factual description of an event. It is irrational to view the factual nature of this text as simply some kind of a spiritual experience and that it never actually happened! Some people want to consider this meeting event a spiritual experience yet they insist that the virgin birth and the Resurrection of Christ were actual historical events!

John confirms that Jesus lived fourteen centuries earlier than his prescribed time. John quotes Jesus as telling the Jews of Jerusalem:

John 5:46 46 For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What should this teach us? Namely that Moses wrote of a Jesus who was contemporary with him.

John also refers to Philip, one of the disciples, regarding the same fact:

John 1:45 45 Philip findeth Nathanael, and saith unto him, We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What should this teach us? According to John, Moses wrote (not as a prophesy) about Jesus in the Pentateuch, the first five books of the Old Testament.

John, after using a reference to Isaiah to report some of the activities of Jesus, goes on to say:

John 12:41 41 These things said Esaias, when he saw his glory, and spake of him. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What should this teach us? John is stating that Isaiah saw the glory of Jesus. However, Jesus is said to have achieved glory only after his death and Resurrection:

1 Pet 1:11 11 Searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow. (KJV)

To summarize, John acknowledged that Christ lived and died before the time of Isaiah's writings.

Paul, in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, makes clear that Jesus was present with the Israelites in Sinai at the time of the Exodus:

1 Cor 10:1-4 1 Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; 2 And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; 3 And did all eat the same spiritual meat; 4 And did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What should this teach us? Paul is stating here that the Rock really was Christ, i.e. the Messiah was present in some form with the Israelites during the Exodus.

Further confirmation of Jesus' presence with the Israelites in the Sinai wilderness is also stated in Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews:

Heb 4:2 2 For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What should this teach us? Paul is stating that the Gospel which was preached in the first century A.D. had been preached before.

This should give us reason to "think" that contrary to what we have read and believed due to hearing preaching our whole lives there are places in the Bible that refer to a "historical Jesus" that lived long before the time allotted to him by Rome's account in their New Testament.

JESUS' TIME IN THE OLD TESTAMENT

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the Old Testament provides more evidence against the prescribed time of Jesus during the Roman era?

The Gospels define the role given to Jesus as that of a Redeemer, who is to suffer and be sacrificed like a lamb in order to wipe out the sins of his transgressing people. However, the prophetic Old Testament writings of Isaiah (who lived during the second half of the eighth century B.C.), described the same exact character.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Isaiah was the first Israelite prophet to present the Christ as the divinely appointed Savior? The account of the Servant in the Songs of Isaiah (II) also presents, for the first time in the Old Testament, the idea of spiritual salvation and a second life.

Answer for yourself: Since Old Testament has no Resurrection reference until Isaiah (II), writing in the sixth century B.C., then does it not stand to reason that the writer of Second Isaiah relied on another, nonbiblical, tradition for his account of the risen Christ?

The idea of Christ as the suffering Servant, the Savior of the world and the Redeemer, proves that he had already lived his life and died, i.e. existed before the time of Isaiah (eighth century B.C.).

JESUS AND THE TALMUD

The Talmudic rabbis do not relate Jesus to the time of Herod or Pontius Pilate. They do, however, state that a priest named Pinhas killed him. The Talmud is quite specific: "(Pinhas...killed him [Jesus]" (b. Sanh., I06b).

Answer for yourself: Who is this Pinhas? Pinhas or as otherwise known as "Phinehas" in the Old Testament was the priest, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron, who is identified in the Book of Numbers as a contemporary of Moses.

As you might expect the Talmudic references to Pinhas/Phinehas and Jesus are ignored because they show Jesus living at the same time as Moses did and most following the Roman depiction of this Jesus consider it highly unlikely that anything could have ever existed as such; that is until they begin to study.

THE ABSENCE OF HISTORICAL REFERENCES TO THIS JESUS BY HISTORIANS

Answer for yourself: If Jesus lived, suffered and died during the period of Roman rule in Palestine, why did not his name appear in the writings of three distinguished contemporary authors of that time like Philo Judaeus, Justus of Tiberias and Flavius Josephus?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that absolutely no reference to Jesus was made in the thirty-eight works left behind by Philo Judaeus, who was born c. 15 B.C.E. and died about twenty years after the supposed date of the Crucifixion? Philo's brother was the head of the Jewish community living in Alexandria. His son was married to a granddaughter of King Herod.

Answer for yourself: How can we expect a man like Philo Judaeus, with all his family connections, not to mention Jesus in all his voluminous writings, if Jesus ever existed in the time period in which he lived?

Flavious Josephus was a Palestinian Jew of a priestly family, born in 37 A.D., who wrote Antiquities of the Jews, a long historical work of twenty books. Moreover, Josephus was given command in Galilee at the time of the Jewish revolt against the Romans in 66 A.D. Flavious Josephus mentioned John the Baptist's life and execution in his books.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that outside two "forged" references as stated by scholars today that Josephus in all of his writings never mentioned that John was preparing the way for Jesus or that a historical Jesus existed at all?

Answer for yourself: What has been Christianity's response to the historical absence of any record testifying to the existence of the "historical Jesus? The usual response to the historical absence of the Biblical Jesus is that he was an ordinary man and not an important figure to warrant any attention or place in history. The Bible itself provides the contrary evidence to such an incorrect response:

- Herod, the King of Judea, is depicted as knowing of this Jesus:

Matt 2:1-2 1 Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, 2 Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him. (KJV)

King Herod was told of a prophecy that the Christ was to be born in Bethlehem,

Matt 2:6 6 And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel. (KJV)

Upon hearing the above prophecy, Herod was distressed by the news of his birth and therefore Joseph was ordered by the angel of the Lord,

Matt 2:13 13 And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him. (KJV)

Herod was so distressed that he:

Matt 2:16 16 Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently inquired of the wise men. (KJV)

After Jesus was sentenced to death by the Jewish hierarchy; they handed him over to Pilate who

Luke 23:7 7 And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod, who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time. (KJV)

Pilate later told the chief priests,

Luke 23:14-16 14 Said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people: and, behold, I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him: 15 No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him; and, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him. 16 I will therefore chastise him, and release him. (KJV)

- The Bible Tells Us That This Jesus Was A Very Important Figure

Wisemen from different nations came to offer homage to him:

Matt 2:1-2 1 Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, 2 Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him. (KJV)

He was born to be King:

2 Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him. (KJV)

He was born to govern:

Matt 2:6 6 And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel. (KJV)

- Jesus was very visible, attracting crowds from all over the region, and causing a lot of commotion, as per the following biblical verses:

Matt 4:23-25 23 And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people. 24 And his fame went throughout all Syria: and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them. 25 And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judaea, and from beyond Jordan. (KJV)

Matt 14:21 21 And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, beside women and children. (KJV)

Mark 3:7-8 7 But Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea: and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, and from Judaea, 8 And from Jerusalem, and from Idumaea, and from beyond Jordan; and they about Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him. (KJV)

Mark 8:19-20 19 When I brake the five loaves among five thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They say unto him, Twelve. 20 And when the seven among four thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? And they said, Seven. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Does it look to you as if this Jesus was just a was an ordinary man and not an important figure to warrant any attention or place in history?

SOMETHING IS WRONG SINCE WE CANNOT FIND A HISTORICAL JESUS...SOMETHING IS MISSING

Something is wrong here. I will let the facts speak for themselves:

- There is not a shred of contemporary evidence to support the New Testament story of the birth, life or death of Jesus as given by Rome
- There is, however, an expanse of evidence proving that this "Jesus" had lived many centuries earlier as attested by the Dead Sea Scrolls and the Nag Hammadi Library which were only discovered 50 years ago....to Rome's ire
- The New Testament, the Old Testament and the Talmud place Jesus and Moses in the same era.

The rational way to find the biblical Jesus in history is by examining the historical records.

Answer for yourself: Where do we turn to find them now seeing that the Roman version of Jesus is highly suspect? Well the answer has been before us for over two thousand years and we have failed to see it. We only need to examine the historical records of ancient Egypt to find the "historical Jesus".

Matt 2:15 15 And was there until the death of Herod: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called my son. (KJV)

"Jesus the Nazarene who practiced magic in Egypt" (b Sanh., 107b).

But before we dig into the "historical Jesus" question we need to start at the beginning to learn of the Hebrew

Pharaohs of Egypt and in time we will make our way to the Egyptian Jesus. So be patient and enjoy the scent of truth!

INTRODUCTION: HEBREW PHARAOHS AND THE TRUE IDENTIFICATION OF THE BIBLICAL PATRIARCHS

C.E.391 was a terrible year for the world. It was in that year that the Roman-appointed Bishop Theophilus destroyed the Serapeum, which had been the centre of Egyptian worship for seven centuries as well as burned the Alexandrian library to the ground which was connected to it. Bishop Theophilus was responsible for the destruction and burning of the Alexandrian library, where hundreds of thousands of papyrus rolls and parchments, inscribed with ancient wisdom and knowledge, were taken off their shelves, torn to pieces and thrown on to bonfires.

A few years later the last of the Alexandrian scholars was torn to pieces by a gang of Christian monks. On a Lenten day in March of the year C.E. 415 they stopped the carriage of Hypatia, who had succeeded her father as Professor of Philosophy in Alexandria, stripped her naked, dragged her into a nearby church, killed her, cut most of her flesh from her body with sharp oyster shells, and burned what remained of her in the street. The charge against Hypatia, who had taught the philosophy of Plato, was heresy. As a result of this barbaric killing of Alexandrian scholars and destruction of its library, which contained texts in Greek of all aspects of ancient wisdom and knowledge, the true Egyptian roots of Judeo- Christianity and of Western civilization have been obscured for nearly 16 centuries.

Answer for yourself: What was so important that it needed to be eradicated in the minds of Rome?

Rome had a world to run and a religion to build that was to be the "glue" that held their empire and political and military aspirations together. Knowledge contained in this library dealing with Egyptian history and religion was deemed too explosive and damaging to the plans of Rome and efforts were make to eradicate it from the face of the planet. Rome had to position itself as the glory and savior of the world and knowledge that this distinction belonged to Egypt was counter productive to their plan of world domination. The burning and destruction of the Alexandrian library was an attempt to hide the truth of the Egyptian origins for Judeo-Christianity. In so doing Rome was hiding the fact that the true authors of Greek philosophy were not the Greeks, but the people of North Africa, commonly called the Egyptians; and the praise and honor falsely given to the Greeks and later Romans for centuries belong rightfully to the people of North Africa, and therefore to the African Continent. Consequently, the theft of the African legacy by the Greeks led to the erroneous world opinion that the African Continent has made no contribution to civilization, and that its people are naturally backward. This is the misrepresentation that has become the basis of racial prejudice, which has affected all people of color.

Such knowledge revealed that "all roads don't lead to Rome...but to Alexandria, Memphis, Heliopolis, Hermopolis, and Thebes. Only through the exhaustive efforts of archeologists and historians today are we able to restore this information to the world and in so doing Judaism and Christianity and much of the history of both faiths lay exposed as frauds for behind them both lie the truth about the Egyptian origins for the religion of Judaism and Christianity.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that:

- The stories of both the Old and the New Testaments are firmly established on models of Ancient Egyptian historical fact?
- The essential religious doctrines that Judaism and Christianity are credited with, in fact came out of Egypt and their religion which came from the observation of the Cosmos?
- All the central characters of both the Old Testament and the New Testament were once actually real historical Egyptian figures, who lived in a different period than we have believed up till now due to the corruption of the Old Testament chronology and texts?
- The Biblical Patriarchs and Kings of Israel are not Jews but Egyptian Pharaohs?
- The first Israelites were mixtures of Egyptians and Hebrew followers of Pharaoh Akhenaten, whose attempts to introduce monotheism into Egypt engendered rage among the religious establishment leading to the Exodus and that this is the true identity of the "mixed multitude" we read about in the Book of Exodus?
- After entering Canaan, the Egyptian followers of Akhenaten/Moses along with Hebrews who accompanied him in this Exodus formed military alliances with local Canaanite kings and with some of the Greek invaders and Sea Peoples and this nontribal alliance of small kingdoms and city-states became biblical Israel?
- The Messianic idea is Egyptian and is uniquely tied to a "sacrificed Savior" who died hung on a "tree" at Sinai by the name Tutankhamun...the son of Amenhotep IV/Akhenaten/Moses/?
- That Tutankhamun is in the Biblical text referred to "Joshua" which also is called "Jesus"?
- That the events of Tutankhamun's death, later mixed with Egyptian astrotheology, provide the historical and mythical background for the later myths around "crucified saviors" that eventually end up with the crucifixion of the Jesus of the New Testament?

Wow...that is a lot to know that I bet we did not know all of this up to now. The puzzle pieces surrounding the Jesus of the New Testament are finally coming together the more we learn of Egyptian history and the astrotheology of their Religion. Bet Emet has devoted much time and space examining the roots of the astrotheology behind the "Christ myth" and it time we now research the historical "Karast/Christ" at the heart of Egyptian religion. But it is for us to prove such things and not just announce them.

I find it very sad that Western scholars, whether Christian, Jewish or Atheist, tend to ignore Egyptian views when interpreting the accounts of ancient history. Sadly Christians scholars and Christian Egyptologists have made the fatal mistake of trying to place Egypt into Biblical history instead of placing the Bible into Egyptian history where it fits like a glove. Egypt is overlooked by a proto-Christian view applied to all things it seems. Even Manetho, the great Egyptian scholar-scribe responsible for the arrangement of the Alexandrian library, has been dismissed by many as unqualified to write about scientific matters to the Greeks. In addition, Islamic documents are completely disregarded as a source of ancient tradition, when arguing the history of biblical stories. This cannot be justified, for the stories in the Koran come from the same source as the books of the Bible. Moreover, the Koran accounts agree with those of the Bible in the majority of cases, which makes it more important to examine the reason for various points, of divergence (A. Osman, Out Of Egypt).

Alexandria had remained the most important cultural centre of the ancient world, and the focal point of the mutual influence exercised in the conjunction of Christianity and Hellenism until the destruction of its library in AD 391. Alexandria, as you might already have guessed, was founded by Alexander the Great in 331 B.C.E. and it became the first real cosmopolitan city in history. It was the New York city of its day. It was in Alexandria, Egypt, where Macedonians and Greeks lived together with Egyptians and Jews, and scholars flocked from all over the world to do their research and their study. It was also as you might imagine the religious melting pot of the Ancient world. Not only did they share a common habitation in Alexandria, they all had the same longing for knowledge and the same interest in philosophy and ancient wisdom. This is why the city was also the centre of Hellenistic Judaism. It was in Alexandria that Philo Judaeus, the first Jewish philosopher wrote his 38 books in the 1st century AD. The city had, in addition, as mentioned above, the only library containing almost all the books of ancient civilizations, including the Greek text of the Old Testament along with the Hebrew Scriptures. Hence it is not astonishing that Alexandria rapidly became the main Christian intellectual centre.

Before the Alexandrian library was destroyed, Egypt was regarded as the holy land of the ancient world, the source of wisdom and knowledge where the gods became known for the first time. Pilgrims then, including Roman emperors, came from all over the world to worship in the temples of Isis and Serapis, as well as at the foot of Mount Sinai. This situation would change and come to an end in the latter years of the reign of the emperor Theodosius I who was extremely zealous in his suppression of both what he considered "paganism" and "heresy" or, as the word is defined, any opinion contrary to his "accepted" orthodox doctrine enforced by Roman Christianity from Rome. Theodosius I, Emperor of the East from 379-392 C.E., and later sole emperor of East and West from 392-395 C.E., was responsible for enforcing the Creed of the Council of Nicaea (325 C.E.) as a universal norm for Christian orthodoxy and directed the convening of the second general council at Constantinople in AD 381 to clarify the formula. The policies of the Council of Nicaea and Constantinople were carried out when fanatical mobs of the Church were unleased upon the ancient world where untold ancient temples were destroyed and burned to the ground along with ancient tombs which were desecrated along with walls of monuments which were scraped clean of names and depictions of deities which often proved that Christianity was anything but "new" or "unique". In Alexandria, Bishop Theophilus was as ambitious as the emperor, Theodosius I, who had appointed him. It was one of his zealous actions that led to the burning of an estimated half a million books stored in the Alexandrian library. Theophilus of Alexandria (385-412 C.E.) was one of the orthodox leaders who represented the imperial government dispatched from Rome to impose official orthodoxy on the Alexandrian Church. He led a campaign against paganism and heresy in Egypt that included destruction of the Serapeum where the Alexandrian library was placed. The Serapeum, at the same time as being the centre of worship for the ancient Egyptian trinity of Osiris, Isis and Horus, became a focal point for the emerging Christian Gnostic sects - those Christians who sought to gain spiritual knowledge through mysteries and the attempt to know oneself, interpreting the Scriptures allegorically and not literally.

Answer for yourself: So why was the library destroyed?

The general library at the Serapeum gradually became a focal point for scholars and intellectuals, from all over the Roman Empire, whose views contradicted the teachings of the "literalized" Christian Church of Rome. For this reason it became regarded as heretical and had to be destroyed.

With the destruction of the Serapeum, not only Egyptian knowledge was lost; Mesopotamian, Syrian, Phoenician, Greek and Jewish learning also vanished. The Jews lost their true history and few have recovered it today. Lost to the world was the Egyptian roots to all later world religions let alone the true identities of the Biblical Patriarchs and the later Biblical heroes like Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Jacob, King David and King Solomon whom today, because of the efforts of archeologists, we know to be connected to the Pharaohs of the 18th Dynasty. Not only that the real truth about "the messiah", whom we are taught lays with the House of David, in reality lays with the House of Tuthmose III, Pharaoh of the 18th Dynasty! Hidden within all of this is the big secret that Rome and ironically Egypt tried to conceal as well; namely that Hebrew Pharaohs of the 18 th Dynasty, the fathers of later Israel, had ties to the Egyptian throne and that the wisdom of the world was to be credited to the black African race of Egypt and not to the Caucasian Greeks and Rome.

As if that is not enough, the whole scientific achievement of the old civilizations, regarded as heresy by Bishop Theophilus, disappeared in a single day. Wonderful books on astronomy teaching the astrotheology behind many of the world's key religious doctrines had to be destroy for the information in them revealed that what would later become the "Jesus Story", told as an assumed historical person, is really only an allegory of the personification of the path of the Sun through the Heavens and the Zodiac as is now seen in the Book of Matthew, chapters 1-28. Books on anatomy, medicine, geometry, geography, history, philosophy, theology and literature, as well as copies of the early Gnostic gospels of Christ were all destroyed. Lost for all time is the facts of the Elohim among mankind. And I could go on. The result was the beginning of the dark ages, which lasted for more than ten centuries after that. All branches of science, as well as heretical writings which did not adhere to the teaching of the orthodox Church, were forbidden by the state. This left only the canonic books of the Scripture as chosen and promoted by Rome as the main source of Western knowledge until the Renaissance in the 15th century. Mankind has had to wait for modern archaeologists to dig out old remains and inscribed papyrus rolls that escaped the purge and of Rome in order that we can "regain our memory" of the ways things truly were in that day. No area of restored knowledge is more important than the recovery of the true identity of Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, King David, King Solomon, and Joshua and the House of the Egyptian Messiah. This restored history of Egypt is not only breath-taking but earth shattering in its implications for both Judaism and Christianity; especially in the light of the dark history of Christianity over the Dark Ages when untold millions were slaughtered for having different views on this "Roman messiah". The achievements of archaeologists since the 15th century are simply momentous and has literally turned Judeo-Christianity on its head; that is for those who are familiar with their findings. This information explains and provides the final puzzle pieces for the "Jesus Puzzle" in the New Testament and finally, having these pieces, we can answer that long sought after question that confronts us in the New Testament:

Mark 8:27 27 And Jesus went out, and his disciples, into the towns of Caesarea Philippi: and by the way he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am? (KJV)

From such study one finds that Egypt emerges as the birthplace of our the world's most gifted spiritual teachers of this black race; from Imhotep, the first pyramid builder of the 27th century BC, to Tuthmose III (the Biblical King David which leaves us such great hymns to Amun/Aten/God, to Amenhotep III (the Biblical Solomon) whose wisdom enriches us today as we read his Proverbs, to Moses/Akhenaten, who restored the knowledge of the one true God when man was straying from such a pure concept with the over emphasis upon Osiris and the "god-man" and re-defined God's order and design for all life in the giving of the Torah and the Commandments of God to all mankind, etc. The goal of such gifts of knowledge from these Egyptian Spiritual Masters is that man might awaken to the realization that within him dwells the Divine and it was this awareness of the "Egyptian Karast/Christ within" (the Gnostics) that God's spiritual truths were to be planted and produce fruit within the soul of all mankind. Thanks to modern archaeologists, a new age now appears on the horizon, with Egypt restored to its original place and the glory that it rightly and rightfully deserves which has been stripped from her by the Greek and later Roman nations which stole her knowledge and wisdom, and after corrupting it, presented it the the unsuspecting world who accepted such a forgery unknowingly. Christianity is a prime example. The Christian church has left a legacy, a world view, that permeates every aspect of Western society, both secular and religious. It is a legacy that fosters sexism, racism, the intolerance of difference, and the desecration of the natural environment. The Church, throughout much of its history, has demonstrated a disregard for human freedom, dignity, and self-determination. It has attempted to control, contain, and confine spirituality, the relationship between an individual and God. As a result, Christianity has helped to create a society in which people are alienated not only from each other but also from the divine. And they did all of this in the name of a false messiah....a Roman Jesus which is totally and diametrically opposed to the true historical "Karast/Christ" of Egypt where it all began.

Answer for yourself: So what is the answer? Well we must begin with truth and the clearest revelation of God on this planet and His will for all mankind and I found that we have to turn to Egypt to get it although my years studying Judaism was very beneficial and it led me to the further study of the hidden legacy of Israel within Egypt. This revelation is astounding when you realize that when reading the pages of the first 5 books of the Old Testament as well as many other books of the Old Testament you are actually reading about Egypt and Egyptian religion disguised as "Judaism". A great book that I recommend to you is 101 Myths of the Bible by Gary Greenberg to begin to see these things. When you see the facts and it dawns upon you that when reading about Abram and Sarai, Isaac, Jacob, King David and King Solomon and the "messianic prophecies" you are actually reading about Pharaohs and the glorious promises made concerning the Throne of Egypt which finds its ultimate expression in the 18th Dynasty, the glorious pinnacle of Egypt, which later is shared with the Hebrews who were Pharaohs of Egypt and spearheaded the return to pure monotheism. When it dawns upon you that when reading the Psalms and Proverbs that you are reading the wisdom of Egypt and not some later Jewish writings then you begin to get a new appreciation for the astounding wisdom of Egypt. They knew God like few if any have since! If you want a clearer picture and understanding of this Divine we call God then Egypt is where you must go.

There exists an old prophecy which predicted that woes will come upon Egypt, but also promised that order would finally be restored again. This prophecy is found in the Hermetic text of Asclepius, discovered among the Nag Hammadi library. Asclepius is a dialogue between the mystagogue Hermes Trismegistus and an initiate, Asclepius. In an apocalyptic section with significant Egyptian and Israelite parallels, the speaker predicts the fall, then rise again, of Egypt:

"are you ignorant, 0 Asciepius, that Egypt is (the) image of heaven? Moreover, it is the dwelling place of heaven and all the forces that are in heaven. If it is proper for us to speak the truth, our land is (the) temple of the world. And it is proper for you not to be ignorant that a time will come in it (our land) (when) Egyptians will seem to have served the divinity in vain, and all their activity in their religion will be despised. For all divinity will leave Egypt and will flee upward to heaven. And Egypt will be widowed; it will be abandoned by the gods. For foreigners will come into Egypt, and they will rule it. . . And in that day the country that was more pious than all countries will become impious. No longer will it he full of temples, but it will be full of tombs.. Egypt, lover of God, and the dwelling place of the gods, school of religion, will become an example of impiousness . . . [Then Egypt will be restored again] And the lords of the earth...will establish themselves in a city that is in a corner of Egypt that will be built toward the setting of the sun.

Answer for yourself: What does Isaiah, the Old Testament prophet of the 6th century B.C.E., have to say about this? Well he confirms this prophecy and gives us the first "messianic prophecy" in his book.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the first " messianic prophecy" in the book of Isaiah is given to Egypt and not to the Jews? Are you aware that this first "messianic prophecy" foretells the appearance of a saviour in Egypt and not in Jerusalem (which happens to be a later "holy city" of Egypt due to Tuthmose III since he places his Ark of Amun-Ra in that city in the battle of Megiddo?). And you thought it was King David. Well it really was for they are both the same person.

The burden of Egypt. Behold, the Lord rideth upon a swift cloud, and shall come into Egypt: and the idols of Egypt shall be moved at his presence, and the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it. And I will set the Egyptians against the Egyptians: and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour. . . And the spirit of Egypt shall fail in the midst thereof. . . In that day shall there he an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the "border" (the Nile to the Euphrates) thereof to the Lord (the stele of Tuthmose III). And it shall be for a sign and for a witness unto the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt. . . and he shall send them a saviour, and a great one, and he shall deliver them. (Isaiah 19:1-3; 19-20)

Answer for yourself: What is this pillar or stele that is mentioned? Who put it there? Who was the God behind it of which Isaiah spoke. Is Amun-Ra the YHWH of the Bible? Are they the same? Do we find the name Yahweh in Egypt and never knew it? Is Judaism really Egyptian religion made to look "Jewish" in the Bible to cover up its Egyptian flavor?

Answer for yourself: Just whom is this historical "Savior"? Has this savior-messiah come and we not know it?

Most have been taught to expect that the "fulfillment" of Isaiah's promise has to be with the New Testament

Jesus.

Answer for yourself: But just how was this New Testament Jesus involved with Egypt? Could it have been through the Hebrew Pharaohs of Egypt who later extended their reign to Jerusalem?

I can't find Egypt much in the New Testament at all so it seems to me that this prophecy which many think the Gospel of Matthew refers in its account of the birth of Christ as the fulfillment of this Isaiah passage above is really about someone else. But if we "think" for a second instead of blindly being led by others who tell us what to believe we should be hard-pressed to find any link between the Jesus of the New Testament and Egypt let alone events transpiring in the time of the New Testament Jesus which involved "Egyptians against Egyptians" let alone altars to the Lord and pillars to the Lord in the land of Egypt. So maybe this prophecy is not about some New Testament Jesus after all but someone else.

Answer for yourself: Who is this historical personality? Was he a Pharaoh? Did his blood line contain "Hebrew" blood and would he provide the blood line that we later find expected in the later Jewish Messiah?

Answer for yourself: Just whom is Isaiah then speaking about? Does the Hebrew blood line that we expect to find in the Jewish "Messiah" run through the Throne of Egypt? Were there "Hebrew Pharaohs"? Was a Hebrew Pharaoh the possible fulfillment of Isaiah above when 'Egyptians were divided against other Egyptians"? Could his prophecy refer to the religious revolution in Egypt caused by Akhenaten which was the real cause of the Exodus that involved the Hebrew Pharaohs of the 18th Dynasty of Egypt? Does Israel find it literal beginning from these Hebrew Pharaohs of Egypt?

Answer for yourself: How much of "Egyptian religion" is then passed off as Judaism today? Will a proper understanding of Egyptian religion help us better understand Biblical Judaism and the deviation from these parallel and similar truths between them as found in the later deviation we know as Roman Christianity?

A quest into the fountainhead of modern man's beliefs and practices inevitably leads back before the path of the Judeo-Christianity heritage and the Greek classic tradition, to the very dawn of civilization. Myths, symbols and ideas cherished as our own are found to have been fashioned many thousands of years ago by cultures sometimes mistakenly labeled as primitive, crude, "heathen" or "pagan" by Christianity when in fact examination of these Egyptian religious tenants are the highest revelation of spiritual ideas ever received by mankind. Ancient Egypt, often called the cradle of mankind, represents a terminating point in this search for the origin of modern religious concepts. Many have not changed much; others have. This ancient civilization, perhaps more than any other, can supply us with the clues to an understanding of many of the beliefs which have found their way into modern times.

The Egyptians were essentially a religious people. Their religion was composed of elements uniquely Egyptian, and those it shared with other ancient religions. But, amazingly, ancient Egypt also was familiar with such relatively modern concepts as Immortality of the Soul, The Last Judgment, Messiah, Law, Commandments, Repentance, Prayer, Sacrifice, Logos, Sabbath, Millennium, Circumcision, Eucharist, and Baptism. Whether the wonderful religion of Egypt was evolved from inner consciousness, or appeared as fragments of a primitively revealed faith from observations of both the Cosmos and Nature, it is not less the fact that the sacerdotal notions of other nations seem mysteriously related and patterned after it to varying degrees. The problem comes in for us when we find that these "religious dogmas" as received, understood, and taught by Egypt were altered and changed from the simple understandings that they possessed in the beginning. As a former Christian Pastor I speak with experience as many of my Christian beliefs are these very "alterations" of Ancient Divine Revelation of which I speak.

There are answers and they are startling as you will soon see but the evidence and facts that come from examination of Egyptian records, Egyptian King lists, and Egyptian religious history fill in the gaps in our Judeo-Christianity and shows us many things that we have believed and were taught in error from Judeo-Christianity when compared with these same ideas as originally understood by those who first received and gave them to all mankind. My focus at present is that behind our assumed Jewish Patriarchs of the Old Testament lies the mighty nation of Egypt and Pharaohs of the 18th Dynasty. It is here, among the 18th Dynasty of Egypt, that we find the historical "crucified savior" whom I will show you is a King-Pharaoh of the 18th Dynasty. This provides the "historical" emphasis that is later merged with the "Mythical Christ" from astronomy and gives us the "historical Joshua" or should I say the "historical Jesus".Add this to the astrotheology of Egypt and we have the complete "Jesus Story" we find in the New Testament. This might sound confusing at first but in time the pieces come together and then you easily see, having all the necessary puzzle pieces, the reason for the "historical Jesus" being taught in the New Testament in light of the failure of any unforged historical record of his existence outside the one book given us by Rome...the New Testament. This is a long and involved, and often difficult picture to follow and your attention will be required. In order to do it correctly we have to begin at the beginning asking the question: "Who is Abram, Sarai, and who is the real father of Isaac"? As you will see it is here that we begin to mix the blood of Egypt with what will be later defined as "Israel" and which finds its final expression at the 18th Dynasty of Hebrew Pharaohs.

It is to this issue we now turn.

ABRAHAM, SARAH, ISAAC AND THE PHARAOHS OF EGYPT....IS THERE A CONNECTION?

It is taken for granted that the Hebrew tribe make its first appearance in history in the 15th century B.C.E. at the time of Abraham who has been regarded by both Jews and Christians alike as the founding father of the 12 tribes of Israel due to the account in the Old Testament. This comfortable little quaint story is being challenged to its very core today by both archeology and its findings as well as a reappraisal of history of the world. Abraham's patriarchy is not a certainty today as it was believed only a few years ago; rather it is to be viewed in light of newly recovered evidence to be "symbolic" only as we shall soon see.

We all have heard that Abram and his wife Sarai began their journey into history and Canaan, according to the Old Testament, at Ur in southern Mesopotamia which is 200 miles south-east of modern Baghdad, Iraq. According to the Bible, it was when Abram and Sarai traveled to Egypt that a relationship began between Egyptian royalty and what was to become later the tribes of Israel (M. Gadalla, Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Egypt, p. 143).

Answer for yourself: Does the Bible tell us why or when Abraham and his father Terah and his whole family set out to leave Ur in route to Canaan? No but there are clues to help us pinpoint when these events occurred.

Because descendants of Abram and Sarai like Joseph and Moses (Yuya and Amenhotep III) can be identified as living in the 14th century B.C.E., it is a reasonable deduction that Terah and his family departed from Ur at the very end of the 16th century B.C.E, or, more probably, in the early years of the 15 th century B.C.E.

We need keep in mind that this is roughly the time for the emergence of the Hyksos and their invasion of Egypt.

A blast of God smote us; and unexpectedly from the regions of the East invaders of obscure race marched in confidence of victory against our land. By main force they easily overpowered the rulers of the land; they then burned our cities ruthlessly and razed to the ground the temples of the gods and treated all the natives with a cruel hostility -- massacring some and leading into slavery the wives and children of others* (Author and Egyptian Priest Manetho)

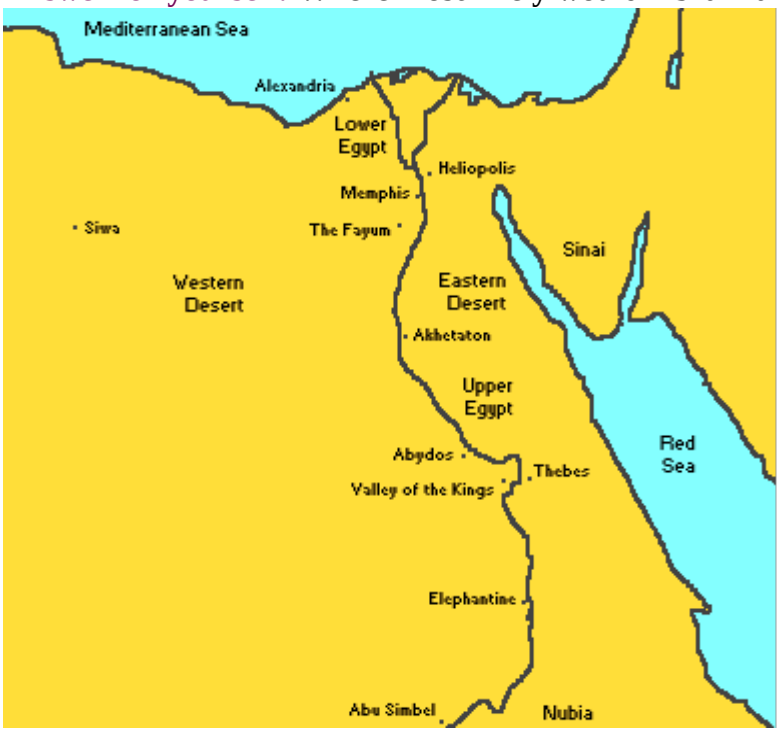
Egyptian records tell of a great invasion of desperate peoples through the Eastern Delta although in reality semitic immigrants had been steadily entering the country of Egypt for some time. The rise of the Hyksos to power was a turning point in the history of the Ancient Near East. They took control over the capital of Memphis in 1674 BC and founded the 15th Dynasty (1674-1567 BC) which ran parallel to the 16th Dynasty -- a dynasty of vassal chiefs under Hyksos control. The conquering Hyksos were mainly Semites either from Canaan or from Syria -- the latter having been displaced from their homeland by the influx of the warring Anatolians from Asia Minor. Avaris in the northeastern part of the Delta was the capital of the Hyksos.



Answer for yourself: Does the Bible tell us that the tribe of Israel came and settled in this same area in Egypt when they were called down by Joseph? Yes we are. So then should we expect to find a family connection between the Hyksos and the later Israelites? We should and we do.

For anyone trying to make a living from the soil, the hills of Canaan posed an intimidating challenge as the climate was hostile and times of famine were common. It was at this time of famine that Abram and Sarai are said to have set out on their travels again from Haran, a journey that was to forge the FIRST LINK between this Semitic tribe and the Royal House of Egypt. This trip will lead to an event that will ensure for Abram's family an enduring place in world history.

Although the Abram and Sarai are said by the Bible to have set out for Egypt at a time of famine, it may have been some different motive that caused them to make this journey. Compared to Canaan, Egypt was a rich and sophisticated country. Abram and Sari did not stop in the eastern delta of the Nile, which one might have expected if they were simply seeking food. Instead they made their way unnecessarily deep into the South of Egypt, of their own free will, to the residence of the Pharaoh whom many believe to have been at that time Tuthmose III. This seems strange in light of the fact that the Bible says that Abram was afraid of the Pharaoh murdering him because of his beautiful wife yet the Pharaoh has scruples about the unknown adultery with Abram's wife later. Something is wrong in this picture. The bottom line is Abram and Sarah travel right to the Pharaoh, Tuthmose III.

Answer for yourself: Just whom was Tuthmose III? Here is where it begins to get difficult; especially in light of our prior conditioning an prior teachings. Scholars today recognize Tuthmose III as the Biblical King David. Now I don't expect you to believe that statement but if you will read the accompany article about the identity of Tuthmose III then you will be convinced beyond any doubt that he and King David are the same person. Again we see the Biblical chronology does not match the Egyptian King list and Egyptian chronology and records that archeology has given us today but this will be a common ploy used for several reasons as we shall see as our study advances.

Answer for yourself: Where most likely would Abram and Sarai have gone to meet this Pharaoh? Well at this period in Egyptian history there was three major cities and theological centers where the Pharaoh would have possibly held court: Memphis, Heliopolis or Thebes. There were two very important Northern cities that need to be mentioned. Memphis, 12 miles south of modern Cairo, was an important trade centre, graced by the Great Temple of Ptah, patron of craftsmen and artisans. Heliopolis, known in the Bible as On, from the Greek, was the original Egyptian holy city, situated a short distance to the north of modern Cairo and was the chief centre of worship of the sun-god Ra. Both of these northern cities were used by the court to escape the worst of the blistering heat of an Egyptian summer. During the 18th Dynasty (1575-1335 BC), however, Heliopolis declined in importance as Thebes - modern Luxor, some 300 miles to the south, on the east bank of the Nile opposite the Valley of the Kings, and the main centre of worship of the state god Amun-Ra - developed as the main capital of The Two Lands of Egypt (Egypt was called "The Two Lands" as a result of the union between the red desert and the black valley of the Nile).

Wherever Abram and Sarai went, and for whatever purpose, we are simply told that Sarai was "a fair woman to look upon" and, as they approached Egypt, Abram, fearing that he might be killed if it were known that Sarai was his wife and Pharaoh took a fancy to her, said: "Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister. . . and my soul shall live because of thee" (12:13). This, according to the Book of Genesis, proved a wise precaution. Courtiers advised Pharaoh of the "fair woman" who had appeared in their midst and he "took her into Pharaoh's house" and the Pharaoh married Sarai.

Gen 12:15-16 15 The princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before Pharaoh: and the woman was taken into Pharaoh's house. 16 And he entreated Abram well for her sake: and he had sheep, and oxen, and he asses, and menservants, and maidservants, and she asses, and camels. (KJV)

Subsequently the Pharaoh married Sarai and Abram was rewarded generously for the hand of his "sister".

Answer for yourself: Was Abram paid a "bride price" for his sister (wife)? Yes. In the above two verses you see the "marriage" between the Pharaoh and Sarai and the "bride price" paid to whom the Pharaoh thought was her brother but in reality was her husband.

Abram, as stated above, was well rewarded for the hand in marriage of his "sister", with sheep, oxen, donkeys and servants. He became rich.

But having committed adultery, a great sin in Egypt, God smote the Pharaohs' house and the Bible tells us that "great plagues" descended on the House of Pharaoh because he had married another man's wife, and Pharaoh sent for Abram and asked him:

Gen 12:18-20 18 And Pharaoh called Abram, and said, What is this that thou hast done unto me? why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife? 19 Why saidst thou, She is my sister? so I might have taken her to me to wife: now therefore behold thy wife, take her, and go thy way. 20 And Pharaoh commanded his men concerning him: and they sent him away, and his wife, and all that he had. (KJV)

Once the Pharaoh found out that the truth about Abram and Sarai, he told Abram to take his wife and leaves. Abram and Sarai were sent back to Canaan with generous gifts.

Answer for yourself: Can the behavior of Abram and Sarai in Egypt, be considered moral or ethical? Again a very important picture is being painted for us here; namely, the righteousness of the Egyptians and the Egyptian faith and religion.

Major changes began to occur to this small tribe when they returned to Canaan. The Bible tells us that the Lord made a covenant with Abram saying: "To your descendants I give this land, from the River of Egypt to the great river, the Euphrates". Later, the Lord told Abram "...No longer will you be called Abram, you name will be Abraham, for I have made you a father of a host of nations...Kings will come from you". The Lord continues, "As for Sarai your wife...her name will be Sarah, I shall bless her and give you a son by her...Kings of People will come from her".

Wow..What a loaded paragraph when you just think about it for a while. After the Pharaoh had "married" Sarai and became one flesh with her and after she had become is wife and "Queen" they were exiled from Egypt because of the lie of Abram but yet blessed in their going out. It is hard to think that the Pharaoh would bless a lie or a liar but he sure would bless his wife. All the more so if she were soon to be found pregnant. Look at the above statements. Promised to "Sarah" is a son who would be a "King" and not only that a "lineage of Kings" would come from her and not Abraham. Notice also that the land between the Nile and the Euphrates was promised to Sarah's "Son" and "King" and "Kings" and not to Abraham. At no time did this land belong to Jews as we will see in later studies but always was Egyptian land during the times of this Biblical King David (Tuthmose III) and Amenhotep III (the Biblical Solomon). These promises are all about Sarah and her unique relationship to the King-Pharaoh of Egypt. These promises have nothing to do with good old Abram, the liar.

- The promised son was to be Isaac
- The promise that "Kings of peoples" will descend from Sarah is the first mention of any Hebrew Kings (the Hebrews lived as nomadic tribes, with a chief as the head of the tribe and not a king).
- The Bible told us earlier that Sarah had been unable to conceive throughout her married life with Abram. (M. Gadalla, Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Egypt, p. 144). But that is not all.

Answer for yourself: What else was Sarai given at this time? Pharaoh also provided Sarai with an Egyptian maid, Hagar, and, once they had returned safely to Canaan, Sarai gave birth to a son, Isaac.

Answer for yourself: Is there a connection between the birth of Isaac and the giving of the handmaid? You bet there is if you read between the lines.

The essence of the biblical account of the journey to Egypt is that Sarai, the wife of Abram, also became the wife of the ruling Pharaoh. This, in the custom of the time, would not only have involved the paying of the bride-price to Abram for the hand of his "sister", but sexual intercourse on the same night as the actual marriage ceremony.

Answer for yourself: Did Sarai get pregnant by the Pharaoh and is this the reason for the handmaid being given her to help her when she returned to Canaan?

Answer for yourself: That brings up another "big" question: Could the Pharaoh be the biological father of Isaac and not Abraham? Could this be the reason why we find Hebrew Pharaohs on the Throne of Egypt in the soon coming 18 Dynasty?

So far we have noticed a lot:

- We saw Abraham passing off Sarai as his sister
- We saw that Sarai was seen by the princes of the Pharaoh who commended her beauty to their King
- We saw Sarai being taken into the royal palace
- We saw the marriage of Sarai to the Pharaoh
- We saw the Pharaoh's generous treatment of Abram (presents of sheep, oxen, etc.)
- We saw the gift to Sarai of the slave and handmaid Hagar

Answer for yourself: Is this proof positive that Isaac was the child of the union of Sarai and the Pharaoh? Honestly no. It is up to now circumstantial but we are not through yet. If our point is to be proven then we should expect to find efforts on the part of the Biblical writer to put as many years as possible between the couple's return to Canaan and Isaac's birth.

Answer for yourself: Can and do we find these "textual" efforts to conceal the possibility that Isaac could have been child of the marriage between the Pharaoh and Sarai and not the child of Abram? Yes we do.

TEXTUAL MANIPULATIONS TO COVER UP THE FACT THAT ISAAC IS THE SON OF THE PHARAOH

If our theory is true then there needs to be evidence to back it up. Let us see if we can do that. I believe that when you look at the evidence then you will agree that the Biblical narrator went to elaborate efforts to put as many years as possible between Abram's and Sarai's return to Canaan and Isaac's birth to separate any idea that he possibly could have been the son of the Pharaoh and not Abram.

There are 3 areas where we find this damning evidence that proves our point:

- The Talmud

The Koran

- The history of Isaac's immediate descendants

The Talmud, next to the Old Testament, is the greatest authority fro the early history of the Israelites and it is in the Talmud that we find evidence that points to the Pharaoh of Egypt being the father of Isaac and not Abram.

So far the Bible has only informed us of a "sinful" marriage between the Pharaoh and Sarai. But there is much that lays beneath this "cover story". The Biblical narrator, most likely Ezra, records for us that in the course of the years that followed, the Israelites were to return to Egypt, where they remained for four generations until the Exodus when, burdened by harsh treatment and persecution by their Egyptian taskmasters, they were led out of the country by Moses on the first stage of their journey to the Promised Land. We must stop and realize that many more centuries passed before an account of these events was put down in writing. Egypt did not chronicle this in any way and did much to erase this event from its history and this will be addressed later and the reasons why the facts of Akhenaten and the Exodus were almost totally obliterated from Egyptian history. By the times these events were recorded by the Biblical narrator Egypt and its Pharaoh had become a symbol of hatred for the Israelites. That being so the biblical narrator was therefore motivated to conceal any family connections that possibly were existence between Israel and Egypt.

After the couple's return to Canaan, we read from the pen of the Biblical narrator in the Book of Genesis that a series of prophecies are given Abram which gives him greater prominence than Sarai. The Lord is said to have appeared to Abram in a vision and told him:

Gen 15:13 13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years; (KJV)

Gen 15:16 16 But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice something that seemed odd? One passage refers to 400 years and the other passage only 3 verses later mentions only to 4 generations. Has a mistake been made here? In case you did not know 400 years is NOT 4 generations.

We find another prophecy. God also made a covenant with Abram:

Gen 15:18 18 In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt (Nile) unto the great river, the river Euphrates: (KJV)

Now you may or may not have read the prior articles on the identity of King David being Tuthmose III and King Solomon being Amenhotep III but if you had then you should remember that throughout the Old Testament as I showed you we have the repeated phrase over and over again that King David's and King Solomon's empires stretched from the "Nile to the great river Euphrates". We saw this phrase repeated over and over gain throughout the whole Old Testament and the chronicled lives of both King David and King Solomon. The fact of what we are saying should hit home; either Israel ruled Egypt or Egypt ruled Israel. We cannot have it both ways and world history teaches us that it was Egypt that ruled Palestine during the Biblical dates given for the rule and reign of both King David and King Solomon.

It is at this point that we need to mention that the Biblical narrator goes to great length to make the point that Sarai was unable to have children:

Gen 16:1-3 1 Now Sarai Abram's wife bare him no children: and she had an handmaid, an Egyptian, whose name was Hagar. 2 And Sarai said unto Abram, Behold now, the LORD hath restrained me from bearing: I pray thee, go in unto my maid; it may be that I may obtain children by her. And

Abram hearkened to the voice of Sarai. 3 And Sarai Abram's wife took Hagar her maid the Egyptian, after Abram had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan, and gave her to her husband Abram to be his wife. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: How long are we told passed in which Sarai was "childless" before she gave her handmaid to Abram in order to father a child? We are told it was 10 years.

It won't be long because shortly afterwards Hagar conceived, and an angel of the Lord appeared to her with the news that she would bear a son and "call his name Ishmael" (16:11).

Answer for yourself: How old is Abram when Ishmael is born? We are told that Abram was 86 when Ishmael was born.

Answer for yourself: Is this a reliable date?

Such ages are not at all reliable. According to bone remains belonging to this period, the average life-span at the time was around 30. Very few people lived to the age of 80 or 90, and even if they did, would not be able to father children at that age (Ahmed Osman, Out of Egypt, p. 15).

The Biblical narrator makes another 13 years to pass before Abram has another visitation from the Lord. Abram's next visitation resulted in the change of names for Abram.

Gen 17:5-6 5 Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. 6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What is to come from the family of Abraham and Sarai? Kings. Let us not forget that at this time the King is the Pharaoh!

Answer for yourself: Did you notice the word "made" used as "I have made"? What could this mean? Now let us keep our "thinking hats on". Abraham was already, at this time, before the Biblical birth of Isaac, called the source of Kings but, according to the Biblical record, only Ishmael had been born at this time. The truth is coming out in bits and pieces; Abraham, according to the prior tradition was "the source of Kings" through the earlier birth of Isaac through Sarah and Tuthmose III.

Answer for yourself: How is this possible. And as we well know the Kings of Israel do not come from Ishmael but through Isaac. Is this a hidden tip-off that Abraham was already the source for these future kings through Sarai his wife because through Sarai, his wife, who was already pregnant with the Pharaoh's seed, that Pharaohs (the Armana Pharaohs-18th Dynasty) will come from her and her son Isaac and do we find this expression with the Pharaohs of the 18 Dynasty who trace their lineage back through Joseph and Isaac ? We sure do.

According to the Biblical record Isaac had not been born yet or so it would appear if we only went with the Biblical record and neglect the prior evidences we saw above:

- Sarai being taken into the royal palace
- The marriage of Sarai to the Pharaoh
- The Pharaoh's generous treatment of Abram (given presents of sheep, oxen, etc.) as the bride-price
- The gift of the slave girl Hagar as a handmaid to Sarai to help her with her pregnancy once leaving Egypt

But if we look at this evidence and other evidence as it mounts then we begin to see a different picture from what the Bible has given us. It should seem to a "thinking believer" that more than likely there is a good chance that Isaac is already born as the seen of the union of the Pharaoh and Sarai but the Biblical narrator is not coming forth with such knowledge on purpose and in fact trying to cover up such a idea by creating long time gaps of 10 and 13 years (plus one more year we will get to later) totaling 24 years before the presumed birth of Isaac.

Next we find a curious statement that passes by most without ever realizing the importance and the underlying implications of such a statement.

Gen 17:10 10 This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee; Every man child among you shall be circumcised. (KJV)

Circumcision itself began as a religious ritual or puberty rite as long as 6000 years ago and some say much earlier. The earliest Egyptian mummies (1300 BCE) were circumcised and wall paintings in Egypt show that it was customary several thousand years earlier than that. "It started as an ancient Egyptian custom and there are wall carvings to prove it. (Desmond Morris, Babywatching). Genesis 17:27 ends the story by telling us that all the men in the house of Abraham - born in the house and bought with money - were circumcised with him on the very day. The so called contract between God and Abraham on circumcision, in effect, means the introduction of this practice to Palestine, because it was originally an Egyptian tradition. The phallus in Egypt was considered sacred as the symbol of fertility. Presentation to the God of a piece of the foreskin showed the respect and loyalty to God. It is here we find the actual link between the practice of circumcision in Egypt and Israel through Abraham. Again we see the Egyptian influence. This command, which Abraham carried out, forged another link between the Hebrew tribes and Egypt, for until that time only Egypt among the eastern nations had adopted the custom of circumcision (the practice had appeared early in Egyptian history, as can be seen from surviving mummies).

At the same time God said to Abraham:

Gen 17:15-16 15 And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sar-ah shall her name be. 16 And I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her: yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of people shall be of her. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did the texts say that "kings" would be of Abraham or Sarah? It says "of her" and not "of him". On the matter of the change of names, sar in Hebrew means "prince" and Sarah is the feminine form, which can even be interpreted to mean "the queen".

Answer for yourself: Queen of whom? Who was the King? Was it the Pharaoh Tuthmose III, the Biblical King David? Yes it would appear.

Answer for yourself: What was Abram a "King" of and where was his land? The royalty is totally on the side of Sarah due to her marriage to the Pharaoh. Sarah was a Queen of Egypt living with Abraham and the promise of "kings" to come was through her and not from the loins of Abraham but rather Tuthmose III! The promise of "Kings" to come was through Abraham's wife who bore the seed of the Pharaoh of Egypt.

Gen 17:17 17 Then Abraham fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear? (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What should we see in the above verse which goes against biological laws as we know them?

Again we see creation of excessive ages for both Abraham and Sarah in order to separate any ideas that the soon coming "son", Isaac, could possibly be the son of the Pharaoh Tuthmose III. These excessive ages removes Isaac from any possible connection to Egypt.

So we next find that the Biblical narrator again has God reassure Abraham due to his and Sarah's excessive ages that they will conceive a son of promise:

Gen 17:19 19 And God said, Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him. (KJV)

It has been 23 years since Sarah and Tuthmose III were married and had sex that prompted the giving of a handmaid to Sarai when she left Egypt. Let us remember that such "handmaids" were the property of the Pharaoh since they were enslaved servants of Egypt. Abram could not have provided a handmaid for his wife; she was the property of the Pharaoh.

Even now, after 23 years, the biblical narrator did not feel it advisable to introduce the birth of Isaac. He will incorporate two more stories to dispel any possible doubt about the identity of the father of Isaac by placing another long gap of more than nine months between Sarah's departure from Egypt and the birth of Isaac.

First we find that he described how Abraham sought to free his nephew Lot, who had been captured by some enemies. Then, on a visit to Gerar in southern Canaan, where, we are told, Abraham again took the precaution of claiming that Sarah was his sister, the king fell in love with her "again", despite her even at a greater age now, and was about to marry her when the Lord appeared to him in a dream and warned him not to marry a woman who was already someone else's wife.

Answer for yourself: How many men want to mate with a hundred year old woman? Let us not leave our brains as the door please.

But, alas, it is only now, after the passage of many years since the return from Egypt, that we are finally given the Biblical birth of Isaac which took another whole year after the Lord's promise to Abraham.

Answer for yourself: How old is Ishmael at this time? The chronology presented by the biblical narrator means that Ishmael must have been 14 (13 years plus 1 more year) years older than Isaac.

Answer for yourself: How do we know that this account is a lie? Well simply said God can add even if the readers of this Bible cannot.

One aspect of this whole story's unreliability becomes painfully evident if we only read close the passages before us. We see the account of how, after the birth of her Isaac, Sarah banished Hagar and Ishmael after she saw him "mocking" Isaac.

Gen 21:9-10 9 And Sarah saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, which she had born unto Abraham, mocking. 10 Wherefore she said unto Abraham, Cast out this bondwoman and her son: for the son of this bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac. (KJV)

The story and narrative that follows indicates that Ishmael was not old enough to be able to walk, let alone mock anyone:

Gen 21:14-19 14 And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and took bread, and a bottle of water, and gave it unto Hagar, putting it on her shoulder, and the child, and sent her away: and she departed, and wandered in the wilderness of Beersheba. 15 And the water was spent in the bottle, and she cast the child under one of the shrubs. 16 And she went, and sat her down over against him a good way off, as it were a bowshot: for she said, Let me not see the death of the child. And she sat over against him, and lift up her voice, and wept. 17 And God heard the voice of the lad; and the angel of God called to Hagar out of heaven, and said unto her, What aileth thee, Hagar? fear not; for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is. 18 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand; for I will make him a great nation. 19 And God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Does it not sound rather strange that a young boy of 14 years old could be put on the shoulder of Hagar unless she was a weightlifter or something like that? Did Hagar take steroids? And how strong did she have to be to life this "lad" in her hand let alone "throw" him under a bush? The text makes it sound if she has but a baby here yet if we keep up with the texts this "lad" is 14 years old. Again the texts does not make sense to a "thinking believer". Its reliability is highly in doubt.

Answer for yourself: What does the Koran have to say about this?

Although this story is not mentioned in the Koran, Islamic tradition agrees with the Biblical text in that it also represents Ishmael as a mere baby who is carried by his mother and unable to move from the spot where she placed him.

When cornered Christians try to defend the texts. In this instance they say that it is to be noted that the Bible often does not present events in chronological order. The story of Sarah driving Hagar and Ishmael away comes after stories of Ishmael as a teenager. Yet, it is clear that Ishmael was an infant when Sarah drove them out (Genesis 21:15-18). This story is related in the Koran as well. The Koran describes Ishmael as an infant, too young to walk.

Answer for yourself: Then how do we reconcile the 10 years and 13 years and one extra year before Isaac is born when an infant Ishmael was supposedly "mocking" Isaac who is not ever born yet? What? The whole mess is a jumbled confusion of disjointed parts which underscores the whole unreliability of such Biblical accounts. Again this betrays the desperate efforts of the Biblical narrator trying to cover up the connection of Isaac to the bloodline and throne of Egypt in light of what would occur in Egypt prior to the Exodus which splits a nation in half and while causes the Exodus of the followers of Akhenaton who were part Hebrews. Effort were made not only then by Egypt to cover up these Hebrew Pharaohs but later as well when the Jewish Biblical texts were written by Ezra and others.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever noticed a subtle change of emphasis during the Abraham-Sarah story?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that in all of the accounts of visitations of God in this story before the birth of Isaac, with the exception of the change of Sarah's name and the promise that "kings of people shall be of her", Abraham is presented as the principal figure and that once Isaac appears on the scene, there is a change of emphasis? Why?

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that after the birth of Sarah's Isaac that she is dominant over Abraham? Why?

Let us look at another account of the appearance of the Lord to Abraham which reads:

Gen 21:12 12 And God said unto Abraham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bondwoman; in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice; for in Isaac shall thy seed be called. (KJV)

The literal sense of the Hebrew text in this verse does not necessarily mean that Isaac was Abraham's physical son, but that he was the adoptive father (Ahmed Osman, Out of Egypt, p. 16-17).

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that even today, and since this account in the Bible, that a child cannot be regarded as a Jew, no matter who the father may have been, unless the mother is herself Jewish? The child of a Jewish mother is born Jewish; the child of a Jewish father is born Jewish if and only if the mother is Jewish. The parallel is that the male child of the Queen of a Pharaoh is the potential new Pharaoh, but the male child of a Semite and Semite does not a Pharaoh make. We have to realize that if "kings were to come from her", that being the "Queen Sarah" (remember the name change) then it is ONLY because she is tried to throne and bloodline of Egypt! And if you had not guessed it this link to the throne and bloodline of Egypt did not come from her Semitic husband Abram who left the Ur of the Chaldees. Abraham is only associated with such a promise because he is married to Sarah and the promise finds is beginning with Sarah in the Pharaoh's marriage bed.

Now for something truly perplexing. This appearance of the Lord telling Abraham to listen to and heed his wife due to her royal position as a Queen of Egypt, the land of the gods, is followed by a rather troubling account of the near murder of Abraham's son by none other than the supposed "father".

Gen 22:9-12 9 And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound Isaac his son, and laid him on the altar upon the wood. 10 And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son. 11 And the angel of the LORD called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham: and he said, Here am I. 12 And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me. (KJV)

We find Abraham taking Isaac to the top of a mountain where he made arrangements to sacrifice him as a burnt offering. This never sounded right to me until I learned that Isaac is not his biological son but the son of another who is much greater than Abraham; namely, Tuthmose III, the Pharaoh of Egypt who was known as "the Napoleon of the Ancient World". This near killing of his own son whom he has waited for in excess of 24 years never seemed correct to me. It goes again human nature in the first place; especially if Isaac had been his own son. However, Abraham sacrificed a sheep instead of Isaac after an angel of the Lord warned him:

Gen 22:12 12 And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me. (KJV)

So the evidence seems to point to the fact that in spite of what the Biblical narrator wrote the identification of Isaac as a prince of Egypt is pretty certain and does not depend solely on some jumbled verses and a confused chronology in the Book of Genesis.

NON-BIBLICAL SOURCES

Non-biblical sources like the Jewish Talmud and the Koran point to the fact that, in the case of Isaac, Abraham - who had seven other sons (Ishmael by Hagar and six by another wife, Keturah) - was to be regarded as the adoptive father of Isaac.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the Jewish Talmud preserves a tradition in its texts that nobody who knew Abraham believed that Isaac was his son? Are you aware that the Jewish Talmud, which is considered second in authority to the Old Testament, suggests that when Isaac was born that he did NOT look like Abraham? This is absolutely startling when you see this! The Jews have the truth of their origins but bury it out of sight so no one but the most dedicated students will ever find it.

The Talmud preserves a tradition that nobody who knew Abraham believed that Isaac was his son:

It says: "On the day that Abraham weaned his son Isaac, he made a great banquet, and all the peoples of the world derided him, saying: 'Have you seen that old man and woman who brought a foundling from the street, and now claim him as their son? And what is more they make a great banquet to establish their claim.'" (The Babylonian Talmud, Isidore Epstein, London 1952; M. Gadalla, Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Egypt, p. 144).

A verse in the Koran (The Prophets, Chapter [Sura] 21:72) says of Abraham:

We bestowed on him Isaac and, as an additional gift, (A grandson), Jacob...

Answer for yourself: Is this verse alluding to the fact that possibly Isaac is not the biological offspring of Abraham and since Jacob is the son of Isaac then neither is Jacob the biological offspring of Abraham but carries within him the blood of Pharaohs? If Jacob is the seed of Isaac and Isaac is the seed of an Egyptian Pharaoh then then lineage of Egypt runs through Isaac, Jacob, and the sons of Jacob culminating with David and Solomon, etc. Where King David and King Solomon Hebrew Pharaohs of the 18th Dynasty of Egypt?

The verse indicates that Isaac and Jacob were not Abraham's originally. Muslim scholars interpret the passage by claiming that what it really means is: "We gave him Isaac because he was asking for a son, and another as a gift whom he was not asking for." It is easy to see, however, that this cannot have been the case because it goes much deeper than that and has biological ties with historical Egypt. In the first place, Jacob had not been born when Abraham died. Furthermore, at the time Jacob was born Abraham already had seven other sons - one, Ishmael, by Hagar, Sarah's Egyptian maid, and six by another wife, Keturah. A third point is that Jacob, the son of Isaac, the son of Tuthmose III, was not the first-born of Isaac's twin sons, but gained importance and ties to the throne of Egypt when Esau sold him his birthright (Osman, The House of the Messiah, p. 92-93. THINK. Jacob inherited primogeniture when he purchased the birthright of the Pharaoh from Esau. Little did Esau value such a promise and position and figured that such a reality would never materialize itself since being a half-blood and the odds were not in his favor that he could ever ascend to the throne of Egypt since not being of pure Egyptian blood.

Another Sura of the Koran, having mentioned three of the prophets - Moses, Aaron and Ishmael - speaks of them in Mary, Sura XIX: 58, as being:

The posterity of Abraham And Israel (Jacob)...(Ibid., p. 92-93).

Answer for yourself: Did you notice the "and" separating the posterity of both Abraham and Jacob? Why does this passage separate Abraham from Jacob? The Koran is making a simple statement that leads the reader to believe that there exists "two" separate posterities; one belonging to Abraham and one belonging to Jacob. What we have here is two completely different bloodlines and they are not the same.

The Koran states that Moses, Aaron, and Ishmael are associated with two "different" posterities or succeeding - future generations. These three, Moses, Aaron, and Jacob are not from the "same" lineage!

Answer for yourself: Does this fit perfectly with our understanding of Isaac being fathered by Tuthmose III and Ishmael being fathered from Abraham with Hagar as his mother? It sure does!

What I am telling you is that we have discovered a hidden bloodline connected to the throne of Egypt that will find expression through later Pharaohs of the 18th Dynasty. No wonder Moses had a Pharoanic staff in the wilderness.

We have literally two different bloodlines. We know that Ishmael carried the blood of Abraham through Hagar but we also know that through Isaac we have the bloodline that flowed originally through Tuthmose III and later flowed through the veins of Moses and Aaron. It was through this bloodline that we have the later "Messianic Prophecies"! They find historical fulfillment with Tuthmose III and Tutankhamun. Thus if you follow the storyline then you see that the Koran is telling us that Moses and Aaron came from a different blood line than Abraham; a royal blood tied to the throne of Egypt that came through the marriage of Sarai with Pharaoh Tuthmose III.

So we must keep in our minds this separation if we are ever to put this puzzle together correctly. We know that Ishmael comes from the loins of Abraham but the line of Moses (Pharaoh Akhenaten) and Aaron are descendants of Isaac and Jacob whom we saw is the offspring of Tuthmose III and his marriage to Sarah. This has unbelievable ramifications when we get to the 18th Dynasty of Pharaohs of Egypt. The verse indicates that Isaac and Jacob, the grandson who had not been born when Abraham died, were not his biological offspring originally.

Referring above to the passage "The posterity of Abraham And Israel (Jacob)" can only mean on thing: Some of these later characters like Ishmael were the posterity of Abraham but the sone of Jacob (the 12 tribes), Moses, David, Solomon, etc. were descendants of Jacob who were the descendants of Isaac who was the descendant of Tuthmose III, Pharaoh of Egypt but not of Abraham. To elaborate on this point, we have two named ancestors (Abraham and Jacob) and three named descendants (Moses, Aaron and Ishmael). It is obvious that, had Jacob been a descendant of Abraham, he would have been named in the list of descendants rather than, together with Abraham, as an ancestor.

One more thing in closing. We are told, by the Bible, that after the birth of Isaac, Abraham built an altar and was ready to slaughter him with a knife as a sacrifice to the Lord. At that last minute, a voice came from heaven: "Do not raise your hand against the boy". Firstly it is difficult to believe that Abraham would kill his own son, if Isaac was really his son whom he had waited and prayed for most of his life. Secondly, it is a fact that human sacrifices were NOT the custom of the time, in this area of the world, and even if it was the custom why not sacrifice your "first born" and eldest son, Ishmael? (M. Gadalla, Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Egypt, p. 144).

Answer for yourself: Who was the Pharaoh who contracted a bigamous marriage with Sarai and fathered Isaac? We know him as the historical Tuthmose III, the Biblical David. That seems odd especially in light of what we have been taught by the Bible but the Bible has the chronology wrong as we see when looking at the conflicting "400 years" and the "4 generations".

Answer for yourself: Do you remember those "4 generations" spoken about when we first began this article? The chronology of Sarah's descendants (Isaac, Jacob, Joseph and Moses), the four generations separating Sarah and Moses, points to Tuthmose III (c. 1490-1436 BC), fifth Pharaoh of the 18th Dynasty, the greatest warrior of the ancient world.

Answer for yourself: Is there any relationship that exits between the 4 generations between Sarah and Moses and between Tuthmose III and Akhenaten, whom many believe to be the Biblical Moses? Is Moses really the Pharaoh Akhenaton (Amenhotep IV)? Many think he is. More on him later.

Answer for yourself: And what has this to do with the royal ancestor King David from whose House, both the Old and New Testaments assure us, the promised Messiah (Christ the Redeemer) would come? Was the historical "Messiah" a Pharaoh originally? Don't discount it outright until you study it out and compare it with the "Jesus Story" in the New Testament. Wow it just keeps getting better the more we learn!

WAS ABRAHAM A PHARAOH OF EGYPT?

I assure you that the title for this article does not guarantee that I have lost my mind and common sense. Had it not been for years of faithful and intense scholarly study I would never have uncovered long lost secrets that the religious folks in both Jewish and Christian camps have long forgotten. Let me show you some of these "lost secrets".

Josephus considered Abraham a very powerful man. Josephus, the first century Jewish historian says of Abraham:

Pharaoh Necho, king of Egypt at the time, descended on this land with an immense army and seized Sarah the Princess, mother of our nation. And what did our forefather Abraham do? Did he avenge the insult by force of arms? Yet he had three hundred and eighteen officers under him, with unlimited manpower at his disposal!

Answer for yourself: Did you catch that?

Notice that Abraham had "three hundred and eighteen officers" and not foot soldiers at his command. Each office had command of a large group of men under his command. This means that Abraham had obviously quite a sizable army at his disposal that some estimate could have been numbered in the tens of thousands. Lacking from the above quote is the identity of what lands and over what peoples Abraham was such a leader.

Answer for yourself: But in the time he lived what could be our reasonable choices for these "lands and peoples"?

This simple quote challenges our traditional "Judeo-Christian" understanding of Abraham. Also of interest it the statement of "Sarah" being a Princess. Within this quote is the hidden identity of both Abraham and Sarah. Instead of being given information and knowledge about this might man and his royal wife the whole world has been the picture by the clergy that this man and his whole family were but nomadic sheep-herders wandering around the Negev desert during the time when most such individuals were illiterate. This surely is not how Josephus viewed Abraham and his "Princess" wife.

Answer for yourself: What did Josephus know that we have never been told?

When one begins to look into the "hidden Abraham" one begins to see a different picture; a picture of a pharaoh of Egypt and one of the most powerful men in the world.

Being a Pharaoh then one could expect that this family could trace their history back through 70 generations as "kingly families" have always had a fascination with genealogy. It is this aristocracy that descended from a line of semi-divine kings and descended from the mighty Egyptian empire. Royal dynasties to this day have the same fascination for their family history, for the family's entire existence depends solely on proving their legitimacy. This explains why the Jewish Bible records in detail the extensive genealogy of the family of Abraham and Sarah for these are definitely not "simple sheep-herders".

Answer for yourself: Is there any historical record that Abraham was a Pharaoh? Well yes there is but we will get to that in a second but first we need to look at clues to the Pharaonic identity of Abraham that come from the Bible.

The patriarchs in the Bible are known as being shepherds as the Bible is quite specific about this point. Joseph's family are asked by pharaoh:

What is your occupation? And they said ... Thy servants are shepherds, both we, and also our fathers.

This point is more than curious and is fundamental to understanding what the Bible writers are trying to conceal.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that a whole dynasty of pharaohs were known as shepherds?

These were the pharaohs who, in the historical record, had 'invaded' northern Egypt during the 14th to 16th dynasties and these peoples were known as the Hyksos, a term which translates as 'Shepherd King'.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the Bible mentions a very special family line of Shepherds of which it says the "kings will come out of you"?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the historical record tells us that some of the pharaohs of northern Egypt were called Shepherd Kings? Should we not expect this since Josephus calls Abraham's wife a "Princess"?

Gen 17:5-6 5 Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. 6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. (KJV)

Now get ready for a shock. We have two different histories that we have to reconcile:

- The real history provided for us by the archaeologists
- The theological history of the Bible, Koran and Torah

The good news is that sometimes the Bible and archeology overlap and confirm the "history" provided by archeology; sadly at other times they are contrasted and conflict as the findings of archeology correct the "erroneous Biblical history" and simply prove it wrong. Sometimes nothing could be further from the truth that the "Biblical history" and the "Archeological record". This is what we often find when comparing the extensive records of Egypt and the Bible.

The key to this entire puzzle is the term shepherd.

Answer for yourself: Why would an Egyptian pharaoh wish to be known as a shepherd?

The answer lay in the Egyptian records and their fascination with Astronomy/Astrology.

Answer for yourself: Is the reference to these "shepherds" a hidden reference to the constellation of Aries and the Precession of the Equinoxes where the ruling constellation of Taurus (2,160 years the icon of Egyptian religion had been the bull) is now replaced by the constellation of Aries (the symbol of the lamb)?

Answer for yourself: Is the depiction of Mithra slaying the bull symbolic for the Precession of the Equinox in which the constellation of Taurus is being replaced by the New Age with its constellation of Aries and its lamb symbolism? It sure is.

Modern scholars tell us that this very concept is behind the Exodus and partly responsible for the religious revolution in Egypt with Akhenaten (the Biblical Moses). It is also behind the Patriarchs whose identity has been changed to cover-up these Egyptian links. With this concept firmly in the back of the mind, the Bible suddenly opens to us and begins to reveal its long hidden secrets. If one takes the time to look there are numerous references to sheep and cattle in the Bible and although the subject matter fitted the quaint pastoral image being plied by the clergy, none of them made any literal sense. But this "cattle" and "sheep" terminology, when properly translated and understood, with the sheep becoming the constellation of Aries (or their followers) and the cattle becoming symbolic for Taurus (and their followers), everything fitted into place and we begin to see the conflict that arises between two different religious camps in Egypt.

As has been alluded to in many books and our "Astrotheology website" the constellations move slowly with the millennia and each era or "Age" has a ruling constellation. As the constellation and Age of Taurus was replaced with the constellation and Age of Aries we find today that the current Age and ruling constellation of the Spring/Vernal Equinox is Pisces (the fish). This explains the "fish symbolism" attached to "the Christ" for the last 2000 years. More important for our study is the understanding that way back in the 13th & 14th dynasties of Egypt we find Egypt was on the verge of a change in the constellations for it was the time of the changing of the Age (between Taurus and Aries). The era of Taurus lasted until about 1800 B.C.E., when Aries came into ascendancy.

Answer for yourself: What should we know about this very important time? This date is not only very close to both the era of the first Hyksos pharaohs and the arrival of Abraham in the Bible, but this change in the constellations caused a social rift between the Apis Bull (Taurus) worshippers in Egyptian Thebes (the Taureans) and the Hyksos Shepherd pharaohs in the north (the Arians). The country was, as you might have guessed, became "theologically" divided and it would culminate with a "religious-civil war".

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the archeological historical records indicate that this happened at this exact time and that the Bible puts it at a different time period and conceals the events behind it?

Answer for yourself: Does the Bible have direct evidence that shows this to be true? Not only do we have the Biblical reference to this religious struggle but the 3rd century B.C.E. Egyptian historian Manetho, who indicates (as does the Bible) that there were actually two exoduses from Egypt - one being a major migration and the other a much smaller exodus of priests. After the first exodus, the patriarch Joseph (he with the coat of many colours, ie a priests stole) goes back to Egypt and rises to become the most powerful man in Egypt, save from the pharaoh himself. Joseph asks his family to join him in Egypt, but he has a rather curious warning for them that will not make sense to the average reader without understanding the religious symbolism hidden in the words "cattle" and "sheep".

Gen 46:31-34 31 And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, I will go up, and shew Pharaoh, and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house, which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me; 32 And the men are shepherds, for their trade hath been to feed cattle; and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have. 33 And it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What is your occupation? 34 That ye shall say, Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we, and also our fathers: that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen; for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians.

(KJV)

Answer for yourself: What could Joseph possibly mean by this confusing statement? Did the Egyptians had any prohibitions on the eating of sheep meat? No!

Answer for yourself: Why was the pharaoh so interested in the occupation of the brothers and why was the lowly but honorable profession of shepherd so despised?

The solution is before our eyes but out lack of knowledge of Egyptian religion and Egyptian history, as well as a couple of "key" words that have been altered by the scribes to give the conversation an agricultural bias ensure that the readers will not see that behind such a warning lie a very important topic in Egypt - religion. Replacing the words with their original astrological counterparts, the full import of the statement becomes dramatically clear.

Ralph Ellis, in his book entitled Jesus: The Last of the Pharaohs (meaning the historical Tutankhamun) paraphrases the above warning:

You are Hyksos/Arians as you know, and your duty is to convert the followers of Taurus ... And it shall come to pass that pharaoh will call you, and shall say what is your religion. You must say in return that your religion has been Taurean from our youth even until now, both we and also our fathers. Otherwise you will not be allowed to stay in the land of Egypt, for we Hyksos/Arians are an abomination to the Egyptians.

Ralph Ellis goes on to say: "Suddenly it becomes dramatically obvious why the Egyptians thought that shepherds were an abomination. This was not a reference to a profession, but to a religion and an entire nation - the Hyksos. Egypt had just been through a bitter and bloody civil war with these peoples, a war between southern and northern Egypt which resulted in the Exodus of the Hyksos peoples (whom become later the followers of Akhenaten/the Biblical Moses) and the destruction of much of the northern delta lands. Of course the 'shepherds' were an abomination to the (southern) Egyptians - they were the Hyksos Shepherds!"

Possessing this knowledge than suddenly the Bible becomes an easy book to understand; at least in this account. There exits outside the Bible valid historical data if we know what to look for. The problem is that due to the lack of study and the lack of knowledge of the real history surrounding the "theological crafted history" of the Jewish Scriptures where most of this "Egyptian knowledge" has been concealed few if any ever see the true picture for itself. That is why we at Bet Emet Ministries provide a "recommended book list" and a list of our various "websites" in hopes that interested readers will want to have their "eyes opened" to the historical truth behind the "religious history" handed down to us today.

Let us not forget that Joseph was, by the admission of the Bible, the vizier to the pharaoh, the second most powerful man in the world. It is not a great extension of this biblical history to say that the other members of this important family were even more powerful, that they sat on the throne itself. This is revealed in the current website where we show the true identities of the Biblical King David, the Biblical King Solomon, Akhenaten (the Biblical Moses) and the truth behind Tutankhamun and how he become the prototype for all later "assumed historical Jesus Stories".

Further evidence that this is the correct interpretation to be placed upon the Old Testament writings is provided by the later works in the New Testament. The "New Testament Jesus", who is recorded to have descended from the same family as the patriarchs (whom we have conclusively identified as Pharaohs), was born as a Lamb of God.

Answer for yourself: Is hidden in this title, "Lamb of God", a carry over from the Age of Aries in Egypt and could this "New Testament depiction of Jesus" be also a carry over of a long killed "Son of God" whom was killed by the emerging Hebrew nation and that story was taken from a true "historical Pharaoh" in Egypt by the name of Tutankhamun who was viewed by many as the "Savior" of his people? Well that is a story for another day but let me warn you that you are in for the shock of your life if you begin such a serious investigation.

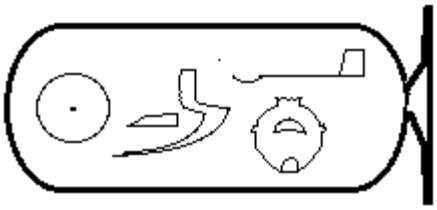
Answer for yourself: Was the changing of the Age from the Age of Aries to the Age of Pisces responsible for the characterization of the "New Testament Joshua-Jesus" being called such titles as the "Good Shepherd, the Lamb of God, and a Fisher of Men (symbolic for the Age of Pisces)?



Our attention again must be focused on Abraham as we close this article. The Torah and Old Testament were never intended to be simple tales of Asiatic tribes and sheep herders. The true story is a complete history of the ruling family of Egypt, the 'Royal Bloodline' that culminated in the Hebrew Pharaohs of the 18th Dynasty.

Finally we come to another pharaoh, the Pharaoh Necho, or "Nechosy Aasahra", the pharaoh mentioned earlier who was in a military dispute with the Biblical Abraham. Now I ask that you pay close attention. Looking closely at the names and the equivalent names in the Bible the above names seem to be the father and grandfather of Abraham - Nachor and Thara. The pharaonic name Aasahra seems to equate very nicely with the Biblical Thara; it looks as if the Bible has simply dropped the initial 'A' in the name. The fact that there was an original 'A' attached to this Biblical name is confirmed by the same stories that occur in the Koran, where the same individual (the father of Abraham) is called Azar. The Koran, however, seems to have lost the suffix, the 'A' at the end of the name. But if we conjoin the two patriarchal names of Azar and Thara, we either derive the name Aathara or Azara. All in all, it would appear that the pharaonic name of Aasahra has been preserved rather well over the years in these religious texts.

What we now have is the father and grand-father of Abraham being joined into just one individual in the Egyptian historical record, where he is listed under the two names of the pharaoh Nechosy:

- The historical Pharaoh: Nechosy (Aasahra)
- The Biblical Patriarch: Nachor (Azarah)

This identification of a Pharaoh for the father and grandfather of Abraham is not without a problem. This denticulation seems to fall down on the count of one glaring error - the son of Nechosy. The Biblical Nachor (Azarah) fathered Abraham himself. Yet if we look at the historical record, the son of Nechosy (Aasarah) is a pharaoh called Sheshi, this is truly unsatisfactory and it seems to undermine all the progress that has been made so far. Actually this is not so because the the throne name of the pharaoh Sheshi is none other than Mayebre or Mamayebra. This name not only sounds like Abram or Abraham, with the 'M' (or Mam) displaced to the end, it is quite possibly another very simple and possibly deliberate mistranslation of it. The cartouche of Mamayebra looks like this:

Mam-aye-bra=Aye-bra-mam, Ay-bra-ham (rearrange the letters)

Answer for yourself: Can you think of a better way to hide the name of Abraham as a pharaoh than simply moving the first syllable to the end of the name? This seems so simple but yet so effective that the truth lay hidden for thousands of years - Abraham was a pharaoh of Egypt.

Answer for yourself: But does the Bible hint at the fact that Abraham might have been a Pharaoh?

The Bible seems to admit this possibility, even if theologians will not; of Abraham it says:

Gen 17:5-6 5 Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. 6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings (Pharaohs) shall come out of thee. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Who were these "kings" and "Pharaohs"? They would be the Hebrew Pharaohs of the 18th Dynasty:

- Amenhotep IV (the Biblical Moses)
- Tutankhamen (the prototype for the later "historical Jesus Stories"
- Smenkhare
- Ay (the Biblical Ephraim)

Now the ma'at, the Egyptian word for "truth" can now be know by all; the Biblical patriarchs were indeed powerful people (Tuthmose III, the Biblical King David; Amenhotep III, the Biblical Solomon) as well as the Hebrew Pharaohs that changed the shape of the world and its religion.

ABRAHAM & THE ROYAL FAMILY- BLOODLINE

The concept of the royal bloodline comes to the surface over and over when studying the life of Abraham and his family. It runs through the whole of the Old Testament linking Abraham with the expected "anointed one." Let us remember that Prophets, Kings, and Priests were anointed ones. Let us look into this aspect of Abraham's life and family with the intent of focusing upon Kingship.

- Answer for yourself: So what is the fundamental meaning of religion in the three main Judaic religions, Judaism, Islam and Christianity which trace their origins to Abraham?
- Answer for yourself: Are we to believe the orthodox ecclesiastical dogma that it is really a tale of a few shepherds, a carpenter and a tent maker which our religious traditions bring to us?
- Answer for yourself: Are such common people able to transform the world and lives of millions of people through a history of 3,500 years or more or is there more to it than that?
- Answer for yourself: Would the diaries of such common people and shepherds have been written and preserved through the long unstable epochs of the ancient world, when the written word itself was sacred, exclusive and very expensive?
- Answer for yourself: Would a sheep herded and shepherd have had access to such sacred knowledge that would shape three world religions or are we missing something about these "shepherds?"

One would think not. A lonely shepherd on a barren hilltop does not set about rewriting the entire history of the world and, even if he did, nobody would believe or follow him. The truth is that the religions of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam have become divorced from their real roots. We have lost their real history and this is to be the first task in our investigation; to try and find the true social status of these key biblical patriarchs.

This process of obfuscation and covering up of the truth about Abraham and Jacob and the rest of his family has not been some unguided, random transition from a tale of important people to mere shepherds wandering the deserts. Such a cover-up appears to be more of a designed and orchestrated program by the religious authorities to divorce our daily usage religious beliefs from their real roots and there is good reason for them to do this. The majority of people are too busy in the secular world to worry too deeply about theology, so what the authorities wanted was a simple tale to give to simple people. The formula has worked as planned and the folk-tale of simple shepherds with a divine message has permeated every household throughout the western world, but the reality of the real story was very different from the simple story of Abraham who wandered the deserts the whole of his life; never inheriting the promises of God but yet waiting in faith for them to be realized in the hereafter.

THE ANCIENT TEXTS THAT DID NOT MAKE IT INTO OUR BIBLES...SO WHO WAS ABRAHAM REALLY?

Just looking at a few of the ancient texts shows the truth in this matter. Josephus, for instance, says of Abraham:

Pharaoh Necho, King of Egypt at the time, descended on this land with an immense army and seized Sarah the Princess, mother of our nation. And what did our forefather Abraham do? Did he avenge the insult by force of arms? Yet he had three hundred and eighteen officers under him, with unlimited manpower at his disposal! (Josephus, Jewish Wars, LCL, V. 379).

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that? Did you notice that first of all Sarah was Abraham's "PRINCESS" or "Queen" and that he had 318 OFFICERS at his disposal?

Brown-Driver_Briggs Hebrew Lexicon: Sarah:

8282 sarah- a princess, a noblewoman, a noble lady

Strong's Concordance:

8282 sarah (saw-raw'); feminine of 8269; a mistress, i.e. female noble: KJV-- lady, princess, queen.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that this status was conferred upon Sarah only when her name was changed? What event caused her to have her name changed? Could it have been when she was purchased to be the wife of the Pharaoh Tuthmose III? And what does this if anything have to do with the birth of Isaac and her expulsion from Egypt with her Husband?

Answer for yourself: Don't you find it rather odd that a poor sheepherder would have at his disposal "318 Officers?" This means that Abraham had an extensive army. Could this be an intimation that he was possibly a "Hyskos"?

Answer for yourself: Don't you find it rather odd as well that such a sheepherder's wife would be called by Josephus "Princess" and "Queen" and carry the title of royalty?

Answer for yourself: What are me not told by Ezra and the other writers of the Jewish Scriptures following the release of the Jewish Nation from Persian Captivity about the truth concerning Abraham?

Some people may dismiss the works of Josephus as being unreliable fabrications, but time after time his writings can be verified within other texts. For instance the extract above is confirmed for us in the Bible, but the text there tries to obfuscate and cloud the inconsistency in Abraham's social status by calling the officers involved "servants."

Gen 14:14 14 And when Abram heard that his brother was taken captive, he armed his trained servants, born in his own house, three hundred and eighteen, and pursued them unto Dan. (KJV)

When Abraham heard that his brother was taken captive, he did not arm his trained servants, he unleased his army. Only a King has a Princess for a wife and has an army!

Answer for yourself: Could it be that Abraham was one of the invading Hyksos?

That these were really soldiers and not servants is confirmed in the Bible by the subsequent battle for Abraham's brother and the slaughter of all those in Chedorlaomer. Indeed, when looking at the two texts, it would appear that Josephus's version of the Old Testament holds the more reliable account than Ezra's. Josephus is not to be dismissed so lightly. If each officer under Abraham commanded just 50 men, then it would appear that Abraham had an army around 16,000 strong. This is not only quite a force for the era, but it also reinforces the idea that Abraham was more powerful than the texts like to admit. He was, indeed, powerful enough to conquer land in Lower Egypt and especially so after the marriage of his "wife-sister" Sarah to the regal throne of Egypt when her name was changed to whom she now represented: the Pharaoh's royal princess and queen. Abraham by default through Isaac, the possible son of the Pharaoh, now had ties to the legitimate throne of Egypt. This is where we find the later "Hebrew Pharaoh" connection of the ruling 18th Dynasty of Shepherd Kings which are portrayed as Hebrews like King David (Tuthmose III), King Solomon (Amenhotep III), Moses (Amenhotep IV, Akhenaten), Joshua (Tutankamun). I would ask that you don't swallow your tongue but to keep studying with us as the pieces will come together when you can see what has been concealed from our view for thousands of years which archeology today is restoring to the interested student of Biblical history.

PERSIA AND EGYPT: THE WAR THAT MADE NECESSITY OF COVERING UP THE TRUTH ABOUT ABRAHAM

We all know that Cyrus was responsible for the decree that allowed the captive Jewish nation to return home following Persia's conquering of Babylon. What we don't know are the real reasons for such a release.

Answer for yourself: Why would the writer of this text, whom we know was Ezra in the 5th century B.C.E., so alter the historical record in order to distort and hide the real identity of Abraham and his family that would ultimately produce the "Jewish race"? Why would he write these texts and pass off Abraham as a poor "shepherd" and not a King possessing such an vast army? THINK!

Answerfor yourself: Was Ezra aware of the true identity of Abraham, but since being a member of the court of Cyrus, thought better than to reveal the true identity of Abraham to the returning exiles?

Answer for yourself: Could the military conditions existing between Persia and Egypt at the time possibly be the impetus for hiding from the returning Jewish exiles not only the true identity of Abraham, which archeology and Egyptian records today reveal was a Hyskos Pharaoh, but hiding as well the true origin of the Jewish people as originating from the intermarriage of Egyptians and Semites?

We saw in a prior article the role that Ezra and Nehemiah, both employed by the court of Cyrus, had a huge role in the return of the Jewish nation back to Israel. It would be primarily Ezra who will be responsible for the re-writing of the Jewish people's history both before and following their return to Israel; and this would be done from a pro-Persian viewpoint. What we don't know is why Ezra desired to cover-up the identities of these Patriarchs as he so does. But today with the benefit of archeology and the presentation of such information to a world that has access to such information today via books and the internet we can now see clearly the motives of Ezra. Since Persia had strained relations with Egypt at the time and would so go to war with Egypt soon after the Jewish nations' return to Palestine we clearly see that it behooved Persian interests to use the Jewish nation for their own military purposes and put them back into the fertile cresent as a "buffer" military colony to protect Persia from any Egyptian military advance. The Jewish nation would be indoctrinated in Persian religion and serve as an outpost between Egypt and Persia. In so doing it became necessary if such a plan was to work for Persia to cover up any Egyptian link between the Jewish people and the Egyptians who were their biological parent; especially the Egyptian blood line that ran through their veins. This knowledge had been lost to the common people in that day. The Priests of Persia knew this but understand a captive people who grew up in Babylon and Persia devoid of their true religious heritage and "religious texts" would no longer possess such information. So we find it rather easy for Ezra to "rewrite" the Jewish history and change important aspects concerning the Patriarchs; like their true identity which modern scholarship and archeology today shows were Hebrew Pharaohs. This would be necessary you see if Persia was to count upon the Jewish nation being allies with them and not with Egypt.

The books of Ezra, like Nehemiah, is the work of the Chronicler and narrates the history of the Jews from 539 B.C.E. to 458 B.C.E. It is important to note that in 539 B.C.E. we have the decree of Cyrus to release the Jews and send them home. This was a strategic move on Cyrus' part in order to create a "buffer" colony of resettled Jews between Persia and Egypt with whom Persia would, in 525 B.C.E., wage war. Cambyses of Persia wages war and conquers Egypt 14 years after resetting the Jewish people in Palestine. One could say that almost simultaneous to the decree of the Persian king Cyrus permitting the Jews to return to Palestine from captivity under the leadership of Sheshbazzar we have Persia waging war with Egypt. Now we clearly see why Ezra, in re-writing the Jewish history and religious writings of the Jewish nation goes to great links to cover-up the Patriarch's link with Egypt and their positions as Pharaohs.

This will become abundantly clear in the forthcoming articles in which we will look deeper into this Egypt-Jewish connection.

Answer for yourself: Since we know that Ezra will re-write the Jewish Scriptures following the release of the Jewish people then is it any wonder that the true identity of Abraham being a King, a Hyskos Shepherd King-Pharaoh of Egypt, was dropped from the historical record if any allegiance by the Jews could be expected by Persia?

It should not take a lot of imagination to see why the Kingship of Abraham was deleted from the text along with the mention of Sarah being a "Princess" and "Queen". Later we find men like Josephus who recovers this information and he was not alone. Likewise it should not take a lot of imagination now to see why Abraham's 318 "officers" were changed to "servants." The Egyptian identity of the Patriarch Abraham has to be concealed by Ezra in order for the Jewish nation to not look to Egypt as their home and parentage after being returned to Palestine. Ezra and Cyrus sure did not want the Jewish nation looking to an Egyptian Moses and Egyptian faith as the foundation for this new nation; this new nation would be established on Persian influences and Persian religion and so it was and had to be if Persia was to use these returning "Hyksos children" as a buffer against Egypt to whom they were at war. Literally Persia was soon to be at war with their Egyptian parents and it was necessary to keep the true identity of these returning "shepherds" from them if Persia expected aid, friendship, and access to the land bridge known as the "fertile cresent" and "levant".

Josephus records for time immemorial the truth about Abraham but as we will see that is not the only proof that Abraham was a Pharaoh of Lower Egypt. More on that later when we deal with Abraham in more depth. But a short note about Joseph before we go.

REMEMBER JOSEPH?

In a similar vein the Bible also says of a later character, Joseph:

And [pharaoh] made [Joseph] to ride in the second chariot which he had. And they cried before him. Bow the knee: and [pharaoh] made [Joseph] ruler of all the land of Egypt (Gen. 41:43)

The historian Manetho, equally upbeat about Joseph's position in Egypt, says:

it was in their time that Joseph appears to have ruled in Egypt (Manetho, LCL, p. 97)

Answer for yourself: So what are we to make of this? Do we later find the mixing of the Hebrew bloodline once again with Egyptian royalty when Joseph marries the daughter of the Priest of On (Heliopolis) and will this marriage ultimately leads to the Hebrew Pharaohs of the 18th Dynasty? It sure will. It began with Isaac and continues through Joseph culminating with King David (Tuthmose III), King Solomon (Amenhotep III), Moses (Amenhotep IV, Akhenaten), and Joshua (Tutankamun).

The religious authorities of which we are familiar in Judeo-Christianity say that these men were nearly beggars in the streets; poor farmers grazing a few miserable sheep in the wastelands of the Negev desert. That is the version we got from Ezra. The Egyptian texts, and the Talmud however, say that they were powerful men and rulers of vast nations. Joseph was the chief vizier to the pharaoh of Egypt and therefore the second most powerful man in the world after him. Here was a man who controlled the lives of an entire nation, one that was the most powerful in the world at the time. Abraham was also not a poor shepherd, of that we can be certain. He was the leader of an army of "unlimited manpower", an army with three hundred and eighteen officers. Nevertheless the religious authorities try to infer in the Bible that both patriarchs were just poor shepherds!

WHAT IS THIS ABOUT SHEPHERDS? ARE WE MISSING SOMETHING?

Deception and cover-up never seem to cease. There is always truth behind every subterfuge and we find the same here with the idea that Abraham was only a poor "shepherd."

Answer for yourself: Why? Is there something behind this word "shepherd" that might be a code-word for something that we are missing? Are we possibly led astray by the word "shepherd" when something more magnificent and "religious" might be meant that was knowledge only for the Priesthoods and not the laity?

Answer for yourself: There would appear to be large dichotomy in the texts: just what is the truth between these two disparate positions?

Answer for yourself: Moreover, if the biblical patriarchs were, indeed, powerful men, what is the purpose of this obfuscation by religious authorities? The inescapable conclusion from such discrepancies is that there has been a cover-up at some point in our history. Nobody in their right mind would turn heroes from the position of kings and chief viziers into poor shepherds tending their flocks, if there were not something to hide.

Answer for yourself: But what is being hidden? Is there a religious significance to Abraham being a "shepherd?"

Well let us continue our study in the next article in this series as we unravel the hidden mystery behind Abraham.

THE ROYAL BLOODLINE OF ABRAHAM AND THE HYKSOS CONNECTION

In the prior article we looked at many of the reasons why our religious texts had been so difficult to decode as to not only the truth behind many of the stories but the variants of such stories and passages that make accurate interpretation of the texts often difficult. These are some of the many and varied problems that scholars have to deal with when interpreting these texts, but perhaps the largest of them all is the deliberate changing of the texts many centuries ago to suit the religious creed that was current at those times. It is quite apparent from the duplicated stories that some of the scribes were happy to change the texts in order to portray their heroes in a more favorable light. This was also done in order to change more ancient beliefs and practices into more acceptable 'modern' formats.

WHAT IS THE UNDERLYING AGENDA IN THE JUDEO-CHRISTIAN BIBLE?

Despite these problems, there is nevertheless good evidence in the accounts of Abraham, Joseph and Jesus, to be found in the Nag Hammadi scrolls, Josephus and the Old Testament that there is indeed an underlying agenda in these religious texts.

Answer for yourself: Having already seen just a few of the many cover-ups in the Bible (we will get to more soon) then what was the big secret that had to be hidden from the masses?

Answer for yourself: What is there to hide and why does the subterfuge appear to continue to this day?

For that, we have to come back to the true identity of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph, the patriarchs from the Torah.

Answer for yourself: Exactly who were these people in reality?

Answer for yourself: Why cannot we spot these important characters in the secular historical world?

Answer for yourself: How did such important people evade the historians?

SHEPHERDS AND CAPTIVES...WHATS GOING ON?

I wish I had learned about Manetho in the beginning of my studies over 16 years ago. The Graeco/Egyptian historian Manetho's texts have been lost to history and his writings arrive by way of quotes from other historians, Eusebius and Africanus; these are in turn quoted by Josephus. Manetho, as quoted by Josephus, says that the patriarchs of the Jewish people were both shepherds and captives (Against Apion, Josephus, LCL, 1.92; Manetho LCL, p.85). This is the basis of the standard biblical story-line with which we are all familiar as Jews, Christians, and Muslims. It is from these roots quoted from Manetho, that we now have the folk-tale of the poor Jewish shepherds being captives in a foreign land, where they had to make bricks as slaves for the nasty and brutal Egyptians. Finally, after many generations, their great leader Moses, himself the exiled Pharaoh Akhenaten, comes to the rescue and initiates the great exodus of the 18th Dynasty of the Jewish nation, from slavery in Egypt to their promised land of Israel. Northwards and eastwards they fled as poor and starving wretches, up into Israel and the city of Jerusalem whom was sacred for it had previously housed the Egyptian Ark of the Covenant brought there by Tuthmose III (the Biblical King David) earlier in the 18th Dynasty. The presence of the Egyptian Ark in Jerusalem had made it a sacred city.

Answer for yourself: But was Manetho speaking of common shepherds and captives? Is it possible that we have completely misunderstood the story and that the nation of Israel in Egypt were not "common shepherds" and "captives" as thought? Could these words used by Manetho mean something completely else and the truth of the matter remains hidden to the casual reader?

What I found is that the typical understanding that Israel was little more than "captives" and "sheepherders" was nonsense; just a story for children. The real biblical story is far more interesting, much more subtle and a lot more important than that.

THE HYSKOS

The ancient historian Josephus often tells us "the story behind the story" found in the Biblical text. He tells us a very interesting story concerning the origins of this "captive" theory for the Jews, a story which he again took from the Egyptian-Pharaoh historian Manetho. Josephus described the Jews as being captives in Egypt, as does the Bible. He then gave the derivation of the Egyptian word for this term, although it seems that he missed some huge ramifications in doing so, for he made no mention of the following coincidence.

The Egyptian word from which "captive" is derived is known as "Hyk." However, Manetho, through Josephus, explained that "Hyk" has two meanings in Egyptian, depending on how it was pronounced (Against Apion, Josephus, LCL, 1:92, Manetho, LCL p.85).

- If the word is aspirated as the rapid sounding word "Hyk" (as in tick), the result is the traditional word *"captive."
- But if the word is given a longer more rounded sound, the resulting word "Hyk" (as in bike) means "king" instead. This is confirmed by modern translations of Egyptian, in which the word "H'k" can be seen either as being a "ruler of a pastoral people" or a "prisoner of war".

Answer for yourself: What war? Could this have been a "religious war" between the followers of Moses (Akhenaten) and his Aten and the followers of Amun? Could this refer to the religious revolution of Akhenaten (Amenhotep IV) whom many believe to be the Biblical Moses of the 18th Dynasty of Egypt which would come later? Is the Exodus to be found historically in the end of the 18th Dynasty of Egypt some 200 years later than most look for it according to the Old Testament reckoning of time? Oh let us keep reading to find the connection of these "captive shepherds" whom we have come to see as Israelites and Hebrews that later make up the Exodus.

The inference is quite plain; there are two meanings to this word and they have been interpreted quite differently in the disparate disciplines of history and theology, each to suit their own story. The historians choose the term "Shepherd King", because they are dealing a lineage of pharaohs and the word "king" fits their story rather well. The religious texts are not so comfortable with this notion. They wish to portray a pastoral tale of simple folk, so they chose the term "captive shepherds;" completely missing the implication that this term historically meant the Shepherd King Pharaohs of Egypt.

Even if the Old Testament had taken up the term "ruler of a pastoral people" this would not have assisted their cause in the portrayal of a tribal people. For the term "Hyksos" does not refer to any old tribal leader, but to a very specific line of kings. In this new interpretation, Abraham would not just have been a minor Asiatic king controlling some of the wastelands bordering the Negev desert, with a couple of thousand subjects and a few starving sheep. No, the problem with this alternative interpretation, is that the word "Hyk" is associated with a specific line of kings, the Hyksos or the Shepherd Kings: Pharaohs of Egypt. We saw earlier where Josephus has already called Sarah, Abraham's wife, a "princess" or "queen".

Answer for yourself: Does Sarah's status of being a "queen" and "princess" come because of Abraham and his relationship as a possible "Hyksos" or her relationship with a prior Pharaoh of Upper Egypt to whom she was wed? Let us keep studying to find out.

This all will fit as a glove the more we study and the more puzzle pieces we gather. The religious texts are opened before our eyes with a little study into Josephus and the Egyptian scribe Pharaoh Manetho.

Historians usually describe the Hyksos as Semitic invaders from from Palestine and Syria who conquered the Delta area of Egypt in the early seventeenth century BC. It is very important to note that Abraham was a Semite along with Sarah.

Answer for yourself: Why then is Sarah called a "princess" or "queen" by Josephus?

Well we have to wait a second until we get to the article: Who Is Isaac's real father to find that out.

These Hyksos shepherds are said to have taken Memphis at first and then established a capital at Avaris, a place historians tentatively identify as the city later known as Tanis. This, in turn, is identified as the biblical city of Zoan (Numbers 13:22). The military superiority of the Hyksos and their followers can in part be attributed to their use of cavalry, the horse having been previously unknown in Egypt. They are said to have established a kingdom on the north-east border of the Nile delta, leaving the territory to the north of Memphis to the remaining nobility of the indigenous sixteenth dynasty. It is thought that these northern princes were probably subservient to the Hyksos. To the south, an independent Egyptian seventeenth dynasty ruled the territory between Elephantine and Abydos, with their capital at Thebes. Understand that Moses is right around the corner time wise.

The Hyksos are said to have ruled their northern Egyptian kingdom (Lower Egypt) from 1680s BC until 1590's. They Hyskos were finally driven out of the country by a nationalistic revolt by the vassal princes of the Nile delta and Upper Egypt under Ahmose I, who was the founder of the eighteenth dynasty.

Answer for yourself: Why is this 18th Dynasty so important? Simply because this is where we meet up with the Hebrew Pharaohs of Egypt who are described as "Jews" in the Old Testament like King David, King Solomon, Moses, Joshua, etc. More on that in a little while.

Answer for yourself: Will there be a religious revolution among the religion of Egypt in the 18th Dynasty between these Shepherd Kings and their Israelite followers and those that opposed this new strict view of the imposed "monotheism" of Pharaoh Akhenaten and his Aten (his understanding of an invisible God) and will it end in an Exodus of which we read in the Hebrew Scriptures?

Little archaeological evidence of the Hyksos kingdom has been found, but fragments of pottery and sculpture dating from this period suggests that the Hyksos kings, these prior Semites, adopted Egyptian culture (since so superior to their previously) and used Egyptian customs and names. As I have indicated, Egyptologists originally interpreted the word "Hyskos" as meaning "Shepherd Kings", but it has also been suggested that, in fact, it means "Foreign Rulers". As the former appellation seems to be meaningless, while the latter apparently has obvious relevance, historians have tended to opt for "Foreign Rulers". However, it is quite possible that they are mistaken, as we have already seen. We will look even deeper into the significance of the word "Shepherd" in forthcoming articles and I assure you now that you will be completely blown away by what you see. Let me give you a hint: Egypt was consumed with Divine Revelation from the Heavens and it involved these "Shepherds."

The Hyksos, including Abraham and his children, then, were nothing less than the Kings and Pharaohs of much of "conquered" Egypt during the fifteenth and sixteenth dynasties of Egypt. Now recalling all we have learned up to this point coming from the pen of Josephus, this is a period, under the classical dating of Egypt, that equates very well with the projected lifetime of the biblical Abraham. In this case, Abraham was not only a military leader as we have previously seen with 318 officers, but, adopting the customs and government of Egypt, became a "King" of part of Egypt with a wife called a "princess" by Josephus. This means that Abraham became a ruling Hyksos Pharaoh-King of Egypt as well. This is the reason he and his family were known as shepherds: he was not a poor farmer in a barren field, but a "Shepherd King, a Pharaoh. We will see soon that behind this word for "Shepherd" is the real reason and the root cause of the great biblical exodus.

This is the essential core riddle of the three Judaic religions. These religions wanted to project a new, fresh image of a religion that was descended directly from "God". However, the history of their peoples indicated strongly that they were descended from the pharaohs of Egypt, a nation that they had begun to despise because of the later treatment of the Israelites, the shepherds, at the time of the exodus (the offspring of Isaac from Sarah and the Pharaoh being that Isaac is not Abraham's natural offspring). Understanding the keys hidden in the text it is easy to recognize that when Sarah was given to the Pharaoh to be his wife and the "bride price" was paid then Sarah became his wife. Later another tip-off was that a "handmade" was given Sarah upon leaving Egypt which makes us question why Sarah needed such a "midwife" since the texts tries to make us believe that she was barren. Read the article about Isaac and then you will see what I mean.

Answer for yourself: What were the leaders of these three religions to do? If they admitted that their patriarch was a pharaoh, they admitted that they were part of the very regime that had rejected them and sent them into exile and which they now hated with an unbelievable passion. That was utterly unacceptable. The alternative was to continue a process of parallel histories. This process had always been present in the Egyptian religion, from which Judaism and eventually Christianity emerged.

Answer for yourself: In closing if the "Messianic promises" run through Isaac and Tuthmose III is the father of Isaac then what does this tell of the heir to the promise? Just who was to be this "Messiah" and what are the links with the Kings of Egypt?

PATRIARCHS OR PHARAOHS?

We have not been introduced to the much hidden fact that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were not a family of poor, captive, downtrodden shepherds at all. They were nothing less than the Hyksos, the "Shepherd Kings", pharaohs of Egypt. This why these stories from the Bible have been told and retold, written and translated into every language on this planet. Far from being poor vagabonds from the desert, they were the most important and most powerful men in their time, controlling most of the known world and its wealth, and this is why their story is important. It is an ancient history where some of the protagonists could trace their royal lineage back through 73 generations, as could Jesus.

Answer for yourself: How many royal families, let alone carpenters' families, can do that? (Luke 3:23). This idea may seem to be a staggering reversal of biblical history, one evolved out of a vivid imagination, but it is also a concept that can be supported with plenty of evidence.

As a starting point, take a look at an encyclopaedia of the pharaohs of Egypt and flick through the pages until you reach the sixteenth dynasty, the period that covers the last of the Hyksos pharaohs. The last pharaoh listed, as mentioned in a prior article, is Pharaoh Yacobaam, the pharaoh that I mentioned when we started this study (S. Quirke, Who Were The Pharoahs). But there is more here than just the similarity of this name to the biblical Jacob. Evidence of a direct link to the Hyksos pharaohs has already been presented and that link can now be proved quite firmly, for there is also a clue to this particular pharaoh's beliefs.

Judaism, Christianity and even the early Essene cult of Israel all have an initiation process that involves immersion in water. In Egypt, the body of the great God of Osiris was floated down the Nile in a casket prior to his resurrection and this is possibly based on a similar Sumerian tradition of great leaders being "taken from the water". Moses, too, was apparently named because he was a prince that had been cast upon the Nile in a basket and "taken from the water" (Exodus 2:10).

Exod 2:10 10 And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name Moses: and she said, Because I drew him out of the water. (KJV)

We already know that Moses (Akhenaton) was a Pharaoh himself and this dovetails exactly with such traditions regarding the Pharoahs. Whatever the origins of this tradition, it is clear, that water was central to the Israelite faith; it could even be considered to be their shibboleth or marker. This is very important when looking at the name of the pharaoh Yacobaam.

Pharaonic names are always presented in a cartouche, a more or less oval or oblong figure, which is read from the rounded end to the flat end. The cartouche was actually supposed to represent a coil of rope around the name and it gave the name and its owner symbolic protection. There is a curious coincidence in the cartouche of the pharaoh Yacobaam in that the final glyph in the name is (a glyph is most often a symbolic character, but it can also represent an alphabetic letter). The glyph has the phonetic value "mw" and when used as a complete word, it also means water, as might be expected from its shape (which resembles "waves").

In studying the cartouche of Yacobaam, we notice that the "J" and the "Y" are interchangeable in Hebrew, so Yacobaam can equally be Jacobaam. The final glyph in this name, the "waves," which has the phonetic value of "mw;"gives the traditional "m" sound at the end of the pharaonic name. However, if this glyph is taken instead as being a determinative for water (a determinative is always at the end of the word) and not the phonetic glyph "mw", we can delete this letter and the name of this pharaoh suddenly changes to Jacoba. The determinative at the end adds meaning to the name by indicating the person's function or title, thus we derive Jacoba (who is from the water) or, perhaps, Jacoba (who baptizes).

Equally, the Hebrew translation of Jacob is "to follow" and this pharaoh's cartouche contains the glyph in the shape of a "foot." The leg glyphs are all concerned with movement and journeys. Simply knowing the phonetic value and meaning of the name can change the entire perception of the word. Suddenly, the biblical Jacob, father of Joseph, becomes the historical Jacoba, a Hyksos Egyptian pharaoh. You have just seen a revolution in theology, but it is only a small step in a long process of uncovering the truth as you will continue to see. The major implication is that the Biblical family of Abraham and the other Patriarchs are about to be transformed in terms of their political, secular, and religious importance. This revelation we recieved through study of the Egyptian roots of the Jewish people will be constantly backed up by the ancient texts themselves. The first step towards this transformation is to readjust our perceptions of the past. The story we were taught and the accounts written by Ezra, that ended up in the Tanakh, are wrong. Throw out the years of established dogma that clouds our normally rational and critical analysis of the world and look at history anew. We need to focus on the truths we have seen; a ruling dynasty that has managed to escape the recognition of millions due to the changing of history by Ezra through the forging of the history of the Jewish race. Add to this that these people are dark skinned; black we would call it. That is quite a revelation to Aryian Chrisitans I bet. For over 2,500 years these truths have been hidden from the masses along with a proper understanding of what true Abrahamic Faith is all about. The presentation of Abrahamic Faith as contained in these Jewish Scriptures as we received them as the work product of Ezra, a Persian, has been stripped of it's Egyptian roots and its Egyptian Religious format. We have totally been misled when viewing this Biblical family for over 2,500 years at present; a family that is not even recognized by the faithful that worship it to this day. The Torah and Old Testament were never intended to be simple tales of Asiatic tribes and sheep herders. The true story is a complete history of the ruling family of Egypt, the "royal bloodline".

THE GENESIS ACCOUNT OF ABRAHAM, SARAH, AND JACOB: EGYPTIAN ROYALTY?

Let us pick up our study with Abraham, Sarah, and Jacob (Abraham and Jacoba, pharaohs of Egypt). Abraham was master of all he surveyed and the most powerful man in the world. Now this is a real story to set the scribes scribbling, the story of his sons, his parents, his mighty works and deeds. As with the tales of all kings, each and every schoolchild would be forced to learn by rote the names and accomplishments of the royal family; it would be engrained into the national psyche. This is the kind of family that could trace its history back through more than 70 generations and would spawn a billion books. Jacoba, we saw in previous articles, has been identified with the biblical Jacob.

Answer for yourself: But what of the rest of the family?

Answer for yourself: There was also an allusion to the royal position of Abraham, Jacob's grandfather; the texts indicate that he too was a king, but a king of what land and of which people?

Answer for yourself: Was Jacob the most successful in the family, or could it be that Abraham was a pharaoh as well?

The staggering consequences of such a study certainly deserves more attention, so our task before us is to find more evidence of this royal lineage in the religious and historical texts. The very integrity of the Bible is literally at stake. Having seen that these Patriarchs are not even Jews but Pharaohs we should shutter to think about what we will find next in our studies that contradicts the story line we have been taught since childhood. This brings up an even bigger question as to whether the standard doctrines of the church are in any way based in fact.

Answer for yourself: Is the Bible an authoritative historical guide that can be used with any confidence?

I think many people today are so wary of the historical value of the Bible that they probably even underestimate its worth. On the other hand, if you use approach the Bible with your already deveoped theologies and "religious belief systems: then you can read more or less anything you like into these texts and so not be able to draw any valid conclusions that even remotedly are connected with truth. There is a comfortable median in this approach; there is historical information in the Bible that is verifiable, if we understand what it is trying to say. Of course, the Bible has gathered its fair share of mistakes and deliberate misinformation over the years, yet there are ways of seeing through the translators' errors, down to the core of the story and the true text.

Fortunately, there were many contributors to the Bible and not all agree with each other, so we can often see the deliberate mistakes. In the New Testament, for instance, no fewer than five authors provide much the same information. Reading five versions of the same event and comparing them one to another, gives us a good perception of what really happened. In the Old Testament, the different contributors are less obvious. But in the Old Testament there are often repetitions in the text, areas where the same story is repeated, often with different characters playing the same roles.

Not all of this is disinformation; probably these stories arrived at the compiler's desk from widely different sources and traditions and down the years each tribe or faction has remembered the story slightly differently. The scribe has merely written down what he has been told and so the rather confusing narrative that is the Old Testament has emerged. It is from these repetitions in the text that we can pass through the veil of obfuscation and approach the truth, for each version holds a different viewpoint of the same historical events.

Answer for yourself: We have already seen the evidence that Abraham may have been a king rather than a poor shepherd, but can we continue to dig and study and move into deeper revelations and understaning of what lies behind these religious texts which we have seen were purposely clouded by Ezra and others?

Answer for yourself: What more can be found to support this concept?

As is often the case, not all of the texts could be changed and much of the original material has survived the censor. So, despite what one might think, in reality the texts are full of grand allusions to the status of Abraham.

For instance, Abraham has three wives, this is not too bad for a shepherd, but it also happens that one of these wives, Hagar, was an Egyptian slave (Gen. 16:1).

Answer for yourself: How and why did Abraham become bethrothed to an Egyptian slave?

Answer for yourself: But does this not confirm his royal status? What of the marriage of Isaac, Abraham's son, who described his father as being well blessed:

The Lord has blessed my father greatly, and he has become great: and he has given him flocks, and herds, and silver, and gold, and menservants, and maidservants, and camels, and asses (Gen. 34:25).

Abraham rises once more beyond the level of mere shepherd, into the realms of the aristocracy.

Answer for yourself: How far can this be taken, was Abraham really of royal blood and if so, from which country did he originate?

The storyline is winding in places, but I think a compelling case can be made that Abraham was not just a Semitic king, but an Egyptian pharaoh and for this, we must look at his travels in Egypt. The biblical Genesis, for example, includes a tale of Abraham going down into Egypt to buy grain, as there was a famine in his land (Gen. 12:10). In his travels, Abraham meets a pharaoh who comes from the south of Abraham's land.

However, if Abraham were just a minor king from Palestine or from the Sinai, he would have had to travel more to the west than south to go into Egypt and meet a pharaoh. Yet on each opasion this event takes place, it is reported that he travelled to the south. There is no kingdom to the south of Palestine to travel to and, equally, there is no land to the north of Egypt that Abraham could travel from.

Answer for yourself: The texts seem to be unanimous on this point, so does this preclude Abraham from being an Egyptian?

Answer for yourself: Are the texts confused and unreliable?

The ancients were well aware what south meant. There seems little reason to change the texts and the Bible seems to be quite specific, as this section is repeated more than once. Yet this strongly indicates that Abraham was not in Egypt at the time.

Answer for yourself: So how does this square with the hypothesis that Abraham was in fact a northern Hyksos pharaoh, living in Egypt?

This argument has been used on numerous occasions by the orthodoxy to indicate that Abraham was based in Judaea and that he travelled "down" (south-west) into Egypt. But the Bible may not be quite so mistaken about the compass direction of Egypt from Palestine. This may just be a cartographical misunderstanding, the ancient definition of Egypt may not be the same as ours. The historian Josephus confirms this when he says of the Jewish Sicarii sect of Jerusalem that:

...six hundred of them were caught immediately; but as to all those that fled into Egypt, and to the Egyptian Thebes, it was not long ere they were caught also...(Jewish Wars, Josephus, 7:416).

But these Sicarii were based in Alexandria, in the Nile delta, the land of the Hyksos, and yet they fled south into Egypt. Clearly, the boundaries of "Egypt" had a different terminology from that of today. William Whiston, the compiler of the works of Josephus notes:

Since Josephus informs us that some of these Sicarii went from Alexandria into Egypt and Thebes, Relland well observes, from Vossius, that Egypt sometimes denotes"Proper" or Upper Egypt, as distinct from the Delta and the lower parts near Palestine. Accordingly, as he adds, those that say it never rains in Egypt, must mean Proper or Upper Egypt, because it does sometimes rain in the other parts (Ibid., comments, William Whiston, p. 770.

In this case, the Bible is not wrong, the texts ring clear and true, if we know how to interpret them correctly. Abraham was travelling south, from the lands of the Hyksos in the Nile delta, which is known as Lower Egypt and lies in the north of the country, and down into "Egypt" proper, to Thebes in the south, which is known as Upper Egypt. Many hundreds of years later, the Sicarii were following the same path as Abraham into Egypt.

Indeed, as Josephus's Antiquities of the Jews represents a complete (but slightly different) version of the Old Testament, one might speculate that the same scholarly and scribal lineage that would have been responsible for Josephus's texts, were also responsible for rewriting the real Old Testament texts. It is not hard to see how the same terminology to describe Egypt was used in both books. Once more, the texts are not necessarily wrong; it is simply necessary to know the local politics of the era in order to make sense of the situation.

This strange terminology may have resulted from the Hyksos period in Egyptian history, as discussed in a prior article; it so happens that the era of Abraham is roughly coincident with the era of the Hyksos. So during the second intermediate period of Egypt, that is from roughly 1680s BC to 1590s BC, Egypt was spflt into two nations, north and south. There was a southern Pharaoh with a capital at Thebes and a northern pharaoh based at Avaris in the Nile delta; this was Abraham.

The northern pharaoh would have been the Hyksos, the Shepherd King and they clearly saw themselves as being a separate nation. Consequently, there was a historical occasion when you could have travelled south into "Egypt" to meet a pharaoh and purchase grain - the Hyksos pharaoh in the north could have done this.

Answer for yourself: So is the Bible describing the period when Egypt was divided?

Answer for yourself: Was Abraham travelling from Avaris in Lower Egypt to Thebes in Upper Egypt to purchase grain?

Answer for yourself: Was the pharaoh he met a Theban pharaoh?

There is more to this concept than immediately meets the eye, for if Abraham was from the era of the Hyksos, it could transform classical theology. During the Hyksos period, there were two pharaohs, one in each half of the country, so although Abraham was meeting a pharaoh in the south, there was still another pharaoh who ruled in the north. Abraham is described in the historical texts as being a king with an army of unlimited manpower. Historically, the Hyksos army was the most powerful in the world at the time and this dovetails perfectly with what Josephus records concerning Abraham that the Bible does not represent correctly. The Hyskos had access to the new technology of composite bows, horses and chariots and it was quite a formidable force that threatened the southern pharaoh at Thebes.

Answer for yourself: In that case, was Abraham the northern pharaoh, the Hyksos pharaoh?

Further answers that confirm that Abraham was a Pharoah comes from examining his wife; Sarah.

THE THREE ATTEMPTS TO COVER UP THE TRUTH ABOUT SARAH

As Abraham entered the south and met the pharaoh, a strange event occurred. Abraham was forced to tell the southern pharaoh that his wife, Sarah, was his sister and not his wife. In the biblical texts, Sarah was given two possible places within the family. She was initially described as being the young niece of Abraham, but later she was described as being his half-sister:

And yet indeed she is my sister, she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife (Gen. 20:12)

The explanation for Abraham's strange denial of his wife and her promotion to the position of full sister is quite odd. It is said that because Sarah was so beautiful, Abraham's life would be in danger if the pharaoh found out that she was his wife. This explanation makes no sense. It is not as if this pharaoh was in the habit of taking other people's beautiful wives. Let us not forget that Egyptian Monotheism was a righteous faith and the Pharaoh saw himself as the Son of God. It is clearly stated in the texts that the southern pharaoh was subsequently horrified to find out that Sarah was already married and, therefore, he was nearly made into a unintentional adulterer by Abraham's actions. Subsequently, Abraham had to make a hasty retreat from Thebes, as the situation was getting out of control.

This is a prime example of the way in which the texts have been altered to cover up a small embarrassment. The event cannot be deleted from the texts, for it was quite important and everyone knew of it. But a subtle change can often entirely alter the meaning and change the meanings of the event. The true explanation of this strange story is more likely to be that Sarah was not just beautiful, but that Sarah also looked very similar to Abraham, for she was his full sister. If Abraham were the northern pharaoh, the Hyksos pharaoh, he would have married his sister, according to the pharaonic tradition. Within royal families it was common for fathers to marry daughters and for brothers to marry sisters. Diodorus of Sicily, who had visited Egypt some time between 60 and 56 BCE, writes that the Egyptians had a law "permitting men to marry their sisters" and adds that "it was ordained that the queen should have greater power and honour than the king and that among private persons the wife should enjoy authority over her husband" (Diodorus of Sicily,. Trans. C. H. Oldfather, Loeb Classical Library, vol. I (Books I:27), London and New York: 1933). Such notions have contributed to the so-called "heiress" theory which argues that the right to the throne in Ancient Egypt was transmitted through the female line. A man, no matter what his status, be he the eldest son of the previous pharaoh or a commoner, became a pharaoh through his relationship to the queen. The pharaohship was legitimised through marriage to the "heiress" who was often the pharaoh's sister or his half-sister. It has been argued, therefore, that Ancient Egypt was a matrilineal society where power resided in the female line. The queen was no mere wife. Her position and gestures should be interpreted not as indicating inferiority and submission.

This likeness between Abraham and his sister-wife would have made the southern pharaoh angry: marrying a sister was primarily a pharaonic tradition, so the royal status of Abraham would have been obvious because he married his sister. The Theban pharaoh would have been very upset suddenly to discover that he was not dealing with a rich northern merchant and priest purchasing a few sacks of grain, but, instead, with a northern "rebel" pharaoh that had taken control of "his"' northern lands. He was dealing with his rival; the Hyskos Pharaoh of the Nile Delta.

This is a much more plausible story, given the politics and technology of the day. It would have been difficult for this southern pharaoh to obtain a true likeness of the northern Hyksos pharaoh, so he and his advisors would not necessarily have known with whom they were dealing. In this case, the subterfuge could have worked, Abraham could easily have disguised himself as a wealthy trader and physically met his southern foe. This analogy is not so wild as it may seem, for Abraham was not in the south to purchase grain; there was a much more important mission afoot. We need to listen to Josephus again to find out the real reason why Abraham was "spying" out Upper Egypt.

WAS ABRAHAM ON A RELIGIOUS MISSION IN UPPER EGYPT?

An alternative and more interesting explanation for this trip is given in Josephus's Antiquities, which again has more than an air of plausibility about it. Josephus says that the trip was actually made in order to spy on the southern priests and to find out what they were saying about the gods (Antiquities, Josephus, 1:166). This is just the sort of action that might be expected if Abraham was a northern pharaoh. Scholars are divided today on why Egypt "split" into Upper and Lower Egypt. After all the years of my study I am convinced that this split between northern and southern Egypt had nothing to I do with an invasion by a people from Palestine, but was a religious divide within the same nation over the precession of the equinoxes and Taurus being replaced by Aires in the Heavens.

Back in Egypt, Abraham was also deeply concerned about a divisive religious dispute that had split the country into two and had simmered for generations. We must never forget that in those days many nations were involved in watching the stars and they heavily influenced the religions of the day; Abraham as a Semite was no exception to this before his invasion of the Norther Delta relgion of Egypt. So Abraham brings with him into Egypt many of the same understandings of the Cosmos and the Heavens of which Egypt was currently involved as well. Josephus makes it clear that the intention in Abraham's excursion and his spying mission into "Upper Egypt" (really Southern Egypt since the Nile flows northwards) was to see what the southern priests were saying about the gods.

What we fail to understand today is that this change in the ruling constellation connected with the Precession of the Equninox [Taurus being replaced by Aires] was of major importance not only politically but religiously. It was to cause a revolution in world theology and Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, David, Solomon, etc., are to be totally submerged in this theological problem and hints of this are buried all the way through the Old Testament narrative that go unnoticed by all but those who have stumbled onto this great fact. Abraham's political goal was to solve this theological dispute at its source, within the long established priesthoods of Egypt, and, perhaps, to persuade the southern priests of the errors of their ways [supporters of Taurus over Aires]. These southern priests of Egypt had long based much of the Egyptian Religion upon the ruling constellation of Taurus and were resistant to change even though the "Precession Of The Equinox" was replacing Taurus with the constellation of Arius in that day. It is time to learn about this Precession of the Equinox to understand exactly what was happening.

On this quest into the enemy territory of Upper Egypt, Abraham would have been forced to keep secret the status of his wife Sarah to protect his identity because being a Pharaoh himself then knowing Abraham had married his sister would have been a dead giveaway that this man was a ruler or a Pharaoh himself. Thus the need for secrecy..We saw before that Pharaohs married their sisters since the power to the throne came through the female and in order to consolidate the power to the throne they married their sisters. Among the pharaohs of Egypt it was a royal prerogative for brothers to marry sisters, to guarantee that future pharaohs would have royal blood in both their fathers' and mothers' ancestry: (Osiris/Isis - Abraham/Sarah). It is a good question as to why Sarah was there at all, but perhaps with the journey times involved, successful traders in those days travelled with a complete entourage. Whatever the case, if Abraham had successfully employed this deception on the southern pharaoh, it would undoubtedly have been talked about for centuries within every Judaic tribe and it was talked about, again and again.

Answer for yourself: But why have we not heard of it before now? Or have we and not noticed?

Indeed, it must have been quite a remarkable event in the annals of the Hyksos, for this same episode is described on no less than three occasions within the Bible. Of course, it is not possible that exactly the same event occurred three times; the scribes were simply being over enthusiastic and wrote down everything they heard or read. We can even see how this interlay of the same story must have been written by different scribes at different desks and at different times, because the complete text makes no sense. The second story is placed further on in the texts, so that when Abraham made his next journey down into Egypt, Sarah was over 90 years old and yet still the southern pharaoh found her attractive (Genesis 17:17; Gen. 20:01). The Bible does not explain why the Theban pharaoh should want a 90-year-old wife. On the third occasion, the couple involved has lost their identifies and have turned into Isaac and Rebecca, Abraham's son and daughter-in-law (Gen. 26:1).

Answer for yourself: Now could this same peculiar event have happened three times? The separate traditions that evolved into the story known as "Genesis" are simply confused about when it really happened. In fact, some of these changes to the text may have occurred relatively recently, for Josephus makes no mention of the third occasion, but the rest of his narrative follows the Old Testament very closely.

The changes made in the telling of the duplicated stories are illuminating. Instead of journeying south into Egypt and meeting a pharaoh, on the second and third occasion, they journey south and arrive in Gerar, instead, and meet a Philistine king called Abimalech.

Answer for yourself: Since when do Philistiness rule Egypt?

This story makes no historical sense: the Philistine nation had not been founded in this era and, in addition, the king Abimilichi was a Phoenician king from Tyre in the era of Akhenaton, a later Pharaoh. It is quite apparent that "Egypt" has been changed to "Gerar", to distance these events from Egypt herself. Notice with me if you that that to match this change, the Egyptian pharaoh has been changed into a rather minor king, thus confusing the Egyptians with the Philistines and Phoenicians.

Answer for yourself: Are there any similarities in these peoples?

Interestingly enough, the Greek historian Herodotus does seem to confirm this idea. He mentions a tribe of "Shepherd Philitis"; this short reference does tend to link the term Philistine with the Shepherd Kings and with Lower Egypt (Herodotus, Gerar ii, 128).

Abimalech is not a familiar designation in the historical record among the Theban pharaohs of the seventeenth dynasty, hence the assumption that this is a simple confusion with the Phoenician king. This appears to lead us into a cul-de-sac, clearly not all the biblical references will translate into pharaohs of Egypt. But by using this technique of name comparison, we must consider if any more kings be found within the biblical texts. We find that we can.

We notice upon examination that there are no obvious pharaohs in the Biblical narrative, for wherever there is a reference to Egypt within the Bible or if a pharaoh is mentioned, the king concerned is just called "pharaoh" and not by his "name." This is strange, for within the Bible nearly every prince, priest, follower, family member, publican, beggar and whore is named but not one Pharaoh.

Answer for yourself: Don't you find that strange? Was this done on purpose?

Yet the most important and powerful men in the world at that time, the pharaohs of Egypt, who affected Jewish destiny at every twist and turn of history, are never to be named.

Answer for yourself: Why?

We have already looked at the influence of Ezra in depriving the returning Jewish exiles of knowledge concerning their true origin in Egypt. Also of note is the various arguments and antipathy between Egypt and the Jews that eventually led to the great exodus of Moses. We will find out later the various attempts by Egypt to removed from history the Moses event and all that it entailed since, in Egypt's eyes, such religious reformation inspired by Moses was hurtful to the nation.

But if we look more closely, it would appear that some pharaohs have missed this censorship and their names were passed on in other texts. Josephus preserves one of them and he does so within a biblical context, so perhaps this particular connection between Egypt and the Bible can be dated accurately. This is crucially important, for many scholars have tried, often unsuccessfully, to date biblical events, such as the exodus. To do so requires these datable connections between the two records of history and Bible and having just one connection is somewhat frustrating and usually unproductive in ascertaining accurate dates. A name compared to the Egyptian King records will tie down the dates we needed. Nevertheless, this link in the form of a Pharaoh's name, provided by Josephus, fixes a date for us and we can subsequently build upon it, pharaoh after pharaoh, until an entirely new history evolves from the texts. The link that Josephus mentions concerns the story just described of Sarah being taken by the pharaoh, who subsequently found out that she was already married. The pharaoh concerned in this dispute is now named as Necho.

Pharaoh Necho, king of Egypt at the time, descended on this land with an immense army and seized Sarah the princess, mother of our nation. And what did her husband, our forefather Abraham do? Did he avenge the insult by force of arms? Yet he had three hundred and eighteen officers under him... ? (Josephus, Jewish Wars, 5:379).

This is clearly a reference to the Sarah dispute mentioned earlier and a search of the historical record for an equivalent pharaoh reveals that the closest match to this name in Egyyptian list of Kings, in the correct era, is Nehesy, a fifteenth dynasty pharaoh. This may not seem totally convincing at this stage, but Nehesy will later be identified as being the patriarch Nachor, the father (or grandfather) of Abraham (and we have already seen that these Hyskos, and presumed Patriarchs like Abraham and Jacob, were ruling Pharaohs in the Nile Delta). This slip in pronunciation from Nehesy to Necho may have been influenced by the history contemporary to the era in which this record was written, for at about that time, in the Egyptian twenty-sixth dynasty, there was a pharaoh named Necho. This particular pharaoh was a thousand years later than the incident mentioned, but perhaps a scribe, being used to this name, thought that this was the correct pronunciation for Nehesy. This identification of the pharaoh Nehesy with the Necho of Josephus, if we can confirm it, places a definite link between the late fourteenth dynasty (c. 1700 BC) and Abraham, the most famous of the patriarchs, the man who essentially founded the biblical family.

Even if this scenario of a biblical pharaoh called Necho is accepted, the circumstances may seem strange at first, with the historical record now seeming to indicate that Abraham was fighting his father. However, this is an event (family squabbles between rulers) that has recurred throughout history and is enshrined in numerous mythologies, with royal princes in many countries often being at odds with the king, so it should not be too surprising that this should have happened. It this were the case, it would also have been another reason for keeping secret the marital status of Sarah. Consider the position that would have arisen if Abraham had married the royal princess, his sister, without permission. Pharaoh Nehesy, father of Abraham, now wished to marry his daughter, as was often the tradition in pharaonic times as well as marrying of sisters. For Abraham to have married without Nehesy's permission may have been a treasonable offence; he was usurping the authority of the pharaoh and the possible punishment may have been severe.

If this were the case, something important must have been happening for the son to undermine the authority of his father in this fashion and we will come to see shortly that this is essentially a religious dispute. Biblical tradition itself mentions that Abraham was to separate from his father named "Tera" in the Biblical text. This separation came of religious issues involving Abraham desiring to repent of idoaltry: The testimony of a former Chief Rabbi: "The fight against idolatry begun by the Prophets (Biblical Prophets) was continued by the Pharisees. Abraham, the father of the Hebrew people, they taught, started on his career as an idol wrecker. In legends, parables and discourses, they showed forth the folly and futility of idol worship..." (Former Chief Rabbi J H Hertz from the "Book of Jewish Thoughts" 1942 - Pub - The office of the Chief Rabbi London)

This is the reason for Abraham becoming the primary biblical patriarch, the father of a new religion and the "Father of the Nation". He made a significant break with tradition at this point, effectively starting a new dynasty, and it was a divergence that would prove to be fatally divisive; it would result in civil war in Egyptian history validates.

Although the historical record of Egypt is rather uncertain in this period, it would seem that the pharaoh Nehesy was the last pharaoh in his era. The next pharaoh to take the throne was Sheshi and he was the first of the Hyksos pharaohs in the north. The hazy apparition known as history is slowly beginning to coalesce into something more tangible.

DID KING DAVID AND ABRAHAM LIVE AT THE SAME TIME?

Answer for yourself: Did Abraham and the biblical David live at the same time?

On the surface this seems like a silly question given the received tradition of the Old Testament by both Judaism and Christianity but you might be surprised at what you can find if you look into this matter a little.

Everyone knows that the story of Abraham is to be found in the Book of Genesis from chapters 11:26 to 25:10. It is helpful in reading this article that you have previously read about the connection of the identity of King David with Tuthmose III, Pharaoh of Egypt. Remembering what we found there then it is important as we start to reflect that there are certain peoples mentioned in Genesis, such as Philistines, Moabites, Ammonites, Aramacans, Edomites, Amalekites and Canaanites and these groupings of people are the very same people who were incorporated in David's Empire, according to 2nd Samuel 8.

The Book of Second Samuel informs us that while David was staying at the fortress of Jerusalem, at the time of the siege of the fortified city, he sent for Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah the Hittite, who was serving with the king's forces at the siege, so as to take her to his home where "he lay with her" (II Samuel, 11:4). As a result of this affair, Bathsheba became pregnant. We are told later in II Samuel that the child of sin got ill and died.

Answer for yourself: Are there similarities between Abraham and Uriah that defy coincidence? Let us see.

Of both of them it is said that they:

- Are foreigners, Abraham was a Canaanite in Egypt and Uriah a Hittite in Jerusalem.
- Had their wives made pregnant by a King and gave birth to a son.
- Both sons were destined to die except that Isaac's life was spared at the last minute.

Now let us move to something that stands out like a sore thumb. The husband of Bathsheba, in the biblical story of David, is identified as Uriah the Hittite. If the name is actually Uriah, it is composed of two elements:

- Ur*- a Hurrian (northern Mesopotamian) word meaning "city" or "light".
- Yah (iah)* - is the short form of Jehovah, the Israelites' God.

Therefore, the name, accordingly, means "Jehovah's Light".

Answer for yourself: Why should this get our attention? Simply because the Bible describes him as being Hittite and not an Israelite!

Answer for yourself: How can we expect a Hittite, a traditional enemy of both Egypt and the Israelites to be one of the heroes of David's (Tuthmose III's) army?

Moustafa Gadalla, in his Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Ancient Egypt, relates to the reader that is therefore reasonable to conclude that Uriah was a fictional character, as a Hittite, p. 156-158). The true identity of this individual was concealed by the redactors of the Hebrew Scriptures, in particular Ezra for reasons given elsewhere on this website.

Answer for yourself: Is it possible that we can tie the name Uriah to Abraham? Let us take a look:

- Ur* - birth place of Abraham (according to the Bible).
- Yah (iah)* - short form of Jehovah (the Israelites God).

Answer for yourself: It is possible looking at the above evidence to conclude that possibly the name Uriah may belong to Abraham, as it relates to both his birth place and to his God. We have already seen that Tuthmose III took Abram's wife and wedded her and finding her to not be the "sister" of Abram and under judgment from God for taking another's man's wife would send them back to Canaan.

Answer for yourself: Are these two men, Abraham and Uriah the same person and is the story of Bathsheba the same story of Sarah and Tuthmose III but told in a way to hide the true identities of those involved to protect the received "tradition" and cover up the Egyptian roots to the origin of the Jewish people?

Answer for yourself: Is it possible to tie Sarai (or Sarah) to Bathsheba?

The name Bathsheba was originally read "Beth-Sheba". "Beth" means "a girl" or "a daughter" (Ibid). "Sheba" refers to an area south of Canaan that takes its name from the local well, Beer-Sheba. Therefore, the name Bathsheba means "a girl (or daughter) of Sheba".

Answer for yourself: Who else does the Bible tell us comes from "Sheba"? Would you believe it is Sarah? The Bible tells us that Sarah was from Sheba and that she returned to it, with her husband Abraham, after they were deported from Egypt. Therefore, it would appear that Sarah and the "girl (daughter) of Sheba" are one and the same person (Ibid).

Moustafa Gadalla, in his Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Ancient Egypt makes a very strong case for linking Sarah with Bethsheba and once you examine all the evidence surrounding the Hebrew Pharaohs of Egypt then you see that it is reasonably logical to relate Uriah to Abraham and Bathsheba to Sarah, in their names and lives. The evidence mounts on the true character of Uriah (Abraham), Bathsheba (Sarah), and their relationship to the Warrior Pharaoh King Tuthmose III.

Answer for yourself: Moustafa Gadalla asks a dynamite question when he writes "Is it possible that Abraham and Sarah never went to Egypt and that Sarah's liaison with the Pharaoh took place while the Pharaoh lived, at the hills of Jerusalem, while laying siege to Megiddo?".

Answer for yourself: Was it this area where Abraham was to sacrifice Isaac, the son of the union of Sarah and Tuthmose III?

Answer for yourself: Was it the Lord of those mounts, the Pharaoh, who persuaded Abraham to let Isaac live? You need to read that question once again.

Answer for yourself: Could it have been this Lord, the Pharaoh Tuthmose III, who instructed his son, Isaac to "Go not down into Egypt..." as per Genesis 26:2 since knowing that he is of mixed blood?

Wow, this just gets better and better once we do some study. The truth is out there and I hope you are not afraid to "think".

MANETHO'S KING LISTS AND THE LINK BETWEEN PHARAOHS AND PATRIARCHS

In order to proceed we have to deal with the names of Egyptian Kings - Pharaohs and compare them to the Biblical names found in the Old Testament. Up to now we have seen that quite possible that Abraham and Jacob were Pharaohs but we don't end here. Now we gather more evidence which will confirm the fact that the Biblical Pharaohs were in reality Egyptian Pharaohs.

Further evidence is to be found when we compare other biblical names of the family of Adam, which extended through Noah (Noe) and up to Abraham. These names, like Jacob, do not necessarily sound like pharaohs, but they can be compared directly to them using careful scrutiny. It is important to be cautious when doing this because it is easy to become carried away with phonetic similarities. In addition, it is obvious that some of the names have altered slightly down the years and the order of inheritance has changed slightly, so direct comparisons are not exactly straightforward.

That some of the names have altered over the years can be seen within the Bible itself, for some Old Testament names are not quite the same as their New Testament versions. This is probably because the Old Testament was written in Aramaic, Coptic or Hebrew and then translated into Greek and, then, English. Instead, the New Testament went straight from its original Greek to English. In comparing with other religious texts, the Koran obviously involved a translation into Arabic, and the Torah into Hebrew. Inevitably, some of the names in these texts will have a slightly different pronunciation.

The ancestors of Abraham provide a good example of how much these names have altered just within the same traditions. In the book of Genesis, two of Abraham's forefathers are called Elber and Reu (Genesis 11:20). Moving forward a few centuries and into the New Testament, the same characters are now called Heber and Ragau (Luke 3:35). The problem is obvious, in that names do subtly change in the Bible, so identifying other pharaohs in this royal lineage will not be an easy task but yet not impossible. Fortunately, there are many texts to choose from and compare, so the ranges of pronunciation will be clearly understood. The facts we need as well as the evidence we seek thankfully exits today for all to see. There are Egyptian records inscribed on clay tablets, the writings of Manetho, the Egyptian historian whose quotations have come to us through Josephus, other Greek historians and, finally, the three religious texts of the Bible, Torah and Koran.

The Bible is a good starting place for this process. Here, Abraham's father is called Terah and his father is called Nachor (or Nahor, the spelling varies in the texts). Nahor we have already seen lined up with the pharaoh Nehesy, but Terah is more uncertain, as no pharaohs with this name appear in the Egyptian record. Looking at the historical list of Hyksos kings shows that the pharaoh Nehesy also had a throne name of Aasehre. Nehesy, Nahor and Nachor look very much like the same sort of names, and Terah is equally similar to Aasehre.

Remember that Egyptologists are uncertain of the exact pronunciation here, so the name Nehesy could also be seen as being pronounced as Nehosy, each is a valid transliteration. It is also significant that the name of Abraham's wife was Sarah, which is quite possibly a derivation from the pharaonic name Aasehre, the wife taking the king's name. Another valid transliteration of this pharaoh's throne name could be Aasahra and because of the following reasoning this is the spelling that I shall use.

The name Sarah means princess in the Semitic languages, so Sarah was obviously quite an important person. Josephus confirms this when he calls her a princess and mother of the nation.

Pharaoh Necho, king of Egypt at the time, descended on this land with an immense army and seized Sarah the princess, mother of our nation. And what did her husband, our forefather Abraham do? Did he avenge the insult by force of arms? Yet he had three hundred and eighteen officers under him... ? (Josephus, Jewish Wars, 5:379).

But the name Sarah is not just a female title, nor did it originate with the pharaoh Aasahra. Aasahra has been translated as meaning "as powerful as the gods", certainly a name fit for a king, but the name Sarah has an even older source than this.

Sarah was a very important name and it has had a long and illustrious history. The male gender equivalent of Sarah is Sah, meaning king, and if anyone was to be "as powerful as the gods", it would have to be the Pharaoh-king.

But Sah was not a reference to just any old god. In the Egyptian language, Sah is a direct reference to the constellation of Orion and Orion has always been identified with the Egyptian God Osiris (The Religion of Ancient Egypt, by Mercer). Osiris was one of the founding fathers of the Egyptian gods and eventually became the most influential deity in Egypt. Because Osiris was so important in Egyptian theology and because his role was central to the resurrection of the dead pharaoh, over the centuries, the name Sah became intimately linked with the name of the king himself. Indeed, the Egyptians believed that the recently deceased king would become an incarnation of Osiris - he would become Sah himself. It was believed by the Egyptians that their dead Pharaoh would be resurrected and ascend to a new existence in Heaven. It was held that the Pharaoh would then depart on a spiritual journey to the constellation Orion in Heaven in the afterlife. This belief is fortified by the precise angle of one of the 4 shafts in the Giza Pyramid that was perfectly aligned with the constellation Orion. The Pharaoh would literally be the Sah himself; a concept akin to being "in Osiris" or "in Christ."

As a result of this intimate association between the pharaoh and Sah (Osiris), the name Sah has become a royal appellation, not just in Egypt, but all over the world. It has been transliterated into nearly every language in the western world and used as the title of nearly all our kings. Sah was seen as a sacred title by the Magi and used in Persia, where it became the royal title Shah. Further eastwards, in India, it became Sahib. In the greatest of all the ancient empires, Rome, they chose the appellation Caesar. Casesar was just another form of the Egyptian word "Sah." In the frozen wastes of the north, in Russia, they inherited the same tradition and the title became Tsar. Word of the power of such a sacred name spread far and wide and so in the damp north-west of Europe, in Britain, the royal appellation became Sire. For the lesser nobles here, the title became Sir, but in the military world the tradition remains and this is always pronounced as "Sar!" Such was the power and influence of ancient Egypt.

THE KING LISTS OF EGYPT

There is an additional problem in looking at these ancient records. We have only a limited knowledge of the Hyksos kings, the line of pharaohs that needs adequate study, making the task very difficult. After the Hyksos exodus, many of the Egyptian records of Lower Egypt were deliberately destroyed, leaving little for modern Egyptologists to use in order to date and name the Hyksos pharaohs. However, Josephus provides a list of pharaohs taken from Manetho. Josephus' king list does not entirely tally with the established chronology of Egypt, but, while there are some peculiarities, some of it does make sense.

Where he lists a pharaoh, for instance, by the names of Harmesses Miamoun (Against Apion, Josephus, 1:96), we find that there is a pharaoh by the name of Ramesses U Meryamun (Who Were The Pharaohs, S. Quirke). Manetho also lists three pharaohs by the name of Akencheres, following the reign of Amenophis (Amenhotep III). These pharaohs do not appear in the historical records, but it is believed that Amenhotep III had at least four male children, Tuthmoses, Akhenaton (the Biblical Moses, Smenkhkare and Tutankhaton (Tutankhamen). All four of these brothers were unique in being ardent believers in the God known as the Aten (Aton) [Akhenaton, C. Aldred, p.293), a belief that divided the nation of Egypt and precipitated a civil war. Thus begins a tremendous religious reform that is traced out in the Bible under the names of the Patriarchs but in reality they were monotheistic Pharaohs.

It seems likely that Manetho has used the prenomen of Aken on the names of three of these brothers because they worshipped this god (although Manetho says one of these pharaohs was female, there is no historical evidence of a female pharaoh at this time). In addition, the Hebrew word for the Sun is Achares, which appears to be a direct derivation of the name Akencheres given to these sons of Amenhotep III in the Greek translation. The Aton was principally a Sun deity, in which case the name being given is something akin to Aton-achares. In which case it is abundantly clear as to which family the name Akencheres is being applied and to which locations in the world the name eventually travelled. What we must at this time understand about Egyptian religon is that Aton, although He, as God, was represented by the Sun, the Sun to Egypt was not an object of worship but rather a representation of the Life-giver of the Cosmos since the Sun brings warmth and photosynthesis that produces food for mankind. The Sun was a picture of God and His benevolence toward mankind.

The pharaoh in the middle of these three brothers in the list of Manetho (in the correct position chronologically) is said to be Rathothis. Once more this is not initially very helpful, for we would have expected the pharaoh in this position to be Amenhotep IV, the second of the four brothers. Amenhotep IV was possibly treated differently in this translation because he was the most infamous of all these brothers and he had already changed his name to reflect the new belief in the Aton, calling himself Akhenaton. This change in name does not appear to be very helpful in this quest, as the names Akhenaton and Rathothis do not appear to match whatsoever, that is, until we take a look at the hieroglyphs and the politics involved in the name of this pharaoh.

The name Akhenaton was spelled backwards, with the god-name (Aton) at the beginning of the cartouche, thus the name is read phonetically as being Aton-akhen. A short explanation as to why this has been done is necessary here. There seems to have been an Egyptian convention that gods were so important that they must be written at the beginning of the name, even if the name is pronounced with the god-name at the end. Thus, Akhen-aton is spelt Aton-akhen. The same happens with the pharaohs Wadjkara, Merykara, Kanefera and Djedefra; the God Ra is always written at the beginning of the cartouche, even if the pronunciation places his name at the end. However, like all good linguistic rules, there are some exceptions.

- Aten Ak-hen
- Ra Akhen
- Ra Thot-hen

THE CARTOUCHE OF AKHENATON

Ramesses is pronounced with the god-name at the beginning, just as it is spelt, as is Amenhotep. This presents us with a problem in translation and even Egyptologists are not entirely certain of the rules here. Take the pharaoh Khafre, traditionally ascribed as the builder of the second largest pyramid in Egypt. In nearly every text on the subject, this pharaoh is called Khafre, but George Hart, staff lecturer on the Egyptian collection in the British Museum, calls this pharaoh Rakhaf (Pharaohs and Pyramids, G. Hart). He has simply placed the god-name at the beginning of the word instead of the end. In view of the confusion in this matter, either pronunciation is a possibility that must be considered.

In addition to this little problem, the god-name of Aton is often simplified to a simple sun-disk, which could be mistranslated as being Re or Ra, the Sun-God (Pharaohs and Pyramids, G. Hart). Instead of reading Akhenaton, a translator might therefore read Akhen-ra. The simplified cartouche is more interesting here because it shows to what Manetho was alluding. The god-name could be rendered as being Ra and it could be read as being at the beginning of the name, as not all god-names are shunted to the end. Thus we read the name as being Ra-akhen. The second part of the name can also have another rendering, bearing in mind the political climate of the era. The pharaoh Akhenaton became a non-person because of his attempt to change the theology of Egypt and his name was not to be uttered by anyone. It is hardly surprising, therefore, that the precise pronunciation of his name has been lost to history.

Bear in mind that Manetho was writing about 1,000 years after these texts were first written down. If, therefore, the readers Egyptian were a little rusty or if one did not want to mention the forbidden name Akhenaton, the Ibis in the name could always be read as the god-name Thoth. In reality the Ibis in the name "Thoth" is standing on a stick , but the pictograms are very much the same. Thus the name Akhenaton can be read in some circumstances as being Rathothen.

Answer for yourself: Is this Manetho's Rathothis?

Manetho is often nearly right; correct enough to be taken seriously, if cautiously. Manetho has produced for us a long list of Hyksos kings and these, in tandem with the Egyptian record, can now to be matched with the names of their biblical counterparts. Three or four more pharaonic names suddenly seem to be identifiable in the Bible. When listing the names I have kept to the biblical order; in this case, some of the historical pharaohs jump a few places within the fourteenth to seventeenth dynasties. Remarkably though, most of the pharaohs are in chronological order.

The throne name of Ramesses II was Meryamun. We need to take notice here the occurrence of another famous biblical name, Miriamme. The word "men" in Egyptian means much the same as it does now - "happy or loved by". In its short form, the resulting historic name is Mary; this will be very important later in our unfolding story. As with the name Sarah, the throne name of a pharaoh, Ramesses Meryamun, has come down through history as a biblical female name.

CORRESPONDING NAMES OF PHAROAHS WITH PATRIARCHS....COINCIDENCE?

- In Manetho's King list the name of Pharaoh Apachnat correspond to the Biblical name of Arphaxad (Gen. 10:22, 10:24, 11:10-13). These are almost a perfect match, and Josephus, when quoting Manetho, indicates that Apachnat is a real pharaoh, even if he has not yet been found in the Egyptian record.
- Pharaoh Aasahra (Apopis I) and Salah (Gen. 10:24, 11:12-15) also look very similar, especially as the chronological order in following Cain gives a match with Manetho's Apophis.
- The match between Manetho's Pharaoh Cian - Jannus and Cainan (Cain) in the Bible (Genesis chapter 4) and Egytian history's record of Pharaoh Ciiaan - Khyan is one of the most positive associations.
- We also have the first of our finds, Jacob (Genesis chapter 25) and Jacoba which we already mentioned in an earlier article.
- We find similar associations with Manetho's Pharaoh Apophis and the Biblical name of Salah (Genesis 10:24, 11:12-15).

- Likewise we find Manetho's Pharaoh Brion and the Biblical Heber (Genesis 46:17).
- Again we find the Biblical Ragau (Luke 3:35) associated with Egyptian history and their account of Pharaoh Raqu - Aquenere.
- We already mentioned Nachor or Nahor (Josh. 24:2) and its association with the Egyptian Pharaoh Nehesy.
- Manetho lists Pharaoh Assis which corresponds to the Bibical Terah - Azar (Gen. 11:24) which again Egyptian history records as Aasahra - Assii.
- Then more importantly we find the Biblical Abraham (Gen. 17) which corresponds to Egypt's Pharaoh (Sheshi).
- The Biblical Isaac (Gen. 17: 19, 21) corresponds to Pharoah Anather.
- Lastly the Biblical Joseph (Gen. 30:24) corresponds to Sobekemsaf II.

This is not simply a case of making the names fit. Remember that Egyptologists do not know how these names were pronounced; these names in the historical texts are only guesses taken from comparisons with other languages. The Rosetta Stone is a good guide, but is by no means a complete dictionary and, besides, the Greek pronunciation of Egyptian words is still suspect in places, so any translation taken from the Greek is not guaranteed to be accurate. Think of the confusion that can be caused if the proper pronunciation of a modern name is not known. Take Stephen, for example; is it pronounced Steven or Step-hen? Such a minor alteration can make a big difference to the name and, without a native speaker to provide a definitive answer, the task of deciding the correct pronunciation becomes almost impossible. This confusion has caused a wide spectrum of possible English transliterations for these names, so I must apologize if there is occasionally some differences in spelling , but every Egyptological work and every biblical text carries with it a different spelling.

However, most of the resulting phonetic sounds to the names are broadly similar, and when deciding the correct pronunciation, the Bible will be used as our "native speaker", to guide us in the right direction. This is not a perfect solution, but with this assistance on how the names should be pronounced, progress can be made. All I have done in the list above is to change the pronunciation of the names very slightly, following the standard Egyptian rules, to produce some of these alternative names that now match the biblical record.

Now it is up to you to read this and tell yourself that this is but a fantasy and that there is no linguistic link between the Egyptian names of the Pharaohs in Manetho's list, the Egyptian historical record, and the Biblical names. As for me I cannot.

As we saw when we read about Ezra in a prior article the historical record of the Jewish people were changed to cover up this Egyptian connection and Pharaohs were made into Jewish Patriarchs. Now is time to see them not only for whom they historically were but what they truly believed about God in the time that they lived; for after all Christianity and Judaism owe their origin to Egypt and Egyptian concepts of God. What should concern us as we progress is if we have been faithful to what these great men knew and understood about God; especially since they coined the religion doctrines that have not only come down to us but have been altered as well. It is time to find out if we truly be in the first Monothesistic Faith of the world...the faith of Egypt.

ABRAHAM WAS A SHEPHERD.....OR WAS HE?

We saw in an earlier article a very interesting quote by Josephus concerning Abraham. Let us refresh our memory a little bit.

Pharaoh Necho, king of Egypt at the time, descended on this land with an immense army and seized Sarah the Princess, mother of our nation. And what did our forefather Abraham do? Did he avenge the insult by force of arms? Yet he had three hundred and eighteen officers under him, with unlimited manpower at his disposal!

To the average Christian, Muslim, or Jewish person such a quote about Abraham is diametrically opposed to the Biblical depiction of Abraham as a simple shephered. It would seem that Josephus knew considerably more about Abraham than what the few chapters in the Book of Genesis record for us. Of course this is because, as detailed in an earlier article, Ezra made sure to write out of the Biblical record all traces of the Egyptian heritage of the Jewish people and this included the truth about Abraham as well. If we take Josephus and his quote seriously then without a doubt we are confronted with a picture of Abraham not as a mere shepherd but a man of immense power and money; especially in light of the financial obligation to feed and maintan an army of men who served under 318 officers.

This picture of Abraham given to us by Josephus is staggering to the mind but this is only because we have grown so used to the orthodox ecclesiastical creed concerning Abraham that we have forgotten that the Biblical Abraham was in fact a very powerful man.

If I indicated that biblical Abraham was a pharaoh of Egypt, would it appear to be an utterly absurd figment of a deranged mind? Initially that may seem so, but this is only because we have grown so used to the orthodox ecclesiastical creed that we have forgotten that the Biblical Abraham was in fact a very powerful man. Three hundred and eighteen officers and not just plain men under Abraham's command easily leads us to envision an army possibly running into the tens of thousands. In this case, the image I have portrayed above is not quite so absurd.

Answer for yourself: In the days and time in which Abraham lived how many nations in this era would have such a powerful army?

This simple observation overturns the whole of modern theology which finds its origin with the man called Abraham.

Answer for yourself: Has the clery and trascribers of the Bible following the release of the Jewish nation from Persian captivity purposely obscured the truth concering Abraham?

Answer for yourself: What is the truth about Abraham being a shepherd?

SHEPHERDS

Answer for yourself: But if the biblical family were really Pharaohs of Egypt then are there any hints in the Biblical records we have today that can shed light upon this fact of history that is so well cloaked in secrecy?

Well it is there by hidden as we shall now see but first of all the precise era, age, and time to study and look for these clues to the identity of Abraham needs to be decided and the clue to this actually comes from the Bible itself. You only need to know a few "keys" to find it.

The patriarchs in the Bible are known as being shepherds, as I have just indicated, in fact the Bible is quite specific about this point.

Gen 46:31-34 31 And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, I will go up, and shew Pharaoh, and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house, which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me; 32 And the men are shepherds, for their trade hath been to feed cattle; and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have. 33 And it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What is your occupation? 34 That ye shall say, Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we, and also our fathers: that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen; for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians. (KJV)

This point is not just interesting, it is fundamental to understanding what the Bible is trying to tell us. For it just so happens that a whole dynasty of pharaohs were known as shepherds!

THE SHEPHERD KINGS OF EGYPT

These "shepherds" were the Pharaohs who, in the historical record, had 'invaded' northern Egypt during the 14th to 16th dynasties and these peoples were known as the Hyksos, a term which translates as 'Shepherd King'. They are called the Hyskos and would later become the foundation for what we call Judaism today.

The Bible has already mentioned about Abraham:

Gen 17:6 6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. (KJV) Gen 17:6-7 6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. 7 And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee. (KJV)

Take just a moment to catch your breath as it dawns upon you that the "kings" prophesied that come out of the loins of Abraham were subsequent Pharoahs and in particular the line of Shepherd Kings of Lower Egypt of the 14th and 16th dynasties.

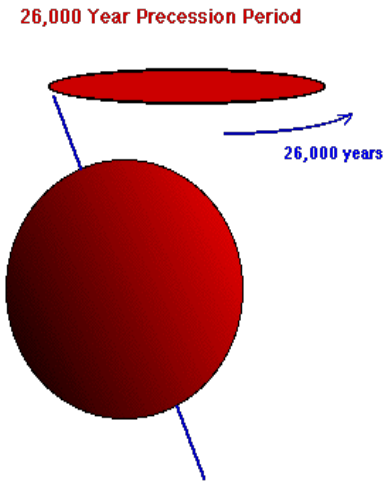
The historical record tells us that some of the pharaohs of northern Egypt were called Shepherd Kings.

I have found that when studying the Bible we often have serious problems to contend with. For example, we have the real history provided for us by the archaeologists and then there is the theological history of the Bible, Koran and Torah - yet it seems at times that the two records are mutually exclusive. Nothing in the theological record really ties in with the historical one, it is almost as if the biblical story occurred on another planet! Nothing could be further from the truth, in reality the Bible and the historical record continuously merge into one - if one knows how to interpret what is being said.

Answer for yourself: The key to this entire puzzle is for us the term "shepherd", for why should an Egyptian

Pharaoh hate sheep and others Pharoahs want to be know by this hated term of "shepherd? Was "cattle" and "shepherds" code words used in the Bible depicting something on a much bigger scale than just animals? We are missing something in the texts that is of major importance.

The answer lay in the Egyptian records and their fascination with astrology, because the term "shepherd" has a stellar reference in that these "shepherd" kings were being compared to the constellation of Aries. With this concept the Bible suddenly started to release its long hidden secrets: for there are numerous references to sheep and cattle in the Bible and although the subject matter fitted the quaint pastoral image being plied by the clergy, none of them made any literal sense. But suitably translated, with the sheep becoming symbolic for the constellation of Aries (or their followers) and the cattle being symbolic for the constellation Taurus (and their followers), everything fitted into place.



Most likely the average reader has little or no background in astrology or astronomy. As has been alluded to in previous books, the constellations move slowly through space with the millennia and each era has a ruling constellation, the current one being Pisces. But back in the 13th 14th dynasty, they were on the tip of a change in the constellations, between Taurus and Aries.

Answer for yourself: Could the terms used in the Biblical for "cattle" refer to Taurus (bull) and "shepherd" refer to "Aries" (ram/lamb) by any chance? Is this a disguise for what really happened in Egypt that involved the Pharoahs of Upper and Lower Egypt and their religious civil war that would involve Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and even Moses (Pharoah Akhenaton)? Is the Exodus related to this religious civil war that involved the stars? Is this the first "Star Wars?"

This change in the constellations is called the Precession of the Equinoxes. We need to explain somewhat before we go on.

PRECESSION OF THE EQUINOX

The Earth's rotation axis is not fixed in space. Like a rotating toy top, the direction of the rotation axis executes a slow precession with period of 26,000 years for the entire ecliptic of our planetary bodies to travel around our sun, a trip of 360 degrees. Each one of the 12 signs of the zodiac takes about 2100 years for our solar system to pass through. Every 72 years we actually move backward 1 degree. After 2100 years we move out of one age and into another and a different constellation become the backdrop of the Sun. The twelve constellations of the Zodiac, that were painstakingly researched by the Egyptian, Greek, Hindu, Persian, Chaldean, Hebrew, and Chinese astronomers, create an imaginary belt in the heavens. The Zodiacal circle formed by these constellations is close to being aligned with our celestial equator. When the sun's plane crosses the equator on the first day of spring, we could ask ourselves which of the twelve constellations is out behind our brilliant sun. For our purpose we need to focus our attention on Taurus being behind the sun for 2100 years and then as this constellation began to move out from behind the sun in the heavens, from the earth's perspective, Aires was replacing it. As you might begin to imagine Egypt had a real religious problem on their hands since their religion was based at the time of Abraham upon Taurus (bulls) and not Aires (rams/lambs-shepherds).

The precession is like a star clock that helps us date the rotations of earth in our solar system through our galaxy. We find that Abraham emerges in the Biblical record at the time where the constellation of Aires was surplanting the constellation of Taurus as the ruling constellation and Egypt and their whole religion, which had been built upon emphasis upon Taurus as the ruling constellation, was in a state of chaos. We find historically in Egypt Pharoahs and Priesthoods that wished to remain with a Taurus centered religion and others who wished to change it since Airies was now the ruling constellation.

The era of Taurus lasted until about 1800 BC, when Aries came into ascendance, this date is not only very close to both the era of the first Hyksos pharaohs and the arrival of Abraham in the Bible, but this change in the constellations caused a social and religios rift between the Apis Bull worshippers in Thebes (the Taureans) and the Hyksos Shepherd pharaohs in the north (the Arians). The country was divided, there was civil war - just as the historical records indicate.

WHERE IS THE EVIDNECE OF SUCH A RELIGIOUS CIVIL WAR? TRY THE EXODUS

The Bible has direct evidence that shows this to be true and in addition the following quote seems to be a verbatim conversation that has been preserved for some 3,500 years. The scene is set by the 3rd century BC Egyptian historian Manetho, who indicates (as does the Bible) that there were actually two exoduses from Egypt - one being a major migration and the other a much smaller exodus of priests. After the first exodus, the patriarch Joseph (he with the coat of many colours, ie a priests stole) goes back to Egypt and rises to become the most powerful man in Egypt, save from the pharaoh himself. Joseph asks his family to join him in Egypt, but he has a warning for them.

Gen 46:31-34 31 And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, I will go up, and shew Pharaoh, and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house, which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me; 32 And the men are shepherds, for their trade hath been to feed cattle; and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have. 33 And it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What is your occupation? 34 That ye shall say, Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we, and also our fathers: that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen; for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What did Joseph really mean when he said that "every shephered is an abomination unto the Egyptians?"

Answer for yourself: It is not as if the Egyptians had any prohibitions on the eating of sheep meat, so why was the pharaoh so interested in the occupation of the brothers and why was the lowly but honourable profession of shepherd so despised?

The solution is simple, a couple of words have been altered by the scribes to give the conversation an agricultural bias, but in truth they were discussing the most important topic in Egypt - religion. Replacing the words with their original astrological counterparts, the full import of the statement becomes dramatically clear.

Let me paraphrase what Joseph actually meant that is obscured by Ezra in his re-writing of the history of the Jewish nation.

You are Hyksos/Arians (ram-lamb) as you know, and your duty is to convert the followers of Taurus ... and change them from a Taurus based (bull) religion to an Aires based religion (ram-lamb). And it shall come to pass that pharaoh will call you, and shall say what is your religion. You must say in return that your religion has been Taurean (cattle) from our youth even until now, both we and also our Fathers. Otherwise you will not be allowed to stay in the land of Egypt, for we Hyksos/Arians/Shepherds (Aires-ram-lamb) are an abomination to the Egyptians.

Suddenly it becomes dramatically obvious why the Egyptians thought that shepherds were an abomination. This was not a reference to a profession, but to a religion and an entire nation - the Hyksos who had invaded Egypt and were now trying to change the religion of Egypt. Egypt had just been through a bitter and bloody civil war with these peoples, a war between southern and northern Egypt which resulted in the Exodus of the Hyksos peoples and the destruction of much of the northern delta lands. Of course the 'shepherds' were an abomination to the (southern) Egyptians - they were the Hyksos Shepherds!

Suddenly, when we factor in Egyptian history,the Bible makes sense. Luckily there is valid historical data to be found if we know what to look for. Coupled with this is the fact that Joseph was, by the admission of the Bible, the vizier to the pharaoh, the second most powerful man in the world. It is not a great extension of this biblical history to say that the other members of this important family were even more powerful, that they sat on the throne itself. We will see later how David and Solomon were Pharaohs themselves but thanks to Ezra and his redactionist history when he rewrote the Jewish History following the Persian release of the Jewish captives after their victory over Babylon, these facts of history have been lost to all but students with a most critical eye.

Further evidence that this is the correct interpretation to be placed upon the Old Testament writings is provided by the later works in the New Testament. Jesus, who was descended from the same family as the patriarchs, was born as a Lamb of God. In other words Jesus was of this same lineage and he was a young Shepherd (Hyksos) prince in exile. As Jesus matured to become a Shepherd, another momentous event was happening in the skies above; at just this precise era the constellation of Aries started to wane in the heavens and Pisces came into the ascendance. Accordingly Jesus changed his title according to the age-old tradition, the young shepherd became a Fisher of Men, a king of Pisces. The first of the Grail romance "Fisher Kings" had been crowned.

THE HYSKOS, THE CONSTELLATION TAURUS, & APIS BULLS

Egypt has been worshipping the sacred Apis Bull for millennia. Without some understanding of this many will approach the study of Egypt and quickly decide that Egyptians were just idolators. Nothing could be further from the case. As we saw in the prior article where we discussed the Precession of the Equinoxes the ruling constellation during the zenith of Egyptian religious history and pyramid building was the constellation Taurus. Owing that the sun was understood by Egyptian Priests to be a representation of the true Life-giver of the Cosmos, God, the accompaing constellation that provided the backdrop for the sun at its rising for 2100 years.

As we saw in an earlier article each one of the 12 signs of the zodiac takes about 2100 years for our solar system to pass through them. After 2100 years we move out of one age and into another and a different constellation becomes the backdrop of the Sun. The twelve constellations of the Zodiac, that were painstakingly researched by the Egyptian, Greek, Hindu, Persian, Chaldean, Hebrew, and Chinese astronomers, create an imaginary belt in the heavens and the sun passes through each one of them every 2100 years and a complete circuit through them all takes around 26,000 years. When the sun's plane crosses the equator on the first day of spring, a particular cnstellation is behind our brilliant sun. Our focus will be on Taurus in our studies of Egypt for obvious reasons. Since the constellation Taurus was the ruling constellation in Egypt during its zenith of pyramid buidling the concept and figure of the "bull" became of major importance to the Egyptian Priests and Egyptian religion. Thus, the Bull-god Apis was worshipped for thousands of years in Egypt. As the chief seat of learning, Memphis majored in the worship of Ptah, and the sacred Apis bull. Ptah, according to Egyptian belief, was "the Mind of the Universe," who created all gods and men by thinking them into existence. Artists, skilled craftsmen, and men of letters especially revered him. For Apis the Sacred Bull, a magnificent temple was constructed which was known as the "Cathedral' of Egypt. Spring was the time when festivals honouring the Apis-bulls were held. At this time in history, roughly around 4000 B.C., the Sun's position along the Zodiac on the first day of spring, or Vernal Equinox, was in that constellation we now recognize as Taurus, the Bull. So for many centuries Taurus was to be the first and most important constellation of the Zodiac in Egyptian thought and religion.

For our purpose we need to focus our attention on Taurus being behind the sun for 2100 years and then we will see that over 2100 years this constellation slowly began to move out from behind the sun in the heavens, from the earth's perspective. The constellation of Aires would be replacing it. As you might begin to imagine Egypt had a real religious problem on their hands since their religion was based at the time of Abraham upon Taurus (bulls) and not Aires (rams/lambs-shepherds). But Abraham, being a shepherd (Airies worshipper) will try to change all that.

The Apis was the most sacred of all the bull cults in Egypt and Apis Bull worship (constellation of Taurus) became assimilated into worship of both the gods Ptah and Osiris. There was only one physical Apis Bull at any one time and, upon its death, it was buried with great ceremony in the large underground vaults known as the Serapeum. Manetho says that Egypt had been worshipping the bull since the second dynasty, but other sources indicate that this worship was even older, predating dynastic Egypt. That would date the cult back to 3500 BC; in other words, Egypt had worshipped the Apis Bull for more than 2,000 years (British Museum Dictionary Of Egypt, J. Shaw).

From the cosmological point of view, worshipping the Apis Bull stemmed directly from the rising of the Sun and the stellar constellations. In many recent books, it has been argued that the constellation that rises with the Sun at the spring equinox has been known as the ruling constellation (Orion Mystery, R. Bauval, Fingerprints Of The Gods, A. Gilbert).

That may sound complicated, but it is not really. As the Sun rises into the sky each morning, a certain group of stars will rise with it, although the intensity of the Sun will drown out the faint stars very quickly.

The established date for looking at this phenomena is the Spring Equinox, or March 23rd. In our current era, the rising constellation on March 23rd is Pisces and very soon it will become Aquarius. It is because of this movement in the stars, that our era is sometimes known as the "Dawn of the age of Aquarius". However, for much of dynastic Egypt, that ruling constellation was not Pisces, not Aries, but Taurus, the Bull. Hence, the veneration of the Apis Bulls throughout the first half of dynastic Egypt and also, no doubt, in the ancient Minoan civilization. This cult has stagnated in some outlying regions, where the true purpose of this worship was unknown, thus the bull is still venerated in modern Spain and India. In Egypt, the Apis Bull cult was represented by a bull with the sun-disk between its horns - the Sun was seen to be rising and setting in the sky whilst superimposed upon the outline of the constellation of Taurus, the Bull.

But the stars are not static in the sky because the Earth wobbles and this small wobble causes the rising constellation slowly to change. The constellations slowly drift around the sky, completing one circuit of the Earth every 26,000 years or so.

THE CRISIS IN EGYPTIAN RELIGION

This as we saw earlier is called the Precession of the Equinoxes. Egyptian priests were well trained and very patient. Eventually they Egyptian priests, who were astrologers and astronomers, became aware that Taurus was slowly drifting away from the rising Sun at springtime - a new age was dawning. A momentous event in the theology of Egypt was about to unfold: finally the priests declared that the era of Taurus the Bull was over, the constellation of Aries was now the stars rising with the Sun. The era of Aries, the Ram, had begun.

Unfortunately for Egyptian religion, Taurus is physically a big constellation and so its rising in the spring equinox had continued from 4500 BC to 1850 BC. During this vast length of time, the people had grown used to their Apis Bulls and they were not about to change their entire religion for the sake of a few priests and their incomprehensible predictions. In addition, the priesthood that had been patiently observing the skies for thousands of years was based in Heliopolis. This city was one of the most important cult centers in ancient Egypt, dedicated to the worship of the Sun (or more fully, perhaps, the cosmos), and it lies on the Nile Delta, in Lower Egypt near the Giza pyramids. While it remained a very important and influential religious center throughout Egyptian history, by this time, Heliopolis was no longer the sole source of theological learning. In Thebes, in Upper Egypt, a new center of learning had emerged and they had different ideas in the south.

Try to imagine the turmoil that the priests of Heliopolis had started with their proclamation and the size of the Pandora's box that they had just opened. The people had been worshipping the Apis Bull for 2,600 years, that is nearly as long as the Jews have been Jewish, and suddenly some religious authority says that everything they believed in must change.

Imagine how you would feel. You go to church for all your life and then the spiritual leader comes out and makes the announcement: "I don't want to upset you but everything you have been taught about God and His message to you in the Heavens is now changed. I know you have had a bull-based understanding of God and we have been worshiping God with the images of bulls but now we are changing to sheep."

As we saw in an earlier article religion has always had two messages: one for the priesthoods and one for the people. Now Egypt was at a cross roads. There were some who wanted to change the very foundation of Egyptian religion and their understanding and worship of God and there were the old hard-liners who would not have anything to do with such a change. Civil and religious war was on the horizon and so was the Exodus and the Hyskos, Abraham and the Biblical patriarchs, or should I say Pharaohs, were right in the middle of it!

CHRONOLOGY OF THE 18TH DYNASTY OF EGYPT

In a previous article I mentioned that the Old Testament chronology was not in agreement with the Egyptian records and King lists. This is very confusing for the student having have been strongly indoctrinated with the conventional Judeo-Christian theology and chronology that that reflects that the Biblical Patriarchs were "Jewish" when new light thrown upon the subject by Egyptian archeology is turning such ideas on their heads.

Our study focuses upon the tumultuous events that comprise the 18th Dynasty of Egypt and it is my hopes that the accompanying article will help sort out and clarify in the minds of the reader the truth about not only the historical identities of these Patriarchs but also allow us to see them in succession and how their lives fit into the overall Biblical historical record. By seeing this for yourself it will help you make the necessary associations between "key" Biblical personages both as to not only whom they truly were but the times in which they lived and interacted together.

Let us begin by outlining the 18th Dynasty and King List. The following list takes into account "co-regencies" where there is overlap during various reigns of these Kings and Pharaohs.

- Ahmosis.....1575-1550 B.C.E.
- Amenhotep I.....1550-1528 B.C.E.
- Tuthmose I.....1528...1510 B.C.E.
- Tuthmose II.....1510-1490 B.C.E.
- Hatshepsut.....1490-1468 B.C.E.
- Tuthmose III.....1490-1436 B.C.E. (The Biblical King David-Contemporary with Abram and Sarah)
 - The Birth of Isaac....Son Of The Pharaoh Tuthmose III...the Biblical King David
 - The Birth of Amenhotep III...the Biblical King Solomon...son of the Biblical King David
- Amenhotep II.....1436-1413 B.C.E.
- Tuthmose IV.....1413-1405 B.C.E.
 - Joseph enters Egypt and becomes the vizer (second in command to Pharaoh Tuthmose IV (1413-1405 B.C.E.) [The blood line from Isaac and his father Tuthmose III re-enters Egypt]
- Amenhotep III....1405-1367 B.C.E. (The Biblical King Solomon)
 - Joseph was also vizer for the succeeding Pharaoh Amenhotep III (1405-1367 B.C.E)...the Biblical Solomon)
 - Joseph's daughter (Tiye) marries Amenhotep III.....has two sons...Amenhotep IV...Akhenaten...the Biblical Moses & Semenkhkare
- Amenhotep IV.....1367-1361 B.C.E. (Pharaoh Akhenaten...The Biblical Moses)
- Semenkhkare.....1361-1361 B.C.E.
- Tutankhamun.....1361-1352 B.C.E. (Son of the Biblical Moses...Akhenaten)
- Aye.....1352-1348 B.C.E.
- Horemheb.....1348-1335 B.C.E.

Let us not forget what we learned in earlier articles; namely, that King David's wars accounts match precisely with those of King Tuthmose III (1490-1436 B.C.E.) which we find inscribed on the wall of the Temple of Luxor and that the life of King Solomon and lack of wars match precisely with those of King Amenhotep III (1436-1413 B.C.E.). The pieces of this puzzle are coming together the more we study and sort out the true identities of these "Biblical Patriarchs".

19th Dynasty

- Ramses I.....1335-1333 B.C.E.
- Seti.....1333-1304 B.C.E.
- Ramses II..... 1304-1237 B.C.E.
- Merenptah.....1237-1227 B.C.E.

These dates are given here to be helpful to the reader in helping get the proper perspective in order to understand the events that transpire in the Old Testament. It is very helpful to learn right now that instead of trying to fit Egypt into the Bible that the correct approach is fitting the Bible into Egyptian history. Then we have the truth as you will come to see the more you study this material.

400 YEARS OR 4 GENERATIONS...HOW LONG WAS THE SOJOURN OF ISRAEL IN EGYPT?

For two thousand years, there has been, and still is, an on-going debate over the sources of the Old Testament. When one undertakes such a study he is immediately besieged by a host of questions from his reading into such a topic:

- How many different sources are used in the composition of the Old Testament?
- When was each of these different sources written?
- Who were the actual authors of such varying sources?
- How many evidences of editing and tampering can be found in these sources?
- Does the Bible describe actual historical events?

The questions are almost endless to one who considers himself a seeker of truth. What you find when you begin to do some reading in archeology is that the Biblical dates and ages depicted in the texts are so badly off from the archeological record that no rational person can take many of these Biblical dates seriously. God created the world, according to the Bible chronology, in 4004 B.C.E. However, we know from other evidence that the earth was already inhabited in 4004 B.C.E.; in fact the Sphinx has recently been dated to having existed at least 13,000 B.C.E. The ages of many biblical characters are unbelievable and many novel explanations have come forth trying to explain them. The explanation that they may have attached a different meaning than we do to the word "year", does not explain errors in biblical chronology. For example, we are told that Terah, Joseph's great-great-grandfather, was seventy when his son, Abram, was born. Terah, we are later told, died at the age of two hundred and five. Astonishingly, a few biblical verses later we learn that Abram was seventy-five when his father died, when according to biblical calculations, Abram should have been one hundred and twenty-five years old and not seventy-five. I always hated math! Something is wrong here and we so often read over such passages never taking the time to see if there are mistakes and this one only highlights the fact that there are other "mistakes" in this revelation we have received which is called the Old Testament that escapes the eyes of most.

But it is not just the "math" that is so often wrong. Because of its long oral tradition, biblical narration often confuses the names of places and people as well as the chronology of events. Scholars teach us, if you read them, that when one give a careful examination to many Old Testament texts, a rational conclusion could be drawn that many of these events took place chronologically in a different order to that described in the biblical account. In other words we have a very confused chronology and that is nowhere demonstrated more graphically than when we get to the Patriarchs which we find upon study are often Egyptian Pharaohs "made to be Jews" by the writers of the Biblical texts. I direct you to our articles onKing David and King Solomon for evidence to prove this point.

Answer for yourself: How could this be? How could the identities of such great men be covered to such a degree that they are not even mentioned in the context of the nation in which they really lived? How could a Pharaoh be made out to be a "Jew" when in fact he was not? Is there an agenda at work here by the writers of the Old Testament texts?

There can be several reasons for the above confused chronology and mistaken identities. In reading the Old Testament and particularly the five books of the Pentateuch, one should consider the following facts:

- These stories were transferred by word of mouth over several centuries, before they were written down. It is inevitable to end up with distorted stories as a result of this long oral tradition.
- Upon writing the stories, the priests and the editors made their own "contribution" to the text that we have now.
- Translators have altered portions of the texts so as to comply with their *"standard of morality".
- Translation is difficult. One Hebrew word may need a dozen English words to explain its exact meaning.

Of course we are all aware that ancient tradition ascribed the authorship of the Pentateuch to Moses. There are about two dozen verses in the Hebrew Scriptures and one dozen in the Christian Scriptures which state or strongly imply that Moses was the author.

- Exodus 17:14 "Then the Lord instructed Moses, 'Write this down as a permanent record...'"
- Exodus 24:4 "Then Moses carefully wrote down all the Lord's instructions."
- Exodus 34:27 "And the Lord said to Moses, 'Write down all these instructions, for they represents the terms of my covenant with you and with Israel.'"
- Leviticus 1:1 "The Lord called to Moses from the Tabernacle and said to him, 'Give the following instructions to the Israelites...'"
- Leviticus 6:8 "Then the Lord said to Moses, 'Give Aaron and his sons the following instructions...'"
- Deuteronomy 31:9 "So Moses wrote down this law and gave it to the priests."
- Deuteronomy 31:24-26 "When Moses had finished writing down this entire body of law in a book..."
- Joshua 1:7-8 "...Obey all the laws Moses gave you."
- Joshua 8:31-34 "He followed the instructions that Moses the Lord's servant had written in the Book of the Law..."
- Joshua 22:5 "...obey all the commands and the laws that Moses gave to you."
- 2 Chronicles 34:14 "...Hilkiah the high priest...found the book of the Law of the Lord as it had been given through Moses."

But nowhere in the Bible is it specifically stated that Moses wrote the entire Pentateuch. Even if one believes in the inerrancy of the Bible, a case can be made that he authored only parts of the Torah, and that other writers added sections of their own and/or edited the resultant text.

BELIEF OF MAINLINE AND LIBERAL THEOLOGIANS

The view that Moses composed the Pentateuch - the first five books of the Old Testament - from composite sources, which had been transmitted over several centuries, is no longer a valid opinion among the biblical scholars.

The Pentateuch includes the account of Moses' death. it is naturally impossible that Moses could have written about his own death. Therefore, it is logical to conclude that the writing of the Pentateuch took place long after Moses' death. Moses is described as going to the Tabernacle in a passage where the Tabernacle had not yet been built. There are many verses in the Torah that state that something has lasted "to this day". That appears to have been written by a writer who composed the passages at a much later date. Deuteronomy 34:10 states "There has never been another prophet like Moses...". This sounds like a passage written long after Moses' death.

Answer for yourself: What does these few examples above mean? Simply it means that the Pentateuch is essentially composed from the following five sources:

- A Jehovistic source, dating from the 9th century BCE. [J: a writer who used JHWH as the "unpronounceable name of God." It is often translated as Jehovah]
- An Elohistic document, dating from the 8th century BCE. [E: a writer who used Elohim as the divine name]
- The book of Deuteronomy, to be considered as a separate source, dating from the 7th century BCE. [D: the author of the book of Deuteronomy]
- A priestly source, dating from about the 5th century BCE. [P: a writer who added material of major interest to the priesthood].
- The work of an editor who revised and edited the entire collection around the 2nd century BCE. [R: a redactor who shaped the contributions of J, E, P and D together into the present Pentateuch]

The above is the accepted understanding prevalent today as to how we received the Old Testament texts and explains this convoluted chronology and concealing of the real identities of the Partriarchs of which I spoke above.

THE HEBREW & GREEK TEXTS OF THE BIBLE

Our standard translations of the Old Testament are based on the Massoretic Hebrew text, which came into existence in the 9th or 10th centuries C.E. This text was originated in the 2nd century C.E. after a council had been assembled at Jamnia, a small town near Jaffa, in 70 CE. At Jamnia the council agreed to the form and content of the Old Testament.

Hebrew, like hieroglyphics and other Semitic languages, does not have any written vowels. The true pronunciation and interpretation of the texts were accomplished by a body of Jewish scholars, who formulated a standard pronunciation of the Massorah (tradition of measure), between the 7th and 10th centuries CE.

The Hebrew Massoretic text is not the only Canon we have for the Old Testament. The Greek text of Alexandria is even older.

In a letter written by an unknown author about 100 BCE, Ptolemy II, the King of Egypt (285-247 BCE), ordered a Greek translation of the Bible. As the legend goes the High Priest of Jerusalem sent seventy-two elders to Alexandria, six scholars from each of the twelve tribes of Israel, together with an official copy of the Pentateuch. They worked for 72 days to produce the final copy of the Pentateuch in Greek. Later, the other books of the Old Testament were also translated into Greek by other scholars and the whole work became known as the Septuagint, which means "The Seventy". This story is but a fantasy as the historical record attests today but you get the point. Not only that this Greek translation, often called "the world's worst translated book" disagrees dramatically in "key" places with the prior Hebrew. So we end up with a mess of conflicting garbled accounts which are at best a "shadow" of the real that these texts profess to reveal; texts in both the Hebrew and Greek who are unreliable in many regards. It is now that the "thinking" believer must consult "extra-Biblical" records to help sort out this tangled web of confused accounts which are often jumbled in the history of this "holy book". This Greek text was adopted as the Bible of the early Church, but was abandoned later in favor of the Hebrew Massoretic text which ironically does not agree with the Massoretic texts of the Jewish people. The confusion is endless and for me and others we find that other disciplines like "extra-Biblical" historical records and archeology must be consulted to both "confirm" and "correct" the good book if we are ever to make sense of it and get to the truth behind the stories we have inherited.

THE BIBLICAL AND ANCIENT ENCOUNTERS BETWEEN EGYPT AND ISRAEL

There is no doubt that there are serious problems with the chronology of many events in the Bible. We have touched on some of the reasons for this above but it is time we focus on some others. Problem in Old Testament chronology, for example, came about as a result of the many narrators and editors working along the span of centuries, as well as the bad blood between the Jews and Egypt, after the Exodus. When you get to the truth behind the Exodus and see that the real reason for the Exodus was different understandings of God among Egyptians (Priesthoods and reigning Pharaohs...in particular a Hebrew Pharaoh names Akhenaten) then this becomes crystal clear. The encounters between the Israelites and ancient Egypt can be divided into three eras:

Pre Sojourn in Egypt

As we all know Abram and Sarai came down into Egypt for a period of time. Upon Abram and Sarai's return from Egypt to Canaan (present-day Israeli Lebanon), major changes began to occur to their small tribe. The Bible tells us that the Lord told Abram,

Gen 15:13 13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years; (KJV)

But...the Bible also says:

Gen 15:16 16 But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: So what is it? Is it 400 years or 4 generations?

One cannot underestimate the importance of determining the correct time for the sojourn of Israel (400 years or 4 generations) and determining the true identities of the characters we read about in the Old Testament let alone the Exodus. Many scholars today say they cannot find any evidence for the Exodus but that is simply because they follow the traditional Judeo-Christian tradition of 400 years instead of 4 generations. They are looking for the Exodus in a time period some 400 years off from its actual event. If one looks closely at these texts and dates this Exodus to 4 generations then we find plenty of evidence for this Exodus in Egyptian history.

God also made a covenant with Abram, saying,

Gen 15:18 18 In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates: (KJV)

Sarah gave birth to Isaac who was not allowed to go to Egypt.

Isaac begat Jacob in Canaan.

Jacob begat Joseph.

Answer for yourself: When in history did the "seed" of Abram and Sarah inherit this land from the Nile to the Euphrates? And what is this land? It is Egypt.

What we find when we get into this study and examination of the evidence from the ancient Egyptian history is that:

Tuthmose III was the Pharaoh in the Abraham and Sarah story and that Tuthmose III and the biblical King David are one and the same.

Israelites' Sojourn in Egypt

Joseph's half brothers sold him as a slave, in Egypt. He later became the second in command to the Pharaoh. The Pharaoh allowed Joseph to bring his family to Egypt. Jacob (Joseph's father) who was also known as Israel, took his tribal family of seventy to settle in Goshen, east of the tile delta.

Answer for yourself: When did the Israelites enter Egypt and how long did they remain there before the Exodus?

It is generally accepted that they were in Egypt at the end of the 18th Dynasty, and into the Nineteenth (c. 1308 BCE). Scholars will disagree on when they arrived and when they departed. The Old Testament does not provide any dates, or the name of the Pharaoh's capital city at the time, or the name of the Pharaoh, referring to him only as "Pharaoh", "King" or "Pharaoh, King of Egypt!"

So what we find involved with the above events is that the Old Testament gives two contradictory accounts about the length of time the Israelites spent in Egypt:

Duration of 430 years:

Exod 12:40 40 Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years. (KJV)

Duration of four generations:

The warning to Abraham

Gen 15:13 13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years; (KJV)

Gen 15:16 16 But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: So what is it? Is it 430 years or 4 generations? The duration of four generations, and not 430 years, is the correct duration for the following reasons:

The Hebrew says: "wa dor rabi'i yashwbw hena"

That being so then the exact translation of this Hebrew verse is: "And the fourth (dor) return they here." Grammatically "the fourth dor" is the subject of the verb. Therefore, 'dor' can only mean "generation". The word "dor" was never used to mean a hundred-year cycle in Hebrew or Assyrian. or Ugaritic texts.

What confirms the biblical word "dor" to mean "a generation" is the fact that the Pentateuch names only four generations between the time of the Descent into Egypt and the Exodus.

THE RECORD OF THE TALMUD

The Talmud does not agree with 430 years either as the length of the Israelites' sojourn in Egypt; "And the children of Israel journeyed from Raamses to Succoth. two hundred and ten years after their entrance into Egypt, the Israelites departed therefrom, six hundred thousand men, with wives and children."

The evidence from the ancient Egyptian history show us:

- Joseph entered Egypt and became the vizier (second in command) to Pharaoh Tuthmose IV (1413-1405 BCE.) and was the vizier for the succeeding Pharaoh, Amenhotep III (1405-1367 BCE).
- Joseph's daughter, Tiye, was married to Amenhotep III. Tiye gave birth to Akhenaton (the Biblical Moses) and Semenkhkare.
- Akhenaton begat Tutankhamen.

Answer for yourself: So when we put all this together what do we get once we know the truth of the matter is "four generations" and not "4 hundred years"?

- The four generations of the Sojourn are actually
 - Joseph
 - Tiye
 - Akhenaton (to be identified later as the biblical Moses)
 - Tutankhamen (the crucified savior...the prototype for the later "historical Joshua/Jesus"...more on that later)
- Amenhotep III and the biblical King Solomon are one and the same.

THE EXODUS AND THE PROMISED LAND

A short summary for later study is needed now as we close. Egyptian history show us that Moses (Akhenaton) would later live in exile in Sinai for several years and went back to Egypt to challenge the authority of the self-appointed Pharaoh. He was allowed to leave with the Israelites (his followers, followers of the Aten) from Egypt in what is known as the Exodus. After wandering in the desert, Moses died and the Israelites settled in their promised land. This land had been previously ruled by King David (Tuthmose III) whose empire extended from the Nile to the Euphrates. This King David (Tuthmose III) begat Solomon (Amenhotep III), who sat on his father's throne after his death. The new Israelite Kingdom vanished after Solomon's death as quickly as it was created by King David.

Now we have not finished the story but the historical evidence from ancient Egypt when studied reveals some very interesting facts:

- The biblical Moses was killed by King Seti I (1333-1304 B.C.E.) and the Israelites wandered the desert for forty years before settling in Canaan.
- The occupation of Canaan was a gradual process, as also confirmed in the Book of Judges.

When we study all of this we find amazing things that defy our traditional Judeo-Christian understanding. Amazingly King David's war accounts match precisely with those of King Tuthmose III (1490-1436 BCE). King Solomon's life and lack of wars match precisely with those of King Amenhotep III (1436-1413 BCE). Interesting for our study however is the fact of "4 generations" and not 400 years for the Israelite Sojourn which helps us identify these characters from Egyptian history that surround the Exodus event. All that remains for us is to understand "why" the Exodus happened in the first place and we get to that shortly.

WERE THERE HEBREW PHARAOHS OF EGYPT?

Over the many years of my study into the "Jewish Roots" of Christianity I kept finding that almost all roads of investigation led eventually to Egypt. Let me give you some examples:

We are more than likely familiar with the following Psalm

"How many are your works, O LORD! In wisdom you made them all; the earth is full of your creatures." - Psalm 104:24

Answer for yourself: But are you aware that we find in Egypt the following Psalm?

"How manifold are thy works! They are hidden before men Oh sole God, beside whom there is no other. Thou didst create earth according to thy heart." -Amenhotep IV (Akhenaton) from Rosicrucian Question and Answers, p. 55

This is not the only similarity I assure you. Now for something absolutely incredible. Egypt was familiar with "the Word of God" long before there were ever a Jewish people. "The idea of messages materializing out of marks on stone amazed ordinary people and the scribes who could make 'stone talk' were considered to be holders of great magic. This is easily appreciated when one realizes that the Egyptians called hieroglyphics 'the Words of the God', a term that would often be repeated throughout the Bible." - Christopher Knight & Robert Lomas, The Hiram Key: Pharaohs, Freemasons and the Discovery of the Secret Scrolls of Jesus.

The more I began to study Egypt the more my eyes were opened to the Egyptian influence upon the later Jewish nation and the ever evolving Judeo-Christianity that we are familiar with today. Everyone knows that Egypt existed long before the Abraham of the Bible and his family. This make my following discovery all the more significant for the Egyptian religious influence upon Abraham and the Jewish nation is undeniable.

Five of the Ten Commandments which would be later delivered from Mount Sinai to Moses can be found in the ancient Egyptian Book of the Dead.

"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain....Thou shalt not kill. Thou shalt not commit adultery...Thou shalt not bear false witness against they neighbor..." - Exodus 20: 7-16

But look at this:

'Not have I despised god...Not have I killed...Not have I fornicated...Not have I despoiled the thing of the god...not have I defiled the wife of a man...Not have I cursed god...Not have I borne false witness'. - Egyptian Book of the Dead

"...Chapter CXXV of the ancient Egyptian Book of the Dead...consisted on a series of negative confessions that the soul of the deceased was obliged to make before Thoth in his capacity as divine judge and scribe. A rubric to one part of the Book of the Dead...stated: This chapter (the expression of negative commandments and laws similar to the later Jewish Torah) was found on an alabaster brick, under the feet of the Majesty of this venerable place, the God Thoth, and it was written by the God himself'...The Ark of the Covenant (which contained similar laws and commandments) had frequently been referred to in the Bible as the 'footstool of God' (e.g. I Chronicles 28:2) and...it contained the stone Tablets of the Law written by Yahweh's own finger." - Graham Hancock, The Sign and the Seal.

Answer for yourself: Is this just a coincidence? Could the Ark of the Covenant be a copy from Egyptian religion? In fact if you study you find that it is.

You are beginning to see as I did that the more one studies the more one sees that there is a "hidden link" between the Jewish race and Egypt that lays beneath the conventional accounts of the Bible and the Judeo-Christian faith. It would take me several years to find these "links" and put the whole puzzle together regarding the hidden relationship between Egypt and the Hebrews which lays hidden both in history and the texts of the Old Testament. It would be during the 5 years of study devoted to Egypt that this information would come forth and I would find the true identity of the "Biblical Jews" which most Jews and African American people today are unaware. This is especially important for the Jewish nation for the Biblical Jews were black skinned and the children of Egypt. Today we have the proselytes from Europe and the Eastern Hemisphere which occupy the nation of Palestine while the "black Jew" is found in Africa and Ethiopia. This revelation and knowledge and implications to me was nothing short of astounding and you, the reader, will certainly agree if you continue to study the articles in this series.

My first class in Seminary that beginning summer of 1985 was a class devoted to the study of the Book of Proverbs. It was in that class that I learned that though Solomon's name is traditionally attached to the entire book, it is clear from 22:17; 24:23; 30:1 that unidentified wise men, as well as two who are identified as Agur and Lemuel, also shared in the composition of the book. There I discovered that there are three Solomonic collections in the book (1:1, 10:1, 25:1). Since Solomon authored most of the book, the attachment of his name to it is warranted by most Christian scholars. That of course is what I was taught by the good Baptist folks but that was before I began to study Egypt on my own and find that the Biblical Solomon is indeed a Pharaoh named Amenhotep III. This will be the beginning of my Exodus from Christianity ironically when I just began my Seminary training but I did not recognize it as of yet. That would come later when I would discover the "truth" behind the Religion I inherited.

I came to understand that Egyptian Proverbs were a very important part of the Ancient religion of Egypt, one of the main religious concepts the Egyptians had was "know thyself." Their spiritual aspect of this concept held that within man is the divine essence of the Creator and the Heavens. And this finds expression in their teaching: "The kingdom of heaven is within you; and whosoever shall know himself shall find it.". Proverbs were held as a teaching method for a man to understand the universe, thus they were inscribed in temples and tombs of Egypt, these inscriptions might be the first "Holy Book" known by man.

Before we close this introduction I wish to provoke your thinking a little. David and Solomon are portrayed in the Bible as two of the greatest kings of the ancient world.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that no trace of their empire has ever been found in Palestine? Let that sink in.

The David and Solomon eras are periods curiously missing from the archaeological record of the region where one should expect to find archeological evidence as to its existence! Quoting from the book, Archaeology of the Land of the Bible, "The Bible is the only written source concerning the United Monarchy, and it is therefore the basis of any historical presentation of the period" (Mazar, Archaeology of the Land of the Bible, 369). There is such a complete void of external sources that the archaeologist, author and leading authority on the era, Donald Redford, writes in frustration that "such topics as the foreign policy of David and Solomon, Solomon's trade in horses or his marriage to Pharaoh's daughter must remain themes for midrash and fictional treatment" (Redford, Egypt, Canaan, and Israel in Ancient Times, 310).

Answer for yourself: Don't you find it rather interesting and a matter of concern that archaeology has confirmed the reigns of all other great kings of the ancient world mentioned in the Bible, and some of the later, lesser kings of of Judah and Israel (namely, Omri, Ahab, Jehu, Pekah, Hosea, Ahaz, Hezekiah, Mannasseh, and Uzziah) but cannot confirm the Kingship of David or Solomon?

Of course when questioned about this inconsistency typical Christian and Jewish responses vary around the conservative response that it is only a matter of time before concrete evidence of the reigns of David and Solomon will be found as well.

I am here to inform the reader that such evidence does already exits but as you will find it won't be found in Palestine but in Egypt and in a different era. Concrete evidence for David and Solomon already exists, and comes from the very place one would least expect to find it; namely Egypt. Of course we don't find the names "David" or "Solomon" but we do find the same exploits described in the Hebrew texts accredited to Thutmose III and Amenhotep III. Now we will find that that neither this "King David" or "King Solomon" were Hebrews for they were Egyptian Pharoahs but the son of this "King Solomon/Amenhotep III" with the daugher of Joseph (Tiye) will have Hebrew blood in him. This son will later be Pharoah of Egypt and lead this great Exodus. We will see that in time.

You can now imagine how I was startled in Seminary when reading the Anchor Bible Commentary - Proverbs when they mentioned that these proverbs in the Hebrew Bible were believed to be attributed to Solomon whose real name was Amenhotep III of Egypt! That was the beginning of my "critical thinking" and no longer could I just "accept" what I had been told since being a child in my Christian Church. I had to have the truth I was determined to get it at all costs because I did not want to believe lies about God and my relationship with Him and if my religious literature was less than reliable then I would find out why and get to the bottom of it. This took me years but today I have plumed the depth of it and continue to study to seek out every elusive truths concerning the Creator which remain hidden in antiquity buried beneath the sands and time of Egypt.

The story of Egyptian religion and the hidden Egyptian influence upon Judaism and later Christianity is absolutely fascinating and challenging to the very core and it is to this uncovering of the Hebrew Pharaohs of Egypt that we now turn.

TRACING THE HEBREW PHARAOHS OF EGYPT...WHO IS THIS KING DAVID?

It did not take me long in Seminary to figure out that the Bible is basically a historical work which had become distorted as a result of its long oral tradition which and also to some extent at the hands of Biblical editors who eventually set it down in writing. Because of this long oral tradition which was both "forgotten" and "altered" down through history we are deprived today of important and necessary truths and facts concerning the identities and events that shaped the beginning of the Jewish nation let alone the subsequent development of Christianity.

The more I studied the more convinced I became of the alteration of key facts concerning not only the Patriarchs but their true identities as well. The more I read of the finds of modern archeology in the last two hundred years the more convinced I became that the identity of major figures in Egyptian history were disguised and depicted as major Jewish figures in the Bible. This was deception at its highest level and I had to get to the bottom of it and it would be a challenging but yet a very rewarding study to say the least. Let me get your feet wet for what is to come in the forthcoming articles.

Out study will be begin with the examination of King David and progress until we are centered on the very important 18th dynasty of Egypt. At the end of the 18th dynasty (after Hatshepsut and 4 other pharaohs) there reigned a strange pharaoh named Amenophis IV, who later called himself Akhenaten. Amenhotep IV was a pharaoh so revolutionary, so radical that those following him had his name which he changed to Akhenaten and face deleted from the Egyptian records so completely that only 3000 years later did archaeology rediscover his new royal capital at Akhet-Aten (modern el-Amarna). The story of Akhenaten is all through the first five books in the Jewish-Christian Bible but due to revisionism we don't recognize him. He is the Biblical Moses and I will present evidence to show that this is a fact. This amazing and courageous Pharaoh worshipped only one god whom he called Aten (the sun disk), and founded a new capital, Akhet-Aten (Horizon of Aten), today called Tell el Amarna. This period is called the Amarna period in Egyptian history. Countless books have been written about Akhenaten but few have put together key pieces of Egyptian and Biblical History together correctly as I hope to reveal to the reader. Of course the point of such study is to see the unbelievable knowledge that Egypt possessed about the God of the Cosmos and their unique and deep understanding of this God and his workings in the Cosmos and its ultimate meaning for mankind. At the same time we will focus upon the efforts of Akhenaton, the Biblical Moses, to bring a religious revolution to bear on his nation who had at his time fallen into the deception of the worship of the "God-man" Osiris which is so similar to the same sin of idolatry which is attached to the worship of the Christian God-man Jesus Christ. The startling ramifications of such a deception, both back then and now, will become evident the more we study. At the crux of this whole study is the growing understanding and revelation that if Moses, the Egyptian Akhenaton, lived today he would oppose such worship of the post-Nicean "God-man" Jesus created by Rome.

It did not take me long to recognize the more I studied Egyptian history and religion that there exists a unique link and relationship between Akhenaten's monotheism and Jewish monotheism that does not exist in Christianity. There had to be a link between the two and my efforts at continued in-depth study revealed to me in time this very important connection between the Egyptian Pharaohs and the Biblical Patriarchs and later Jewish leaders like King David and King Solomon which we will examine in these next articles.

Answer for yourself: Just what is this link and are major players and Pharaohs in Egyptian history depicted in our Christian Bibles under different names like King David, Solomon, etc? Could it be that Moses was a Pharaoh himself and what if any is the link with Joseph whom was sold into slavery and ended up in Egypt where he married the daughter of the Priest of On (Heliopolis)?

What we will find in examining Egyptian history and religion is that most have missed this link connecting major figures in the Bible with these major figures in Egyptian history. The error to which most has fallen is that they approach such studies trying to fit Egyptian history into the Bible rather than, as common sense would suggest, fit the Bible into Egyptian history. You need to stop and read that sentence once again. What we find upon study is that acceptance of the wrong date for the two dates given in the Old Testament for the length of the Israelite Sojourn in Egypt, four hundred years instead of four generations, will cause us to place incorrectly the events depicted in the Bible at the wrong time and the wrong place. For example this incorrect dating explains why there is no evidence for the Exodus at the time that traditional scholarship looks for Biblical Exodus. It simply occurred at a different time and a different place in Egyptian history and our failure to recognize this leaves us looking for evidence of its occurrence at the wrong time in the timeline of Biblical history. Truly this is a fascinating study to say the least and obtaining the knowledge long lost to this world concerning not only Egypt and their religion but the true identities of King David, Solomon, Moses, etc., as well as what they believed about God has important ramifications upon the Christian faith and their understanding of basic tenants of their faith let alone the "Messiah" today. It is to these issues we now turn as we begin our study with King David of the Bible. Get ready for your world to be rocked.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever wondered how we stumbled onto this knowledge of the existence of the Hebrew Pharaohs of Egypt? I suggest that we read this information before we continue out study into King David.

RECOVERING THE TRUE IDENTITY OF KING DAVID AND OTHER KEY BIBLICAL FIGURES...WERE THEY OBSCURED BY MISLEADING TEXTS?

Little did I ever think when beginning the study of the "Jewish Roots" of Christianity in the 1980's that I would find myself baptized in Egyptian religion but all roads seemed to lead there as my studies into discovering a "Jewish Jesus" expanded. Behind the Jewish people I first discovered this very important link with Egypt which goes concealed in the Hebrew Old Testament to all but a few with a discerning eye when reading the texts and studying the Jewish connection with Egypt. As I grew in my studies of the original Biblical languages as well as my growth in archeology and Jewish history Egypt kept recurring over and over again in my studies. Soon I found repeatedly references in my readings that began to link very important Biblical messianic figures like King David with Egypt and the dynasties of Pharaohs. At first I was bewildered for I thought that unlike the New Testament the texts of the Old Testament were relatively free from tampering as I had found extensively in the New Testament. But that was not the case as I was to discover as my studies continued to develop. Before we begin to look at the Biblical King David and find his true identity some things need to be said about how we lost this information about Thutmose III (King David) in the first place.

LOOKING AT THE TRANSMISSION OF THE BIBLICAL TEXTS & THE LOSS OF THE TRUTH

I was to find in my studies that the sacred books that make up the anthology modern scholars call the Hebrew Bible - and Christians call the Old Testament - developed over roughly a millennium; the oldest texts appear to come from the eleventh or tenth centuries BCE. The Hebrew Bible, written over a period of more than 500 years, consists of many types of literature and reflects varying points of view. The Bible has undergone substantial changes with regard to its early manuscripts and their translated versions. This Book is a collection of various materials and the worst part is the crude 'editing' where the joints are much in evidence. Gathering and the codification, giving the final written form, of the Books of the Bible took centuries. It uses descriptive methods. Its language is abstract, very rich in images. The smallest or shortest of reports turns into a story in the Bible, full of puzzling descriptions whose ambiguity is intentional. There's no getting away from the fact that the Bible is a very human book. It was not written by God, it was not edited by God, it was not translated by God. In the beginning it wasn't written down at all. Most parts of the Bible started life as sayings or stories that were handed down from generation to generation as part of an oral tradition and doubtless became altered, adulterated, and embellished in the process. Eventually they got written down, which tended to fix them a bit more, but before the invention of printing they were handed on by being copied out, and inevitably mistakes were made. And when they were translated from the original Hebrew, Aramaic, and Greek, they suffered still further alteration because translation can never be exact. Yet the Bible is essentially a religious book, but, unlike most ancient religious books, the Old Testament is characterized by a strong sense of history; even laws and exhortations are woven into the narratives.

The Pentateuch is also called the Torah, or Law, and seems to have reached its current form with Ezra - in the books of Nehemiah and Ezra a rough summary can be seen which matches the Torah as it is now. An interesting clue as to how the current Torah came about is revealed by an episode in the time of Ezra. In the book of Nehemiah Ezra is described as reading the Law to the people. Verses 13 - 18 tell of the first celebration of the "Festival of Booths", or Sukkoth, which is described as not being celebrated like so since the days of Joshua, assistant and successor of Moses. Apparently the festival had been added, and it is not unreasonable to imagine that adding other things were both "added", "deleted", and "concealed" as well as "manufactured" over time.

Answer for yourself: Why would the priests and scribes do this? Simply said "agendas". As intimated previously the war between Persia and Egypt had a strong influence upon Ezra in shaping the texts which would later become the history of the Jewish people and in so doing we see today the true identities of the Patriarchs concealed. We have to face the facts that the Old Testament, as well as the New Testament, are are edited works, collections of various sources intricately and artistically woven together.

The five books of Pentateuch (Genesis-Deuteronomy), for example, traditionally are ascribed to Moses. But by the eighteenth century, many European scholars noticed problems with that assumption. Not only does Deuteronomy end with an account of Moses' death (a tough assignment for any writer to describe his or her own demise), but the entire Pentateuch shows anomalies of style that are hard to explain if only one author is involved.

By the nineteenth century, most scholars agreed that the Pentateuch consisted of four sources woven together. This notion of four sources came to be known as the Documentary Hypothesis (J, E, P, D) and, in various forms, it has been the prevailing theory for the past two hundred years. Israel thus created four independent strains of literature about its own origins, all drawing on oral tradition in varying degrees, and each developed over time. They were combined together to form our Pentateuch sometime in the sixth century B.C.E. by Ezra and his successors.

By this time, many of the other biblical books were coming together. Joshua, Judges, Samuel, and Kings form what scholars call a "Deuteronomistic History" (because the work's theology is heavily influenced by Deuteronomy), a history of the Israelite states over a five-hundred-year period. This work contains much of historical value, but it also operates on the basis of a historical and theological theory: i.e., that God has given Israel its land, that Israel periodically sins, suffers punishment, repents, and then is rescued from foreign invasion. This cycle of sin and redemption shapes the work's way of writing history and gives it a powerful religious dimension, so that even when the sources behind the biblical books are "secular" accounts in which God is far in the background, the theology of the overall work places history in the service of theology. In other words history is altered to serve the purpose of created theology. The last edition of the Deuteronomistic History, the one in our Bible, comes from the sixth century BCE, the time of the Babylonian Exile. In this context, it offers an explanation for Israel's poor condition and implicitly a reason to hope for the future.

In addition to the prophets, the Hebrew Bible contains what Jews often call the "Writings," or the Hagiographa, hymns and philosophical discourses, love poems and charming tales. These include Psalms, Job, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes (or Qoheleth), Song of Songs, Esther, Daniel, Ezra-Nehemiah, and Chronicles. These books were the last completed and the last to be received as Scripture, although parts of them may be very ancient indeed. The books of Psalms, for instance, contains many hymns from Israelite temple worship from the monarchic period, i.e., before the Babylonian Exile in the sixth century BCE; songs such as Psalm 29 may be borrowed from the Canaanites, while Psalm 104 closely resembles Egyptian hymns. In its current form, the 150 psalms fall into five "books," modeled on the five books of the Pentateuch.

Israel did not exist in political, religious, or intellectual isolation from its geographical neighbors. Intellectual and even direct literary contact is nowhere more evident than in Israel's book of Proverbs. William Kelly Simpson, in his The Literature of Ancient Egypt: An Anthology of Stories, Instructions, and Poetry, as well as man other scholars teach us that the book of Proverbs looks a great deal like the instruction literature that has survived from ancient Egypt. The commonality of the book of Proverbs with Egyptian instruction literature suggests that it may have been the court wisdom that was used to train the next generation of Israel's leaders for effective public service. The Instruction of Amenhotep has the most direct bearing on the book of Proverbs. Written in thirty chapters and probably dating to 1200 B.C.E., it has close parallels to many verses in Proverbs 22:17-24:22. Thus we find that Proverbs also has many old parts, including one apparently translated from the second-millennium BCE Egyptian text the "Instructions of Amenhotep" which we find in Proverbs 22. Bryce, in his A Legacy of Wisdom: The Egyptian Contribution to the Wisdom of Israel, 1979, has done a thorough study of parallels between biblical and Egyptian wisdom literature. He notes that there are varying degrees of dependence, from direct literary borrowing to "thought" borrowing; the latter is barely recognizable in the Hebrew Bible because it has been so seamlessly integrated over time and through redaction. Although there are differences in wording, proverbial parallels with Egyptian Instruction sayings seem quite close here in Proverbs. This he states is the evidence of direct literary borrowing from earlier existing Egyptian wisdom.

Answer for yourself: What have we learned so far? Simply that the Hebrew Old Testament was "put together" from many different streams of thought and traditions somewhere around the 6th century B.C.E. and that the name of Egypt keeps coming up repeatedly.

Richard Elliott Friedman, in his masterful book Who Wrote the Bible? teaches us, as do other scholars, that Ezra, in the end, was the one who created this synthesized work that we call the Old Testament which the Jewish nation and Christians have read all these years. In this book Friedman shows the reader how the Jewish scriptures are the product of traditions of oral transmission and eventual scribal transmission which were handed down over hundreds and hundreds of years if not longer.

Answer for yourself: Is it likely that oral transmission of tales and stories change or information can become lost the longer oral transmissions are handed down over chronological history? That is not a hard question when you think about it.

Over centuries, myths, legends, hymns and other literary forms were passed down orally from generation to generation from the time of the Egyptian sojourn, Babylon captivity, and the Persian repatriation of the captured Jewish nation. Only much later following the Persian defeat of Babylon and the repatriation of the Jewish nation did Ezra reconstruct or should I say "create" the Old Testament as the "assumed" history of the Jewish people.

Much of the earlier history of the origin and emergence of the Jewish people from their Sojourn in Egypt was lost or forgotten. The apocryphal writing tells how Ezra dictated all the writings which had been lost in the destruction of Jerusalem during and following the Babylonian war. A. Soggin, in his Introduction to the Old Testament published in London in 1989 states on page 13-14 that the traditions given by Ezra "do not seem to have any historical foundation".

Answer for yourself: Were you aware that much of the historical information in the Old Testament is not accurate to the findings of archeology and much is out of historical chronological sequence? Well it is and no greater example can be found than when dealing with Egyptian history and Egyptian references in the Old Testament as we will come to see. Remember that Ezra is behind this synthesis of oral traditions that become the written texts and the "official history" of the Jewish people after returning from the Persian captivity. Having no Torahs in captivity and with Ezra "writing" the past history of this new emerging nation of Jews being returned to their homeland it is not far fetched to see how and why Ezra would create a history for these Jews which is not truthful nor accurate to the facts that archeology has provided us today.

A. Soggin is not the only author nor source that reveals that the production of Ezra in drafting the Old Testament has within it many historical inaccuracies regarding the identity and origin for the Jewish nation which was returned to Israel by Persia following the Persian defeat of the Babylonian nation. One could go so far as to say many of these tradition given these returning Jewish captives were "made up" and this is where Ezra comes in as the Egyptian roots of the Jewish Nation is purposefully omitted and concealed by the work of Ezra and instead of identifying correctly the Pharaohs of Egypt they were purposefully characterized as Jews in giving the returning Jews a "false history" of their past which they remembered not. There are reasons why Ezra would conceal the Hebrew-Egyptian link that we have already discussed above. There is reason to believe that Ezra had an official position at the Persian Court and functioned as a commissioner for the affairs of the Jewish minority within Persia. At any rate, he was able to obtain palace sponsorship and aid for a trip to Jerusalem in 458 BC, some 57 years after the completion of the Temple. The reason for the trip was to restore strict religious observance and revive the national identity of the repatriated, which had declined since the original return and this was done under the watchful eyes of Persia and this explains why Judaism has so much Persian apocalypticism within it. The war between Persia and Egypt explains also why the true identity of the "parent" of these returning Jews were misidentified when Ezra rewrote the Old Testament since Persia certainly did not desire that these returning Jews learn that at Persia was almost at war with "their biological parents". Cyrus the Great of Persia frees the captive Jews from Babylonia 539 B.C. and finally conquers Egypt, the biological parents of this returning nation, in 525 B.C. some mere 14 years later. Also if you had not already guessed it these Jews of the Bible had "black skin" as did their Egyptian parents. If Persia was to hope for the friendship and loyalty of these returning Jews let alone allow them to function as an "outpost" half-way between Persian and Egypt and thereby be a warning of any impending Egyptian retaliation then it was necessary to conceal the true identity of these black skinned Jews as children of Egypt.

Answer for yourself: Did the war with Egypt play a role in Ezra's misidentification of key Biblical characters like David and Solomon let alone Abraham and Jacob? Well considering the above it does not take a rocket scientist to figure that one out.

Eventually these "traditions", both true and untrue, were recorded in early scribal forms and were revised over time while at the same time combined with other texts and edited in a process called redaction. The Jewish scriptures, the product of many different theological positions contending over many centuries since their origin in Egypt were later recorded, edited, combined and redacted in the form that we have them today during a process that took many centuries to form. Although some believers hold the Old Testament to be a seamless, monolithic text, historical-critical methods developed by modern scholarship and the findings of archeology in the last 200 years proves them as representing many different perspectives on God and Israel's relationship with God when filtered primarily through the Egyptian, Babylonian, and Persian religious systems. So the bottom line is that not everything in it is "true" which can be said of the New Testament as well. Let us never forget that men with agenda write books and not God.

THE TRUE IDENTITY OF KING DAVID OF THE BIBLE

Answer for yourself: How much do you presently know concerning the Pharaoh Tuthmose III and the other Amarna Pharaohs? Well if you are like most then you know very little if anything at all.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever compared the accounts in the Bible of David and his wars and military battles described in the Tanakh with the exploits of Amenhotep III's great grandfather, the 18th Dynasty Pharaoh Thutmose III as they were written on the stone walls on the Temple of Karnak in Thebes?

Answer for yourself: Do you know what you find when you do? You find that not only are their achievements equivalent and identical but so are their very names as well!

I will try to present evidence showing that the Pharaoh Thutmose III is the King David we find depicted in the Old Testament. Thutmose is an Egyptian compound name comprised of "Thut" (from Thoth, the Egyptian god of wisdom) and "mose" (an Egyptian title or suffix indicating son or rightful heir).

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that in the ancient Egyptian language, like the later Hebrew language, words were written without vowels? Should we not expect knowing this that the Hebrew language was a later development similar to the Egyptian language if the Jews were the offspring of the Egyptians? It sure would seem so and writers like Godfrey Higgins in his Anacalypsis proves the point as do many other scholars today.

"Thut", in Egyptian, was, therefore, written as "Twt". The ancient Hebrew language, although very different from Egyptian, originally derived its written structure from the Egyptian language (Cross, "Origins of the Alphabet" in Ebla to Damascus: Art and Archaeology of Ancient Syria, 271-278.) As with Egyptian, the consonants were written and the vowels were vocalized only.

Answer for yourself: Can you guess what you get when you transliterate the Egyptian word "twt" into Hebrew? Let me give you a hint. The name begins with a "D".

Because of their similar alphabets, you end up with "dvd". If you add the vowels necessary for pronunciation in Hebrew you get David! (Cross, "Origins of the Alphabet" in Ebla to Damascus: Art and Archaeology of Ancient Syria, p. 88).

Now let us look at one event recorded and attributed to King David.

2 Sam 8:5-6 5 And when the Syrians of Damascus came to succour Hadadezer king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men. 6 Then David put garrisons in Syria of Damascus: and the Syrians became servants to David, and brought gifts. And the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the same things are said of Thutmose III in prior Egyptian history where it is recorded on stone monuments that Thutmose III defeated an earlier coalition of Syrian and Canaanite kings as described in the Bible and attributed to King David? Are you aware that it is told in Egyptian stone and history that Thutmose III also established garrisons in these same regions in order to permanently secure Egyptian control there? Is this proof that these two men are the same? (Cross, "Origins of the Alphabet" in Ebla to Damascus: Art and Archaeology of Ancient Syria, p. 106, 119).

Answer for yourself: Is this name similarity and identical events described above connected to both Thutmose III and King David just a coincidence? Well this is not enough evidence for me yet to make such a certain identity between King David and Thuthmose III so we keep studying so we can be certain. More evidence to connect the two as identical personages is easily located when one knows to look.

It is a historical fact that at the beginning of the Egyptian 17th Dynasty that much of Egypt was still being dominated by foreign rulers known as the Hyksos. The Hyksos were an important influence on Egyptian history, particularly at the beginning of the Second Intermediate Period. Most of what we know of the nature of the Hyksos depends upon written sources (of the Egyptians), such as the Rhind Papyrus. Also of considerable importance is the systematic excavation of the capital of the Hyksos, Avaris (Tell el-Dab'a). Today the term Hyksos has come to refer to the whole of these people who ruled Egypt during the Second Intermediate Period of Egypt's ancient history, and had to be driven out of the land by the last ruler of the 17th Dynasty and the earliest ruler of Egypt's New Kingdom. Through the initiative of the early Pharaohs of the 17th Dynasty, the Hyksos were attacked and eventually driven out of Egypt during the reign of Ahmose I. Ahmose and his son Amenhotep I extended their campaigns into Asia, "principally to deter any fresh incursions by roving bands into the Eastern Delta [of Egypt]" (Aldred, Akhenaten, p. 121). The Hyksos were basically a Semitic people who were able to wrestle control of Egypt from the early Second Intermediate rulers of the 13th Dynasty, inaugurating the 15th Dynasty. The basic population of Egyptians allowed, from time to time, a new influx of settlers, first from the region of Lebanon and Syria, and subsequently from Palestine and Cyprus. The leaders of these people eventually married into the local Egyptian families (like Joseph?), a theory that is somewhat supported by preliminary studies of human remains at Tell el-Dab'a.

Answer for yourself: Does this remind you of Joseph who married the Egyptian priest's daughter and had children from the mixed marriage of a Semite and Egyptian (Ephraim and Manasseh)?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that this Hyksos were called "Shepherd Kings? Is this the reason possibly that the Old Testament attests that Joseph warned his family when entering Egypt to not mention this fact?

Gen 46:31-34 31 And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, I will go up, and shew Pharaoh, and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house, which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me; 32 And the men are shepherds, for their trade hath been to feed cattle; and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have. 33 And it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What is your occupation? 34 That ye shall say, Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we, and also our fathers: that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen; for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: As you can see Joseph did not want the Pharaoh to know that his people and family were "shepherds". Is this a veiled reference to the Hyksos from Palestine?

Parallels for the foreign traits of the Hyksos at Tell el-Dab'a/Avaris (capital of the Hyksos) have been found at southern Palestinian sites such as Tell el-Ajjul, at the Syrian site of Ebla and at Byblos in modern Labanon. By about 1720 BC, the Hyksos had grown strong enough, at the expense of the Middle Kingdom kings, to gain control of Avaris in the northeastern Delta. This site eventually became the capital of the Hyksos kings, but within 50 years, they had also managed to take control of the important Egyptian city of Memphis.

Manetho, and Egyptian Priest-Scribe records in his Aegyptiaca., frag. 42, 1.75-79.2:

- Then," he says, "the kings of Thebes and the other parts of Egypt rose against the shepherds, and a long and terrible war was fought between them." He says further, "By a king, named Alisphragmuthosis, the shepherds were subdued, and were driven out of the most parts of Egypt and shut up in a place named Avaris, measuring ten thousand acres." Manetho says, "The shepherds had built a wall surrounding this city, which was large and strong, in order to keep all their possessions and plunder in a place of strength.
- Tethmosis, son of Alisphragmuthosis, attempted to take the city by force and by siege with four hundred and eighty thousand men surrounding it. But he despaired of taking the place by siege, and concluded a treaty with them, that they should leave Egypt, and go, without any harm coming to them, wherever they wished. After the conclusion of the treaty they left with their families and chattels, not fewer than two hundred and forty thousand people, and crossed the desert into Syria. Fearing the Assyrians, who dominated over Asia at that time, they built a city in the country which we now call Judea. It was large enough to contain this great number of men and was called Jerusalem.

Answer for yourself: What was the city the fleeing Hyksos built in Palestine? It was Jerusalem. Were these Hyksos related to the Semitic Hebrews? Wow.

Now back to our study of King David.

When Amenhotep I died without a male heir, he was succeeded by the commander of the army who became Pharaoh Thutmose I. Inspired by previous successes, Thutmose I, now as Pharaoh, led his army into Canaan and Syria and crossed the Euphrates River at the Carchemish. After routing Mitanni forces, he set up a monument (stele) to his achievement on the north side of the Euphrates. The heiress daughter of Thutmose I, Hatshepsut was married to her step-brother Thutmose II who became Pharaoh. Thutmose II and Hatshepsut had no surviving sons. After the death of Thutmose II, his young son Thutmose III (by a minor concubine-wife Isis who was possibly of foreign birth) was denied the throne by Hatshepsut who had been married to Thutmose II of full Egyptian blood. Thutmose III, being the offspring of a mixed marriage, was not entitled to the throne. Hatshepsut continued to rule even after Thutmose III had clearly come of age (Diop, The African Origin of Civilization, p. 12). So we find in the final analysis that Tuthmose III, the son of a concubine, came to the throne of Egypt as the fifth ruler of the 18 Dynasty in odd circumstances. The dynasty has been founded nearly a hundred years earlier when, after just over a century rule by the invading Hyksos shepherds, the princes of Thebes united in the 16th century B.C. in a successful attempt to drive them out of Egypt, and Ahmosis was crowned as the dynasty's first ruler (1575-1550 B.C.E.). As we saw shortly before the death of Tuthmose II, Hatshepsut have birth to a daughter, Neferure. The normal method of ensuring the right of Tuthmose III (born of the concubine Isis) to inherit the throne would have been marriage to Neferure, his half-sister, who was the heiress. This marriage never took place between Tuthmose III (David) and Neferure. We only know that Hatshepsut continued to insist that Neferure was the only legal heir and her daughter was called "the Lady of the Two Lands, mistress of Upper and Lower Egypt". In these circumstances, Tuthmose II had to have his son adopted by the State god Amun in order to ensure his right to the throne which reminds us of the passage in Psalm 2 which is said of King David:

Ps 2:7 7 I will declare the decree: the LORD hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee. (KJV)

This makes all the sense since Tuthmose III was only of half royal blood and since Egypt was a matriarchal society the throne and rulership came through the wife thus the marriage of their sisters. This brings many questions to our mind at once. Thuthmose III was not recognized as King-Pharaoh during the time of the rule of Hatshepsut, the wife of Thuthmose II.

If we follow the life of King David we find the same scenario of rejection of David as we find with Tuthmose III.

Upon Saul's death, David went to Hebron where he was anointed as king of Judah, according to The Lord's instructions, at about age 30 (2 Samuel 2:1-4). A seven and a half year civil war followed between the forces that supported David, and those that did not recognize David's right to the kingship and throne who supported Ish-bosheth, Saul's only surviving son, for the kingship of all Israel. The military and political situation grew steadily in favor of David however, and when Ish-bosheth was assassinated, David was anointed king over all Israel (2 Samuel 4:1-12, 5:1-5).

Answer for yourself: Does this account above concerning Tuthmose III remind you of the account in the Old Testament when all of Israel would not accept David as their King and only David's military might finally persuaded the total nation to acknowledge him as King as did the military successes of Tuthmose III which persuaded Egypt to acknowledge him as Pharaoh?

When the male blood line of the founding dynasty ended at the death of Amenhotep I, an even greater emphasis was thereafter placed on preservation of the female blood line which by this time had already distinguished itself and wielded considerable power. Ahhotep I had become an interim ruler upon the death of her husband Ahmose I and was immortalized for rallying Egypt's forces against the Hyksos. Her daughter Ahmose-Nefertari was given the title, High Priestess of Amun, and was the first to be designated as the "God's Wife"(Aldred, Akhenaten, p. 139-140). It is important for us to know that the royal offspring of 18th Dynasty Pharaohs were considered to have been conceived through Divine visitation of the state god Amun with the "God's Wife" (Aldred, Akhenaten, p. 139). This concept is clearly demonstrated by large murals in the mortuary temples of both Hatshepsut and Amenhotep III. Ahmose-Nefertari was, according to the famous turn of the century archeologist Flinders Petrie, "the most venerated figure of Egyptian History" (Petrie, A History of Egypt During the XVIIth and XVIIIth Dynasties, p. 41).

Upon Hatshepsut's death, the succession of Thutmose III was complicated not only by his own insufficiency of royal blood, but by the fact that Hatshepsut's daughter Neferure (and holder of the titles "Gods Wife" and virgin High Priestess of Amun) was also no longer living. He could not "marry" into the throne of Egypt as did all other male heirs. The nubile princess who could claim the strongest relation to Ahhotep I and Nefertari was found to be Merit-re, the daughter of Huy, the Superior of the Royal Harem. Thutmose III was married to Merit-ra, and in an official ceremony confirmed as Pharaoh and "adopted" as the son of Amun (Aldred, Akhenaten, p. 70, 141; and Ahmed Osman, House of the Messiah, 110-111).

Answer for yourself: Could this be reference found in Psalm 2:7 as mentioned above?

Ps 2:7 7 I will declare the decree: the LORD hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee. (KJV)

The word "begotten", "yalad" in Hebrew, carries with it the meaning of "to declare one's birth or pedigree". Having not married the daughter of a Pharaoh and not possessing a full-blood lineage it was necessary for Thutmose III to be "adopted" and in so doing inheriting the necessary pedigree from Amun as his "adopted son".

Like King David Thutmose III is remembered for his great military conquests which helped persuade others to accept his as their Pharaoh (leader). It is recorded that the God/Amun and Father of Thutmose III's spoke of him, "I grant thee by decree the earth in its length and breadth. The tribes of the East and those of the West ... that thy conquests may embrace all lands ... I ordain that all aggressors arising against thee shall fail..."(Maspero, The Struggle of the Nations, 267-268; Osman, House of the Messiah, p. 141).

Answer for yourself: Should we not expect to see a similar pronouncement over King David in the Tanakh? We should and we do find one.

Answer for yourself: Does this not remind you of what is also said of King David in Psalm 2?

Ps 2:1-12 1 Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? 2 The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the LORD, and against his anointed, saying, 3 Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us. 4 He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision. 5 Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure. 6 Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion. 7 I will declare the decree: the LORD hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee. 8 Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. 9 Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel. 10 Be wise now therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth. 11 Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice with trembling. 12 Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him. (KJV)

As you can see Psalm 2 is in essence the very same pronouncement made by God over Thutmose III. Again this is further proof that these two men are identical. The evidence keeps mounting and the laws of statistics are teaching us that we have moved beyond just a coincidence in these comparisons.

Hatshepsut's daughter Neferure was the real heiress and heir but she suddenly died when 16 years old and from this point on Thutmose III gained increasing importance. The chance for Tuthmose III to rule Egypt on his own came in the middle of the 22 year of his co-regency with Hatshepsut when Hatshepsut, the wife of Thutmose II dies.

Answer for yourself: Should we not expect that Thutmose III would respond in such a manner to engender the people toward himself and gain their support through military conquest? We should and we do find that he does just that which reminds us of the exploits of King David. It seemed his first task he undertook was to deface many of the monuments erected to his aunt-stepmother: her reliefs were hacked out, her inscriptions erased, her cartouches obliterated, her obelisks walled up. Tuthmose III was not the legal descendant of the earlier Ahmosside dynasty. So now, technically speaking, as he was not the son of of the Egyptian Queen, nor had he married the heiress to inherit the throne, he had going for him that he had been chosen and adopted to to rule by the State god Amun. This is reminiscent again of Samuel, the prophet of God, and his choice of David to rule in place of Saul who was later to die and leave the throne vacant for David to fill. From now until the end of the Amarna rule in Egypt - the rule of Akhenaten, Semenkhkare, Tutankhamun, and Aye - it was the dynasty founded by Tuthmose III that sat on the throne of Egypt.

The long frustrated Thutmose III was eager to prove himself, and upon becoming Pharaoh his first act was to march out with the military. In anticipation, a formidable confederation of Canaanite and Syrian kings had already consolidated their own armies and were waiting in their camps when Thutmose III arrived in Canaan with his own. Using a risky strategic maneuver, Thutmose III divided the opposing confederation and conquered them at the original epic battle of the Valley of Armageddon (Har-Megiddon) (Osman, House of the Messiah, p. 115; and Aldred, Akhenaten, p. 121).

- Tuthmose III splits his army and defeats the divided forces of Qadesh near Megiddo. The kings flee and seek refuge behind the gates of their fortress. After seven months of siege, Tuthmosis III rejoins his army from a fortress to the east and leads it in the capture of Megiddo.
- David splits his army and defeats the allies of the Amonites in open field. The Amonites flee and seek refuge behind the gates of their city. After the Israelites lay siege to Rabbah (II Samuel 11:1) David rejoins his army from Jerusalem and leads it in the capture of Rabbah.

The battles of Tuthmose III were recorded on the inside walls surrounding the granite sanctuary at Karnak. This was the Egyptian bible of sorts. These events were recorded at Karnak because Tuthmosis's army marched under the banner of the god, Amun, and Amun's temples and estates would largely be the beneficiary of the spoils of Tuthmosis' wars. From inscriptions left on walls of the temples we find that Tuthmosis started to have troubles from Prince Kadesh of Palestine (Jerusalem) and Syria. He of course due to his vast military training had to deal with all those things. Thutmose immediately set out with his army and crossing the Sinai desert he marched to the city of Gaza, which had remained loyal to Egypt. The events of the campaign are well documented because they are engraved onto the walls of the temple of Karnak. While the nearby fortress of Megiddo was under a seven month long siege, Thutmose III led a contingent of men to Kadesh (the present day site of Jerusalem), and as the Bible describes, he "took the stronghold of Zion."(Aldred, Akhenaten, p. 105). It is recorded that Tuthmose III took up residence in Jerusalem during the prolonged siege of Megiddo (Osman, House of the Messiah, 114, quoting from Pritchard, Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 236).

Answer for yourself: Does this remotely sound like the account of King David in the Old Testament? Well lets see.

The second Book of Samuel describes the taking of Jerusalem as a military operation carried out by the tribal David:

2 Sam 5:7 7 Nevertheless David took the strong hold of Zion: the same is the city of David. (KJV)

The account in II Samuel goes on to indicate that the city was taken by David's men penetrating the fortress through a water shaft (gutter):

2 Sam 5:8 8 And David said on that day, Whosoever getteth up to the gutter, and smiteth the Jebusites, and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's soul, he shall be chief and captain. Wherefore they said, The blind and the lame shall not come into the house. (KJV)

However, the evidence makes it clear that the operation was actually a peaceful one, carried out by Tuthmosis III, the historical King David, five centuries earlier.

Kadesh (Jerusalem) was the first of over one hundred cities listed as having been conquered by Thutmose III in his Asiatic campaign as recorded on the walls of stone in the temple of Amun at Karnak (Osman, House of the Messiah, p.131-132.)

Answer for yourself: Is it just a coincidence that the same battles that we find in the Old Testament are recorded exactly on the wall of the Temple of Karnak but attributed to Tuthmose III? Jerusalem (Kadesh) immediately precedes the city of Megiddo on the list of conquered cites by Tuthmose III. The more famous city of Kadesh in Syria, and the center of the Syrian-Canaanite opposition of that time, is known to have fallen to Thutmose III in a later military campaign.

The name Jerusalem does not show up on any of the lists of cities conquered during any Egyptian 18th Dynasty military campaign in Asia, however, it was unquestionably part of the Egyptian empire of that time. A diplomatic letter sent to a later Egyptian Pharaoh of the 18th Dynasty was addressed from "mat Urusalim," i.e., "the land of Jerusalem." Another letter from the governor of Jerusalem during the 18th Dynasty refers to Jerusalem as a city "in which the king [i.e., the Pharaoh] has set his name" (Redford, Egypt, Canaan, and Israel in Ancient Times, p. 270).

I Kings 11:36 36 And unto his son will I give one tribe, that David my servant may have a light always before me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen me to put my name there. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Is this to be believed as just another coincidence?

According to Manetho's 3rd Century B.C. History of Egypt as quoted by Josephus, Jerusalem was being ruled at this time by the Hyksos who had been expelled from Egypt by Ahmose I. It is not surprising that they readily resubmitted themselves to Thutmose III since we saw the link to these Tuthmose Pharaoh's and Joseph!

The name of Jerusalem which literally means "to establish peace or submission" certainly symbolized the role that it played in establishing and maintaining Egyptian control over Palestine during the 18th Dynasty (Osman, House of the Messiah, p. 133). Both names are found in Chapter 11 of Nehemiah where the Hebrew reads as "Yurushalayim ha Qudesh," meaning, "Jerusalem the Holy City" (Osman, House of the Messiah, 132). The capture of Jerusalem/Kadesh by Thutmose III also resolves the formerly unknown source of the name Zion.

Answer for yourself: Can you guess how?

Zion consists of the components:

- On (Hebrew for the holy city of On/Heliopolis in Egypt) and
- The Hebrew word zi (meaning arid place...or desert city).

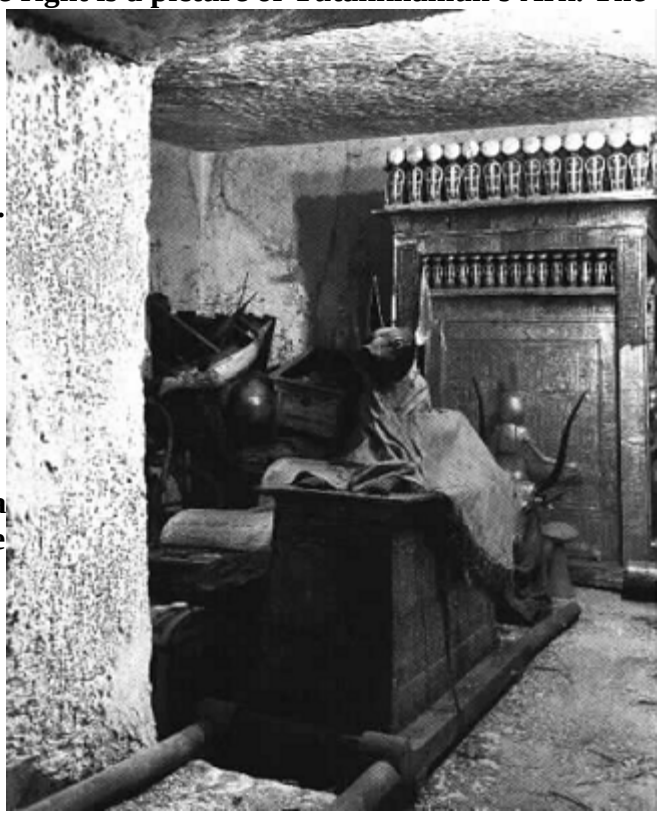
Literally translated, Zion appropriately becomes "Holy City of the Desert."(Ibid., p. 129)

Answer for yourself: Did you think of Egypt when you read "the holy city of the Desert"? Did you ever have the wildest notion that the word Zion referred to one of the major religious centers in Egypt? Of greater influence than Memphis in Egyptian religious life was the older city, Heliopolis, in which was developed the solar cult that eventually dominated the land. Never politically pre-eminent in historic times, Heliopolis was yet the spiritual heart of Egypt. It gave its gods to the Memphite kings and drew Memphite gods into its circle; it inspired the dogma of Thebes; it paved the way for Akhenaten's crusade to establish the visible disk of the sun as sole god. Until its destruction, Heliopolis was a holy place, repository for the wisdom of the past.

Now we turn to another important historical references between Tuthmose III and the city we know by the name of Jerusalem today. We have already seen the link between Tuthmosis III and Jerusalem derives from the time when he based himself there while his army was besieging Megiddo. His annals refer to his having stayed "at a fortress east of this town". Although the name of the fortress is not mentioned at any point in the Egyptian text, all the indications are that Jerusalem, which lies to the south-east of Megiddo, is the location meant here. Leaving the besieged city and travelling east, the only route was the Way of the Sea, joined near the River Jordan by the road leading south to Jerusalem. It seems that we have an incomplete account of the fortress where the king stayed because the scribe concerned remained with the army, recording details of the military campaign at Megiddo, rather than accompanying Tuthmosis III.



The biblical reference to "the king and his men" indicates that it was the ruler and his bodyguard, not his entire army, that was involved. As for the "gutter" by which they obtained entry to the fortress, this is thought to have been a shaft dug to ensure supplies of water from a spring known as the Gihon - the Christian Virgin Fountain - that lay in the valley some 325 metres below Jerusalem.

Now we look at some startling information concerning the Ark of the Covenant. On reading Grant R. Jeffrey's book Appointment with Destiny I came across a curious reference to the dimensions of the stone chest in the King's Chamber in the Great Pyramid in Egypt. This stone chest found in the Great Pyramid King's chamber has the exact same measurement as the Ark of the Covenant. This Chest was the only object within the King's Chamber, as the Ark was the single sacred object within the Holy of Holies, in the Temple. Further, the cubit dimensions of the inner chamber of the Temple, the Holy of Holies, are precisely identical in size to the King's Chamber in the Pyramid and the same volume as the molten sea of water on the Temple Mount as prepared by King Solomon. Since the Pyramid was built and sealed long before the days of Moses, when he built the Ark and the Holy of Holies, and had remained sealed for over twenty-five centuries until the ninth century after Christ, there is no natural explanation for the phenomenon of both structures having identical volume measurements. It is interesting to note however that the Egyptians had portable shrines in the shape of boats that were very similar to the Ark of the Covenant used by the Israelites. These arks became extremely popular by the New Kingdom when Moses would have been in Egypt. One of the discoveries in Tutankhamun's tomb (a Thutmose Pharaoh) was an Ark for the afterlife. The New Kingdom saw a greater attention to the aspects of both the hidden and revealed in temple worship. The most holy was kept sacred by keeping it hidden, while the adoration of the masses was acquired through the use of the revealed. To accommodate these two conflicting ideals the Egyptians kept their most holy inner sanctuary hidden, while placing within it a sacred bark (Ark). The picture on the right is a picture of Tutankhamun's Ark. The portable boat shrines (Arks) were made of wood, but ornately gilded and decorated and equipped with a closed cabin (sometimes called a seH-neTr, 'Tent shrine of the god') in which the image of the deity sat. Long carrying-poles on each side or set laterally and up to five in number bore the shrine along on the shoulders of priests" (Kemp, Barry J. Ancient Egypt, p. 185). Notice if you will the poles which aided in the carrying of the Ark as we would expect and have imaged for us in Israel's Ark of the Covenant. In Egypt the Apet Festival focused around the "Ark of Worship", with the Arks being borne aloft by groups of priests and adored by hysterical crowds. The similarity between these Arks and the Old Testament Ark of the Covenant is remarkable. What is surprising, is when Howard Carter opened Tutankhamen's tomb in 1922, he found a number of caskets, which appear to be a form of prototype of the Ark of the Covenant.

Now most are familiar with the story that shortly after David's arrival in Jerusalem, that he and the Israelites brought in the Ark of the Covenant into Jerusalem:

2 Sam 6:17 17 And they brought in the ark of the LORD, and set it in his place, in the midst of the tabernacle that David had pitched for it: and David offered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the LORD. (KJV)

The consequence of bringing the Ark to Jerusalem is said to have made the city the holy centre for the Israelite tribes. However, there is a further element of confusion here because we are dealing not only with two Davids but with two Arks - the Ark of the Covenant, in which Moses placed the Ten Commandments, and the Ark in which Tuthmosis III carried his god, Amun-Ra, into battle before him at Megiddo, as described in his annals at Karnak:

- Year 23, first month of the third season, day 19- awakening in [life] in the tent of life, prosperity and health, at the town of Aruna. Proceeding northward by my majesty, carrying my father Amun-Ra, Lord of the Thrones of the Two Lands [that he might open the ways] before me." (Pritchard, Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 236).

We saw above the Egypt carried representations of their Gods in their "Arks" or "barques" and often carried them into battle as we find recorded about King David as well.

The idea of a holy Ark was introduced to the Israelites by Moses (Akhenaten) from Egyptian practices of worship. In his festivals and on other occasions, the Egyptian deity used to be carried by the priests in an Ark, usually in the form of a boat when the king went to live in the fortress. When the Pharaoh, Tuthmose III, went to live in the fortress of Jerusalem at the start of the protracted siege of Megiddo, the only possible location for the god Amun-Ra in his Ark was where the king was in residence which we saw was Jerusalem. In fact, we know that there were some rituals in Egyptian religion that only the king and high priests could perform before the deity (Osman, Moses: Pharaoh of Egypt).

The peaceful nature of events is also indicated by the fact that Araunah, the Jebusite king, was still in control of Mount Moriah, the high holy ground to the north of the city. We have an account of how David bought the threshing-floor of Mount Moriah "for fifty shekels of silver" in order to build an altar to the Lord. In the course of these negotiations Araunah said to David:

2 Sam 24:22-23 22 And Araunah said unto David, Let my lord the king take and offer up what seemeth good unto him: behold, here be oxen for burnt sacrifice, and threshing instruments and other instruments of the oxen for wood. 23 All these things did Araunah, as a king, give unto the king. And Araunah said unto the king, The LORD thy God accept thee. (KJV)

The choice of a threshing-floor on Mount Moriah may seem a curious one for the site of an altar, but it is "clear that this site was held sacred even prior to David for an elevated, exposed spot used as a threshing-floor at the approaches to a city often served as the local cultic spot. The sanctity of Jerusalem, atop the Temple Mount, is inferred already in the Book of Genesis (Mount Moriah). . . " (Stern, Encyclopedia of Archaeological excavations In The Holy Land, vol. 3, p. 590). This earlier biblical reference describes how Abraham is said to have received holy blessing on this same piece of ground:

Gen 14:18-20 18 And Melchizedek king of Salem (Jerusalem) brought forth bread and wine: and he was the priest of the most high God. 19 And he blessed him, and said, Blessed be Abram of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth: 20 And blessed be the most high God, which hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him tithes of all. (KJV)

Therefore, from the time of Abraham this high ground to the north of Jerusalem had been regarded as holy ground, not just for the inhabitants of the city but for other peoples in Canaan as well and this includes Egypt.

However, the reality of the situation is that the threshing-floor was not bought by the tribal David to build an altar for the Lord, but by Tuthmosis III as the site for a shrine to his State god, Amun-Ra. This is again made clear in the Book of Psalms as we have already seen where David (Tuthmose III), like Egyptian kings, is spoken of as being the "Son of God"....a title reserved for a Pharaoh (the Son of Ra).

Ps 2:6-8 6 Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion. 7 I will declare the decree: the LORD hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee. 8 Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. (KJV)

The new name of Zion, as we have seen, makes its first appearance in the Bible as soon as we learn of King David's (Tuthmose III's) entry into Jerusalem and assumes more importance from this time onward.

The name Zion, whose meaning is not known for certain until defined from an Egyptian viewpoint (Desert City...Heliopolis) as we have seen did not originate in the Hebrew Bible as thought and has not been found in any historical source outside of Egypt where it finds its origin. What confuses the matter further is that the name is not always used to indicate the same location. In some cases, as the one cited above, it seems to signify the fortress of Jerusalem itself. Yet, at the same time, we have the suggestion that the fortress was named after the king himself:

2 Sam 5:9 9 So David dwelt in the fort, and called it the city of David (Tuthmose III). And David built round about from Millo and inward. (KJV)

In other cases, Zion refers only to the sacred area that was used to build the Temple:

Joel 3:17 17 So shall ye know that I am the LORD your God dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain: then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no strangers pass through her any more. (KJV)

Here, while Zion refers clearly to the holy area of the Temple Mount, Jerusalem is clearly separate, although related to it. We have also the reference:

Ps 20:1-2 1 The LORD hear thee in the day of trouble; the name of the God of Jacob defend thee; 2 Send thee help from the sanctuary, and strengthen thee out of Zion; (KJV)

It is clear in this case that by Zion only the sanctuary is meant.

Further complications have arisen from the fact that Mount Zion was later believed not to have been in the area of the Temple, high to the north of ancient Jerusalem, but on the western mount. Here, in the first century A.D., a small church was built on the southern end of the hill, which became identified as the Coenaculum (the room of the Last Supper of Jesus according to tradition). This was followed many centuries later - in 1936 - by a Christian monastery known today as the Church of Mary. Nevertheless, modern archaeology has confirmed that this western mount did not form part of ancient Jerusalem and was not occupied at the time of the tribal chief David.

All the indications are, in fact, that by Zion the ancient holy ground of Jerusalem was meant, the artificially flattened ground on Mount Moriah where Solomon (Amenhotep III) built his Temple and which today includes two of the holiest shrines of Islam - the Dome of the Rock, built by Muhammad's second Calif. Omar, and aI-Aqsa Mosque. The Temple area is surrounded by the colossal Herodian enclosure wall, preserved in the east, south and west: a larger section of the western wall (the Wailing Wall), which survives today, is regarded as the most venerated site in Jewish tradition. In ancient times, before David entered the fortress, this area was regarded as holy ground, not only by the Jebusites but by Abraham. In fact, Mount Moriah is identified as the area where the Temple was first built:

2 Chr 3:1 1 Then Solomon began to build the house of the LORD at Jerusalem in mount Moriah, where the LORD appeared unto David (Tuthmose III) his father, in the place that David had prepared in the threshingfloor of Ornan the Jebusite. (KJV)

It is the same location where, in the account of Abraham's intention to slay Sarah's son, Isaac, until he was forbidden to do so by the Lord, we have the obscure reference:

Gen 22:14 14 And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh: as it is said to this day, In the mount of the LORD it shall be seen. (KJV)

As we saw before, Abraham also received the blessing from the king, Melchizedek, on the same holy ground.

However, it was when King David (Thutmose III) brought his Ark and placed it in the same area that this ancient holy ground was transformed into a holy centre believed to be the abode of the Lord:

Ps 132:13-14 13 For the LORD hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation. 14 This is my rest for ever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it. (KJV)

Once Tuthmosis III had taken the image of Amun-Ra in his Ark to Jerusalem, the logical resting place for it, at a time when religious bigotry did not exist, it was placed on the existing holy high ground of Mount Moriah where, one would expect, Tuthmosis III worshipped during his seven-month stay.

After Tuthmosis III left Jerusalem at the end of his seven-month stay, the holy ground where he had worshipped became Egyptianized because of him. This can be seen easily from the name it acquired, Zion. Although found for the first time in the Bible, it is not an original Hebrew word but consists of two elements, one Hebrew, the other Egyptian as we saw above.

"On", contained in the word Zion, as we saw above, is the biblical name of the ancient Egyptian holy city known from Greek as Heliopolis, which existed a short distance to the north of modern Cairo. In the Old Testament account of the life of Joseph the Patriarch, who brought the Israelites to Egypt, we are told that Pharaoh, having appointed Joseph to a high position, gave him an Egyptian wife:

Gen 41:45 45 And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphnath-pa'aneah; and he gave him to wife Asenath the daughter of Potipherah priest of On (Heliopolis). And Joseph went out over all the land of Egypt. (KJV)

Although Heliopolis was the original Egyptian holy city, the emphasis changed during the Eighteenth Dynasty when Thebes in Upper Egypt became the new capital city of the Empire as well as the holy city of the State god Amun-Ra. From this time it became the custom to refer to Thebes as "the southern On" and Heliopolis as "the northern On", with the word "On" being used in the sense of "holy city" (the On (holy place) of the desert.

Thus the very word "Zion", used to designate the holy ground to the north of Jerusalem from the time King David (Thutmose III) entered the city, in itself reveals its Egyptian origin. From that time, Mount Moriah, until then holy to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, became holy for all the Asiatic kingdoms of the Empire. By introducing the earlier story of Abraham being blessed by El Elyon, which is one of the names of the Israelite God, on the same Mount Moriah, the biblical narrator wanted to stress that the area was related to the God of Israel even before King David (Thutmose III) used it for his own worship.

After his seven-month stay, Tuthmosis III returned to Megiddo for his successful assault on the city, then made his way to Thebes.

We have no means of knowing whether he visited Jerusalem again during one of his many campaigns in western Asia. Nevertheless, his descendants, the children of Sarah, never really forgot their great ancestor and, after leaving Egypt and eventually settling in the Promised Land of Canaan, they made his holy ground the most venerated and holy part of their new home.

The sacredness attributed to Jerusalem by the Egyptians initially derived, as we have seen, from the transport of the Barque of Amun (a holy shrine carried on poles in much the same manner as the Israelite Ark of the Covenant) to the city of Jerusalem by Thutmose III (Osman, House of the Messiah, p. 125). The Egyptian Ark or shrine was normally kept within the Holy of Holies in the Temple of Amun at Karnak, however Thutmose III (just like King David) had carried the Egyptian Ark with him into battle (Osman, House of the Messiah, p. 125, quoting from Pritchard, Ancient Near Eastern Texts, p. 236).

1 Sam 4:5-8 5 And when the ark of the covenant of the LORD came into the camp, all Israel shouted with a great shout, so that the earth rang again. 6 And when the Philistines heard the noise of the shout, they said, What meaneth the noise of this great shout in the camp of the Hebrews? And they understood that the ark of the LORD was come into the camp. 7 And the Philistines were afraid, for they said, God is come into the camp. And they said, Woe unto us! for there hath not been such a thing heretofore. 8 Woe unto us! who shall deliver us out of the hand of these mighty Gods? (KJV)

The Ark of Amun remained with Tuthmose III when he took up residence in Jerusalem during the prolonged siege of Megiddo (Ibid. p. 114).

Answer for yourself: Does this remind you of King David carrying the Ark of the Covenant into battle with him?

1 Sam 4:3-5 3 And when the people were come into the camp, the elders of Israel said, Wherefore hath the LORD smitten us to day before the Philistines? Let us fetch the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of Shiloh unto us, that, when it cometh among us, it may save us out of the hand of our enemies. 4 So the people sent to Shiloh, that they might bring from thence the ark of the covenant of the LORD of hosts, which dwelleth between the cherubims: and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were there with the ark of the covenant of God. 5 And when the ark of the covenant of the LORD came into the camp, all Israel shouted with a great shout, so that the earth rang again (KJV).

After the fall of the Syrian city of Kadesh (in the Biblical region of Zobah and Hamath) during the sixth military campaign (he conducted a total of 17 in all), Thutmose III was able to cross the Euphrates and erect a second stele beside that of Thutmose I.

Answer for yourself: What is the significance of this conquest of Thutmose III?

Now watch closely what the Old Testament says about King David in the following verse. In essence, Thutmose III (King David):

2 Sam 8:3 3 David smote also Hadadezer, the son of Rehob, king of Zobah, as he went to recover his border at the river Euphrates. (KJV)

Here we find that Tuthmose III (King David) both smote the king of Zobah and crossed the Euphrates as well.

Answer for yourself: Is this a coincidence? The evidence is yet mounting that King David is Thutmose III.

This is the border that was originally established his grandfather Tuthmose I (Osman, House of the Messiah, p.88). It was at this time that Thutmose III (David) "established garrisons in Syria" (Edom) as the Bible describes but attributes again to a King named David:

2 Sam 8:13-14 13 And David gat him a name when he returned from smiting of the Syrians in the valley of salt, being eighteen thousand men. 14 And he put garrisons in Edom; throughout all Edom put he garrisons, and all they of Edom became David's servants. And the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went. (KJV)

We are almost done but now for some Jewish testimony concerning Kind David being Tuthmose III.

Kings Saul and David reigned in the 10th century B.C.E. according to the biblical chronology but Josephus dates David to a far earlier period.

"He was buried by his son (questionable) Solomon, in Jerusalem, with great magnificence, and with all the other funeral pomp which kings used to be buried with; moreover, he had great and immense wealth buried with him, the vastness of which may be easily conjectured at by what I shall now say; for a thousand and three hundred years afterward [in the time of] Hyrcanus the high priest, when he was besieged by Antiochus..." - Josephus Flavius, Antiquities of the Jews.

The siege of the second Temple in Jerusalem by Antiochus can accurately be dated to 167 B.C.E.

Answer for yourself: What happens if we look another thousand and three hundred years before 167 B.C.E as Josephus says? Well this date puts David's funeral at 1467 B.C.E., or almost 450 years before the generally accepted date (circa 1020 B.C.E.)

Answer for yourself: Does this date coincide with the time of Thutmose III? Yes it does! What another coincidence!

This, according to conventional chronology, would be during the reign of the greatest Egyptian warrior-pharaoh Tuthmosis III [1490-1436 B.C.E.], who extended the Egyptian empire to its furthest limits and in so doing "recovered it all"!

1 Sam 30:19 19 And there was nothing lacking to them, neither small nor great, neither sons nor daughters, neither spoil, nor any thing that they had taken to them: David recovered all. (KJV)

In closing Ahmed Osman, in The House of the Messiah, makes some key statements which I now quote:

- "The David who established an empire that stretched from the Nile to the Euphrates can only have lived in the fifteenth century B.C...The Israelite infiltration of Canaan, the Promised land, was a fragmentary process that did not gather pace until after Egypt lost control over Palestine in the second half of the twelfth century B.C"
- "The David whose main campaigns were against the Philistines cannot have lived before the twelfth century B.C. because that was when the mass invasion of the coastal plain of Canaan by the Philistines took place."
- "The King of Qadesh, a strong fortified city on the River Orontes in northern Syria, led a Syrio-Canaanite confederacy in a general rebellion against Egypt. In response, Thutmose III marched into western Asia to regain the territories between the Nile and Euphrates that had been conquered forty years earlier by his grandfather, Thutmose I. In the next twenty years he led a total of seventeen campaigns in western Asia, at the end of which he had earned himself the reputation as the mightiest of all the kings of the ancient world. The account of these various wars, copied from the daily records of the scribe who accompanied the army on its campaigns, is to be found in the Annals, a 223-line document that covers the inside of the walls enclosing the corridor surrounding the granite holy of holies Thutmose III built at Karnak"

Answer for yourself: Are these many evidences just coincidence?

So there you have it. It would appear to a "thinking believer" that the preponderance of the evidence is beyond chance and coincidence and the Biblical King David is not a Jew but in reality a part Hebrew descendent who is recognized and attested to my many infallible proofs to be a Pharaoh named Tuthmose III. No wonder we find so many parallels between Biblical Judaism and Egyptian religion which both oppose the later replacement religion of Rome called Christianity.

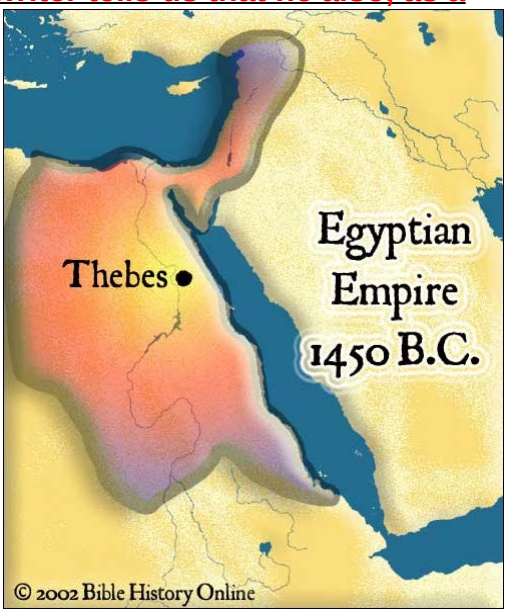
CAN WE FIND THE HOUSE OF DAVID IN EGYPT?



In an earlier article I made mention of the fact that the chronology of the Old Testament and the chronology of Egyptian records and King-lists often disagree. This makes the following study more difficult than it had to be but we are stuck it. Your attention will be needed to follow what will be said in the following article.

The task of recognizing the person in which we are familiar as the "historical David" in the Old Testament is complicated from the beginning by the fact that the Old Testament provides us with two contrasting "Davidic" characters with which span over 500 years whose accomplishments are found inscribed "exactly the same" in Egyptian stone which are the records of two different Pharaohs of the 18th Dynasty. Needless to say when you see these things for yourself it is beyond any wild coincidence and without a doubt the evidence points to two different "Tuthmose" Pharaohs of the 18th dynasty whose events are recorded and attributed to a "King David" in the Old Testament. These blendings of two different characters and events from 1500 B.C.E. and around 1000 B.C.E. show us concretely that they cannot have been the same person. History and archeology prove the above statements beyond any doubt and the evidence will be presented in the accompanying articles. There are two different Davids of the bible and few ever notice that they are separated by some 500 years yet the story line is that they were one and the same person:

- The first "David" is a warrior king who lived 1500 B.C.E. that established an empire from the Nile to the Euphrates. He devoted himself to the expansion of the Egyptian empire, leading many campaigns into Canaan, Palestine, Phoenicia and Syria. When we mention Palestine you need to think Israel! Scholars teach us that this is Tuthmose III. Thutmose III was an Egyptian king of the 18th dynasty (reigned 1479-26 B.C.E.), and is often regarded as the greatest of the rulers of ancient Egypt. Thutmose III was a skilled warrior who brought the Egyptian empire to the zenith of its power by conquering all of Palestine and Syria, crossing the Euphrates to defeat the Mitannians, and penetrating south along the Nile to Napata in the Sudan. He also built a great number of temples and monuments to commemorate his deeds. He recovered the previous empire of his great grandfather for Egypt from the "Nile to the Euphrates" (this is very important for our identification).
- The second "David" is a tribal chief generally agreed by biblical scholars to have lived from 1000 to 960 B.C.E. who ruled over the traditional Promised Land (from Dan in the north to Beersheba in the south of the Israel-Judaean and spent most of his life in conflict with the Philistines (the 'Peoples of the Sea' who had invaded the coastal area of Canaan in the middle of the 12th century B.C.E.).

So we have a time span of around 500 years telling us that these two different "Davids" cannot be the same person. Now here is where the problem begins. Despite the lack of any genealogical link between him and the start of the Christian era, many Scholars have chosen to identify this tribal chief as the "King David" of the Old Testament texts. This King David we know well as the young shepherd boy, son of Jesse who become the later rival to Saul and later lshbosheth, one of Saul's surviving sons. It is this young shepherd boy, harpist, friend of Jonathan who is the son of Saul, slayer of Goliath, a man of war and one who struggles for Israelite leadership and finally unified Israel under his Kingship. Yet he is depicted as a coward who fled from the wrath of his son, Absalom. But here is where it gets interesting. The Biblical writer tells us that he also, as a warrior king, he also established an empire that stretched from the "Nile to the Euphrates" just like the warrior king of 1500 B.C.E. which history teaches us was a Tuthmose Pharaoh. The phrase "Nile to the Euphrates" is going to be very important in our studies as you will see.

2 Sam 8:3 3 David smote also Hadadezer, the son of Rehob, king of Zobah, as he went to recover his border at the river Euphrates. (KJV)

2 Sam 8:13-14 13 And David gat him a name (erected a stele) when he returned from smiting of the Syrians in the valley of salt, being eighteen thousand men. 14 And he put garrisons in Edom; throughout all Edom put he garrisons, and all they of Edom became David's servants. And the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went. (KJV)

This account is repeated in I Chronicles, 18:3:

1 Chr 18:3 3 And David smote Hadarezer king of Zobah unto Hamath, as he went to stablish his dominion by the river Euphrates. (KJV)

The above passages are the exploits of the King David of which we are fall familiar. This is the tribal King David. I direct you attention to the map and notice the vast expanse of territory that existed from the Nile to the Euphrates which this young shepherd boy was supposed to have controlled. Pay attention in particular to the Nile river that splits the Egyptian delta territory.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that these above statements are major problems for historians and scholars today? Why?

Needless to say this is a vast empire. The statements of the Biblical text does not equate with the fact that this tribal chief "David" is said in the Old Testament to have had an army of just a few hundred men yet he is recorded killing "thousands". We know these few courageous men of David by the term "David's mighty men". It defies common sense that a few hundred men could conquer and control such a vast territory belonging to Egypt during this time of Egyptian domination of this part of the world let alone conquer the vast armies of Egypt which historians teach us that they had in light of many of their historical battles that Egypt fought to conquer such a huge territory as depicted on the map. Records often teach us that Egypt commanded armies of hundreds of thousands of men and the idea of some shepherd boy with a few hundred men conquering hundreds of thousands of Egyptians and controlling this vast area from the "Nile to the Euphrates" is beyond any conceivable idea. It would seem to a thinking believer that a few hundred men would be hard pressed to conquer Egypt and dominate the territory from "the Nile to the Euphrates". Something is wrong with this idea; something is missing here.

But that is not the only problem.

Answer for yourself: Do you know what it is? There is not any existing archeological or historical evidence of any kind to support the view that an empire stretching from the Nile and the Euphrates was founded in the early years of the 10th century B.C.E. that can be attributed to this Israeli tribal chief "King David".

Indeed, archeology and history teach us that no such empire can be said to have been created between the reign of Tuthmose III in the 15th century BC and the second half of the 6th century BC, when Cyrus of Persia conquered both Mesopotamia and Egypt. Nowhere do we find any evidence where some "King David" in Israel created any such empire. Nothing, I mean nothing exists that verifies these Old Testament texts as truthful. Nowhere can we find any records that indicate that a similar empire was created in the 10th century by some tribal David. However, during this time frame, the 15th to the 6th century this empire was well know in world history and archeological records testify to its presence; the only problem is that it was strongly governed by Egypt and not Israel! Take a second to let that sink in!

Now you did not know it but I just introduced you to the "Warrior King" Tuthmose III who was a Pharaoh of the 18th Dynasty. In light of the absence of such evidence for the existence of such an empire in the 10th Century ascribed to a tribal King David Jewish and Christian scholars have therefore had to explain or rather explain away this invisible empire story of David by saying that the biblical narrator simply invented it as an act of aggrandizement towards an important biblical figure (Ahmed Osman, Out of Egypt, p. 21). Others avoid this embarrassing problem that casts doubt upon the historical reliability of the existence of a King David. The good news is that we find in history this "King David"; the only problem is that he is a Pharaoh; in fact he was two Pharaohs blended together in such a way that his true identity is concealed to all but those with a keen eye and a grasp of history and Egyptian religion.

However, blending the stories of two Davids, one a warrior king who lived in the 15th century BC, the other a tribal chief who lived five centuries later, should be seen as another facet of the attempt by Old Testament editors (Jewish scribes living in Babylon between the 6th and 3rd centuries BC...beginning with Ezra) to conceal the fact that Tuthmose III was this "King David".

Answer for yourself: Why would they do that? What was their motive? What were they trying to cover up?

Simply they knew what few today know; namely, that Isaac is not the biological son of Abraham. This has staggering implications.

Gen 12:14-15 14 And it came to pass, that, when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians beheld the woman that she was very fair. 15 The princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before Pharaoh: and the woman was taken into Pharaoh's house. (KJV)

That would mean that Sarai, when married to the Pharaoh Tuthmose III, begat a son with the Pharaonic bloodline of Egypt. Here we have a mixed bloodline where "Hebrews and Egypt" melt into a later lineage of King-Pharaohs which later come to the throne of Egypt prior to the Exodus and the religious revolution in Egypt.

That would mean that from Isaac would come the bloodline of later Pharaohs through Jacob, and the twelve tribes of Israel. That would mean that Tuthmose III, and not Abraham, was the father of Isaac, and therefore also the founding father of the 12 tribes of Israel.

Answer for yourself: How can we make the connection between Tuthmose III and King David besides the empires "from the Nile to the Euphrates" that are identical which are separated by some 500 years? We can begin with the name for David.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the first part of the Pharaoh's name, "Tuth" (or Thoth), becomes "Dwd" in Hebrew? Are you aware that makes the word for "David" as used in the Hebrew of the Bible?

Answer for yourself: Is this just a coincidence? Now we have seen the name is the same and the accomplishments of creating the "same" empire is the same. Is there more? Yes there is.

Answer for yourself: What do you know about the battle between this King David and Goliath?

The story of the epic duel between David and Goliath, inserted to enhance tribal David's reputation as a "man of war". The Bible tells us that Goliath was a Philistine and the evidence indicates that the Philistines became established in Canaan after the reign of Ramses III (1182-1151 B.C.E.) which is long after the reign of Tuthmose III. After the reign of Ramses III, Egypt lost control over Palestine and the Philistines established themselves in the coastal plains of Canaan and started expanding toward the Dead Sea and the River Jordan. It was at the same time the Israelites were trying to establish themselves in the same areas. Because of the power vacuum left after the reign of Ramses III, both Philistines and Israelites began fighting and thus the stories of Saul, David, and Goliath came into being (M. Gadalla, Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Egypt, p. 149). Historically speaking, if David did do battle with the Philistines, he could not have lived before the twelfth century B.C.E., because that was when the mass invasion of the coastal plain of Canaan by the Philistines took place. Therefore, historical facts contradict the Biblical time period of the David and Goliath duel, to occur during the first half of the 10th century B.C.E. (Ibid).

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that this story of "King David" ("Dwd" in Hebrew/"Tuth" in Egyptian), is an adaptation of a much-admired Egyptian literary work, The Autobiography of Sinhue, which describes events that took place 1,000 years earlier? This story is found as far back as the twentieth century B.C.E. Therefore it was developed a thousand years before the Biblical account of David and Goliath was supposed to have occurred (some 800 plus years before the historical time period given by the Bible for the supposed events).

Answer for yourself: Should it not expect that such a tale would certainly have been familiar to the Israelites from the earlier period of their Sojourn in Egypt, the four generations they spent in Egypt during the 15th and 14th centuries B.C.E.?

Sinuhe was a courtier in the service of Nefru, daughter of Amenemhat 1, the founder of the 12th Egyptian Dynasty in the 20th century BC. The form in which his autobiography is cast, the story of his sudden flight from Egypt, his wanderings, his battle with "a mighty Canaanite man" like Goliath, and his eventual return to be buried in the land of his birth, makes it clear that it was inscribed originally in his actual tomb. Many copies of the story, which is recognized as being based on fact, were found subsequently, dating from the 20th century B.C.E. (when the events actually occurred) until as late as the 21st Dynasty in the 11th century BC. It was a popular tale in ancient Egypt, taught as a literary example to students, and there can be no doubt that all educated persons in Egypt, no matter what their ethnic background, would have been familiar with its contents (Ahmed Osman, Out of Egypt, p. 21-22). As a result of Sinhue's win, he was appointed the commander of the army. Likewise, David was given an identical position as recorded in I Samuel 18:5: "Saul set him over the men of war".

The Biblical account of David and Goliath occurred, accordingly to the Book of Samuel, when Jerusalem was not yet under Israelite control.

Answer for yourself: Why and how did David take Goliath's head to a foreign city under enemy's control? Again I Samuel 17:54 states: "David took the head of the Philistine, and brought it to Jerusalem, but he put his armor in his tent". This should be nigh impossible since Israel did not control Jerusalem at this time (Ibid).

The similarities between the two accounts have been noted by many scholars. For example, William Kelly Simpson, the British Egyptologist, makes the point in his book The Literature of Ancient Egypt that the "account of the fight with the champion of Retenu has frequently been compared to the David and Goliath duel, for which it may have served as a literary prototype. The Autobiography of Sinuhe survived in the memories of the Israelites when Moses led their Exodus to the Promised Land in the 14th century B.C.E. to escape from the harsh oppression of their Egyptian masters. Later, in the 6th century BC, the Hebrew scribes, writing the Book of Samuel during the Israelite 70-year exile in Babylonia, which had invaded Judaea and destroyed the Jerusalem Temple, and anxious to enhance the image of the tribal David in order to make it possible for readers to accept that it was he who established the great empire stretching from the Nile to the Euphrates, included Sinuhe's encounter with a "mighty Canaanite man" (Ahmed Osman, Out of Egypt, p. 21-22).

Based on the evidence cited we can easily see that the story of David and Goliath is not only out of the proper time period of its origin but is nothing more than a fictional account and story which was later inserted into the Bible in order to enhance King David's hero status as a great warrior and that the events of the duel between David and Goliath was actually borrowed from the Egyptian literary work The Autobiography of Sinhue (Ibid, p. 150).

The evidence keeps mounting indicating that there has been a cover-up of the true identity of this King David of the Bible. Yes the most conclusive evidence is yet to come. We have seen a lot but the most significant fact of all in establishing the identity of King David with Tuthmose III comes when one takes the time to compare the military battles and campaigns of Tuthmose III with the biblical accounts of King David. If you do then you find what I did; namely, that the military battles and campaigns of both match in precise detail. The battles of this King David of 1000-960 B.C.E. match those exactly of Tuthmose III in 1500 B.C.E.!

Answer for yourself: How is that possible unless they are blended accounts? I this another coincidence? How many have we seen so far?

We can read these details of these battles of Tuthmose III today and many have and having done so then compared them with the details of the military battles ascribed to this King David of the Old Testament. The details of the military campaigns of Tuthmose III are to be found found inscribed in the Annals, a 223-line document at the granite holy of holies the king built after his Year 40 (1439 BC) at Karnak (modern Luxor) in Upper Egypt, on the east bank of the Nile opposite the Valley of the Kings. Tuthmose III was admired and revered for generations to come for having a great impact on Egypt both as a nation and as a culture. He constructed many great buildings and obelisks throughout his empire. The first of seventeen successful campaigns happened only a few months into his reign, at the city of Megiddo. The reader should take time to notice that this city where Tuthmose III won a strategic battle is just north of the city of Jerusalem which we find instrumental in the reign of Tuthmose III as well for it is there that he placed the Ark of Amun-Ra which made this city "holy" for eternity.

Answer for yourself: Does this not remind you in the slightest of the Ark of the Covenant and the Biblical David who likewise placed the Ark in Jerusalem? Is this but another coincidence?

This campaign, which is recorded in great detail on the walls of the temple he built in Karnak, revealed Tuthmose III as a military genius. Tuthmose III used the element of surprise attack when he invaded Megiddo, using the least expecting route. This route was narrow, hilly, and difficult to pass, and it took over twelve hours to reach the valley on the other side. Tuthmose III lead his men through the hills and when he made it to the valley he waited until the last man made it through safely. This attack from the rear gave the Egyptians an upper hand and played a big part in their victory. The battle lasted more than seven months and when it was over Tuthmose III let the enemy leaders go so that they could tell everyone who the new leader of Egypt was. This victory not only gained Tuthmose III the respect of the people of Egypt but also the respect of leaders and kings of other nations as the rightful pharaoh and a very skilled and intelligent general. Through the rest of his reign, Tuthmose III engaged in sixteen more campaigns and won every one of them. Because of his undefeated record, Tuthmose III is often referred to as "The Napoleon of Egypt".

Tuthmose III was also a master builder. Buildings were constructed at Heliopolis, Memphis, Abydos, and Aswan, as well as the additions made to the great temple at Karnak, where he had his annals inscribed in the walls.

LOOKING AT THE HOUSE OF DAVID...THE ARMANA DYNASTY

The first king of the 18th Dynasty, Ahmose I, completed the expulsion of the Hyksos from Egypt, which his brother Kamose had begun. This action set apart these Kings set apart "the New Kingdom". Once again, the south united a fractured land, giving rise to the New Kingdom (about 1550-1070 BC). During Ahmose's reign, which lasted from about 1550 to 1525 BC, the central government was reestablished, the economy improved, and Egypt's borders were extended to the south and east into Palestine. His reign set the stage for the continuing expansionist activities of the kings who followed.

During the 18th Dynasty, Egyptians began using the term pharaoh (literally "great house," a reference to the palace) to refer to their king.

Answer for yourself: Do you remember the verse where Sarai was taken into "Pharaoh's house"? Is this another link to the 18th Dynasty of Egyptian Pharaohs; in particular Tuthmose III who married her and fathered a child that necessitated that Sarai be given a handmaid to help in her pregnancy after leaving Egypt when it was found out she was already married?

At its zenith, Egypt under the 18th Dynasty controlled an area that extended south into what is now Sudan and east into the Middle East. Much of this imperial expansion is credited to Thutmose III, the dynasty's fifth king, who extended Egyptian control farther than had any other ruler ("Nile to the Euphrates" which is the same thing said of the Biblical King David).

The 18th Dynasty of Egypt had been founded 100 years earlier when, after just over a century of rule over the Eastern Delta of Egypt by the invading Hyksos (Asiatic shepherds, with some Semitic and other elements among them, who subdued the territory around 1630 BC and set up their capital at a fortified city on the eastern borders of Egypt, which they named Avaris), the princes of Thebes united in the 16th century BC in a successful attempt to drive them out of the country. This victory over the Hyksos shepherd "kings" resulted in the crowning of Ahmosis I (c. 1575-1550 B.C.E.), as the first ruler of the 18th Dynasty, which started what is known as the New Kingdom. In all, he spent 15 years battling to ensure that no part of Egypt remained under foreign control, including pursuit of the remnants of the Hyksos into the Gaza region.

Ahmosis I was followed by his son, Amenhotep I (c. 1550-1528 BC), who pushed further into Palestine and Syria in continuing campaigns against the Hyksos. He, in turn, was followed on the throne by Tuthmose I (c. 1528-15 10 BC), one of his generals, after the king had arranged for him to be married to the royal heiress and appointed him as his co-regent. Despite his relatively short reign, Tuthmose I was the original founder of the Egyptian Empire. He marched into western Asia at the head of his army and reached the River Euphrates in the area between northern Syria and Mesopotamia, south of Anatolia. There they succeeded in crossing the river into the territory of Mitanni (the ancient kingdom of northern Mesopotamia) where Tuthmose I erected a stele commemorating his victory. At this time, however, the Egyptians were satisfied simply to crush their enemies and never tried to establish control over the vanquished territories (Ahmed Osman, Out of Egypt, p. 23).

The next ruler was the king's son, Tuthmose II (c. 1510-1490 BC), born of a minor wife and not the Great Royal Wife (Queen Ahmose). In order to inherit the throne he married, as was the custom, his half-sister, Hatshepsut, the heiress daughter of his father and Queen Ahmose. Now here is where it gets interesting again. In his turn, Tuthmose II chose his son, Tuthmose III (c. 1490-1436 BC), by a concubine named Isis, to be his successor. Thutmose III, the son of a concubine (being not full blood Egyptian since a son of a slave concubine), began his reign as a co-regent in 1479 BC but ruled alone after the death of Hatshepsut, his stepmother, who ruled from 1473 to 1458 BC. As a daughter of a pharaoh (Thutmose I) and the wife of one (Thutmose II), Hatshepsut took full control of the throne as the ruling pharaoh during her reign. The relationship between her and Thutmose III apparently was one of mutual coexistence. However, late in his reign as sole king, and after her death, Thutmose III began removing Hatshepsut's name and images from all painted or carved surfaces, thus expunging her memory for posterity.

Now we need to pay close attention. Since being the "son of a concubine" and not of pure blood then in order to ensure his son's right to the throne Tuthmose II took the precaution of having Tuthmose III "adopted" by the state god Amun-Ra. The story of the god's choice of Tuthmose III to be King-Pharaoh of all of Egypt is found in an inscription at Karnak, written long after he had come to the throne. It describes how the selection ceremony took place in the Temple of Amun at Thebes as the Ark of the state god was carried in procession: ". . . On recognizing me, lo, he [the god] halted. . . [I threw myself on] the pavement, I prostrated myself in his presence . . Then they (the priests) [revealed] before the people the secrets in the hearts of the gods. . .?

At this point, the story describes how the young prince was whisked off to Heaven to be appointed king by Ra, the king of the gods: "Ra himself established me. I was dignified with the diadems which were upon his head, his serpent diadem, rested upon [my forehead]... I was sated with the counsels of the gods, like Horus... at the house of my father, Amun-Ra" (Ahmed Osman, Out of Egypt, p. 24).

Tuthmose III, who had been given the throne name (that given at his coronation, different from the one given at birth; in fact, the king usually had four names) MenkheperRa ("established in the form of Ra"), was still a young boy, aged about five, when his father died. His "adoption" by Amun-Ra as king would in the normal course of events have been confirmed by marriage to his half-sister, Neferure, a daughter born to Queen Hatshepsut shortly before the death of Tuthmose II. This marriage did not take place and we do not know why. We do know, however, that her mother, Queen Hatshepsut, prevented the young king from ruling. Instead, she (his aunt-stepmother) appointed herself as his guardian, allowing him only to appear behind her in reliefs of the period.

Soon, as early as Tuthmose III's 2nd year of his co-regency (1489 BC), she even took the step of sharing the kingship, posing and being dressed as a man. For as long as she lived she kept Tuthmose III in the background and regarded her daughter, Neferure, as the real heiress and heir, "Lady of the Two Lands, mistress of Upper and Lower Egypt" (a title found on inscriptions of Hatshepsut). Her plans were frustrated, however, when Neferure died in the 16th year of the co-regency, and from this point onward Tuthmose III gained increasing importance. He seems to have joined the Egyptian army as a young man, and there is evidence to suggest that he fought in the area of Gaza towards the end of the co-regency.

The chance for Tuthmose III to rule Egypt on his own came in the middle of the 22nd year of his reign (1469 BC) of the co-regency when Hatshepsut died. It seems that the first task he undertook was to deface many of the monuments erected to his aunt-stepmother: her reliefs were hacked out, her inscriptions erased, her cartouches (the oval rings containing names and titles of Egyptian rulers) obliterated, her obelisks walled up. It was late in his reign as sole king that Thutmose III began removing Hatshepsut's name and images from all painted or carved surfaces, thus expunging her memory for posterity. So now, technically speaking, as he was neither the son of the Egyptian queen, nor had he married the heiress to inherit the throne, he ruled only by virtue of having been appointed by the state god Amun-Ra. Nor was Tuthmose III the legal descendant of the earlier Ahmosside dynasty. Tuthmose was the "adopted son of God".

Ps 2:7-12 7 I will declare the decree: the LORD hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee. 8 Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. 9 Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel. 10 Be wise now therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth. 11 Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice with trembling. 12 Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him. (KJV)

The Hebrew word "yalad", translated "begotten" means "to declare one's pedigree" and that is exactly what we have seen when Tuthmose III was "adopted" as God's son. Now we can better understand this very important psalm that describes Tuthmose III's adoption as the "son of God", the "son of Amun-Ra". This passage historical meaning was concerning Tuthmose III being adopted as the "son of God" and has nothing to do with a later supposed historical Jesus of the New Testament. We could go so far as to day that it apples to the Old Testament King David since he and Tuthmose III are the same person.

From this time until the end of Amarna rule in Egypt (the rule of Akhenaten, Semenkhkare, Tutankhamun and Aye in the 14th century BC) it was this 18th dynasty of the New Kingdom which was legitimized by the state god Amun-Ra by his adoption of Tuthmose III.

His lack of stature and the physical appearance did not have a damaging effect on the domestic life of Tuthmose III. His chief wife and the mother of his successor, Amenhotep II (c.1436-1413 BC), was his half-sister, Meryt-Ra. Nothing much is known about her, but she was certainly not the heiress. In addition, Tuthmose III had at least three Asiatic wives, whose shared tomb was found in western Thebes, and a large harem.

Scripture indicates that King David also acquired wives and concubines, David's blessings, including his wives, were given to him as a result of God's favor (2 Sam. 5:12-13; 12:8).

Answer for yourself: Is this just another coincidence?

We find no evidence of the relationship with the visiting Sarah that resulted in the birth of Isaac. Perhaps Egyptian scribes regarded it as an unimportant episode or as a great sin whose memory should not be preserved in official records in the same way that Hebrew scribes, while admitting the marriage, tried to obscure the identity of the father of the child born to it. Yet some scholars believe the incident with Bathsheba is the concealed story of Sarai and she was later taken to be his wife (see the article on the true father of Isaac).

By the time that Tuthmose III became sole ruler of Egypt in the 22nd year of his co-regency after the death of Hatshepsut, four decades had passed without a major Egyptian military campaign in western Asia. Now the situation changed completely. The King of Qadesh (a strong fortified city on the River Orontes in northern Syria) led a Syrio-Canaanite confederacy in a general rebellion against Egypt. In response, Tuthmose III marched into western Asia to regain the territories between "the Nile and Euphrates" that had been conquered 40 years earlier by his Tuthmose I. In the next 20 years he led a total of seventeen campaigns in western Asia, at the end of which Tuthmose III (David) had earned himself the reputation of being the mightiest of all the kings of the ancient world and had re-established the empire that was the subject of the Lord's promises to Sarah's descendants.

Gen 15:18 18 In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed (through Isaac on Sarai's side) have I given this land, from the river of Egypt (Nile) unto the great river, the river Euphrates: (KJV)

Gen 15:18 18 In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed (through Isaac on Sarai's side) have I given this land, from the river of Egypt (Nile) unto the great river, the river Euphrates: (KJV)

Gen 17:8 8 And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God. (KJV)

In summary fashion we need to look at other key "Armana Pharaohs" before we conclude this article on the House of Tuthmose III, the Biblical King David.

Amenhotep III, the Biblical Solomon, the ninth king of the 18th Dynasty, had a long and fairly peaceful reign of almost 40 years (1391-1353 BC). It was marked by unprecedented wealth, cultural creativity, internal strength, and prominence in the ancient world. The king built a magnificent pleasure palace at Thebes, constructed and decorated huge temples throughout the land, and encouraged a flowering of the arts. The influence and power of the priesthood of Amun also increased in Egypt at this time, but the stature of the ruler remained supreme. In fact, Amenhotep III emphasized his own divinity with a focus on divine birth, as seen in reliefs on the walls of Luxor Temple (portions of which he built) at Thebes and in statues bearing his divine name.

Amenhotep IV, the Biblical Moses, the son and successor of Amenhotep III, reigned for less than 20 years (1353-1335 BC). However, his reign represented a focal point in history. He introduced the concept of a single supreme deity, Aton (Aten), the disk of the sun, radically changing the belief systems that had been in place in Egypt for more than 1,000 years. The somewhat monotheistic religion that he developed was a major repentance for Egypt in the face of the overemphasis of Osiris worship (worship of the "godman") in the 18th Dynasty.

Along with the religious changes came modifications in other areas, such as art, language, and architecture. Amenhotep IV changed his name to Akhenaton ("The one who is beneficial to Aton"). He abandoned Thebes and built a new capital at Akhetaton, between Thebes and Memphis. The new capital had innovative plans and structures. For example, temples had no roofs, to let the sunlight in. The art used to decorate its walls displayed a more natural style, and texts composed there used a unique hybrid grammar. Akhenaton's revolution, sometimes known as the Amarna period (after the site of modern excavations of Akhetaton), was short-lived, however, and his successors quickly restored the traditional beliefs. Akhenaten tried to change the Egyptian people to a concept of Godhead which was both monotheistic and abstract. He worshiped the Divine Uncreated Intelligent Energy of the Universe represented by the sun (Aten) as the one true god and it is possible that the Hebrew prophets' concept of a universal God was derived in part from this cult.

It is of great importance as I see it to note that Akhenaton did not originate the Aten. The Aten was not a new invention of Akhenaten - rather, it was portrayed as a sun disc even in his father's time. It has been identified with various pharaohs in previous times. This is nothing new which helps us better understand that behind all the icons of Egyptian religion was the basic idea of "monotheism" as expressed in the concept of the "neteroo". Some scholar maintain that Akhenaten, possibly in a move to lessen the political power of the Priests, introduced the worship of one god, the Aten, or Sun disk. The Pharaoh, not the priesthood, was the sole link between the population and the Aten which effectively ended the power of the various temples.

Tutankhamun, who some scholars think may have been the king's son by a minor wife, married the princess Ankhesenamun and succeeded to the throne. He is known to history not so much for reestablishing order after this chaotic period as for the discovery of his nearly intact tomb, filled with magnificent treasures.

Furthermore, in the (unfinished) first tomb of Ay, Tutankhamun's successor, a hymn to Aten was found that bears an uncanny resemblance to Psalm 104. The Psalms are attributed to David. According to David Rohl, David lived in the Amarna period. So that fits nicely.

The last pharaoh of the 18th dynasty, Horemheb, was a general under his predecessors. He reigned from 1319 to 1307 BC and set the precedent for the military pharaohs who ruled during the 19th Dynasty, which lasted from 1307 to 1196 BC. The ability to command troops became critical for Egypt's survival, since rival powers in Asia and elsewhere created difficulties in the coming years.

There you have it. A lot of facts from history and archeology combined that paints a pretty clear picture; namely, that the Biblical David is truly a composite figure mixing the exploits of two different 18th Dynasty Pharaohs separated by some 500 years and all this was done to conceal by Ezra and the later Jewish redactors of the Hebrew texts the truth about Abraham and Sarai and their "adopted" child Isaac from which the promises of the "Lord" (Tuthmose III...the presentative of God on earth) were given them concerning his descendants through this child. It would be from this mixed bloodline that the twelve tribes of Israel would emerge and the messianic promises of the Throne of Egypt be fulfilled in the Hebrew Pharaohs.

COMPARISON OF THE MILITARY EXPLOITS OF TUTHMOSE III AND KING DAVID...ARE THEY THE SAME PERSON?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the historical details of the wars fought by the Warrior Pharaoh Tuthmose III, inscribed in stone in the Karnak temple in Egypt match precisely with the Biblical accounts of the wars fought by King David in the Second Book of Samuel, except for the discrepancies in the chronology and the two city names? Is the Biblical King David in reality Tuthmose III?

I mentioned in earlier articles the account at Karnak of these various military wars and campaigns of Tuthmose III, the Biblical David, which coincide exactly with the accounts of King David's victories in the Hebrew Scriptures. These records of battles and victories of Tuthmose III were copied from the daily records of a scribe who accompanied the Pharaoh and his army on its various campaigns. These records serve to provide from Egyptian historical sources considerable additional light on the identity of the historical David. These records inscribed in stone are proof positive that the events of the reign reign of Tuthmose III were later fitted and molded by Hebrew scribes around the life of an assumed Hebrew King David to fit the reign of a tribal chief who lived five centuries later than the real character who accomplished these feats in history.

Answer for yourself: What are some of these events ascribed to King David which are written in stone in the Temple of Karnak (modern Luxor)?

- The battle of Armageddon
- Just how Jerusalem came to be known as the city of "royal" David
- How David and "all the house of Israel brought up the Ark [boat] of the Lord [to Jerusalem] with shouting, and with the sound of trumpets" (II Samuel 6:1)
- The origin of the name Zion (which has not been found in any historical source and makes its first appearance in the Bible as soon as we learn of King David's entry into Jerusalem)
- How "King David took the strong hold of Zion: the same is the city of David" (5:7)

EXAMINING THE EVIDENCE

Let us begin with an unbelievable question. As we examine the evidence which follows and see again conclusively that the depiction of King David of the Old Testament whom the concept of the "Jewish Messiah" is built around is literally an Egyptian Pharaoh named Tuthmose III of the 18th Dynasty then we should have the foresight to ask ourself if Old Testament faith and religions which has been interpreted to be "Jewish" is actually "Egyptian" and we not know it. That should make us all the more want to know just how Osiris, Isis, Horus, and Set and other Egyptian figures fit into Judaism and what concepts in Judeo-Christianity but personifications for them and we not know it. We should be awakened to want to know just what these Egyptians knew about God and the depth of their unbelievable wisdom concerning the Uncreated Intelligent Energy of the Cosmos whom we call God in our "simple-simon" religion today of "easy believeism". I will tell you one thing I have found; namely, that the study of Egypt and Egyptian religion, stimulated by the findings which I am sharing in these articles, brought me to the most incredible understanding of this God of all Creation that I could possible imagine and I owe Egypt and their legacy that lays silent in the shifting sands of Egypt today an unbelievable debt for the wisdom they imparted to the world concerning this Cosmos and its Creator and His message to mankind that far eclipsed anything that I ever received from my Christian upbringing and Seminary training.

Well we must begin with the Egyptian account which begins with Tuthmose III's departure at the head of his troops from the fortified border city of Zarw during the last days of his 22nd year of his reign. Ten days in his march with his army he arrived in Gaza, where he celebrated the start of his 23rd year reign (1468 B.C.E.) with festivals in honor of his "father", Amun-Ra, whose image he carried inside an Ark (a representation of a boat with a statue of Amun sitting in it) at the head of the marching army.

Answer for yourself: What do you think when you find out that King David actually worshiped Amen-Ra instead of this YHVH we are told who is a subsidiary "neteroo" and son of Ptah in Egyptian religion? That ought to get your attention. Added to that are you aware than after our prays today we actually recite the name of another Egyptian God called "Amen"? Don't we feel silly for being led to "say" and "do" things in our practice of Christianity and Judaism which we haven't the faintest idea where they came from? Should we not want to know just how far off we are from the truth which was truly "once given the saints"? Let me encourage you that a beginning study in reclaiming the "Jewish Roots of Christianity" is the right step for it is from there that in time you find that all roads lead to Egypt.

It is recorded for us in Karnak that Tuthmose III stayed in Gaza for the night before pushing north towards central Canaan, where he paused in a town called Yehem to the south of a mountainous ridge he had to cross in order to reach Megiddo, the city where the Qadesh enemy had gathered. At Yehem he was faced with a choice of three routes, but the shortest, called the Aruna road, was narrow and dangerous, and he therefore summoned a Council of War.

His officers were opposed to choosing the Aruna route. it is recorded that they said: "How can one go on this road which is so narrow? It is reported that the enemy stand outside and are numerous. Will not horse have to go behind horse, and soldiers and people likewise? Shall our own vanguard be fighting while the rear stands here in Aruna (the starting point of the narrow road) and does not fight?" However, in the light of fresh reports brought in by messengers Tuthmose III decided that he would make his way to Megiddo by the unappealing but an unexpected narrow road, which his adversaries would never have thought that an army would choose. This choice was a stroke of genius to which his officers replied: "Thy father Amun prosper thy counsel...The servant will follow his master". Thus was set the scene for the first battle of Armageddon.

Next let us look at the city of Jerusalem, the "city of David".

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the "city of David", Jerusalem, owes its prominence in the Bible, and a place of devout pilgrimage today, to the Ark of Amun-Ra and the role it played in the opening campaign of the long military career of Tuthmose III when he went against his enemy at Megiddo, which he always looked back upon as the most important battle he fought? No, I guess you didn't.

The Encyclopedia of Archaeological Excavations in the Holy Lands makes the point that the military importance of Megiddo and its long history as an international battleground is "aptly reflected in the Apocalypse of John (Revelation, 16:l6ff) in which Armageddon (Har Megiddon, the Mount of Megiddo) is designated as the site where, supposedly at the end of days, all the kings of the world will fight the ultimate battle against the forces of God". This underlines the Christian belief that the Messiah born of the House of David (Tuthmose III) will one day have to re-enact the battle of his great ancestor who conquered Megiddo, where the final confrontation between Good and Evil will take place. Again this is overwhelming when you think that all this significance of this which centers around an Egyptian Pharaoh and not a Jewish shepherd boy-King (Ahmed Osman, Out of Egypt, p. 29-30).

The Egyptian records teach us that the combined Syrian and Canaanite forces facing Tuthmose III outside Megiddo, which is the modern Tell Megiddo in Palestine, had been divided into two armies. The king vanquished them in the ensuing battle, but the defeated enemy fled to the safety of the city, where, as the gates were shut, they were hauled to safety by citizens who let down "garments to hoist them up". The account of the battle complains that the enemy had "abandoned their horses and their chariots of gold and silver" and "if only His Majesty's army had not given up their hearts to capturing the possessions of the enemy, they would [have captured] Megiddo at this time". Instead, they had to lay siege to the city for seven months before it was eventually taken. However, Tuthmose III did not remain with his troops during this time. Tuthmose III was in a fortress east of this town but returned to lead the final assault. The actual name of this fortress does not appear in the Egyptian version of events, no doubt because the official scribe stayed with the besieging army rather than accompanying the king, but their respective locations, and the evidence that follows, indicate that the fortress was Jerusalem, situated to the south-east of Megiddo.

Answer for yourself: I have mentioned before that many scholars believer that the incident between the Biblical "David" and Bathsheba is a concealed account between Tuthmose III and Sarai. Could this excursion into Jerusalem have led to the encounter and later marriage between Tuthmose III and Sarai?

Interesting the name "Jerusalem" does not appear in the western Asiatic city-lists of Tuthmose III or any of his immediate successors. This is rather perplexing and has not previously been explained. However, this is easily explained since the Egyptians at the time recognized Jerusalem by another name. "Qadesh" is a Semitic word meaning "holy". The inscriptions and records of Tuthmose III found at Karnak inscribed in stone reveals to us a list of more than 100 names of Palestinian locations under Egyptian control after Tuthmose III's first Asiatic campaign. Yet, at the top of this Palestinian (or Megiddo) list, we find the name "Qadesh". The modern Arabic name for Jerusalem suggests that this was the city at the head of the Palestinian list: "al-Quds", which becomes "ha-Qudesh" in Hebrew. Interestingly the term "ha-Qudesh", in both Arabic and Hebrew, means "the holy (ground)", and is used in the first verse of Chapter 11 of the Book of Nehemiah where it speaks of "Jerusalem the holy city" (in Hebrew, Yurushalayim ha Qudesh) (Ahmed Osman, Out of Egypt, p. 31-32).

Evidence of peaceful relations between Palestine and Jerusalem with Egypt is also provided by the Tell el-Amarna letters, the foreign archives of the 18th Dynasty. Six communications, sent to the King of Egypt in the 14th century B.C.E. and written in Akkadian, the diplomatic language of the period, have as their source not Qadesh but mat Urusalim, "the land of Jerusalem". They make it clear that Jerusalem had been under Egyptian control since the time of Tuthmose III, with an Egyptian military garrison stationed locally (Ibid., p. 33).

Furthermore, the Akkadian name for Jerusalem found in the Tell el-Amarna letters can be divided into two elements, "Uru" and "Salim". The first element, "Uru", is derived from the verb "yarah", meaning "to found" or "to establish". Salim, as was correctly understood by the early Jewish rabbis in the Haggadah, the legendary part of the Talmud, representing its non-legal element, means "peace" (Hebrew "shalom" and Arabic "salam"). Thus the meaning of Urusalim would be "foundation of peace" or "establishing peace", an interpretation that is supported by the historical evidence: the lack of any mention of Urusalim in Egyptian sources outside the Tell el-Amarna letters; the fact that "Qadesh", used in both the Bible and later Arabic texts as a synonym for Jerusalem, is mentioned in the lists of subdued Asiatic cities of most Egyptian kings of this period.

Again the inscriptions at Karnak are very helpful. When Tuthmose III went out to fight against the confederation of Canaanite and Syrian princes at Megiddo, Jerusalem did not take part in the rebellion. The king faced no need to take control of the fortress and, instead, was able to make his way straight from Gaza to Megiddo and, without need for military action, to seek safe sanctuary in Jerusalem during the long months that Megiddo was under siege. Thus identified, Jerusalem was the city of David (Tuthmose III) (Ibid.).

The three principal victories in the long military career of Tuthmose III were the capture in of Megiddo in the 23rd year of his reign (1469 BC); the conquest in the 30th year of his reign of Qadesh (1461 BC) on the River Orontes, the capital of his persistent enemy who had managed to escape from Megiddo; and the ultimate restoration of his empire in the 33rd year of his reign (1458 BC) when he crossed the River Euphrates, defeated the King of Mitanni and, in honor of his achievement, erected a stele alongside that of his grandfather, Tuthmose I (Ibid. p. 34).

Answer for yourself: What did the biblical scribes make of these events and how were they recorded? Well not accurately for sure since the names were changed but when the records at Karnak are compared with the later writings of II Samuel without a doubt we are dealing with the same events thus again identifying the King David of the Hebrew Scriptures with Tuthmose III, Pharaoh of the 18th Dynasty of Egypt.

The Old Testament is notoriously suspect in matters of names and the chronological sequence of events, mainly because that over many centuries stories were passed down by word of mouth and much was forgotten or memories of names and events became blurred with increasing time. However, although the order in which they occurred is muddled in places, the account we find in the Book of II Samuel is clearly dealing with the same events that are inscribed in the annals at Karnak (a 223 line document that covers the inside walls of the temple of Karnak enclosing the corridor surrounding the granite holy of holies, which Tuthmose III built) (Moustafa Gadalla, Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Ancient Egypt, p. 155). Second Samuel identifies Megiddo by the name Rabbah which means "goddess" (II Samuel 11:1). We are told that the Ammonites (Semitic, non-Jewish people in east Jordan) 'hired the Syrians" (2nd Samuel 10:6), and it is quite clear that, in the subsequent battle against the army of David, the Ammonites and Syrians operated as separate units. This echoes the description of the divided forces Tuthmose III found facing him when he arrived unexpectedly by the Aruna road before his assault upon Megiddo. The escape of the King of Qadesh and his troops to fight another day is reflected in the biblical account of the battle where it says: "And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, then fled they also... and entered into the city. . ." (II Samuel 10:14). During the subsequent siege, matching the account of how Tuthmose III left the field of battle for "a fortress to the east", we are told that "David tarried still at Jerusalem" (II Samuel 11: 1).

Shortly after David's arrival, we have a description of how the Israelites "brought in the Ark of the Lord, and set it in his place, in the midst of the tabernacle that David had pitched for it..." (II Samuel 6:17). After having seen the previous evidence and read the prior articles on Tuthmose III as the Biblical King David then we need to notice that the Egyptian Ark, an idea later introduced by Akhenaten (Moses to the Israelites, must have been the Ark of Amun-Ra, not the Ark of the Covenant, in which Moses is said to have placed the Ten Commandments, because Moses, as we shall see later when we get to him, was not to be born until a century after these events (Ibid.). The positioning of this Ark of Amun-Ra at Jerusalem by Tuthmose III made this city "holy" for all eternity.

Karnak does not tell us that Tuthmose III accompanied the Ark to Jerusalem but according to other examples in Egyptian records the Ark would have been carried at the head of his army as it advanced on Megiddo. We know that there were some rituals in Egyptian religion that only the king and high priests could perform before their deity. It is also a logical assumption that the resting place for the Ark would be Mount Moriah, the high holy ground to the north of the city, which had been looked upon as a holy place since the time of Abraham (the aborted sacrifice of Isaac) and is today the setting for two of the holiest shrines of Islam, the Dome of the Rock and al-Aqsa Mosque, as well as the Jewish Wailing Wall (Ibid. p. 35).

We find the details of this transaction and further confirmation of the peaceful relations that existed between Egypt and Jerusalem later in II Samuel where Araunah, the Jebusite king (the Jebusites were the Canaanite inhabitants of Jerusalem at the time), is said to have still been in control of Mount Moriah when David bought its threshing-floor "for fifty shekels of silver" in order to build an altar. In the course of these negotiations Araunah said to David: ". . . behold, here be oxen for burnt sacrifice, and threshing instruments and other instruments of the oxen for wood. All these things did Araunah give unto the king. . ." (II Samuel 24:22-23). The choice of a threshing-floor on Mount Moriah may seem a curious one for the site of an altar, but such elevated and exposed pieces of ground at the approaches to cities were often the site of cultic observance (Ibid.).

We have already seen that Tuthmose III joined his troops for the last advance upon the enemy at Megiddo. Interestingly the Old Testament teaches us that King David did the same thing. David, according to II Samuel, rejoined his troops when it was clear that Rabbah (Megiddo) was about to fall, and he led them in the final successful assault. Then he took "their king's crown from off his head...And he brought forth the spoil of the city in great abundance." David also took a large number of prisoners of war to work for him, and, before finally returning to Jerusalem, subdued the rest of the Ammonite cities. Yet David was unable to control Syria until after he had defeated his implacable enemy, the King of Qadesh. This was a task he set out to complete seven years after the end of his successful campaign against Megiddo.

Although there has been some scholarly debate about the matter, the ultimately conquered city of "Qadesh" is conventionally identified as the biblical "Zobah". The relevant references in II Samuel suggest that David smote "Hadadezer king of Zobah [Qadesh], as he went to recover his border at the river Euphrates" (8:3). There are two things to again to note here. We have a reference to Jerusalem as "Qadesh" and "Zobah" since they are the same and again the familiar reference to reclaiming the territory from the "Nile to the Euphrates" which is said again about both Tuthmose III and the Biblical King David. The Book of II Samuel does not provide a date for this event, but we know from the Karnak inscriptions that another three years passed after the siege and capture of Qadesh before Tuthmose III, as part of the continuing campaign to restore his empire from "the Nile to the Euphrates", crossed the Euphrates in his 33rd year and defeated the King of Mitanni:

"My Majesty crossed to the farthest limits of Asia. I caused to be built many boats of cedar on the hills of the God's Land (Phoenicia) in the neighborhood of the-mistress-of Byblos (Ashtaroth). They were placed on chariots (wheeled wagons), oxen dragging them, and they journeyed in front of My Majesty in order to cross that great river which flows between this country and Nahrin (Mitanni) . . . Then My Majesty set up a stele on that mountain of Nahrin taken from the mountain on the west side of the Euphrates" (Ibid., p. 35-36).

Answer for yourself: So what have we seen so far?

Archaeological evidence leaves no doubt that the battles over the cities of Megiddo and Qadesh were fought by Tuthmose III in the 15th century B.C.E. rather than by the tribal David five centuries later because, by that time, 1000-960 B.C.E., both Megiddo and Qadesh had already been destroyed. It has shown that Megiddo suffered "sudden and total destruction" at the hands of the invading Philistines, the "Peoples of the Sea", in the last third of the 12th century B.C.E. which is long after the time of Tuthmose III. While there is evidence that the site was used subsequently by the Philistines, archaeologists have concluded that this, too, suffered destruction in the second half of the 11th century BC, and that the "city gate... did not apparently exist.. . Indeed, it seems that the city was entirely unfortified during this period." This was the city unfortified, not needing a siege to subdue it, in which the tribal chief identified as David is said to have lived in the first half of the 10th century B.C.E. (Ibid.).

Similarly, evidence of various wars, found by archaeologists excavating at Qadesh, makes it clear that the final destruction of this Syrian stronghold, like that of Megiddo, occurred in the 12th century B.C.E. at the hands of the Philistines and this time period predates the time of the supposed Biblical David by some two hundred years (Ibid.).

Let us turn our attention now toward the name of "Zion".

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the name "Zion" makes its first appearance in the Bible as soon as we learn of David's entry into Jerusalem and has not been found in any historical source?

In spite of this fact, all the indications are that Zion (Sion in Hebrew) was used as an alternative name for the ancient holy ground of Mount Moriah, and its origins point to a link with Egypt. It is not an original Hebrew word, but consists of two elements, one Hebrew and Semitic in general, from which comes "Sahara", the other Egyptian. The Hebrew first element, "Si", means "a land of drought, a barren place". It is the Egyptian element whose meaning has thus far escaped recognition. "On" is the biblical name, from the Greek, of the ancient Egyptian holy city Heliopolis (the house of the Sun). From the time of its decline, when Thebes in Upper Egypt became the new capital city of the Empire as well as the holy city of the state god Amun-Ra, it became the custom to refer to Thebes as "the southern On" and Heliopolis as "the northern On", with the word "On" being used in the sense of "holy city". Thus the very word "Zion", the holy city of the desert, used from the time King David entered the city to designate the holy ground to the north of Jerusalem in itself reveals its Egyptian origin which is further evidence for the link between Tuthmose III and the Biblical King David.

Answer for yourself: So what we have seen up to now?

The evidence is overwhelming linking Tuthmose III with the Biblical David; not only in name as we have seen but events that perfectly overlap between their lives when compared between the inscriptions on stone walls of the Temple of Karnak and the Hebrew Scriptures from the 6th century B.C.E. The truth of the matter is that Mount Moriah, until then holy to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, became holy for all the Asiatic kingdoms of the Egyptian Empire after Tuthmose III made it his base during his siege of Megiddo and placed the Ark of Amun-Ra on Mount Moriah where he proceeded to worship not YHWH but his god, Amun-Ra. there.

Let it be known that historical and archeological evidence confirms that these military campaigns occurred during the reign of Tuthmose III. There is no evidence to support the Biblical account that these events occurred 500 years later, at the supposed time of the Biblical David in the first half of the 10th century B.C.E. (M. Gadalla, Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Ancient Egypt, p. 156).

As we have seen if you read the earlier articles on Abraham, Sarai, and Isaac, then your eyes are opened to what is going on "behind the scenes" as erroneously depicted by these Biblical writers in their attempts to cover-up the Egyptian identities of these supposed "Jewish Patriarchs and Kings". Nevertheless, the descendants of Tuthmose III and his marriage with Sarai, Abraham's supposed "sister" and wife, never really forgot their great ancestor and, after leaving Egypt (the Exodus) following the unsuccessful religious revolution of Akhenaten (the Biblical Moses) settled in Canaan a century and a half later where they made this already "holy ground" due to the Ark of Amun-Ra the most venerated and holy part of their new home, calling it Mount Sion.

WHY WAS THE TRUE IDENTITY OF DAVID IN THE BIBLE CONCEALED?

Ahmed Osman discusses in his book, The House of the Messiah, that the task of establishing the identity of the true King David from whose House the promised Messiah would one day appear has been complicated by the fact that the Old Testament provides the reader with two contrasting characters for David and a erroneous timeline:

- One is a mighty warrior king, who lived in 1500 B.C.E. and who fought a series of major wars in Asia and established an empire that stretched from the Nile to the Euphrates as we have seen in the second article in this series. This is the historical Tuthmose, Pharaoh of the 18th Dynasty in Egypt who established an empire from "the Nile to the Euphrates".
- The other picture of "King David" is that of a tribal king, who lived from 1000 to 960 B.C.E. and who ruled over the traditional Promised Land stretching from Dan in the north to Beersheba in the south of the Israel-Judaean upland. It is this tribal leader that spent much of his life in a running conflict with the Philistines (People of the Sea) who invaded the costal areas of Canaan in the middle 12th century long after the earlier "warrior king" of 1500 B.C.E. He is called "King David" of the Bible.
- A further complication is that biblical scholars have reached the conclusion that this " warrior King", whom they call "David", also established his massive empire from the "Nile to the Euphrates" during the early years of the tenth century B.C. when detailed Egyptian accounts and records tell it differently as applied to a Pharaoh named Tuthmose and record these same events at a different time.

Evidently these cannot be the same person yet they both "accomplished" establishing a vast empire from "the Nile to the Euphrates". Scholars have largely chosen, despite the lack of any genealogical link between him and the star of the Christian era, to identity this tribal chief as King David. Acceptance of this dating of King David according to the Old Testament to the early tenth century B.C.E., plus some muddled archaeological evidence, has led scholars to identify the tribal David (1000-960 B.C.) as the biblical King David.

Answer for yourself: But is this "tribal chief" really a Jew named King David or could this be another Tuthmose Pharaoh since, as we saw earlier, the name "David" when transliterated back into Egyptian is Tuthmose?

Answer for yourself: There is one major problem. Can you guess what it is? Completely lacking at this time, the early tenth century, is any existing historical or archeological evidence pointing to the creation of such an empire at this time by anyone named "King David".

Answer for yourself: Is it possible that in the light of the complete absence of historical and archeological evidence to support the contention that King David built an empire that extended from the Nile to the Euphrates in the early tenth century then is it possible that we might be dealing with two separate characters who could both be named David (Tuthmose)? How can we tell for certain or can we? Well we certainly can but in order to make such a definitive distinction one has to compare the differences in their military campaigns.

We need to look at II Samuel 8:3 and II Samuel 8:13:

2 Sam 8:3 3 David smote also Hadadezer, the son of Rehob, king of Zobah, as he went to recover his border at the river Euphrates. (KJV)

2 Sam 8:13 13 And David gat him a name when he returned from smiting of the Syrians in the valley of salt, being eighteen thousand men. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What does "gat him a name" mean? It means that the Pharaoh-King erected a stele, an upright stone slab or pillar bearing an inscription or design and serving as a monument, marker, or the like, when he returned from smiting the Syrians in the valley of salt.

This account is repeated in I Chronicles, 18:3:

1 Chr 18:3 3 And David smote Hadarezer king of Zobah unto Hamath, as he went to stablish his dominion by the river Euphrates. (KJV)

In the Book of Kings we find many mentions of the fact that Solomon, David's son and successor, had control of an empire (from the Nile to the Euphrates) that he inherited just had an earlier Pharaoh had done named Amenhotep III (the Biblical Solomon). This empire stretched from the Nile to the Euphrates just like the one possessed by Amenhotep III.

I Kings 4:21 21 And Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the river (Euphrates) unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt (Nile): they brought presents, and served Solomon all the days of his life. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Is this a coincidence? Or are we speaking of the same "family" of ruler Kings or Pharaohs of the 18th Dynasty of Egypt and not know it?

If one was familiar with the extent of Egyptian sovereignty you would know that Egypt owned and controlled Palestine at these dates (15th through the 10th century) and not the other way around. For Solomon to reign over "all kingdoms from the river Euphrates unto the border of Egypt would indicate that he must have been an Egyptian Pharaoh and that is what we have discovered in an earlier study. Yet it is known that Solomon did not take part in any military campaigns and neither did Amenhotep III. They reigned in piece primarily due to the efforts of earlier efforts by others in their family line (Tuthmose III, the great-grandfather of Solomon, the Napoleon of the Ancient World). It would appear that military campaigns were apparently unnecessary and this fact bolstered the legend of Solomon's wisdom which became an element of Jewish tradition (Osman,The House of the Messiah, p. 87-88).

Answer for yourself: Is it just a coincidence that it is said that both Amenhotep III and King Solomon reigned over the same territory from the Nile to the Euphrates and that both did not engage in military campaigns as had their great-grandfather (David/Thutmose III)?

History and archaeology also indicate that the David, who created the empire later inherited by Solomon (Tuthmose III who created the empire inherited by his great-grandson Amenhotep III) can have been only one person. We saw in article 2 in this series that this person was Tuthmose III who was his ancestor (c. 1490-1436 B.C.). Let us not forget that Tuthmose III was the greatest king of the ancient world and has been called the Napoleon of the Ancient World. We also saw that the word "David" is "dwd" in the Bible, which, when translated back into Egyptian, becomes "twi",which is the first part of the name of Tuthmose III).

Answer for yourself: Is this just coincidences? When we read the above first and second articles we saw that this is anything but a coincidence.

Answer for yourself: And what was this empire? The empire that Tuthmose III went to recover at the river Euphrates (2 Samuel 8:3) had been established initially by his grandfather, Tuthmose I (c. 1528-1510 B.C.), who had himself erected a stele by the Euphrates. However, Tuthmose I did not have time to consolidate his position in western Asia. Later, during a somewhat confused era in Egyptian history, Tuthmose III shared the co-regency with his aunt-stepmother, Queen Hatshepsut, as we saw in article 2.

A rebellion in Syria during Year 21 of the co-regency between Queen Hatshepsut and Tuthmose III (the Biblical David) resulted in the loss of the empire that had been established by his grandfather Tuthmose I. However, on becoming sole ruler twelve months later on the death of the queen, Tuthmose III, in his Year 22, set out to restore his empire and, in his Year 33, crossed the Euphrates and erected his own monument (stele) next to that of his grandfather.

No other king of the ancient world can be said to have matched this feat up to this time. Nor, according to our knowledge from historical and archaeological sources, did anyone else rule the whole of this area subsequently until the second half of the sixth century B.C. when Cyrus of Persia conquered both Mesopotamia and Egypt.

Answer for yourself: Did you catch the fact that this empire was situated "between the Nile" and the "Euphrates"? This is a major clue in determining the identity of King David and associating it with the Egyptian Pharaoh Tuthmose III. It is also significant that both the Old Testament and the historical evidence describe the recovery of an empire between the Nile and Euphrates, indicating that Egypt must have been securely under David's (Tuthmose III's) control at the time these events took place.

Historical and archaeological evidence, as we shall see, also makes it clear that this "David/Tuthmose III), who re-established this vast empire in the fifteenth century B.C., cannot have been the same Biblical David who is said to have become involved in recurrent conflict with the Philistines five centuries later. From this we see that the Biblical chronology is inaccurate when compared to Egyptian and historical references. Apart from anything else, Tuthmose III had been dead for the better part of three hundred years before the mass invasion of the coastal areas of Canaan by the Philistines or "the Peoples of the Sea" that occurred in the middle of the twelfth century B.C.. This Philistine invasion of Canaan brought Egyptian control of the territory to an end.

So the bottom line is that we have two people "blended" into one character as depicted in the Old Testament.

Answer for yourself: What are some of the problems with a Biblical David establishing an empire from the "Nile to the Euphrates"? There are many. First of all he is said in the Bible to have had an army of just a few hundred men. Nor is there any evidence of any kind to support the view than an empire stretching from the Nile and the Euphrates was founded in the early years of the 10 th Century as the Bible says. In fact no such empire can be said to have been created between the reign of Tuthmose III in the 15th century B.C.E. and the second half of the 6th century B.C.E., when Cyrus of Persia conquered both Mesopotamia and Egypt. Scholars had therefore had to explain or even explain away the empire story of King David saying that the Biblical writer simply invented it as an act of aggrandizement towards this important Biblical figure.

Answer for yourself: Did Old Testament editors and Jewish Scribes living in Babylon between the 6th and 3rd centuries B.C.E. try to conceal the fact that Tuthmose III, not Abraham, was the father of Isaac, and there also the founding fathers of the 12 Tribes of Israel? Did they, by creating this King David, try to cover up the fact that the Pharaoh's name "Tuth" (or Thoth), became "David" in Hebrew, the word used for "David" in the Bible? Did they create this "Second David" to cover up the fact that he this empire was ruled by Egyptian Pharaohs of the Armana Dynasty in the times when "Jewish tradition" has the emerging of Israel as an autonomous nation?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that the duel between David and Goliath, inserted to enhance the tribal David's reputation as a "man of war", is an adaptation of a much-admired Egyptian literary work, The Autobiography of Sinhue, describing events that took place 1000 years earlier? Would not this tale have been familiar to the Israelites from the earlier period to their Sojourn and the 4 generations that they spent in Egypt during the 15th and 14th centuries B.C.E.?

Answer for yourself: What persuaded the biblical scribes to take two characters who lived five centuries apart and treat them as one? That is a hard question but it does have an answer.

The most significant fact of all in establishing the identity of David is that the biblical accounts of his campaigns matches in precise detail the accounts of the battles fought by Tuthmose III, whose details are to be found inscribed in the Annals, a 223 line document at the granite holy of holies the King built after the 40th years of his reign (1439 B.C.E.) at Karnak which is modern Luxor in Upper Egypt, on the east bank of the Nile opposite the Valley of the Kings.

To further answer the questions posed in this article concerning the identification of King David with Tuthmose III then we have to begin at the beginning with Abraham and Isaac. So it is there we now turn for those who have not see the origin of this Hebrew lineage of Pharaohs. If you have then let us go on and in so doing we will discover the origin of the Hebrew-Egyptian link that will later manifest itself on the throne of Egypt during the 18th Dynasty and answer once for all where get get the "historical link" for the tradition of a crucified savior.

Answer for yourself: Who was the real father of Isaac and who is the seed of promise that will end up "crucified on a tree? This study is truly fascinating.

Well let us see as we examine the history of Egypt!

JERUSALEM....THE HOLY CITY: IS EGYPT RESPONSIBLE?

Holy to Jews, Christians, and Muslims alike, the alluring city of Jerusalem has withstood the adversities of myriad wars and conflicts only to emerge today as a thriving center rich in history, religion and culture. Believed to be the link between the physical world and that of faith and ideas, this Holy City has been both celebrated and desecrated many times over. Its ancient name, Salem (after the pagan deity of the city) is connected with the words "Shalom" in Hebrew and Salaam in Arabic. The rich history of Jerusalem is a magnificent tapestry of cultures woven together in the most delicate way. Common throughout is the continuous thread of belief in one God and the reverence of Jerusalem as "the place where heaven and earth meet." With this in mind, it is no wonder Jerusalem is considered the ultimate pilgrimage for followers of these three monotheistic faiths.

Answer for yourself: But is Egypt responsible for this city having a "holy status" and not the Jews?

When one begin such a study into the "real" history of Egypt then one finds that it was the Warrior King David/Tuthmose III who transformed this obscure place to a holy place, when he stayed there for seven months, while his army was surrounding the enemies at Megiddo. To add to the misorder of information surrounding Jerusalem we find that this "holy city" is wrongly named Rabbah in the Bible (Moustafa Gadalla,Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Ancient Egypt, p. 159).

When one begins to study the "Biblical Evidence" surrounding Jerusalem, the "holy city", and compare it with "Egyptian Historical Evidence" then one sees quite quickly that we have two different and conflicting accounts of this "holy city"; one from earlier Egypt and one from later Jewish "reinterpretation". Let us examine the events surrounding the making of this city "the Holy Place" of God.

CONTRASTING THE EGYPTIAN VS THE BIBLICAL EVIDENCE...WHAT IS THE TRUTH?

The second book of Samuel, in chapters 5:6-7, describes how David took Jerusalem:

2 Sam 5:6-7 6 And the king and his men went to Jerusalem unto the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land: which spake unto David, saying, Except thou take away the blind and the lame, thou shalt not come in hither: thinking, David cannot come in hither. 7 Nevertheless David took the strong hold of Zion: the same is the city of David. (KJV)

When reading the above verse one is hard pressed to determine if David "took the strong hold of Zion" by force or if there was a peaceful surrender of the city and the fortress of Jerusalem. One begins to get the idea of a "peaceful surrender" of the city when one looks at II Samuel 24:22-23:

2 Sam 24:22-23 22 And Araunah said unto David, Let my lord the king take and offer up what seemeth good unto him: behold, here be oxen for burnt sacrifice, and threshing instruments and other instruments of the oxen for wood. 23 All these things did Araunah, as a king, give unto the king. And Araunah said unto the king, The LORD thy God accept thee. (KJV)

When we consult the Annals of Tuthmose III, at the Karnak Temple, which are carved on stone, we find some very interesting facts that bring the Biblical account into question in many places. The inscriptions on the Karnak Temple in Luxor, Egypt, inform us that while the army of Tuthmose III was surrounding Megiddo, Tuthmose II stated "at a fortress east of this town". The siege lasted for 7 months before Tuthmose III made his final offensive attack on the city of Megiddo. The Annals do not indicate any hostility at the fortress (Zion/Jerusalem). We saw that no mention of force is made in David taking possession of the "fortress" which is the city of Jerusalem.

Shortly after the arrival of David the Israelites brought into the city the "Ark of the Covenant":

2 Sam 6:17 17 And they brought in the ark of the LORD, and set it in his place, in the midst of the tabernacle that David had pitched for it: and David offered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the LORD. (KJV)

It is very important for us to note that it is the bringing into Jerusalem of this "Holy Ark" that is said to have made this location the holy center for the Israelite tribes.

The Annals of Tuthmose III at Karnak state: "awakening in [life] in the tent of life, prosperity and health, at the town of Araunah. Proceeding northward by my majesty, carrying my father Amen-Ra, Lord of the thrones of the Two Lands [that he might open the ways] before me". We find in this inscription that Tuthmose III carried the Ark of the neter (god) Amen-Ra with him to war, and it stayed with him near the fortress. The presence of the holy Ark, transformed this location into a holy ground.

The Bible go on to tell us that David was directed to build an altar to the Lord on the threshing flood of Mount Moriah, the high ground north of the city. This area was then under the control of Araunah, the Jebusite king, when King David went to buy the threshing flood. The Bible tells us of Araunah's offer made to David. Let us look at this passage once again and now look a little closer:

2 Sam 24:22-23 22 And Araunah said unto David, Let my lord the king take and offer up what seemeth good unto him: behold, here be oxen for burnt sacrifice, and threshing instruments and other instruments of the oxen for wood. 23 All these things did Araunah, as a king, give unto the king (David)And Araunah said unto the king, The LORD thy God accept thee. (KJV)

The Annals indicate that Tuthmose III established a site for the shrine of God. The relationship between the two kings, Tuthmose III and Araunah, is made quite clear from the Tell el Amarna letters, dating from the 14th century B.C.E. In one of these letters from the rule of Jerusalem to Akhenaten, the son and successor of Amenhotep III, it states: "Behold, this land of Jerusalem, neither my father nor my mother gave it to me; the mighty arm [of the king] gave it to me". While in another letter the ruler of Jerusalem confirms his royal ancestry: "the mighty arm of the king set [me] in the house of my father". This echoes the relationship we find in the Biblical account of David's purchase of the threshing floor on Mount Moriah from the local king, Araunah, as a king, give unto the king (2 Sam. 24:23). It is clear that, after King Araunah cooperated peacefully with the Egyptian military, Tuthmose III kept him and his descendants as rulers. So, when Tuthmose III went off to fight against the confederation of Canaanite and Syrian princes at Megiddo, Jerusalem was not part of the rebellion. The king was therefore able to go from Gaza to Megiddo, and to seek safe sanctuary in Jerusalem during the long months that Megiddo was under siege (M. Gadalla, The Historical Deception: The Untold Story Of Ancient Egypt, p. 160-161).

Our study is picked up in Psalms where this new altar is celebrated by calling David "the Son of God"!

Ps 2:6-8 6 Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion. 7 I will declare the decree: the LORD hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee. 8 Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What is striking about this verse? This is the same "saying" we find said of Egyptian Pharaohs. The Egyptian Kings (Pharaohs) were the "only" Kings to be identified as the "Son of God".

Now we have seen the name "Zion" before in prior articles.

2 Sam 5:7 7 Nevertheless David took the strong hold of Zion: the same is the city of David. (KJV)

We first find the name of "Zion" mentioned here in the Bible. Zion was originated in the Bible and has not be found in any other historical source. The name "Zion" has different and conflicting Biblical meanings. Here are some of them:

- Zion was originally a Canaanite fortress
- Zion was a "stronghold" and a "fort" and was later called "the City of David" *(2 Sam 5:7 7 Nevertheless David took the strong hold of Zion: the same is the city of David. (KJV); and (2 Sam 5:9 9 So David dwelt in the fort, and called it the city of David. And David built round about from Millo and inward. (KJV)
- Zion was a "hill" in Jerusalem on which the Temple was built *(Joel 3:17 17 So shall ye know that I am the LORD your God dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain: then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no strangers pass through her any more. (KJV)
- Zion was a "holy place" and a "sanctuary" *(Ps 20:1-2 1 The LORD hear thee in the day of trouble; the name of the God of Jacob defend thee; 2 Send thee help from the sanctuary, and strengthen thee out of Zion; (KJV)
- Zion was the "Heavenly City" or at times described as "Heaven"
- Zion was at times described as "Jerusalem, the Land of Israel, The Jewish people, and the Theocracy of God"

When we begin to study Egypt we find soon that the word "Zion" is not an original Hebrew word for it consists of two elements:

- "Zi"
- "On"

"Zi" is a Hebrew word meaning a barren place and "On" is the name of the Egyptian ancient holy city of Heliopolis which is today a suburb of Cairo. The Bible tells us that Joseph married "the daughter of Potipherah, priest of On" (Genesis 41:45). Thus Zion is a combination of the Hebrew-Egyptian word meaning "On (holy place) of the desert" which is connected first with Egypt and not Israel.

THE VARIOUS NAMES OF JERUSALEM

Answer for yourself: What are the "Tell el-Amarna Letters"? They are a very important cache of documents from el-Amarna, discovered in 1887 by a village woman digging up ancient mud-bricks for use as a fertilizer. There are 382 known clay cuneiform tablets, most of which derive from "the place of letters of Pharaoh", a building identified as the official "records office". The exact chronology of these tablets is still debated, but they span a 15-30 year period beginning around the year of Amenhotep III (1390-1352 BC) and continuing through to no later than the first year of Tutankhamun's reign (1336-1327 BC), with the majority dating to the time of Akhenaten (the Biblical Moses). Most of these tablets are written in primarily in a dialect of the Akkadian language, (the popular language of the time). These letters contained 6 communications from the ruler of Jerusalem to the Egyptian King. These letters are the first documented historical evidence naming the city as "Mat Urusalim", meaning "the land of Jerusalem". These letters state very clearly than Jerusalem was under Egyptian control and not Israelite control as well as that this city had an Egyptian military garrison stationed locally.
